New Cases Arrive

Elmer A. Collins received two new wheel cases this week which he has placed on the north side of his room. These have been filled with attractive articles for which the cases were intended. These improvements help make his store attractive.

Mrs. Grace B. Hight, Mrs. M. E. Keller of Lancaster, O., and Miss Helen Keller of Chicago motored over from the City Tuesday on their way to the Hight home. Mrs. Hight has been manning the bank at that place since the death of her husband several years ago.

ATTRACTIONS ARE SECURED

Sullivan Will Have a Splendid Lecture Course the Coming Season

Some of the citizens of the community believing that we should have some kind of wholesome entertainment have arranged for a splendid lecture course. It consists of three musical numbers: The Ohio Girls, a company of four young ladies; The National Glee Club, four young men, and the Ithaca Trio of the Ithaca Conservatory of music.

In addition to this we will also have James R. Barclay a cartoonist of high reputation. Dr. Suleeba, a Turk, will lecture on the customs of his country. We have secured this course of entertainments at a figure which will enable everyone to attend. The season tickets will be $1 and 75 cents for members of the school. We hope every citizen of the city will purchase tickets to this most worthy cause.

MATTOON HAS SMALL FIRE

Several Barns in the Center of Block at Broadway and Twelfth Street Destroyed.

While the Barnum and Bailey Circus was giving their program Monday afternoon a fire broke out in some barns near the center of the block between Broadway and Charleston Avenue east of Twelfth street, that threatened with destruction several fine residences. The wind from the north was strong enough to make it hard to work but the firemen soon had several leads of hose in operation. Most of the barns were filled with hay and this made a hard fire to fight, but at five o'clock all danger was passed. The buildings were on each side of the alley, the flames threatening the telephone lines, and the local manager here was asked to come over and help them. Except for a little scorching, there was no damage to the residences.

These Be Queer Farm Products

There are various ways to make a living but John Graham, who resides in Ross township, Vermillion county has one of the most novel methods, says a dispatch from Danville. He has a "nature farm" on which are 300 skunks, 50 stands of wild beaver, nearly one hundred foxes, one hundred wild ducks, hundreds of muskrat and thousands of bass. The farm is beautiful, modern and is systematically kept, and Mr. Graham declares the "farming" highly profitable.—Ex

Supposed to be Dead.

The sons of William Lair east of Tuscola found a young man at the edge of their cornfield Monday morning whom they thought to be dead. The Sheriff was called by a neighbor who lived across the road. When the coroner arrived it was found to be Charles Pierce, who left home the night before without arousing his parents. He was scarcely alive but was taken home and given care. He has been suffering from mental derangement and has been watched carefully by his parents, but this escape was almost fatal. His condition that evening was considered serious.

MARRIED TUESDAY AT EFFINGHAM

Mr. Walter Holzmueller, Decides to Take Unto Himself a Better Half.

At eight o'clock Tuesday morning at Effingham Miss Emma Peaborn became the bride of Mr. Walter Holzmueller, the successful young photographer of this place. After the ceremony was performed the day was spent in merrymaking at the bride's home where about fifty relatives and friends had gathered. In the evening a dance was given at the armory which was attended by about two hundred of their friends. They came to Sullivan Thursday morning and will go to housekeeping at the Patterson property on Jackson Street which Mr. Holzmueller has been preparing for several weeks.

Broken Press.

On account of a broken casting the News was put out under difficulties this week. The superior report, circuit court news and other articles were omitted in order to reduce to four pages. The day prints were omitted to gain time in putting out the paper. We acknowledge the kindness of the Saturday Herald for the use of their press and similar offer from the Progress.

Mr. F. J. Gilham went to Windsor Wednesday to visit her daughter Mrs. Lowe.

CALL ISSUED FOR REUNION

Old Soldiers of Moultrie County Will Meet at Wyman Park on Friday of Next Week.

The Soldiers of Moultrie County have arranged to hold their annual reunion this year at the Wyman Park, next week. The Sullivan Horse Show will be held at the same time and this will make two places to interest the people. It is the intention of the committee to make this a day of pleasure with some good speakers and a general good time in Sullivan's attractive park. The call is worded as follows,

"Moultrie County Battalion of Old Comrades, their wives and families, will meet at Wyman Park, Sullivan, Illinois, Friday October 15 1915, in a grand reunion with picnic dinner. It is desired that all Comrades, wives and families of Moultrie county will be present; and just as many of adjoining counties as can make it convenient to be present. Let us all attend with well filled baskets and have a comrade love-feast and an all day "Campfire" together.

There will be plenty of good music and good speaking, by the best speakers in the land.

We can have a good time—and we will. Come and see.

F. M. WAGGONER, Commander Moultrie County Battalion.

REV. W. B. HOPPER, Adjutant and Q. M."

PROGRAM AT CHARLESTON

Eastern Division of State Teachers Association Will be Held October 15 and 16.

Aside from the central meeting of the State Teachers' Association at Springfield during the Christmas holidays, there are other meetings in other parts of the state and the teacher who attends one and pays his enrollment price of one dollar is entitled to attend all the other sessions as well as secure a copy of the Illinois Teacher which is devoted to school interests of Illinois. This will give the executive officers an opportunity to reach all the active teachers of the state with a few exceptions. A good attendance of Moultrie teachers is always expected at this sectional meeting.

