Members of churches are generally very free in expressing their opinion of their pastors, and we are rarely left in in the dark as to know just what they think of them. But what do the pastors think of the members of their churches? Ah! that, indeed, would be something world knowing. Many a congregation sits in judgment on its minister and thinks itself commissioned and computent to judge. The judge minister and thinks itself commissioned and, competent to judge. The judgment is not always flattering. Now if the minister, whose commission is higher and competency superior, should spots out exactly his judgment of the congregation, it would probably be less flattering still.—Ex:

In the evening a well-tilled house responded to the invitation given in the morning—although a well-filled house is not an unfrequent occurrence—and various thoughts relating to the nature of the "special" meeting probably entered the minds of not a few. Some were prepared for a "new church" discussion; the matter having been previously talked over, others ready to hear viously talked over, others ready to hear viously talked over, others ready to hear a nilghty missionary sermon, one that would open the procketbook in a liberal response to the call for missions, and a few may have been prepared to expect anything short of a "White Cap" notice or a "town cow" discussion.

The meeting opened and proceeded as usual, but instead of a sermon the pastor announced that a "talk-back meeting would follow; in which J. H. Durs.

The features of the case were the convicting of the boys by their brother Henry turning informer and accusing his mother of being the cause of the crime, as she had trained the boys, to steal; and the conduct of a girl named Boyd, who fell in love with Pete, the youngest brother, from seeing him in court, and obtained much notoriety by her efforts to obtain his pardon. She tried to see the governor, but he would not admit her to his presence. The murder netted the young criminals only $20 in cash.

Another, and rather novel, feature of this case is told in a telegram from Osceola, Miss, which states that Mrs. Tollafson, the widow of the man murdered by the Barrett brothers, was married there to Carl Bader, a Minneapolis carpenter, on Wednesday afternoon.

A Mandate Against Governor Hovey.
INDIAMAPOLIS, March 27.—Judge Howland yestorday granted to Trustee-Elect Carson a writ of mandate against the governor to compel the latter to issue Carson a commission as mamber of the new board of trustees of the Insane hospital. By agreement the writ was not ordered, and the case was appealed to the suprems court. The legislature selected the trustees, and the governor refused to issue commissions, claiming that the legislature had no power to name the men who should fill these offices. It has been the custom for many years for the legislature to select the trustees of the state benevolent inst tutions, and Governor Hovey is the first executive to question the constitutionality of such action.

A Warehouse Filled with Tea and Gro-ceries Burned.
CHICAGO, March 27.—A very costly blaze broke outshout 4 a. u. yesterday in Alderman Manierre's warehouse on the north side, and did not permit itself to be controlled until the large building, 125 by 100 feet and six til the large building, 125 by 100 feet and six stories high, was a complete ruin. The house was packed with tea and fine groceries, all of which is a total loss, and the value of it is variously estimated at from $500,000 to $1,250,000. The fire attained such serious pr.p.utions that at one time a general alaru was sent in, for fear that it would extend to other buildings, but that did not occur. The insurance is about $800,000. The building was worth $50,000 and insured for $40,000. Mr. Manierre declared that it was the work of an incendiary, as this was not the first time the building had been on fire, and he is sure that in both cases there had been on fire about the part of the structure where the blaze started. He will rebuild.

No citizen is under any compulsion to the purpose of accepting office. So no ress and leave the Bourbons to purs man that accepts office, or works for it, has a right to complain of an inade quate salary.

CHARLES NIER, of Scranton, Pa., ran a needle in his foot, and after the surgeons had failed to extract it he was taken to an electric-light dynamo and his foot held close to the dynamo. In fifteen minutes the needle came out.

PRESIDENT HARRISON told an office sceker that he had made up his mind to make no promises, as he would not have people going around saying that the President had lied to them about appointments, or anything else. That man Ben Harrison has a level head or

THE cigarette drummer says that the consumption has fallen off greatly during the last year, and that the cigar trade has increased. This may be due he imagines, to the onslaught made by the press and pulpit upon the cigarette habit. If that be so, keep up the on-

THE Chinese Minister at Washington expends, at an average, $1,000 a week in telegraphing to his government. His cable messages go to Havre, from there to Aden, then across the Arabian Sea, through Hindostan and Siam, to Pekin. One day he spent $2,000 in sending dispatches concerning the Milwaukee trouble.

