YEGG ENTERS TWO SULLIVAN HOMES ---SMALL AMOUNT IN CASH STOLEN

Frank McPheeters and Thos. Dawson Homes Visited On Saturday Night.

Along in the wee hours of the morning or somewhere about 2 o'clock Sunday morning some yegg entered the Frank McPheeter's home. Due to the fact that an engine was switching on the C. & E. I. track his entrance was easy. After "jimmying" a window on the southeast side of the house this yegg moved with the impulses of the switch engine. But evidently he lost his sense of rhythm and made a beat out of time which awoke the McPheeters family. After sitting up for a minute they became thoroughly convinced that someone must have come to pay them a visit. Mr. McPheeters then arose and turned on the lights from up stairs and asked the intruder what he wanted. This taking the intruder by surprise, he ran and dived out of the window which he had raised, alighting in some shrubbery. In his hurried exit the thief lost some of his possessions—but not the ones that he had attained in the McPheeters home.

In coming so suddenly in contact with the earth the possession had evidently been jolted from his pocket. These belongings consisted of a bill wallet in which a union card was found bearing the name of Frank Young. This card stated that Young was a member of the Railroad Coach & Car Painters' Union. Among other articles of the wallet were 1000 Russian rubles and a picture of Young's girl.

There was also a diary which had been kept by Young giving various points he had visited on his conquest; addresses of friends; and even menus which he had no doubt shared in. There were also some hieroglyphics in the diary which at first was mistaken for shorthand but later was found to have no meaning in shorthand. The other possession which was found was a book giving pictures and values of valuable coins which of course was very fitting for this type of business.

It was later found that somewhere near six dollars had been removed from McPheeter's trousers pocket which Mr. McPheeters had left lying on a chair downstairs near where the thief had made his entrance. After a more thorough inquiry was made it was found that the thief had also made the Thomas Dawson home a call, which is located on the same street. Here the yegg had attained about two dollars in all.

Of course there is some doubt as to whether or not the possessions left by this night caller, were left by the rightful owner or left for the purposes of throwing the authorities off the trail. But it will no doubt become essential for Mr. Young to account for himself on this night of May 20th if found.

Patrons' Day Sees Many Visitors At Twp. High School

On Friday afternoon, May 12, friends and patrons of the Sullivan Township High School were invited to make their annual visit. Here they were permitted to see the work of the different departments. This event was well attended, it being the largest attendance of any patron's day.

Much attention was drawn to the fine exhibits made by the students of the Manual Training Department. Some ninety pieces of furniture were on exhibit demonstrating fine shop work of the boys. In addition were seventy-five pieces of mechanical drawings also produced by the students of this department.

There was also a fine showing of work by the girls of the Domestic Art Department. Forty-eight pieces of work not including many pieces of fancy needle-work were on display.

Girls of the Domestic Science Department had a fine display which drew much interest. After the entertainment various foods were auctioned off.

After visiting the different departments, friends and patrons were entertained by a fine program given by the music department, Thalian Literary Society and the physical training classes. The play "Next Door" was presented by the Thalian Literary Society. Those taking part in the entertainment are as follows: Address of Welcome... Iva Elder Music... Chorus

SULLIVAN, THE CLEANEST CITY IN ILLINOIS?

What is wrong with Sullivan? Why does it not grow? No adequate water supply, no finance, no power and no get-up-and-go among the citizens is usually the answer given to those questions by those who think, "It is not my fault" but did you never wonder if there were not some outstanding and reformable objection to Sullivan? All the above mentioned reasons are true and more than that, are evils that can be greatly remedied, nevertheless there is one essential point necessary for the growth and life of a city; this is city cleanliness.

Anyone who has walked on our streets could tell you that our city needs a thorough house-cleaning, inside and out. The alleys, the sidewalks, the streets, the back yards, the business places, and the homes as well, show carelessness and neglect. The alleys back of our "cleanest" places of business are filled with rubbish, cinders, and all manner of dirt and filth. How can a merchant have or even boast of having a clean business place, when his back door is filled with the waste and refuse of years? The sidewalks and streets as well as the alleys need cleaning and repairing. The boulevards and streets grow up in weeds during the summer and are filled with refuse and trash in the winter. Even some of the back yards show neglect, the rubbish barrels overflowing and the weeds growing.

Disease and sickness are promoted by all of these conditions and is there any attraction to population by the fact that they may take sick and die? Such surroundings are not pleasing to the eye or to the sense of smell. They only attract the careless and the lazy, whose characteristics do not promote progress.

It is house-cleaning time, so why not have a clean-up month or season, according to the time necessary, and cleanse Sullivan of filth? The alleys and back yards need special attention, and it is up to the citizens to give this attention. Our alleys are a nuisance and a disgrace to Sullivan. Do we want other people to think that we as a community lack civic pride and revel in our dirt? As citizens of Sullivan we do not! So let's all take a hand and try to make Sullivan the cleanest city in Illinois.

A BIRTHDAY DINNER

A number of relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Ault to celebrate the twenty-fifth birthday of Clarence Crowdsom, Sunday May 20.

A bountiful dinner was served and in the afternoon ice cream and cake were enjoyed by all. Many games were played and the guests departed at a late hour wishing Mr. Crowdsom many more happy birthdays.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. George Ault and son Harry, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Crowdsom and children, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Coe, Mrs. Charles Crowdsom, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Leeds and son Junior, Mr. Charles Grider, Grace Grider, Oscar Grider and Ruth Gramblin.

LANGFORD AND ENTERLINE GIVEN SENTENCE

Langford and Enterline who for some time prior had been held on a charge of assault to do bodily harm were given a fine of $200 and six months imprisonment in the county jail for one of their petty charges. If these two fail to pay their fine by the end of their imprisonment they will be compelled to lay out their fine at a dollar and fifty cents per day. This penalty was inflicted by Judge George A. Sentel in circuit court of last Saturday.

MARRIED

Cecil Langford of Effingham age twenty-one was united in marriage with Miss Dorothy Van Deren of Gays, age nineteen, about 10 o'clock Monday morning by Judge Grider at his office in the court house.

MILLER CASE SETTLED

The case of Olive Miller vs. George W. Miller was settled Saturday of last week without trial. Preparations had been made for the trial before Hon. Judge Sentel but after a short consultation the case was settled without trial. Mr. Miller agreeing to pay to Olive Miller within sixty days the sum of $5,000.