SICK PAUPER HAD $6,322.50

Gold, Silver and Paper Money was Found in His Old Buggy at County Farm.

Affairs at the Effingham county farm were slightly disturbed one day last week when the superintendent found a large sum of money hidden in an old buggy. He was investigating the suspicious actions of one of the inmates who had been brought in a few days before from the south part of the county where his horse had died along the road. The old man was about seventy-five years old and was sick and the death of his horse made it impossible for him to proceed. He was taken care of by the neighbors who notified the supervisor. He thought his need was such that he was taken to the county farm. He kept worrying about his buggy which had been left by the roadside and it was brought up several days later. One day he got better and went out to the buggy and secured a bottle or something and Supt. Norris was afraid he would commit suicide as he took a chill while at the buggy. The buggy was an old rattle trap filled with old rags and he could hardly believe his eyes when a roll of bills containing over $2,000 fell from the article picked up. Further search revealed that the old buggy was a veritable treasure house, containing gold, silver and precious green backs which were almost worn out from long service of handling. A leather pouch contained $600 in gold, and there was about a half-bushel of silver, including $200 in dimes. The entire amount found and turned over to the sheriff, who was notified at once, was $6,322.50. The money was placed in the Effingham State Bank and a conservator appointed for the man who was taken to St. Anthony's hospital where it was learned that his name was probably the one given previously, Jacob Sweezer, Centerville, Ill.

He saw her walk bravely the length of the dining-room, out into the office. What a magnificent! Argument was out of the question. Elisa was not a child, to be reasoned with. She was a woman, and she had come to a woman's understanding of her heart.

He possessed the deep understanding of the kindly heart, and his one thought was Elisa's future happiness. Could he save her from the day when she would learn Romance had come from within? No. All he could do was to help find the man.

He sent five cablegrams to Saigon, to the consulate, to the principal hotels—the most difficult composition he had ever attacked. But because he had forgotten to send the sixth to meet the packet boat, against the possibility of Warrington changing his mind and not landing, his labor was thrown to the winds.

Meantime Elisa stopped at the office desk. "I left a note for Mr. Warrington who has gone to Saigon. I see it in his key box. Will you please return it to me?"

The clerk did not hesitate an instant. He gravely returned the note to her, marveling at her paleness. Elisa crushed the note in her hand and moved toward the stairs, wondering if she could reach her room before she broke down utterly. He had gone. He had gone without knowing that all he wanted in life was his for the taking.

She flung herself upon the bed, and there Martha found her. "Elisa, child, what is it?" Martha cried, kneeling beside the bed. "Child, what has happened?"

Elisa, sat up, seized Martha by the shoulders and stared into the faithful eyes. "Well, I love this man, Warrington and he loves me. But he has gone. Can't you see? Don't you understand? Have you been as blind as I? He is Paul Ellison, Arthur's brother, his twin brother. And they obliterated him! It is Arthur who is the ghost, Martha, the phantom. Ah, I have caused you a good deal of worry, and I am going to cause you yet more. I am going to Saigon; up and down the world, east and west, until I find him. Shall I go alone, or will you go with me?"

Then Martha did what ever ardent desired her to the heart of the stricken girl—she mothered her. "Elisa, my baby! Of course I shall go with you, always. For you could not love any man if he was not worthy."

Then followed the strangest quest doubtless ever made by a woman. From Singapore to Saigon, up to Bangkok, down to Singapore again; to Batavia, over to Hongkong, Shanghai, Fekin, Manila, Hongkong again, then Yokohama. Patient and hopeful, Elisa followed the bewildering trail. She left behind her many puzzled hotel managers and booking agents; for it was not usual for a beautiful young woman to go about the world, inquiring for a blond man with a parrot. Sometimes she was only a day late. Many cablegrams she sent, but upon her arrival in each port she found that these had not been called for. Over these heart-breaking disappointments she uttered no complaint. The world was big and wide; but it never so big and wide, Elisa knew that some day she would find him.

In the daytime there was the quest; but at the nights, the interminable hours of inaction, the spaces of time in which she could only lie back and think. Up and down the coasts, across islands, over seas, the journey took her, until, one day, in July she found herself upon the pillared veranda of the house in which her mother had been born.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Two Brothers. From port to port, sometimes not stepping off the boat at all, moody, restless and irritable, Warrington wended his way home. There was nothing surprising in the fact that he never inquired for mail. Who was there to write? Besides, he sought only the obscure hotels, where he was not likely to meet any of his erstwhile fellow passengers. The mockery and uselessness of his home-going became more and more apparent as the days slipped by. Often he longed to fly back to the jungles, to James, and leave matters as they were. Here and there, along the way, he had tried a bit of luxury; but the years of economy and frugality had robbed him of the ability to enjoy it. He was going home . . . to what? Surely there would be no welcome for him at his journey's end. He would return after the manner of prodigals in general, not scriptural, to find that he was not wanted. Of his own free will he had gone out of their lives.