SOCIALLY the new administration is well equiped, and life at the capital will lose none of the charms which it is esteemed by many to be one of the president's highest functions to protect. The cabinet officers are all married, and all but one have large families whose efforts will be directed towards making the congressional season brilliant and full of incident. Three of the cabinet ministers' wives, Mrs. Blaine Mrs. Windom and Mrs. Rusk, have had previous experience in Washington, and the mistress of the White House and Mrs. Morton, who have been leaders of official society for years, will find nothing strange in their arduous but delightful duties.

SEEKERS after gold should not be excited overmuch by the reports that come from the Sweet Grass Hills in Montana. As a rule, the first news sent out when a new mining region is opened contains only a modest proportion of contains only a modest proportion of truth, and no sensible man will rush off at the earliest moment in the hope of making his fortune. At any rate he is pretty sure to come to grief, as did the people who lately hastened to Lower California filled with visions of wealth untold to be had for hardly more than the asking. Already a temporary family impending of the Sweet Grass inc is impending at the Sweet Grass Hills, and hardship and suffering are not improbably in store for the men o are flocking to that center of at-

A SIGNIFICANT feature of the New Hampshire vote on prohibition is tha it showed weakness in the rural com munities where it is usually strongest Out of the twenty-five towns of Che shire county only ten voted in the affir mative, and Keene, the stronghold of the Third-Party Prohibitionists, voted in the negative. An incident adding still further significance to the result is that the proposed amendment excepted cider from the prohibited liquors, with the idea of getting the support of the farmers. This is a concession that has not been made in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, although great_ef-

THE secretary of state, of Virginia, in recent speech declared that the race question should overslindow all others n the coming gubernatorial campaign in Virginia and went so far as to say that any Democratic speaker should be kicked out of the party who alluded to the debt or the tariff question. This shows to what desperate straits the Bourbons of that state are driven to maintain their ascendency. They resist the discussion of economic ques tions, fearing their influence in liberalizing public sentiment and insist on ceeping alive the hatreds and prejudices of race as the only means of saving themselves. There are cheering indica ions that this infamous species of Bourbon demagogery will fail of its purpose in Virginia this year. There are too many intelligent Democrats who know that the cry of "negro rule" is a bugaboo and who realize that the material and industrial interests of the state are matters of the highest concern. 'make great financial sacrifices" for They will vote with the party of progthe negro spectre. - Pantagraph.

Effects of Climate.

We hear a great deal said about the beneficial effects upon invalids of the climate of Colorado and other western localities, but when a man changes his place of residence in the hope of im-proving his health without first trying Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, he makes a great mistake. In nine cases out of ten he might save his time and money. This great remedy owes its power over all affections of the throat and lungs, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh and even consumption, which is lung scrofula, to the simple fact that it purifies and enriches the blood and invigorates the debilitated system.

A Wonderful Pig.

George R. White, a farmer sresiding just north of Franklin, Ind., has a pig that is quite a curiosity. The animal has four front feet and legs, all perfect, and twelve toes. It is alive, three months old, and weighs forty pounds.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not heeitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits.—S. D. Patterson, Druggist. 1in22. gist. 1in22.

about to begin. However, Mr. Mackay had a quarter of an hour to chat in before the exncies of the situation would compel him igencies of the situation would compel him to go on again.

"I'm not a very good hand at telling ansodotes," said he. "My life has been more given up to thought than action. But there is one stage of my career to which I look back with peculiar pleasure, I refer to my connection with the great actor Edwin Forrest. You may not have seen Forrest! No. But you know from reading what a strange being he was. He had strong likings and dislikings, held himself aloof from his fellow artists, and was generally supposed to be pardistings, near minuser and trum as season artists, and was generally supposed to be particularly jealous of his great contemporary Macready, whose visit to America, as you will remember, caused the famous riots. "During Edwin Forrest's last engagement I was a member of his company. Though

THE ROCK BY THE SEA.

"How absurdly disagreeable you can make yourself, Jack. But there—I'm not going to quarrel with you. How much longer are you going to keep me up to abuse me!" and Ruby laughed aloud in her usual saucy, tantalizing manner. Jack looked at her, his face as black as a thunder cloud, on which was written a stern determination, but she was in no way appalled by it. On the contrary, she looked at him gayly and carelessly, as if she were perfectly indifferent to him or his moods. "Miss Howard," he began, "Miss Howard," she mimicked mockingly; "since when, pray! How ceremonious we grow, to be sure."