William Brown of Mattoon who pleaded guilty to the charge of highway robbery, was paroled to Sheriff Ashbrook by Judge Sentel in Circuit Court last Saturday. Brown was the owner and driver of the car in which the guard of the Mattoon yards was kidnapped and robbed, at the time of the strike.

Parks have children in the University and there are perhaps other Moultrie County families who reside permanently or temporarily at the University town. (The Junior staff is indebted to I. J. Martin, county chairman of the Illini Dads Association for the above information.)

You'll say it's a bargain when you see the new dress Panama hats Pearson will sell Saturday at the special price of 95 cents.

PETITION HEARING HELD IN SULLIVAN

The hearing upon the petition to re-assess taxes for the Lovington pavement improvement, has been continued through agreement of both sides, until July 7. The new petition resulted from the setting aside of a former assessment roll by the higher courts, which left the village without funds to meet the obligations incurred in the part of the paving program which had been carried out.

PUBLIC SALE OF REAL ESTATE

On Saturday, May 26th at 2 o'clock at the West door of the court house, I will sell at Public Auction, the residence property known as the John Bray property and described as Lot 7 Block 1 of Meeker and Duncan addition to City of Sullivan. This property consists of a good four room house and out buildings. The property will be sold subject to $300 mortgage which the purchaser is to assume. The auctioneer is authorized to make the purchaser a deed and the property will be sold without any reservations and will be sold to the highest bidder regardless of price. O. F. Doner, Auctioneer.

SULLIVAN IS ENTITLED TO BETTER MAIL SERVICE

Postmaster Frank Reese believes the normal city free mail delivery will be resumed on July first, although an order for the additional service has not been made.

It is strange why the postoffice department has curtailed the Sullivan service. Certainly the curtailment was not made upon the recommendation from anybody in close touch with the requirements of the Sullivan office, for the district superintendent has joined with Postmaster Reese in urging the need of the former number of carriers.

From the time that free delivery was established Sullivan had three carriers until the recent reduction. The three carrier plan gave Sullivan satisfactory service. In comparison to this, the present curtailed service can only be characterized as rotten. The people of Sullivan are entitled to a better deal in this matter, and will join in wishing success to the effort to get the former system of carrier service restored.

YOUNG AMERICANS GIVE MOVIE VIEWS

A cross-section of the youthful American mind on the "movies" was issued recently by the National committee for Better Films, co-operating with the Russell Sage Foundation. The results are based on a motion picture questionnaire filled out by 17,000 boys and girls in high schools throughout the country during the last year.

According to the committee, the favorite actresses on the screen proved to be Mary Pickford, Norma Talmadge and her sister, Constance, the latter being rated the first movie comedienne.

The vote of both boys and girls stamped the late Wallace Reid as the favorite actor, followed by Rodolph Valentino and Douglas Fairbanks. With the boys "Doug" was emphatically first, with Charlie Chaplin seventh and Harold Lloyd next. The girls put Richard Barthelmess next to Valentino and Reid ahead of Fairbanks.

The returns show that high school boys attended the movies on an average of 1.24 times a week. While the girls go 1.06 times, the report disclosed. "Among the boys 83 per cent and of the girls 88 per cent do not attend oftener than twice a week and those who go oftener than four times a week reach only 26 out of 1,000 boys and only 9 out of the same number of girls. Both sexes attend slightly more often in the second year of high school life than they did in the first, but their attendance falls off progressively in the third and fourth years.

As to kinds of pictures liked, the boys uniformly preferred the Western and frontier, comedy and detective types of photoplay, while the girls with equal decisiveness stated a preference for love stories, comedies and society life. Both put tragedies and serials at the bottom. The boys give fourth and fifth places in their appreciation of love stories and society life—just where the girls rank the frontier and detective screen plays.

You can't make a smile stick if you don't mean it.

SHIPPING ASS'N ELECTS OFFICERS

Sullivan's Organization Held Enthusiastic Meeting Saturday in Farm Bureau Office.

The annual meeting of the Sullivan Shipping Association was held at the Farm Bureau office on Saturday night, with a good attendance of the membership. The feeling of the members was that of enthusiasm toward the success of the association.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Guy Kellar, President. Frank Emil, Vice President. Orville Hogue, Secretary-Treasurer.

Jesse A. Powell, Director. J. R. Black, Director.

The report of the manager, Clifton Miller, was as follows: Cars shipped—40. Head of Cattle—296. Head of Hogs—2160. Head of Sheep—277. Head of Calves—303. Total Freight—$2,394.54. Total Commission—$916.89. Managers Fee—$612.37. Net Receipts (Received by farmers for live stock shipped) 57,523.58.

"Aunt Betty"

"Aunt Betty's Bread" is sure dandy. To serve any time it is handy. It is good for your child, and he sure will go wild, when he sees that "All-day-sucker" candy.

If to excellent health you aspire and your money's worth you want entire.

When you call up your grocer you should let him know Sir It's Aunt Betty's Bread you desire.

BAND CONCERTS IN SULLIVAN

At a meeting of the Commercial club Tuesday afternoon arrangements were made for a series of band concerts to be held in Sullivan this summer on Thursday evening of each week, starting the first week in June. Orville Worsham, manager of the band told the club members that the Sullivan band would number more pieces than it did last year.

J. H. Smith, manager of the Free-lan park, suggested that a fourth of July celebration be held this year, but the business men were only lukewarm on the subject and the motion was "tabled" and according to one member of the club will not probably be voted on before the 5th of July.

So there is little prospect of a celebration in Sullivan on the Fourth unless the management of Freeland park decides to finance the proposition from the revenue that would come to the park in the sale of concessions.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sentel and Mrs. Titus went to Springfield Saturday to hear Galli Curci.

English Class Appreciates The Editing of The Herald

The members of the Junior English classes desire to thank Mr. Martin for permitting them to edit this edition of The Herald. It has been a pleasure, work and a help in securing material for the paper. Although the class has studied Journalism they did not fully realize how much time and work "write ups" require. They now feel that they can appreciate a newspaper and are very glad to have had the opportunity in having charge of this paper although it was for only one week.

SAFE-CRACKERS VISIT KIRKSVILLE

Business Houses Looted of $200 in Cash by Raid on Tuesday Night.

The people of Kirksville awoke Wednesday morning to find that sometime Tuesday night they had had callers without any formal invitation. Some crew of yeggmen, which are making numerous appearances around this part of the state, had entered all four places of business. In two of the places they met with considerable success, but in the other two luck failed them.