He fought grimly against the thought of Elisa; but he was not strong enough to vanquish the longings from his heart and mind. Always when alone she was in fancy with him, now smiling amusedly into his face, now peering down at the phosphorescence seething alongside, now standing with her chin uplifted, her eyes half shut, letting the strong winds strike her full in the face. Many a "good-night" he sent over the seas. An incident; that would be all.

His first day in New York left him with nothing more than a feeling of foreboding and oppression. The expected exhilaration of returning to the city of his birth did not materialize. So used to open spaces was he, to distances and the circle of horizons, that he knew he no longer belonged to the city with its Himalayan gorges and canyons, whose torrents were human beings and whose glaciers were the hearts of these. A great loneliness bore down on him. For months he had been drawing familiar pictures, and to find none of these was like coming home to an empty house. The old life was indeed gone; there were no threads to resume. A hotel stood where his club had been; the house in which he had spent his youth was no more. He wanted to leave the city; and the desire was with difficulty overcome.

Early the second morning he started downtown to the offices of the Andes Construction company. He was extraordinarily nervous. Cold sweat continually moistened his palms. Change, change, everywhere change; Trinity was like an old friend. When the taxicab driver threw off the power and indicated with a jerk of his head a granite shaft that soared up into the blue, Warrington asked: "What place is this?"

"The Andes building, sir. The construction company occupies the top floor."

"Very good," replied Warrington, paying and discharging the man. From a reliquary of the Dutch, an affair of red brick, four stories high, this monolith had sprung. With a sigh Warrington entered the cavernous doorway and stepped into an "express elevator." When the car arrived at the twenty-second story, Warrington was alone. He paused before the door of the vice-president. He recalled the "old man," thin-lipped, blue-eyed, eruptive. It was all very strange, this request to make the restitution in person. Well he would soon learn why.

"A Man Like You Wasn't Made for Idleness."

He drew the certified check from his wallet and scrutinized it carefully. Twelve thousand, eight hundred dollars. He replaced it, opened the door, and walked in. A boy met him at the railing and briskly inquired his business.

"I have an appointment with Mr. Elmore. Tell him that Mr. Ellison is here."

The boy returned promptly and signified that Mr. Elmore was at liberty. But it was not the "old man" who looked up from a busy man's desk. It was the son; so far, the one familiar face Warrington had seen since his arrival. There was no hand shaking; there was nothing in evidence on either side to invite it.

"Ah! Sit down, Paul. Let no one disturb me for an hour," the young vice-president advised the boy. "And close the door as you go out."

Warrington sat down; the bridge builder whirled his chair around and stared at his visitor, not insolently, but with kindly curiosity. "You've filled out," was all he said after fully satisfying his eyes. He added: "I dare say you expected to find father. He's been gone six years," indicating one of the two portraits over his desk. It was not at the "old man" Warrington looked longest. "Who is the other?" he asked.

"What? You worked four years with this company and don't recollect that portrait?"

"Frankly, I never noticed it before." Warrington placed the certified check on the desk. "With interest," he said. The vice-president cracked it, ran his fingers over his smooth chin, folded the check and extended it toward the astonished wanderer.

"We don't want that, Paul. What we wanted was to get you back. There was no other way. Your brother made up the loss the day after you went away. There was no scandal. Only a few of us in the office knew. Never got to the newspapers."

It was impossible for Warrington to digest this astounding information at once. His mind could only repeat the phrases: No scandal, only a few of us in the office knew, never got to the newspapers. For ten years he had hidden himself in wildernesses, avoided hotels, read no American newspapers, never called for mail. Oh, monumental fool!

"And I could have come home almost at once!" he said aloud, addressing the crumpled check in his hand rather than the man in the swivel chair.

"Yes, I have often wondered where you were, what you were doing. You and your brother were upper-classmen. I never knew Arthur very well; but you and I were chummy, after a fashion. Arthur was a little too bookish for my style. Didn't we use to call you Old Galahad? You were always walloping the bullies and taking the weaker chaps under your wing. To me, you were the last man in the world for this business. Moreover, I never could understand, nor could father, how you got it, for you were not an office man. Women and cards, I suppose. Father said that you had the making of a great engineer. Fierce place, this old town," waving his hand toward the myriad sparkling roofs and towers and spires. "Have to be strong and hard-headed to survive it. Built anything since you've been away?"

"In Cashmir." To have thrown away a decade!

"Glad you kept your hand in. I dare say you've seen a lot of life." To the young man it was an extremely awkward interview.

"Yes; I've seen life," dully. "Orient, mostly, I suppose. Your letter about the strike in oil was mighty interesting. Heap of money over there, if they'd only let us smart chaps in to dig it up. Now, old man, I want you to wipe the slate clear of these ten years. We'll call it a bad dream. What are your plans for the future?"

"Plans?" Warrington looked up blankly. He realized that he had made no plans for the future.

"Yes. What do you intend to do? A man like you wasn't made for idleness. Look here, Paul; I'm not going to beat about the bush. We've got a whopping big contract from the Chinese government, and we need a man to take charge, a man who knows and understands something of the yellow people. How about a salary of ten thousand a year for two years, to begin in October?"

Warrington twisted the check. Work, rehabilitation. "Could you trust me?" he asked quietly.