Ho resumed, as if she had not interrupted him; "I will not detain you but a moment longer. While I am convinced that at the present time you are perfectly heartless, owing more to the unhappy way of your bringing up and to the influences and fash. ions of society than to natural hardness of heart"——"Oh! thanks, thanks awfully, you are too good," she broke in again, laughingly. It was all as good as a burlesque to her, accustomed as she was to lovers' rant-ings. "I am as firmly convinced," he went so calm a tone that it should have on, in so caim a toge time it should have warned her that this meant more than an ordinary tiff; "that you love me, but, with your natural perverseness, will neither acknowledge it to yourself nor me."

As he said this—with nu air of a judge pronouncing sentence on some unhappy pris-oner—with his gray eyes fixed on her face with the sternest gaze they were capable of— in spite of herself the bloom on her soft, round check deepened to a bright red, and for an instant her saucy, mocking eyes fell before his. A transient smile passed over his gloomy face at this evidence of his power and left it even gloomier than before. As he re-garded the lovely, half shy face before him he commenced again bitterly: "And why will you not yield to that love and make us both happy? I will tell you. You do not wish to be tied to one; to receive the love and homage of one is not to your taste. Oh, no; not for years to come. If I would wait patiently, and in the meantime bealways ready to dance attendance or your whims, not no-ticing any one else, and always keeping in the background when a desirable flirtation came up, then, perhaps, if you didn't meet some one you preferred to me, after keeping me in suspense all that time, you might graciously condessend to marry me. But I decline to become the slave of any woman; and, as much as I love you, I am going to leave you forever."

and, as much as I tove you, I mm going colleave you forever."
"Ha; ha!" and for sweet, low laugh rang out like a chime of silvery bells. "The plot thickens. Please go on; it is as lovely as a play."

"I know and feel," said Jack, carnestly, "that we are especially suited to each other, and I believe that in time you will realize the truth of what I say and will regret me, even as I regret you now-but no more. I've alas I regret you now—but no more. Fro already said too much—more than I intended, Good-by," and with a deep bow he turned and left, "Well, of all things!" she murmured, "Forever! Fudge. I'll see him to-morrow on the promenade the same as usual. He is dolicious. I do like him the best when he asserts himself. He is grand when he gets engaged. He looks a changed when he gets engaged. serts himself. He is grand when he gets enraged. He looks so stern and glares so, and is so unapproachable that I am almost afraid of him—the darling. If I don't look out he will end in making me marry him before the season is over. Of course I shan't marry any one else, but I'm not going to hurry my, solf; there's plenty time." After which sage conclusion she went up to her room in gay spirits, thinking of the good time she would have in making up, with Jack as she had done a number of times before.

The next day Miss Ruby failed to meet Jack as usual. In fact a week nassed and in not conceal from her own heart that some thing had gone from her that she missed and longed for with an indescribable longing and a wild regret. It was all the more maddening that no one was to blame for her sorrow but herself. The old places had lost their charm. Everything end everybody was in-sipid, flat and monotonous. Ahl if he would only return, how gladly would she acknowledge her love, and how gladly would she marry him at the carliest date he might mention. Had she known his address at that time she would have written to tell him of her love and penitence. Four years after Jack had gone Ruby was at a fashionable watering place. She was still the belle of every assemblage. Her in-difference and utter carelessness, combined difference and utter carelessness, combined with her rare beauty, brought her scores of admirers, whom she drove almost mad with her coldness. She was still as lovely as every, but in her big, brown eyes there was a shade of sadness, and a slightly absent look which gave a touch of soul to a face that had here-tofore sparkled with wit and glowed with gayety and high spirits, but had lacked feeling. Now it was perfect. If Jack could only see her now.

One day she was taking her morning stroll, and feeling an unaccountable depression of spirits. Her great eyes were wearing their most absent look, and as they wandered over an instant the equipage was hidden by the crowd, but Ruby's eyes would have known that face, that form, if it had been a far more fleeting glimpse. She drew a long breath, and by the time she reached her hotel and looked at herself in her room, she was startled at the joyous brightness that sparkled in her eyes and beamed from every feature. All day her face wore on eager expectant look day her face wore an eager, expectant look, her eyes were over searching for something. At the hop that night it was still the same. She withdrew early and sought her room, weary and heartsick.