In visiting O. C. Yarnell general merchandise store they secured about $150 in cash, $80 in checks and about $15 in postal money orders. They had entered Mr. Yarnell's store through a window in the back part of the store. From the back part of the store they then made their way to the front where the safe was located. The safe door was demolished, the hinges being cut off by a chisel and then completing the work by breaking the door into pieces by the aid of sledge hammer. After they had obtained their booty they were evidently thirsty for they made Mr. Yarnell's ice box a visit where they quenched their thirst.

A visit was made to the Clark Jeffer's blacksmith shop where they also met with success. Here they obtained about $25 in cash. Outside of the money they obtained they also secured the tools which they used in their work.

After calling on these two places they made the Evans Hardware store a call. But here much to their disappointment they found the safe unlocked and without funds. They then broke into the Kirksville Grain office where upon finding the safe locked they left without doing any damage.

It seems as whoever these yeggs might be they were pretty well posted on where the money would be. They made only one error in the course of their frolic and this was when they broke a window to gain entrance to the grain office. The door was unlocked and no doubt would have saved them much trouble. But for the exception of this one error their work went along very smoothly. They had made complete their arrangement, for places having telephones had the lines fixed so central could not be reached. Some think that someone who knew the surroundings was connected in this robbery. As yet no clues have turned up and another robbery remains a mystery.

NEXT OIL WELL TO BE DRILLED NEAR MOWEAQUA

The next prospect oil well will be drilled east of Moweaqua by the Lincoln Oil and Gas Company, if the negotiations pending are brought to satisfactory conclusion in a community meeting to be convened in Moweaqua says the Decatur Herald. Stockholders of Okaw Oil company have determined that the best plan is to abandon No. 1, further tests depending upon the developments following a test at Moweaqua. It is probable that some of the Bethany men interested will throw in with the Moweaqua men and with Lincoln Oil and Gas Company for the test now considered.

After the conclusion to suspend operations near Bethany had been reached, Lincoln Oil company made a proposal to Shelby county men to drill a well nearer to Moweaqua on the same terms under which the test was made near Bethany.

When drilling began near Bethany the field was wholly unknown. The knowledge of the underground structures developed by the work of Okaw-Lincoln companies leads experienced drillers to the opinion that the next best guess would be in the direction of Moweaqua.

Bethany men and members of Lincoln company have discussed the possibilities with Moweaqua men, setting forth in detail all the geological information that has been disclosed by the test near Bethany.

Shelby county men have appeared much interested in the suggestion. If an agreement is made the drill crew at Bethany will draw all of the well casing from the Okaw-Lincoln well and then rig and pipe will be taken to the Moweaqua well site.

TAG DAY AT S. T. H. S.

May 16, at the S. T. H. S. was "tag day" for the sale of the 1923 Retrospects. On all of the black boards and every available space were written such slogans as "own your own" and "buy a Retrospect." A program conducted by the staff of the Retrospect was given in the Assembly. By this program they endeavored to give the students some idea of its contents. After the program the students were solicited by the Seniors. They made a great effort in selling the Retrospect and have succeeded very well. A total of about 400 have been sold.

MRS WINCHESTER OF ALLENVILLE DIES

Mrs. Alice Snyder Winchester died in the family home Tuesday at the age of 80 years, following a lingering illness of diabetes and cancer. She had suffered from diabetes for about three years, but had not known of the cancer until about five weeks ago.

On Sunday, May 6, she was taken to St. Mary's hospital in Decatur for treatment. While there she became so ill that she was returned to her home near here the following Sunday. Since that time her death had been expected at any time. She was the wife of W. B. Winchester and had lived in the vicinity of the place where she died all of her life.

She was the mother of five children, one daughter, Mrs. Ethel Galbreath, preceded her mother in death a number of years ago. There remains four sons, Harley of Atlantic, Ia., Claude of Mattoon, and Clyde and Lloyd of Allenville, also the husband and seven grandchildren.

The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 3:15, conducted by Rev. W. H. Storm. Burial was in the French cemetery.

Auto Licenses Increase

More automobile licenses have been issued already this year than were issued during all of last year and a quarter of a million more in fees has been collected than was collected in 1922, Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson announced this week.

Since January 1 this year 787,660 automobiles has been registered in the Secretary of State's office. The total registration for 1922 was 785,190. The fees collected to date this year total $8,118,469. The total collections of the automobile department last year were $7,861,211.

The previous year's total registration has been reached a month earlier than usual. Last year the previous year's total was not reached until June 20. This speeding up of registration is attributed by Secretary of State Emmerson to the efficiency of the force of inspectors working under him. More than 400 arrests of drivers who have neglected securing their 1923 licenses, have been made since March 1 when the round up of delinquent drivers began.

A motorcycle squad of inspectors has been started out over the state. This is the first time motorcycles have been used by the State inspectors and those who are still violating the law by using old licenses will be rounded up in a hurry.

"There is no excuse," Secretary

Emmerson said "for any automobile owner's operating his car with a 1922 license. The automobile department of my office has been right up to date all of the time in issuing licenses, and there has been no delay. We have worked out a system which enables the applicant for a license to get his plates as fast as the mail can deliver his application and return the plates. We intend to see that the law is obeyed.

"Inspectors will enforce not only the license law, but all other automobile laws and by the use of motorcycles we believe that more effective work can be done than has been done in the past. This is the third season we have had the use of inspectors and they are bringing in many times over their cost to the State besides contributing materially to the safety of the public on the highways."

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

How are things going on the firing line? Fine, but always room for some improvement. Last Sunday evening musical service was not only entertaining but soul inspiring. The audience tried the seating capacity of the church even to the amen corner. Those present had not only a change but a treat. Come again we expect to have those services rich with music and song, and you can help by lending your talent along this line.

What about the Sunday school? Next Sunday we will study about the greatest prophet and statesman of his day. The life of Isaiah is not only interesting but profitable for our own day. Look up his words and come to make it interesting for some class by your presence. Subject for the morning service will be "The Invisible Helper."

Subject for the evening, "Doing the Seemingly Impossible."

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, sniffing, mucous discharge, headache, dryness--no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.

RED PEPPER HEAT ENDS RHEUMATISM

Red Pepper Rub takes the "ouch" from sore, stiff, aching joints. It cannot hurt you, and it certainly stops that old rheumatism torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red pepper. Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any good druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

WINDSOR MISSES OPPORTUNITY
The Wabash railroad company wants to buy 22,000 gallons of water daily from the City of Sullivan. Now if Windsor had a water plant of the right kind it could probably get this contract. Several years ago the company had a coaling station here but abandoned it. No doubt the company would prefer coaling and watering its engines here, as Windsor is half way between the terminals of this division—but alas and snark, we haven't the water.—Windsor Gazette.