"With anything I have in the world. Understand, Paul, there's no philanthropic string to this offer. You've pulled through a devil of a hole. You're a man. I should not be holding down this chair if I couldn't tell a man at a glance. We were together two months in Peru. I'm familiar with your work. Do you want to know whose portrait that is up there? Well, it's General Chetwood, the founder of this concern, the silent partner. The man who knew kings and potentates and told 'em that they needed bridges in their back yards. This building belongs to his daughter. She converted her stock into granite. About a month ago I received a letter from her. It directly concerned you. It seems she learned through the consul general at Singapore that you had worked with us. She's like her father, a mighty keen judge of human nature. Frankly, this offer comes through her advice. To satisfy yourself, you can give us a surety bond for fifty thousand. It's not obligatory, however."

Elisa Chetwood. She had her father's eyes, and it was this which had drawn his gaze to the portrait. Chetwood, and Arthur had not known any more than he had. What irony! Ten years wasted . . . for nothing! Warrington laughed aloud. A weakness seized him, like that of a man long gone hungry.

"Buck up, Paul," warned the good Samaritan. "All this kind of knocks the wind out of you. I know. But what I've offered you is in good faith. Will you take it?"

"Yes, simply."

"That's the way to talk. Supposing you go out to lunch with me? We'll talk it over like old times."

"No, I haven't seen . . ."

"To be sure! I forgot. Do you know where they live, your mother and brother?"

"No, I expected to ask you."

The vice-president scribbled down the address. "I believe you'll find them both there, though Arthur, I understand, is almost as great a traveler as you are. Of course you want to see them, you poor beggar! The Southwestern will pull you almost up to the door. After the reunion, you hike back here, and we'll get down to the meat of the business."

"John," said Warrington, huskily, "you're a man."

Chetwood. If you want to thank anybody, thank her." Warrington missed the searching glance, which was not without its touch of envy. "You'd better be off. Hustle back as soon as you can." Elmore offered his hand now. "Glad! but you haven't lost any of your old grip."

"I'm a bit dazed. The last six months have loosened up my nerves."

"Nobody's made of iron."

"I'd sound hollow if I tried to say what I feel. I'll be back a week from today."

"I'll look for you."

As the door closed behind Warrington, the young millionaire sat down, scowling at a cubby hole in his desk. He presently took out a letter post-marked Yohohama. He turned it about in his hands, musingly. Without reading it (for he knew its contents well), he thrust it back into the cubby hole. Women were out of his sphere. He could build a bridge within a dollar of the bid; but he knew nothing about women beyond the fact that they were always desirable.

A few monosyllables, a sentence or two, and then, good day. The average man would have recounted every incident of note during those ten years. He did not admire Warrington any the less for his reticence. It took a strong man to hold himself together under all these blows from the big end of fortune's horn.

Paul was a born engineer; Arthur had entered the office as a makeshift. Paul had taken eight thousand one day, and decamped. Arthur had refunded the sum, and disappeared. Elmore could not understand, nor could his father. Perhaps some of the truth would now come to light. Somehow, Paul, with his blond beard and blonder head, his bright eyes, his tan, his big shoulders, somehow Paul was out of date. He did not belong to the times.

And Elisa had met him over there; practically ordered (though she had no authority) that he should be given a start anew; that, moreover, she would go his bond to any amount. Funny old world! Well, he was glad. Paul was a man, a big man, and that was the sort needed in the foreign bridge building. He rolled down to the top of his desk and left the building. He was in no mood for work.

The evening of the third day found Warrington in the baggage car, feeding a dilapidated feather-molting bird, who was in a most scandalous temper. Rajah scattered the seeds about, spurned the banana-tip, tilted the water cup and washbuckled generally. By and by, above the clack-clack of wheels and rails, came a crooning song. The baggage man looked up from his waybook and lowered his pipe. He saw the little green bird pause and begin to keep time with its head. It was the Urdu lullaby James used to sing. It never failed to quiet the little parrot. Warrington went back to his Pullman, where the porter greeted him with the information that the next stop would be his. Ten minutes later he stepped from the train, a small kitbag in one hand and the parrot cage in the other.

He had come prepared for mistake on the part of the natives. The single smart cabman lifted his hat, jumped down from the box, and opened the door. Warrington entered without speaking. The door closed, and the coupe rolled away briskly. He was perfectly sure of his destination. The cabman had mistaken him for Arthur. It would be better so. There would be no after complications when he departed on the morrow. As the coupe took a turn, he looked out of the window. They were entering a driveway, lined on each side of which were chestnuts. Indeed the house was set in the center of a grove of these splendid trees.

Warrington went up the broad veranda steps and pulled the old-fashioned bell cord. He was rather amazed at his utter lack of agitation. He was as calm as if he were making a call upon a casual acquaintance. His mother and brother, whom he had not seen in ten years! The great oak door drew in, and he entered unceremoniously.

"Why, Marse A'thuh, I d'n't see yo' go out!" exclaimed the old negro servant.

"I am not Arthur; I am his brother Paul. Which door?"

Pop-eyed, the old negro pointed to a door down the hall. Then he leaned against the banister and caught desperately at the spindles. For the voice was not Arthur's.

Warrington opened the door, closed it gently and stood with his back to it. At a desk in the middle of the room sat a man, busy with books. He raised his head.

"Arthur, don't you know me?"

"Paul!"