"Oh," she said aloud, in a troubled voice,

"does he know I am here, and still remai

She sat there alone, white and sad; her facwet with tears; her heart torn with conflict wer with tears; her heart torn with conflicting emotions and a terrible fear that he had forgotten her. The next morning, after a sleepless night, she started out, alone, her cheeks pale, her spirits drooping. She shaped her course for a hidden retreat behind the rocks, where she had often dreamed away hours uninterrupted. As she neared the place she saw that her favorite rock's seet was she saw that her favorite rocky seat was already occupied by an intruder. He sat in already occupied by an intruder. He sat in a desponding attitude, with his head resting on his hand and his gaze directed toward the sea. Occupied with her own thoughts, Ruby was about to turn away without taking any notice of, him, when he changed his position, removed a cigar from his mouth, blew forth a cloud of smoke and Ruby saw who it was. Her footsteps had given no sound on the soft sand. He had not heard her. She stood perfectly still, trembling so that she could scarcely stand. Here was the man for whose presence she had longed for all these sad years, and now she dared not speak to him. He might receive her patience with scorn, He might receive her patience with scorn, and might be married! Terrible, cruel thought! While this was passing through her mind she was startled by hearing some one coming that way whistling. Not wishing to be seen, she sprang behind a convenient bowlder, just in time to escape the eyes of the new comer, who was the same man she had seen with Jack the day before.

The man came up and stopped beside Jack, who said, impatiently: "Why did you come for me so soon?"

for me so soon?"
"Why, en, you said 'come in an hour,' and "I don't believe it's up," Jack cried vio lently, "but because I am a poor, blind stick you think you can fool me. But you can't. Go away and let me be in peace if you can, and don't dare to come near me again under an hour from now. Do you understand? an hour from now, a whole hour."

"Yes, sir, I understand," replied poor Peter deprecatingly, preparing to move off, after casting a glance at the watch he wore to make sure of the time. "Stay," called Jack, irritably. "First tell me if any one is anywhere in sight. I don't want to sit here as a show for any one if I can help it."

"Not a soul, sir, to be seen," responded

Peter, cheerily.

"Then clear out," was the gentle reply.

After John's retreating form was lost to view Ruby stole forth pale and trembling her cheeks moist with tears of pity. How wretched he looked—how and—how she pitied him. She forgot everything except her love for him and wished to comfort him. On the impulse of the moment she went to him and impulse of the moment she went to him and put both soft, round arms around his neck, and laid her cheek against his. Her sudden embrace aroused him effectually from the gloomy thoughts he was indulging in, and gave him a little shock. But as soon as he could collect his scattered senses he became aware that it was a woman! Yes, a woman! A mad woman, no doubt! Did she intend to strangle him or wheat. The necessary strangle him, or what! The novelty of it pleased him. He remained perfectly still and awaited developments like a philosopher.

"Jack—Jack Hunter, don't you know me;" said a tearful voice in his ear.
"Heavens! That voice! Ruby!" he cried, doubtingly, but novertheless throwing both arms about her and drawing her to him while he rained kisses on her face. At last he drew her gently down on the rock beside him and said: "My darling, words are not needed to tell me it is Ruby, or that you love me. But tell me—you are still free as I am."

He did not ask how or why she happened to be there, He did not care. That she was there was the one supreme thought of that happy moment.

"I am still Ruby Howard," she murmured

in reply,
"Thank God!" he said, reverently, "and

"Yes, Jack, gladly, if you will have me.
I have longed for you ever since you left me," she whispered.
"My tresure?" he cried. "It was cruel of me. We will never part again; we will have in making up with Jack as she had done a number of times before.

The next day Miss Ruby falled to meet Jack as usual. In fact a week passed, and in all that time he had not called. She had missed his presence from ball and opera and every place that she had graced with her bright presence. At last, making a few inquiries, she found that Jack was out some where on the broad ocean on his way to China to join his brother, a tea merchant, and was likely to be absent a term of years.

Although outwardly Ruby managed to conceal the shock she had received, she could not conceal from her own heart that some on earth. "Albany Journal."