BRUCE
In order to dispose of some bonds which were a part of the property of the late Nelson Powell, and which had been overlooked or forgotten in the former probate of the estate, the case has been reopened through Mrs. Powell, the administratrix. Only in this way could legal title be secured to these bonds which were in the name of the deceased.

Mrs. Ida Briscoe's birthday was celebrated May 13 with an enjoyable dinner party, which was attended by several relatives and friends.

Mrs. D. E. Cotner entertained her niece, Miss Grace Gaddis, last week. J. R. Williamson who suffered a paralytic stroke several weeks ago is now able to be out again and to attend church again.

Mrs. Candace Hunter visited her son in Mattoon a few days last week.

SHIMBLE PARTY
Mrs. Davidson entertained the ladies who took the Shakespearean characters in the play "When Shakespeare Struck the Town," at one o'clock on Monday. The home and tables were artistically decorated. The party took the nature of a shamble party. All of the ladies reported a very pleasant social afternoon, as well as accomplishing some sewing. The ladies present were: Miss Helen Chase, Madames C. On Thursday evening of last week Mr. and Mrs. Homer Wright entertained the 500 club. The evening was spent in playing cards. Refreshments were served in cafeteria style and consisted of a Dutch lunch. The home was attractively decorated with flowers appropriate for the season. There were many guests present and all reported an enjoyable evening.

MRS. HUNTINGTON BUYS GAYS REALTY

Mrs. Catherine J. Huntington bought the Gays Presbyterian church with the three room cottage, and three choice lots which were sold at auction Saturday afternoon. Her bid was $1,000. It is generally conceded that the property went very low. Jacob Hortenstine bought the 125 folding opera chairs for $68. The piano sold for $97 to Mack Gammill. Mrs. Huntington says she bought the property as an investment. It is supposed that Mr. Hortenstine bought the chairs to use in some of the rooms of the new Christian church but no announcement to that effect was made. Bidders were present from Strasburg and Windsor.

GAYS

Seniors of Gays high school presented their play at the Gays theater Saturday night and made a decided hit with the portrayals of the different characters. "Ruth In A Rush" was the title of the play and it concerned the actions of a lively American girl who was always in a hurry. There were some good scenes and the young people, who had been well coached by their teacher, Mrs. L. W. Gammill, handled them well. The proceeds were between $41 and $42.

Ora Glasscock of Chicago and Miss Elsie Wetge of Palatine were married May 15. They went to Niagara Falls on a wedding trip, coming back by way of Gays where they are visiting his mother, Mrs. W. D. Kinkade and family. They will return this week to Chicago where the groom has a good position.

MRS. DAVIDSON TO HAVE CHARGE OF SUMMER RESORT

Early Friday morning Mrs. W. P. Davidson went by auto with Homer Palmer and Mildred Lowe to Lake Maniton, Indiana to run a summer resort. It is situated one mile from Rochester, Indiana, on about a ten hour drive from Sullivan. As soon as the high school closes, Ida King and Lesely Pressy will join them. Pressy will act as assistant chef and the others will assist Mrs. Davidson. All that a traveler desires can be found there—rowing, tennis courts, golf links, good fishing, fine swimming and plenty of shade and splendid meals.

J. HAM LEWIS TO RUN AGAIN

J. Hamilton Lewis, former United States senator from Illinois, will again be a candidate for election to that office in the 1924 campaign, anticipating that he will make the race against Medill McCormick by whom he was defeated in 1918. This information was given by former Senator Lewis in Chicago within the last week.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Disliking the prospect of a month's visit to her austere aunt, Lady Erythea Lamb, at Jervaulx abbey, and her cousin, Alexander Lamb, Almee, vicious daughter of the Very Reverend Vicar of Scroops, is in a rebellious mood.

CHAPTER II.—She wanders into the park, there encountering a strange youth in trouble with a motorcycle. He laughingly introduces himself as "Billy," American. The two cement the acquaintance by a ride on the motorcycle, the "Flying Sphinx," and part. With Georgina Berners, her cousin, Almee sets out for Jervaulx. On the way she decides that Georgina shall impersonate her at Jervaulx while she goes on a holiday. Georgina's horrified protest is unavailing.

CHAPTER III.—That night Almee visits Georgina and learns that the deception has not been discovered. By her dominant personality she compels Georgina to continue the subterfuge.

CHAPTER IV.—On a trial spin next day on the Sphinx, with Billy, Almee accidentally collides with a carriage in which are her aunt, Georgina and Alexander. The pair escape unrecognized.

CHAPTER V.—Georgina learns that Lord Scroops is coming to visit Lady Erythea and, realizing what will happen on his arrival, is in hopeless bewilderment.

CHAPTER VI.—While Almee is secretly visiting Georgina at Jervaulx, the place is burglarized. Almee escapes.

CHAPTER VII.—Georgina learns, with much relief, that Almee has got away.

CHAPTER VIII.—Police Inspector Panke decides that the woman on the motorcycle is "Jack the Climber," and "Calamity Kate," noted thieves, who travel on a motorcycle.

CHAPTER IX.—Billy, aware of his "partner's" nocturnal jaunts, is troubled. He follows her, on the Sphinx, to Jervaulx. He hears the commotion, at once suspects burglary, and follows two figures on a motorcycle who are apparently in a desperate hurry. Cornering the pair, Billy knocks out a man who attempts to shoot him, picking up a package the fellow had dropped. He discovers the other fugitive to be a woman. Stopping to aid her, she strikes him with a stone, rendering him unconscious, and the pair escape.

CHAPTER X.—Recovering, Billy discovers the package he had picked up is a jewel case, containing emeralds. Realizing they must be part of the loot from Jervaulx, he starts to return them. On the way he meets Almee, with the police in pursuit. In a secure hiding place, a cave among the crag pits, Almee tells him the whole story. He vows that she make a frank confession to her father, but on reflection both realize Almee's good name has been compromised by her two night's stay at Jervaulx.

CHAPTER XI.—Assuring Almee he has a plan to save her, Billy leaves her the cave and, proceeding to Jervaulx, restores the emeralds to the astounded Lady Erythea.

CHAPTER XII.—Alexander recognizes Almee as the woman on the motorcycle which ran into the Lamb carriage, denouncing her as "Calamity Kate." Georgina divulges Almee's identity. Hearing her story, Alexander consents to keep the secret.

CHAPTER XIII.—Alexander finds himself very much in love with Georgina.