The chair overturned; some books thudded dully upon the rug. Arthur leaned with his hands tense upon the desk. Paul sustained the look, his eyes sad and his face pale and grave. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Fixing the Crime.

It was only a nice friendly kind of a "sing-song" at the hydro, but just because it was free expectations ran high, and the critics were in full force. The young man who rose to sing "The Maiden Fair With Golden Hair" had the best intentions in the world, but somehow he was not up to what is called "concert pitch." Indeed, he was very much below it, and after making two or three attempts he had to capitulate and resume his seat at the back. Then the benevolent-looking chairman rose.

"Ladies and gentlemen, there is not a word to be said against the young gentleman. He did his best, and what can man do more? He deserves our thanks for his willingness to come forward. But I do think that the person who asked him to sing should be shot."

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of the Sunday School Course, the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.)

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 10

ELIJAH TAKEN UP INTO HEAVEN.

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 2:1-12a. GOLDEN TEXT—In thy presence is fullness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures forever more.—Ps. 16:11.

This chapter is in type the Christian's chapter. There are two chief divisions: (1) Translation vv. 1-12; (2) reception and use of power vv. 12-25. The event occurred probably 899 B. C. This is a wonderful lesson for youth as it emphasizes that the way to heaven is the way to the best of life.

I. Elisha's Testing, vv. 1-8. Since Carmel, Elijah had largely been working according to the "still small voice." He had revived the schools of Samuel, but now in some way notice was sent from God that the time of his departure was at hand. How Elisha learned this fact the record does not suggest, but he had had a great object lesson in Elijah's faithful, step-by-step obedience to Jehovah's word and doubtless was listening keenly for Elijah's words and for the voice of Jehovah. This explains Elisha's tenacity. G'hal (v. 1) means "wheel"—our reproach rolled away, and is a picture of our salvation (I Peter 5:7; Ps. 55:22). Elijah had already learned the lesson of being supplanted by a younger man and so he gracefully allows Elisha to follow him. "Bethel," the house of God, was a good place to tarry but not for Elisha at this time. Now (v. 3) fifty "sons"—pupils—of the prophet seek to dissuade Elisha. Knowing something was about to happen, they "stood to view afar off," but were not willing to draw near, to follow like Elisha. They thereby failed to reap a rich reward (John 12:26). Jericho (v. 4) means "france." It is the place of temptation (I Cor. 10:13). This was 14 miles farther and contained a settlement of prophets. Again Elijah and Elisha passed on, the one to glory, the other to the fullness of the Holy Spirit. At Jericho (v. 5) the "sons of the prophet" evidenced greater interest than those at Bethel, but in reply to their challenge Elisha commanded silence. The last difficulty to confront them was Jordan (death), but they do not hesitate, for God had provided even for that contingency. Neither are we to hesitate but willingly "die unto self." Here the aged prophet exercised his supernatural power and they "went over on dry ground" (v. 8). Though this journey seems to have been revealed only stage by stage, yet it was direct to the final goal, and at each stage, though they saw not the end, they knew where to go next. This loyalty of Elisha to Elijah is a great lesson for us to follow in our service of Christ—our privilege of loyalty to his cause and the blessing which will result thereby. No great victory or blessing ever comes without much travail and testing.

II. Elijah's Translation, vv. 9-12a. Even as in the first section we see in type the plan of salvation, so in this section we are taught the resultant facts and the experiments which come to us when the blessing is received. Elisha is now encouraged to "ask," yet we have a like promise from a greater than Elijah which we too often neglect (John 14:13, 15:17). Elijah was such a mighty man of prayer (James 5:17, 18) that he was on intimate terms with God and could therefore make such an offer to Elisha (see Acts 8:15, 17). Notice that the "fifty sons of the prophets" who "stood afar off" were not on the right side of the river to receive a like promise or enter into the same fellowship. In a sense this was Elisha's final test. Again Elijah may not have known the plan of God that a man so unlike himself was to take the place of leadership. Elisha said, however, "If thou see me when I am taken from thee," if God gives you spiritual vision to use and to understand, then he will accept you as my successor. There must be persistence to the end and spiritual vision. "As they still went on" Elijah went up, not in a chariot but attended by chariots and by a "whirlwind into heaven." (See also Ezek. 1:4; II Kings 6:17). Elijah, the man of tempestuous fire and sword, who in his hour of weakness prayed to die, is swept out of sight amid a display of God's power in and through nature.

Note the simplicity of the record—one verse—as though such power were a simple and a common thing for Jehovah. The translation of Jesus was quite different and properly so (Acts 1:9; Luke 24:51). "And he saw it." Elisha's eyes were open and he saw his departing chief, therefore he became his successor according to the promise. As a visible proof of his new appointment Elijah let his well-known mantle fall, as he ascended, and Elisha took it and is recognized as Elijah's successor.

What is heaven? Read the last chapters of Revelation. Do we live after death? Elijah and Moses on the Mount of Transfiguration, and the resurrected Christ prove that death is but the transference to another field of activity.

er feet-- aim by ing—Adv. Madge—Long engagements are not fashionable these days. Marjorie—Oh, well, neither are long marriages.

COVETED BY ALL but possessed by few—a beautiful head of hair. IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls Do—Tells How She Found Relief.