The fairest buds are often the first to wither, and the ravages of disease make have with beauty, as well as the strength and happiness of the fair sex. The prevalent disorders among American women are those of a most distressing description. These "weaknesses," as they are suggestively termed, insidiously sap the health, and the patient becomes pale and emaciated, the appetite grows fickle and feeble; she loses strength as the attacks increase in severity, and is in despair. There is relief for all such sufferers in Dr. Pierce's world-famed Favorite Prescription, which cures all "female complaints." Its use is followed by cessation of the "dragging-down" pains; return of appetite, and in due course, vigorous health. The fairest buds are often the first to

HORSE BLANKETS.

When Spring Comes

This is the way a horse ook at the end of winter.

Why is it that of two horse blankets which look and feel equally well one won't wear at all, and have a reputation are always imitated in poor qualities which look like them, but having fewer warp threads are not as strong.

Some dealers buy these poor imitations for a few cents less and by saying they are "just as good," sell them at the same price as the strong blankets to parties who do not know the difference.

You cannot tell whether horse blankets are strong by the look or feel, as the warp threads do not show on the face. How then are you to know?

In order that you cantell a strong blanket from a weak one, the manufacturer of 5/A Horse Blankets sews the above 5/A Trade Mark inside of each blanket. This is a guarantee that it is the strongest blanket made for the money and will wear well.

Many poor imitations have been sold as 5/2 blankets. Remember, none are genuine unless the 5/A Trade Mark is sewed inside.

Uncle Sam Going Into Court to Settle the Title Thereto, WASHINGTON CITY, March 27.-The com missioner of the general land office yesterday requested the attorney general to bring suit against the Des Moines Valley Railroad upany to dispossess that company of 200, 000 acres of land granted to it by the state of Iowafor the improvement of the Des Moines river. The land is situated between the Raccoon fork of the Des Moines river and the northern boundary of the state of Iowa, five miles on each side of the river. The United States granted the land to the state for the improvement of the Des Moines river at the point named, the state to the railread, and the railroad sold it to settlers, but did not perform its obligations to the state. This is the same land which was embraced in two bills which passed the Forty-ninth and Fiftieth congresses for the relief of the settlers, both of which were vectord by President Cleveland, and the action of the land office is to afford the settlers the relief sought to be obtained through congress.

The Iowa Grain-Shippers Win a Car Against the Northwestern Bailway. WASHINGTON CITY, March 23.—The interstate commerce commission, by Commissioner Morrison, rendered its decision yesterday in the case of the Northwestern Iowa Grain er Mortison, rendered its decision yesterday in the case of the Northwestern Iowa Grain and Stock Shippers' association against the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad company making different rates for the same distances on different branches of its road must justify them by showing that there is a difference in the cost of carrying on the different branches. The company, by long maintaining a rate without the presence of competition on other than equal terms, makes or gives evidence that such rate is not too low. A company which has two routes between points cannot lawfully charge more for a shorter than a longer distance on either. A road can carry freight from points on its main line cheaper than another road can carry over a branch road with separate equipment to and over its main line, and where one of such branch lines must carry in competition with another road from its main line stations, the rate on that branch establishes no criterion for the branches not so attnated.

"The company gave special rates to cornabippers in Nebraska to points in Illinois, by means of which the corn reached the seaboard at low through rates. When the company denies, as it did, such special advantages it do corn shippers in lows it gave unlawful preference to Nebraska shippera."

their pastors, and we are rarely left in in the dark as to know just what they think of, them. But what do the pastors think of the members of their churches? Ah! that, indeed, would be something worth knowing. Many a congregation sits in judgment on its minister and thinks itself commissioned and competent to judge. The judgment is not always flattering. Now if the minister, whose commission is higher and competency superior, should speak out exactly his judgemnt of the congregation, je would probably be less flattering still.—Ex.

The Initiatory Move in the Matter of a New M. E. Church.

Near the close of the morning service at the M. E. church hast Sunday the pastor announced that the evening service would be something "special," ne would not say what, but remarked that if the prople had any curiosity about them racy would all be present.

In the evening a well-filled house responded to the invitation given in the morning—although a well-filled house is not an unfrequent occurrence—and various thoughts relating to the nature of the "special" meeting probably entered the minds of not a few. Some were prepared for a "new church" discussion, the matter having been previously talked over, others ready to hear a mighty missionary sermon, one that would open the pocketbook in a liberal response to the call for missions, and a few may have been prepared—to expect anything short of a "White Cap" notice or a "town cow" discussion.