CHAPTER XIV.—The approaching visit of Alexander's sister, Lady Diana (who, of course, knows Almee) brings consternation to the two girls.

CHAPTER XV.—Another visitor to Jervaulx is the Vicomte de Jussac, Diana's suitor. Diana recognizes Almee and threatens to denounce her.

CHAPTER XVI.—Interested in the Lamb's abduction, the Vicomte de Jussac, during the night, tries on a suit. Diana investigating an alleged ghostly apparition, meets him. He declares his love and is accepted. Almee finds them together and binds Diana to secrecy concerning her affairs.

CHAPTER XVII.—Alexander and Georgina become engaged. Lady Erythea, by having Georgina to be Lord Scroops's daughter, is delighted.

CHAPTER XVIII.—Billy and Almee reach an understanding as to their mutual love.

CHAPTER XIX.—A Scotland Yard official arrives and demands to see Billy. Almee overhears him. Learning Billy's whereabouts, the officer goes after him.

CHAPTER XX.—Billy finds "Jack the Climber," his leg broken, in the crag pits. He hears the thief's story and has a feeling of something like sympathy. "Jack" is arrested and the police search for "Calamity Kate."

CHAPTER XXIV

"Sisters Under Their Skins."

Almee came as near to sheer panic as she had ever been yet when, after overhearing from her coign of vantage in the second floor window the questions of the police, she saw them start for the crag pits.

The only bright feature of the situation, though not dazzlingly bright, was that de Jussac was already on his way in the same direction. She had seen him go, and guessed his errand. Bertrand, at least, was an ally.

"I'd rather they got me than Billy!" she said with a little sob.

The one obvious and reasonable thing for Almee to do, was to remain where she was. To lie low, like Brer Rabbit, and take no part in the coming crisis. As a natural consequence, it was precisely the thing which her mind refused to entertain. If Billy was going to meet trouble, she determined to be on the spot. There was no knowing to what lengths he might go in his passion for self-sacrifice.

Ten minutes later Almee was in the bushy dip of ground leading into the crag pits. The police were well ahead of her, converging round the far end. Almee had taken some trouble to avoid being seen by them. At the moment she could not see them at all, and took it for granted they could not see her either.

the bushes, Almee made for the entrance of the Sphinx's cave. It seemed to her that must be where Billy had gone. On arriving at the mouth, however, she discovered her mistake. Through a gap in the brushwood she caught sight of Billy at a considerable distance farther along the pits. And with him was de Jussac.

The police arrived almost immediately afterward. Almee, crouching behind the bushes, watched the meeting.

Her throat felt dry and hot, her hands opened and shut nervously. She hesitated, uncertain what to do. Would Billy "get away with it?" A gleam of hope and confidence returned. Billy had a wonderful knack of getting away with things.

She saw the party disappear into the cave nearest them; she witnessed the emergence of Billy, and was aware of a certain relief of tension when the police returned and spoke with him. Finally, wondering as she watched, Almee observed the arrival of the gate—saw the prostrate body of Jake carried into the open. The distance was considerable. But the significance of that pathetic figure on the gate came home to her. Almee was not slow of comprehension. She began to realize the meaning of it all. The police had what they wanted. The captive could be no other than Jack the Climber himself. Billy had "got away with it" with a vengeance.

Almee was staring dumbly at the group, when she heard a faint animal-like noise close beside her. She turned sharply, to find that she was not alone.

A woman, in a stained and ragged dust-cloak, was crouching behind the screen of brambles a few yards away. She was young, and not ill-looking, save for the deathly pallor of her face and the disorder of her hair. Indeed, there was a wild gipsyish beauty about her, that survived even the hunted expression in her eyes.

She was staring through the bushes at the distant group.

"They got him!" she said in a strangled whisper. She huddled herself together trembling.

"An' they'll get me, too. Let 'em. No good my runnin' for it."

"I dunno who you are!" she muttered.

"I dunno who you are!" she muttered.

"Ten thousand devils!" exclaimed Bertrand, momentarily started out of politeness.

"You needn't be frightened for me," said Almee quickly. "She'll do me no harm."

Bertrand's active brain took in the situation briefly.

"No harm!" he said. "Name of a name! If the police found you here with that!"

Almee turned very white. That aspect of the case had not even occurred to her. In the stress of new emotions, the realization of danger to herself had been crowded out. If she had to explain to the police

"Yes," said Almee quietly. "If they come here—I'm done for."

The strident voice of Inspector Arkwright was heard, very close at hand.

Monsieur de Jussac pushed his way out through the brambles and regained the open air. The three policemen together were converging towards the spot.

"Another cave there!" cried Inspector Arkwright. "I thought so. This way, Panke!"

De Jussac halted before the entrance, and, selecting a cigarette from his case, lit it deliberately.

"You may save yourself the trouble, Inspector," he said amiably. "There is nothing here."

Arkwright hesitated.

"Are you certain?" he said, coming forward again.

"I have proved it," said Bertrand, "at much expense to my skin. Curse these briars!"

"All right," said Arkwright, turning away; "push on and search the other end, Panke. No use wasting time here. I think we're on a fool's errand after all."

The three police passed out of sight round the bend of the pits. There was a long pause. Almee's face peered cautiously through the brambles.

"What a fearful liar you are, Vicomte!" she said with mingled remorse and admiration.

Bertrand, without turning bowed gravely.

"I do my best," he murmured, "in defense of a lady with such a genius for getting into difficulties. But let me beg of you to remain where you are."

"Are the police out of sight?" said Almee eagerly.

"For the present, yes. They are away round the corner—all three. But they may come back."

A moment's silence followed the warning. Then the brambles parted, and the Flying Sphinx came thrusting through. Kate was beside it, her hands gripping the bars, her face white and strained, her teeth tight set. She gave a swift glance to either side, and began to run the machine down the slope.

De Jussac, with an amazed exclamation, turned to intercept her. He found a hand detaining him; Almee had gripped him by the arm.

"Let her go!" said Almee breathlessly. "Let her go!"

"Name of a name!" said Bertrand blankly. But he obeyed. There was little choice. Already Calamity Kate was well down the slope, running beside the free-wheeling Sphinx that gathered more and more impetus by its own tered. "What you doin' here? Are you goin' to gimme away?"

Almee did not move. Her heart beat fast. But there was no menace in the woman's eyes; only an expression so broken and piteous that somehow a lump came into Almee's throat. She had not the faintest doubt who this hunted woman was.