Sterling, Conn.—"I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and I was very weak. I was also bothered a lot with female weakness. I read your little book 'Wisdom for Women,' and I saw how others had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it, and it has made me feel like a new girl and I am now relieved of all these troubles. I hope all young girls will get relief as I have. I never felt better in my life."—Mrs. JOHN TREBIAULT, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N. Y.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it 'Anemia and Exhaustion,' and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me out all right."—Miss LAVISA MYRES, Box 74, Massena, N. Y.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice. Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy. Is a medicine of great value in the treatment of various diseases of the kidneys, as has been demonstrated during a period of over 36 years. This safe and dependable remedy is sold in two sizes, 50c and $1.00, at drug stores, or direct postpaid on receipt of price. Write for Booklet. Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Paxtine. A Soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed. For Douches. In the local treatment of woman's ailments such as leucorrhoea and inflammation, hot douches of Paxtine are very efficacious. No woman who has ever used medicated douches will fail to appreciate the clean and healthy condition Paxtine produces and the prompt relief from soreness and discomfort which follows its use. This is because Paxtine possesses superior cleansing, disinfecting and healing properties. For ten years Dr. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has been commending Paxtine in their private correspondence with women, which proves its superiority. Women who have been relieved say it is "worth its weight in gold." At drug stores, 50c, large box or by mail, $1.00. Sample free. The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

Make the Liver Do its Duty. Nine times in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right. CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS gently but firmly compel a lazy liver to do its duty. Cures Constipation, Indigestion, Sick Headache, and Distress After Eating. SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE. Genuine must bear Signature. PARKER'S HAIR BALM. A hair preparation of the highest quality. Restores Color to Falling Out Hair. For Restoring Color to Hair, 50c and $1.00 at Druggists.

Broomcorn Sells at $100 a Ton

$100 per ton seems to be the price established for broomcorn this year although some growers may fall short of that price as there is a big difference in the quality of the crop which suffered from cold weather and is somewhat short and discolored.

About seventy percent of the crop is on the shelves and the rest of it is being put there as soon as possible. There is a possibility that this will be of better color and quality.

Among the sales to the Tarbox Broomcorn company are: Howard Parker, $105 per ton; Jelliverd this week; A. A. Edmonston, $100; Alvin Choate, $100; Aaron Campbell, $100; Al Brown, $92.50.—Arcollan.

Manager Bill Carrigan Lands His Machine on Top After Pretty Fight—Credit Also Given to Star Outfielders.

(By CHARLES H. CROWELL.)
After a pretty struggle as the most enthusiastic baseball fan could possibly wish for, the Boston Red Sox finally won the American league championship for 1915. Up to almost the last game it was anybody's race, but few games separating the leader and taffer.

To Bill Carrigan belongs the credit. His earnest, aggressive and at times quarrelsome methods were of vast importance in the long grind. The Red Sox got away to a poor start owing to sickness and injury, and it was not until the season was well advanced that the players got together, assumed the lead and once out in front they clung on tenaciously.

When Jake Stahl was deposed as manager of the Red Sox the place was given to Carrigan, and since that day Bill has been making good in every sense of the word. He is an exacting leader. He finds out what a player can do and insists on that man doing his full duty. A sluggard has to be business on that team. Carrigan has compelled his stars to work as hard as the recruits. He is a strict disciplinarian and will brook no interference with his methods.

Keep Players on Toes.
Starting the season with as classy a staff of pitchers as a manager could desire, an outfield that could not be beaten, and a strong infield, Carrigan kept his men on their toes all the time. His college training gave him finesse and to some extent a diplomacy unexpected in one of such aggressive methods. To begin with, Joe Wood went wrong during last winter, and was slow in rounding to. Wagner, his star keystone catcher, was also incapacitated. Dutch Leonard, his string pitcher, got in bad with Edent Lambin, but Carrigan overcame all obstacles and finally landed the Red Sox outfield, Speaker, Lewis and Hooper, has worked together for years and they know how every player who has been around the circuit hits, and where he hits. This trio is the best defensively in the league. Speaker's war club and ferocious speed on the bases. Hooper's well-known trick of waiting out an opposing pitcher and Lewis' steady hitting, brings them to a point of excellence second to none. The Detroit outfield, Cobb, Crawford and Veach, may equal them in many respects, but they do not surpass them. Speaker, with his tremendous speed, can play a shorter field than any other center. Hooper and Lewis possess arms of steel and it behooves an opposing player to watch his steps whenever he makes what looks like a sure single, or he may be thrown out at first. Many fielders may have as many assists at the end of the season as this trio, but that is because most American league baserunners know when and where to stop. The individual and team play of these three have been one of the most important factors in keeping the Red Sox in the lead and eventually capturing the flag.

Pitchers Worked Well.
Outside of the illness of Wood and the sickness of Leonard, Manager Carrigan has not had to worry a great deal about his pitchers. "Babe" Ruth, George Foster and Ernest Shore, Vean Gregg and Mays, have all done mighty well, not only in the box, but also at bat. Ruth has a batting average well above the .300 mark. Joe Wood, the star of the string, is one of the rare individuals who does well everywhere he attempts. He is a fine fellow personally and is well liked by his companions on the club.