The meeting opened and proceeded as usual, but instead of a sermon the pastor announced that a "talk-back meeting would follow, in which J. H. Dunscomb lead off with a paper on the "History of Methodism in Sullivan," begin

THE secretary of state, of Virginia, in recent speech declared that the race question should overshadow all others n the coming gubernatorial campaign n Virginia and went so far as to say that any Democratic speaker should be kicked out of the party who alluded to the debt or the tariff question. This shows to what desperate straits the Bourbons of that state are driven to maintain their ascendency. They resist the discussion of economic ques ions, fearing their influence in liberalizing public sentiment and insist on keeping alive the hatreds and prejudices of race as the only means of saving themselves. There are cheering indications that this infamous species of Bourbon demagogery will fail of its purpose in Virginia this year. THE ROCK BY THE SEA.

"How absurdly disagreeable you can make yourself, Jack. But there—I'm not going to quarrel with you. How much longer are you going to keep me up to abuse me? and Ruby going to keep me up to abuse me? and Ruby laughed aloud in her usual saucy, tantalizing manner. Jack looked at her, his face as black as a thunder cloud, on which was written a stern determination, but she was in no way a stern determination, but she was in no way appalled by it. On the contrary, she looked at him gayly and carelessly, as if she were perfectly indifferent to him or his moods. "Miss Howard," he began, "Miss Howard," she mimicked mockingly; "since when, pray! How ceremonious we grow, to be supe."

He resumed, as if she had not interrupted him; "I will not detain you birt a moment longer." While I am convinced that at the present time you are perfectly heartless, owing more to the unhappy way of your bringing up and to the influences and fashbringing up and to the influences and fashions of society than to natural hardness of heart"— "Oh! thanks, thanks awfulfy, you are too good," she broke in again, laughingly." It was all as good as a burlesque to her, accustomed as she was to lovers' rantings. "I mm as firmly convinced," he went on, in so calm a tone that it should have warned her that this meant more than an ordinary "I'll," "they would have real that it should have warned her that this meant more than an ordinary "I'll." "they would have real that with dinary tiff; "that you love me, but, with your natural perverseness, will neither ac-knowledge it to yourself nor me." As he said this—with an air of a judge pronouncing sentence on some unhappy pris-oner—with his gray eyes fixed on her face with the sternest gaze they were capable of— in spite of herself the bloom on her soft, round check deepened to a bright red, and for an instant her saucy, mocking eyes fell before his. A transient smile passed over his gloomy face at this evidence of his power and gloomy face at this evidence of his power and left it even gloomier than before. As he regarded the lovely, half shy face before him he commenced again bitterly: "And why will you not yield to that love and make us both happy! I will tell you. You do not wish to be tied to one; to receive the love and homage of one is not to your taste. Oh, no; not for years to come. If I would wait particles. tiently, and in the meantime be always ready to dance attendance on your whims, not no-ticing any one else, and always keeping in the background when a desirable flirtation the background when a desirable flirtation came up, then, perhaps, if you didn't meet some ease you preferred to me, after keeping me in suspense all that time, you might graciously condescend to marry me. But I decline to become the slave of any woman; and, as much as I love you, I am going to leave you forever."

"Ha, ha!" and her sweet, low laugh rang out like a chime of slivery bells. "The plot

"I know and feel," said Jack, earnestly, "that we are especially suited to each other, and I believe that in time you will realize the truth of what, I say and will regret me, even as I regret you now—but no more. It'e already said too much—more than I intended ready said too much—more than I intended. Good-by," and with a deep bow he turned and left,

"Well, of all things!" she murmured.
"Forever! Fudge. Pil see him to-morrow on the promenade the same as usual. He is delicious. I do like him the best when he asserts himself. He is grand when he met seems the limit. serts himself. He is grand when he gets en raged. He looks so stern and glares so, and is so unapproachable that I am almost afraid of him—the darling. If I don't look out he will end in making me marry him before the season is over. Of course I shan't marry any one else, but I'm not going to hurry my self; there's plenty time." After which sage conclusion sho went up to her room in gay spirits, thinking of the good time she would spirits, thinking of the good time she would have in making up with Jack as she had done a number of times before.