"You know who I am," the woman said thickly; "I can see it in your face." She came a step nearer. "Are you goin' to call out?"

Almee did not answer that question.

"Is he much hurt?" she said quietly, looking towards the distant group round the man on the gate.

"Hurt?" said Calamity Kate. "He smashed himself days ago, it was."

She had subsided on the sand, and embraced her knees with her arms, staring before her with unseeing eyes.

"I got him down here. Tried to help him along—couldn't walk. Then I had to carry him."

"You!" said Almee, looking wonderingly at the girl's slight figure.

"Yes, me. It took me—hours. Carried him—on me back—somehow. When it came daylight, I found the cave. Got him in. I ripped up me skirt to bandage him. I stole food for him, nights. In two or three days more I guess he'd have been able to get away. Now they've got him, an' they'll have me."

She rocked herself gently to and fro.

"I'll be h—l for Jake!" she said thickly. "To know they've got me!"

She looked at Almee. "If I could go with him—if they'd put us both in the same jug—I wouldn't care. But they don't do that."

She gave a great sob.

"I'd give me life to get him out of it. But he's done, and he'll know they've got me. I'll be h—l for him, my man!"

An unreasoning flood of tears came into Almee's eyes. She looked once more towards the group. The police were spreading out across the pits, moving in her direction.

"My man!" sobbed Kate.

"You love him?" said Almee haltingly.

"He's my husband!" said the woman. She sang herself face downwards on the sand, and wept.

Suddenly Almee stooped and caught her by the shoulder.

"Come with me!" she said swiftly, and, turning, crept in through the screen of brambles, into the cave.

Kate looked up comprehendingly. Then, with the instinct of the hunted animal she dived through the bushes and went to ground. The girls found themselves together in the cool gloom of the cave.

Kate stared at Almee with wondering eyes.

"I'm sorry for you!" said Almee unsteadily.

"I never thought," said Kate, "to find any woman sorry for me."

She glanced round the walls of the cave.

"They'll find me here—just the same."

"They may not," Almee, very pale, looked at the fugitive. "Don't you think," she said, "that if you get clear this time, you might—drop it all? Try—something different?"

"I might," said Kate slowly. "But—they'll get me."

She caught sight of the Flying Sphinx, standing in the dim light at the cave's end.

"What's that?" she exclaimed, and moved swiftly to the machine. Almee watched her.

"You couldn't ride it," said Almee, "not even if the way was clear."

"I can ride anything with an engine to it!" said Kate desperately. There was a gleam of hope in the hunted eyes; already her hands were busy with the levers; searching, examining. But she stopped, baffled. The controls of the Sphinx were too much for her.

The next moment Almee was beside her.

"That's the throttle!" said Almee swiftly. "Here's the starter—this changes the gear—you have to be careful with the intake. On the second speed she goes over the roughest ground like a bird—on the level road she'll do eighty. If you could get her out clear of the bushes—but you'd never get away with it—"

The woman turned to her, gasping.

"Will you let me try—?" she exclaimed.

It was then that a shock of revulsion came over Almee. This was the female rattlesnake who had nearly killed Billy, and caused all the trouble. Why should Almee feel pity? The broken man in the hands of the police

A rustle among the bushes at the cave's mouth made the two women turn quickly. De Jussac, stepping aside, halted and stared blankly at them both.

"Ten thousand devils!" exclaimed Bertrand, momentarily started out of politeness.

"You needn't be frightened for me," said Almee quickly. "She'll do me no harm."

Bertrand's active brain took in the situation briefly.

RETROSPECT RELEASED

The 1923 issue of the Retrospect was delivered to its subscribers Thursday afternoon. The release of the books came as the culmination of a very successful campaign for subscriptions that has been conducted by the Senior Class. Only a few copies of the entire issue of four hundred books are left and these will probably have a ready sale.

The annual is a beautiful piece of work and embodies many new ideas. It is the largest year book that has ever been issued at Sullivan Township High School and one of the most artistic. The Senior class has published it with the idea of making a book that would be in keeping with the spirit of the school and of the community. Every citizen of Sullivan should have a copy in his library.

weight. The deftness with which the woman steered it between the clumps of bushes was astounding.

"She hasn't a dog's chance," said Almee with a gulp, "but what chance there is—let her take it."

"A nation of sportsmen—no!" murmured Bertrand with a paralyzed air. He glanced to the left, where the police had disappeared round the shoulder of the bluff. There was still no sign of them. Kate, reaching the trodden path at the bottom, turned sharp to the right and swung herself into the saddle.

"It is one's duty to stop her," said Bertrand, twisting his mustache in perplexity. "But—one does not hunt a woman."

"She'll never get started on that ground," said Almee.

The engine fired, stopped, fired again—the wheels threw up sprays of sand, then getting onto harder ground the machine ran swiftly ahead with the faint pulsing whirr that was the Sphinx's song of triumphant progress. She shot forward much too fast, and was only just controlled in time.

No other cycle than the Sphinx could have made good over such ground; no other could have sailed so efficiently and noiselessly up the steep path through the gap towards the higher ground at the far end. It was a wonderful exhibition of riding. As the fugitive sped by, Billy, standing on guard beside the captive Jake, turned and stared in petrified amazement.

Jake raised himself to a sitting position on the gate, and stared, too.

He Uttered a Hoarse Cry.

He uttered a hoarse cry—almost a cheer.

The Sphinx and its rider breasted the crest of the rise, staggered, and sailed away out of view.

CHAPTER XXV

Two of a Kind.

Almee gave a little gurgle of excitement as the Sphinx vanished.

"She's away! And I don't believe they've seen her! If she can stick to it over the field to the gate, there's open road before her and she's clear!"

Almee turned to de Jussac with shining eyes. He shrugged his shoulders faintly.

"A supremely foolish act, mademoiselle," said Bertrand.

"She was in trouble—just as I've been. Everybody's shielded me at their own risk," said Almee defiantly. "How could I do less for her?"

"Alas, the morals of the age!" said Bertrand, and he laughed gently. "A sermon would not become me—I also am a coadjutor. I will observe the movements of the enemy."

He climbed quickly onto the shoulder of high ground that divided them from the end of the pit, and returned in a few moments.

"Obviously our industrious police did not see her," he said; "they are now searching the last of the caves."

"Then it's time I got back into mine," said Almee turning to dive back into her retreat.

"Not so!" exclaimed Bertrand quickly, catching her by the hand. "That is no place for you."

"Why?"