The Red Sox, besides their strong outfield and classy staff of pitchers, has an almost ideal infield. Hobblitzel, Barry and Gardner, are hard to beat and many blossoming base hits have been nipped in the bud by this quartette. And then, in case of accident Gainer, Janvrin and Wagner are always on hand to fill any gap.

Few interviewers have ever been able to talk to Carrigan as to his success. He is not bashful, but his gruff, unfriendly manner makes him doubly hard to thaw out. Because of this, few characteristics of his have come to the surface. Off the ball field he is unusually silent and thoughtful.

Carrigan has had an extra load to carry, as he was promoted to the leadership of the Red Sox over his teammates, and in some cases he found others were not so certain that Carrigan was the man for the job. He has had to contend with cliques, with lesser lights aspiring to his official head and with disgruntled players. But his roughshod methods have overridden all obstacles, until now he is recognized by players and "fans" alike as the first man of the Red Sox.

Took Up Baseball.
He was born in Lewiston, Mo., thirty-three years ago, of a family of modest means, and was selected for a clerical vocation. It was impressed upon him that to succeed in this life he must learn the ways of the world. So "Bill" dutifully allowed himself to be dragged daily to school

And this school changed the vocation of "Bill's" after life, for it was there he first became imbued with a love for baseball.

Carrigan early exhibited a skill in the popular sport and was selected as catcher of the high school team in his first year. He played four years on the Lewiston high school nine and then acquiesced in the desire of his parents to attend Holy Cross college. While at Holy Cross Carrigan made his impression on the big league scouts and especially those of the Red Sox, who, in 1908 prevailed upon Carrigan to give up all other thoughts of after life for the padded mitt, bat and ball.

He played his first professional ball in the autumn of 1906 with the Red Sox, but, being inexperienced, was sent to Toronto the following year. He was recalled by the Red Sox in 1908 and was substitute catcher for that year. In 1909 Lou Criger, the veteran, was released and Carrigan became the regular catcher for the Red Sox, playing that position in the world's series against the Giants in 1912.

He now enjoys the happy distinction of being the only playing manager in the American league.

Much Credit Due to Manager Moran and Pitcher Alexander.

(By CHARLES H. CROWELL.)
To Pat Moran and Grover Cleveland Alexander belong the honor of landing the National league pennant this year for the Philadelphia team, to Moran for his gameness and rare judgment in crucial situations and to Alexander for the cunning he has displayed with his right whip.

Moran's methods are the kind that win. He took hold of a tail-end team at the beginning of the season and by tact and courage landed a winner in his first year as a manager. He is known as a stern man on the field, and when he has anything to say to a player he does not indulge in any wheedling nonsense. He does not ride his men; neither does he pet them. There is no manager in baseball more serious-minded than Patrick John Moran. Moran knows as much about inside baseball as any man living. He seldom, if ever, plays hunches, or guesses that a certain play is the right one. His study and observation of what to him is a serious business has taught him what he firmly believes the right thing to do in each situation that arises in the course of a game. On several occasions he has yanked twirlers when it seemed foolhardy to do so, and at other times he has allowed pitchers to remain in the box when it seemed certain that the opposition would hit him all over the lot.

Put in Pinch Hitters.
He has put in pinch hitters when it seemed foolish to the fans, and he has sent supposedly weak hitters to bat in regular turn when it seemed foolhardy to do so. No manager in modern baseball has handled a team with such delicate judgment as Moran has handled the Phillies. And the Phillies have won.

No one ever suspected Moran of having managerial ability. He scouted sometimes, but as a general thing he tried to educate young pitchers. He has proved himself even more deserving of the title of "Miracle Man" than George Stallings, because it was his first job as a manager, while Stallings is a man of experience.

Moran was born February 7, 1876, at Fitchburg, Mass. He was signed by the Lyons club of the New York State league in 1897. He played with the Montreal club of the Eastern league in 1900 and became the property of the Boston Nationals. In 1901 He was traded to the Chicago Nationals in 1905 and in 1910 he was traded to Philadelphia. He was appointed manager of the team this spring after Charlie Doolin had been deposed.

Importance of Alexander.
The next man of importance on the Philadelphia team after Moran is Grover Cleveland Alexander, the "Nebraska Wonder." His record this year is far ahead of that of any other pitcher in the National league. He has been a prime factor in keeping the team on top. During the recent Philadelphia-St. Louis series Umpire Bill Klem, in speaking of Alexander, said:

"There's one player in our league who could win the pennant for any of the seven teams who are out of first place. He is Grover Cleveland Alexander. It is the first time since I have been in the league that one player stands out in front of all his rivals. It would not be proper for me to give my opinion on the race or to pick my favorite for the pennant, but I'll say this: If Alexander had been with the Cardinals since the start of the season St. Louis would have won the pennant. Huggins lacked just such a pitcher. When a team has a pitcher like Alexander it shows confidence. I've seen the Phils slip several times this summer; Alexander would go to the hill, pitch a shut-out game, and the Quakers would be back on their stride. Give the Reds Alexander and I think Herzog would have won the pennant. The same for the Cubs and other clubs."