The next day Miss Ruby falled to meet

Jack as usual. In fact a week passed, and in all that time he had not called. She had missed his presence from ball and opera and missed his presence from ball and opera and every place that she had graced with her bright presence. At last, making a few inquiries, she found that Jack was out somewhere on the broad occan on his way to China to Join his brother, a tea merchant, and was likely to be absent a term of years. Although outwardly Ruby managed to conceal the shock she had received, she could not conceal from her own heart that so thing had gone from her that she missed and longed for with an indescribable longing and a wild regret. It was all the more maddena wild regret. It was all the more madden-ing that no one was to blame for her sorrow but herself. The old places had lost their charm. Everything end everybody was in-sipid, flat and monotonous. Ah! If he would only return, how gladly would she acknowl-edge her love, and how gladly would she marry him at the earliest date he might men-tion. Had she known his address at that time she would have written to tell him of her love and renities:

time she would have written to tell him of her love and pentlence. Four years after Jack had gone Ruby was at a fashlonable watering place. She was still the belle of every assemblage. Her in-difference and utter carelessness, combined with her rare beauty, brought her scores of with her rare beauty, brough her scores of admirers, whom she drove almost mad with her coldness. She was still as lovely as ever, but in her big, brown eyes there was a shade of sadness, and a slightly absent look which gave a touch of soul to a face that had here-tofore sparkled with wit and glowed with gayety and high spirits, but had lacked feeling. Now it was perfect. If Jack could only see her now.

One day she was taking her morning stroll, and feeling an unaccountable depression of spirits. Her great eyes were wearing their spirits. Her great eyes were wearing their most absent look, and as they wandered over the crowd that was ever coming and going, she started violently and her delicate, high bred face turned as white as the filmy lace at an instant the equipage was hidden by the crowd, but Ruby's eyes would have known that face, that form, if it had been a far more fleeting glimpse. She drew a long breath, and by the time she reached her hotel and and by the time and reached nor notes and looked at herself in her room, she was startled at the joyous brightness that sparkled in her eyes and beamed from every feature. All day her face were an eager, expectant look her eyes were ever searching for something At the hop that night it was still the same

She withdrow early and sought her room, weary and heartsick, "Oh," she said aloud, in a troubled voice, "does he know I am here, and still remain aloof?"

wet with tears; her heart torn with conflict ing emotions and a terrible fear that he had forgotten her. The next morning, after a sleepless night, she started out alone, her cheeks pale, her spirits drobpling. She shaped her course for a hidden retreat behind the rocks, where she had often dreamed away hours uninterrupted. As she neared the place she saw that her favorite rocky seat was already occupied by an intruder. He sat in a desponding attitude, with his head resting on his hand and his gaze directed toward the sea. Occupied with her own thoughts, Ruby was about to turn away without kaking any notice of him, when he changed his position, removed a cigar from his mouth, blew forth a cloud of smoke and Ruby saw who it was. Her footsteps had given no sound on the ing emotions and a terrible fear that he had

Her footsteps had given no sound on the soft sand. He had not heard her. She stoo perfectly still, trombling so that she could scarcely stand. Here was the man for whose scarcely stand. Here was the man for whose presence she had longed for all these sad years, and now she dared not speak to him. He might receive her patience with scorn, and might be married! Terrible, cruel thought! While this was passing through her mind she was startled by hearing some one coming that way whistling. Not wishing to be seen, she sprang behind a convenient bowlder, just in time to escape the eyes of the new conter, who was the same man she had seen with Jack the day before.

The man came up and stopped beside Jack.

The man came up and stopped beside Jack who said, impatiently: "Why did you come "Why, en, you said 'come in an hour,' and it is up, sure."

"I don't believe it's up," Jack cried vio "I don't belleve it's up," Jack cried violently, "but because I am a poor, blind stick you think you can fool me. But you can't.
Go away and let me be in peace if you can,
and don't dare to come near me again under an hour from now. Do you understand? an hour from noy, a whole hour."

"Yes, sir, I understand," replied poor Peter deprecatingly, preparing to move off, after casting a glance at the watch he were to make sure of the time.

casting a giance at the watch he will be sure of the time.

"Stay," called Jack, irritably. "First tell me if any one is anywhere in sight. I don't want to sit here as a show for any one if I can help it."

"Not a soul, sir, to be seen," responded

Peter, cheerily. "Then clear out," was the gentle reply.