"The gentleman from Scotland Yard will search it before he leaves—he took my word for the moment, but he will make sure. It was merely that he was in a hurry. You must get out of this while you can; like your friend the lady burglar. Come along!" said Bertrand, setting off at a run and pulling her with him.

"You're right!" ejaculated Almee. With long strides they sped round the clump of bushes, Almee in tow of Bertrand, and, turning sharp to the right, scurried up one of the steep paths that led out of the pits.

Billy suffered yet one more shock as the pair of them came into his field of vision. He gaped at them, hardly able to believe his eyes. In a few moments they had passed; Almee reached the top of the pit, and Bertrand glanced apprehensively back in the direction of the police.

"All clear!" he gasped, utterly out of breath. "Get to the road—get out of sight. Back to the abbey, dear lady, and for pity's sake stay there, for you are very wearing. Go!"

"Thanks, awfully!" panted Almee, and departed as fast as her legs would carry her. De Jussac retreated into the pit, mopping his brow. Taking no notice of the frantic signals of Billy he returned to the cave, dived into it, took a hurried look round and kicked plenty of loose sand over a pool of oil that was the sole legacy of the Sphinx. He left the place with a sigh of relief and, encountering the search party of police, permitted himself to smile.

"Nothing doing!" said Inspector Arkwright. "Panke, will you go back? Bring the car down over the meadow; we'll get the man on it, clear the pits, and set a watch in the cave where we found him." He moved towards the late stable of the Sphinx. "But I'm going to look through this place and make sure."

"By all means, Inspector," said Bertrand yawning. "I am a mere amateur. All caves look alike to me. Mind the briars; they prick most acutely."

Arkwright's inspection of the cave was brief.

"It is empty, but the place has been used, and recently," he reported. "Strange they should not have chosen it; it is the best hiding place in the pit."

"Perhaps they only recently discovered this desirable residence, and were about to shift their quarters," suggested de Jussac. "No doubt, if a few watchful policemen ambush themselves efficiently during the dark hours, they will catch the amiable consort of that cutthroat yonder. One hopes so. It is painful to the law-abiding to know that malefactors are at large. Particularly when they are females."

Inspector Arkwright looked at him dubiously, and made no reply. Billy, also, when the two rejoined him, eyed de Jussac with extreme thoughtfulness, and had some difficulty in suppressing his emotion. He was still mounting guard over Jake, who lay upon his improvised stretcher and gazed up at the sky with a singularly beatific smile. De Jussac offered him a cigarette, which he accepted silently.

"I think," said Inspector Arkwright, "I'll call on you two gentlemen to assist me and we'll get him out of this. I want the place cleared."

It was not an easy matter to carry the gate and its burden out of the pits. By the time they had achieved it, the car arrived from Jervaux and wound its way over the flat turf. Jake was lifted into it.

"I must trouble you to accompany me, Mr. Spencer," said Arkwright.

"Anything to oblige the police," said Billy, squeezing himself into the front of the car. It was a tight fit.

The journey to Stanhoe was made almost in silence. When the car arrived at the police station Jake was duly disposed of, while Billy cooled his heels in a dingy waiting room that had been whitewashed some time during the period when Sir Robert Peel was reorganizing the force. Presently Inspector Arkwright joined him. The inspector closed the door, and regarded Billy with a sphinx-like but faintly humorous eye.

"I think, Mr. Spencer," he said quietly, "that you have no very high opinion of my intelligence?"

"Wrong there," said Billy, politely. "I don't know that I'd class the Stanhoe staff with the world's great thinkers. But I've heard a lot about Scotland Yard, and, if I may say so, you come fully up to sample."

"There is no harm now in my telling you that I know precisely what your movements have been, Mr. Spencer. I know that it was you, and not the prisoner, who stayed at Ivy cottage as the tenant of Mrs. Sunning. I know that your companion, at the same time, stayed next door. I have also a fairly accurate comprehension of the reasons which led you to accept temporary employment in the Jervaux abbey household. I did not, till now, know who you were. But the papers you gave me establish your identity. And that makes all the difference."

Billy was silent.

"I am, you see, in possession of the facts."

"There's one recent fact," thought Billy, "that you're not wise to."

"Your affairs, Mr. Spencer, though somewhat complicated, do not call for the intervention of the police," said Arkwright, with the ghost of a smile, "and no official cognizance will be taken of that matter; unless something unforeseen occurs. I am a thief hunter and not a castigator of rash young men. What I know, I shall, doubtless, keep to myself."

Billy felt an enormous sense of relief, combined with a sharp twinge of conscience.

"The irresponsible couple who ensconced themselves at Ivy cottage," said Arkwright, with a dry smile, "made a good deal of trouble for themselves."

"Inspector," said Billy, "did you ever do a fool thing?"

Inspector Arkwright twinkled.

"A good many, when I was your age. And, sometimes, even now. However, I wish you good fortune. I am not ungrateful to you for your share in the running to earth of Mr. Jake. It is the duty of the civilian to assist the police. The woman will still be brought to book. And I shall call on your formidable employer before I leave. Good-by, Mr. Spencer."

Billy walked out of Stanhoe police station and made his way back to the abbey on foot.

"Gee!" he said pensively. "But that last stunt was awful dangerous! Or course, I see well enough what happened. But it was just a lucky accident neither Almee nor that blamed nuisance of a woman was seen getting away. The luckiest sort of accident. Inspector Arkwright isn't the fool I took him for, by a long way. I wonder how much he knows? But he can't know that."

He shook his shoulders.

"It came near being a real crash—just when everything had come right. It put the wind up me worse than anything yet. But there's nothing to be scared at now."

Despite the excellent turn affairs had taken, Billy's mind was troubling him. He had the air of a small boy whose raid on the jam cupboard is about to be discovered. When he arrived at the abbey there was no sign of his partner. After lingering for some time near the most likely haunts, Billy sighed and retreated to the garage.

He had not been there long when Almee's face appeared furtively round the angle of the door.

"Hello!" she said, stepping inside. She halted, and they looked at each other dubiously. Almee was decidedly pale, her eyes pathetic and rather frightened.

"I couldn't help it, Billy!" she said suddenly.

"Couldn't help what?"

"You saw us getting away, didn't you? And the girl—and the Sphinx? Has Monsieur de Jussac explained to you?"

"I haven't seen him," said Billy, quietly, "but I guess it isn't hard to see how things were. You might as well tell me, though."

Almee, very gloomily, described her encounter with Calamity Kate.