Alexander was born at St. Paul, Neb., on February 26, 1887. His first professional engagement was with the Galesburg (Ill.) team in the Illinois-Michigan league in 1909. He was drafted by the Indianapolis team of the American association in 1910 and was turned over to the Syracuse club of the New York State league without a trial in 1910 and drafted by the Phillies at the end of that season.

PHILLIES WIN OUT IN NATIONAL LEAGUE

Much Credit Due to Manager Moran and Pitcher Alexander.

Tail-end Team, Not Given Chance at Beginning of Season, Captures Pennant—Praise for Cravath, Luderus and Others.

Others Do Well.
Much good can be said of other members of the team. Pitchers Rixey, Chalmers, Demaree, Mayer and McQuillan have performed in championship form during the season, all being lucky in escaping injury or other ailments. Milton Stock, the young third baseman, secured in a trade from the New York Giants, has been a mountain of strength to the team since the injury to Bobby Byrne. His fielding has been sensational and his batting timely. His playing has surpassed anything he showed with the Giants, and, in fact, has been of more value than Hans Lobert, for whom he, Beals Becker and Lobert were traded.

The work of Shortstop David Bancroft has been of the highest class throughout the season. This is his first year in fast company and he has won the hearts of the Philadelphia fans.

All the Phillies are old enough to vote, the baby of the Moran squad being Stanwood Baumgartner, graduate of the University of Chicago. Lefty will be twenty-two years old in December. He and Ben Tincup have the same birthday—December 14. Houston (Tex.) fans should be interested in games in which Baumgartner and Adams make up the battery, as both were born in that city.

Burns is the most aged of the catchers, McQuillan of the pitchers, Byrnes of the infielders, Cravath of the outfielders, and Dughey of the subs. The youngest catcher is Adams, the most youthful pitcher Baumgartner, the junior infielder Stock, youngest outfielder Whitted, and Welsler is the juvenile among the substitutes. The average age of the Quakers is twenty-six years.

NOTHING ON MOSQUITO

That the ordinary mosquito is not awed by even a husky football player in training is proved by a recent attack made on the fullback of the Muhlenberg college team in the training camp. As the result of a bite on the forearm, blood poisoning developed and for a time amputation of the arm was thought to be the only means of saving the player's life. The poison finally yielded to treatment and Mullenburg will be able to play her regular fullback before the season is far advanced.

Boleslaus Rosenthal and John Fitzgerald have been appointed assistant football coaches to Doctor Williams at a meeting of the Minnesota university athletic board of control.

AMERICAN JOCKEY WINS

The American jockey Archibald headed the list of winning riders in the summer meeting at Hoppegarten, Berlin, recently concluded, with seventeen firsts in forty-eight races. The victories of the American rider were very popular and in racing at least there was no trace of anti-American feeling. Second place was taken by Jockey Rastenberg, riding for the Weinberg stables, for which Fred Taral, the old American jockey, is trainer. Rastenberg, who is serving with the German field artillery and was given a furlough for the meeting, rode fifteen winners in fifty-six races. Other German jockeys follow to the rear, the next rider, Pluschke, riding only seven winners.

Gratitude for Wagner.

The report that Hans Wagner will be made manager of the Pirates must be wrong. Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the club, is too grateful to Hans for the great infielder's years of service to hand him anything like that.

New Motorcycle Record.

Arthur Chapple today holds a new motorcycle record for a mile. He recently covered the distance in 37.3 seconds, one-fifth of a second better than the mark he made last year.

Siling Frosted Corn

The chances are that a good many silos will not be filled until the corn has been killed by frost. When the leaves of corn are killed by frost, it dries out very quickly. This corn will make good silage, but the sap that is dried out of the corn blades and stalks must be replaced by water from a well or spring. Therefore, if you are putting frosted corn into the silo, be sure that you put in water, and plenty of it. You are not likely to get in too much. Unless you do this, your corn will not pack, and your silage will sour or mold. It is of the utmost importance that the silage be packed as solid as possible, and particularly around the edges.

Don't give up your corn crop because it is caught by frost. It is an open question to what extent a man should take chances of frost. Every growing day adds to the dry matters of the corn hence silage should be put off as late as possible, even if you do run a chance of frost, provided you are prepared to harvest at once and turn water into the silo and make up for the loss of sap by water from a well or spring. It may be that frost may hold off, as it has done in other years, till the 15th of October, but the chances are all against it. Get all the dry matter you can in your corn; and if it is caught by frost, fill up your silo and use water on the carrier.

A farmer stated to us the other day that he had thirty acres of corn that he thought would escape frost, and twenty acres that he was sure would be frosted. He asked us which he should put in the silo. The soft corn, of course. If frost comes over the corn belt before this reaches our readers, or even a week afterwards, sound corn will be scarce and high priced, while soft corn can be used only for silage or for stock feed.—Wallace Farmer.

Success, the Result of Effort

A Store must not get a name for being indifferent to the welfare of its trade. People will not run to the store of a dealer who makes no effort to repay them for their coming. People nowadays are quick to sense such an attitude. They shun the dealers who make no effort to please them.

"Why don't you try Alumbaugh's grocery? You can depend on everything he sells"—when we hear a man or woman say that to a friend, we know our efforts to please our customers is being repaid. It spells the whole reason of the success of Alumbaugh's grocery.