After John's retreating form, was lost to yiew Ruby stole forth "pale and trembling her checks moist with tears of pity. How wretched he looked—how sad—how she pitied him. She forgot everything except her love for him and wished to comfort him. On the impulse of the moment she went to him and impulse of the moment she went to him and put both soft, round arms around his neck, and laid her cheek against his. Her sudden embrace aroused him effectually from the gloomy thoughts he was indulging in, and gave him a little shock. But as soon as he could collect his scattered senses he became aware that it was a woman! Yes, a woman! A mad woman, no doubt! Did she intend to stranglo him, or what! The novelty of it pleased him. He remained perfectly still and awaited developments like a philosopher. "Jack—Jack Hunter, don't you know me?"

said a tearful voice in his ear said a tearful voice in his ear.

"Heavens! That voice! Ruby!" he cried, doubtingly, but nevertheless throwing both arms about her and drawing her to him' while he rained ldsses on her face. At last he draw her gently down on the rock beside him and said: "My darling, words are not needed to tell me it is Ruby, or that you love me. But tell me—you are still free as I am." He did not ask how or why she happened to be there, He did not care. That she was there was the one supreme thought of that

"I am still Ruby Howard," she murmured

"I am still rupy in reply.
"Thank God!" ho'said, reverently, "and for this hour. And now, will you, can you—heart of my heart, marry me, as I am—a blind man!"
"Yee Jack gladly, if you will have me.

"Yes, Jack, gladly, if you will have me. I have longed for you ever since you left me," she whispered.
"My treasure!" he cried. "It was cruel of me. We will never part again; we will get married at once—within the week," he work on the never ever-water state. get married at once—within the week," he went on in the eager, overmastering way that she well remembered. "Your people will not object, I fondly imagine, for I am rich, you know, and all that, besides, I am only blind for a season. My blindness is the result of an accident—happy accident—that brought me home to consult a specialist. He tells me, if I be patient and very careful, I will see in six months and perhaps sconer. Sweet Flowers.

The fairest buds are often the first to wither, and the ravages of disease make havoe with beauty, as well as the strength and happiness of the fair sex. The prevalent disorders among American women are those of a most distressing description. These "weaknesses," as they are suggestively termed, insidiously sap the health, and the patient becomes pale and emaciated, the appetite grows fickle and feeble; she loses strength as the attacks increase in severity, and is in despair. There is relief for all such sufferers in Dr. Pierce's world-famed Favorite Prescription, which cures all "female complaints." Its use is followed by cessation of the "dragging-down" pains, return of appetite, and in due course, vigorous health. The fairest buds are often the first to

THE DES MOINES RIVER LANDS.

Uncle Sam Going into Court to Settle the Title Thereto. WASHINGTON CITY, March 27,—The com-missioner of the general land office yesterday requested the atterney general to bring suit against the Des Moines Valley Rallroad company to dispossess that company of 200,-000 acres of land granted to it by the state of 000 acres of land granted to it by the state of Iowafor the improvement of the Des Moines river. The land is situated between the Raccoon tork of the Des Moines river and the northern boundary of the state of Iowa, five miles on each side of the river. The United States granted the land to the state for the kuprovement of the Des Moines river at the point named, the state to the railroad, and the railroad sold it to settlers, but did not perform its obligations to the state. This is the same land which was embraced in two bills which passed the Forty-ninth and Fiftieth i ongresses for the relief of the settlers, both of which were veteed by Fresident Cleveland, and the action of the land office is to afford the settlers the relief sought to be obtained through congress.

INTER-STATE COMMERCE DECISION. The Iowa Grain-Shippers Win a Cas Aguinst the Northwestern Railway

WASHINGTON CITY, March 23.—The inter sion, by Commiss er Morrison, rendered its decision yesterday in the case of the Northwestern Iowa Grain and Stock Shippers' association against the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad com-Chicago and Northwestern Railroad company. It states that "a railroad company, It states that a railroad company making different rates for the same distances on different branches of its road must justify them by showing that there is a difference in the cost of carrying on the different branches. The company, by long maintaining a rate without the presence of competition on other than equal terms, makes or gives evidence that such rate is not too low. A company which has two routes between points cannot lawfully charge more for a shorter than a longer distance on either. A road can carry freight from points on its main line cheaper than another road can carry over a branch road with separate equipment to and over its main line, and where one of such branch lines must carry in competition with another road from its main line stations, the rate on that branch establishes no criterion for the branches not so situated. lishes no criterion for the branches not so situated.

"The company gave special rates to corn-shippers in Nebraska to points in Illinois, by means of which the corn reached the sea-board at low through rates. When the com-pany denies, as it did, such special advantages