"I know," she concluded, shakily, "you're thinking me an idiot. I'd no right to take such a risk—with the police there and everything. I suppose she's a thief. But she's done such a lot for that man, and she was so miserable. He's her husband. And I couldn't help thinking about you and me, Billy, and how I should feel if you—"

She broke down and began to cry quietly.

"That's how it was. Are you very angry with me?"

Billy gasped and, stepping quickly to her, pulled Almee's hands away from her face.

Billy Pulled Almee's Hands Away.

"Angry—with you?" he exclaimed, holding them tight. "I was afraid you'd be mad with me! You ought to. Why, I did the same thing, and I'd no excuse! I ought to have made sure that woman was run in."

"You—did the same thing?" said Almee, staring.

"Yes! Of course, I never dreamed you were in the pits, or I wouldn't have done it. That crippled crook in the cave got over me. They've got him for five or ten years; and he's earned it. But he was all broken up about his wife. Neither of them deserve a scrap of sympathy. But—the poor devil was in such a state, that somehow I fell for it. He never whined on his own account; he was thinking of his wife. It got me on a raw spot. He knew I must have tracked him through her—he begged me to say nothing about her."

"And I didn't. I gave him that much rope. Never told the police I'd seen her close by. Running down women is their job. If it's got to be done, let them do it. They haven't any choice—but I had. All the same," said Billy, "if I'd dreamed for a moment you were in the pits, I'd have chased fifty female thieves sooner than you should take a chance! I ought to be horsewhipped for riskin' it."

"I think it was fine of you, Billy!" cried Almee with sparkling eyes.

"No!" he said. "It's you that were fine."

"This," said Almee, "is what comes of growing sentimental. Neither of us would have dreamed of making such—such fools of ourselves a week ago. What will become of her? Will she get away?"

"I don't know or care. If she made the road, there's juice enough in the Sphinx to take her a hundred miles from here. I only hope they don't find her with the machine. But I'll bet they don't. She'll get clear and cover her tracks—she's the sort that does."

"But the Sphinx," said Almee, with intense remorse, "our Sphinx, Billy! I've lost her for you!"

Billy laughed.

"We'll mighty soon have another—there's two hundred landed at the docks last week—same model; and a factory being equipped to build the new model over here. Mass production."

"What! You never told me it had got as far as that! But—I wanted the old one, Billy—our Sphinx."

"Maybe you'll have her yet. Only I'm not going to let her make trouble for you. We're pretty near done with trouble."

"But how—"

"Never mind. I'll tell you some time. Gee! how you'll laugh! But I'm giving you the cinch—it is so."

"Billy!" she cried, "isn't that splendid! Though I—"

"Well!"

"I haven't been worrying so much about it lately," said Almee swiftly. "But it's good to know. And what's going to happen now?"

"I know one thing that's going to happen now," said Billy, and he kissed her with—as de Jussac would say—empressment.

"Billy!" said Almee a little breathlessly. "Aunt said we had to be decorous!"

"So we are," replied Billy. He kissed her again.

Half an hour later Billy, passing the main porch, encountered Lady Erythea.

"Spencer," she said, "I was about to send for you. The person from Scotland Yard, who has just left, informed me that he had not only captured one of the thieves, but that you had rendered him invaluable assistance. It really seems a remarkable ending to the affair—but it does not surprise me in the least! I said from the first that you were more likely to make a success of this problem than all the police in the country, if they would only consult you. I was perfectly right—my judgment, in fact, is never wrong."

"Yes, my lady."

"I am quite capable of reading between the lines," said Lady Erythea with suppressed triumph. "It is my conviction that the capture of this abominable thief was due entirely to you. The police are imbeciles."

Billy shook his head.

"On the contrary, Inspector Arkwright is an uncommonly clever man, my lady," he said respectfully. "As for me, I had—luck. Luck's a queer thing; even cleverness won't always beat it."

Lady Erythea looked a little out of her depth.

"In any case," she continued, "I am very pleased that this absurd suspicion of the police regarding you is cleared up, and that you come out of the affair with such credit. It confirms my opinion of you."

Lady Erythea contemplated Billy's tall figure and serenely handsome face with a certain regret.

"I am sorry," she said, "that you are leaving Jervaux."

Billy smiled.

"The week I have spent in your ladyship's service," he said gently, "has been the happiest time of my life."

Lady Erythea was not given to expressing her emotions. But her austere face positively tinged a faint pink color with pleasure.

Rub Rheumatic Pain,
Soreness, Stiffness

Rub Pain right out with small trial bottle of old "St. Jacobs Oil."

What's Rheumatism? Pain only. Stop drugging! Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" directly upon the "tender spot" and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism and sciatica liniment, which never disappoints and cannot burn the skin. Limber up! Quit complaining! Get a small trial bottle from your druggist, and in just a moment you'll be free from rheumatic and sciatic pain, soreness, stiffness and swelling. Don't suffer! Relief awaits you. Old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" has relieved millions of rheumatism sufferers in the last half century, and is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains and swellings.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Greeting to The Junior Class of the "S.T.H.S."

And All Other Young People of this Community

THERE is nothing so fresh and inspiring as the enthusiasm and ambition of youth. And this store is always alert and ready to cooperate in everything that the township high school pupils undertake.

A large part of the success of this store results from the fact that we come in such close contact with the young people of this community. We are in touch with their ideas--their whims and fancies--and educational undertakings; and through our policy of reflecting these ideas in our business, we are able to offer at all times the quality of merchandise; the styles and newest clothing ideas that are in demand by our young men patrons.

And it is a pleasure to note that as a result of this policy, this store enjoys the steady patronage of by far the larger number of the young fellows of this community.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Our services were marked by an intense interest Sunday. The Bible school was well attended and good audiences were present at all the services. There were three baptisms. Next Sunday morning the subject will be: "The Church and Social morality." In the evening the theme will be "What Crucifies at the Door." Burl Bean will be leader of the Y. P. S. C. E. The young people had an excellent program last Sunday and the meeting was well attended.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

How are things going on the firing line? Fine, but always room for some improvement. Last Sunday evening musical service was not only entertaining but soul inspiring. The audience tried the seating capacity of the church even to the amen corner. Those present had not only a change but a treat. Come again we expect to have those services rich with music and song, and you can help by lending your talent along this line.

What about the Sunday school? Next Sunday we will study about the greatest prophet and statesman of his day. The life of Isaiah is not only interesting but profitable for our own day. Look up his words and come to make it interesting for some class by your presence. Subject for the morning service will be "The Invisible Helper." Subject for the evening, "Doing the Seemingly Impossible." Good song service and special music by the choir.
