HAS IMPORTANT WORK

The commission authorized to formulate a road program for the State of Illinois has set for itself a tremendous task, according to the statement made by Lieutenant Governor Hugh Cross at its organization meeting.

The duties of the commission have been defined "To investigate, survey and study the organization, administration, engineering and financing of the highway systems of the state, and to formulate and recommend a program therefor."

Highways are vitally important to the business and social life of every community. Every section of the state seeks safe, convenient and economical highway transportation.

The Illinois system is archaic and inadequate for the demand of present day travel. There are overlapping methods of administration. There are township roads, county roads, state-aid roads, and there are some roads that receive federal aid.

The commission also has the problem of highway safety to consider. Many highway accidents are caused by dangerous existing facilities in the obsolete present-day system.

Any program recommended by the commission will require the expenditure of a vast sum of money. The program must be sound, it must have vision, and it must be one that can be sold first to the legislators of the state who must enact it in whole or in part into law.

THE WINTER'S COAL OUTLOOK

Current reports state that there is little danger of a severe coal shortage this winter. Household and users of this type of fuel shouldn't let that statement lull them into a false sense of security.

There are sure to be scarcities of certain types of coal in some communities at certain times. This is a certainty because dealers and large users have not been able to build up any back-log in their yards.

The prediction on the adequate supply is based on the overall picture, assuming that mining will proceed at a high level, and that there will be no increased drain on the output for export abroad.

The role of coal in the American economy becomes increasingly important as our population grows and general industrial activity increases. Coal producers are installing new machinery, and are even opening new mines.

That takes care of practically everyone except the consumer. If he wants peace-of-mind he'll try and keep his bin well-filled all winter, and not depend on the overall picture as drawn by the economists.

SEASON A SUCCESS

Although the Sullivan Township High School football team wasn't a conference winner, the season must be considered a success. By defeating the Lovington team and breaking its long winning streak the season ended on a high note that left the students and fans in a happy frame of mind.

Sunday proved to one of those better days. I devoted all waking hours to doing just the things I wanted to do; well almost all the hours. Attended church, wrote a bit of copy for the Craftsman's bulletin and took a Sunday afternoon nap.

The News has been enjoying a lovely basket of chrysanthemums from Mervin Reed's Greenhouses. There are big yellow ones and little yellow ones, white ones, and pink ones, and even a tawny yellow one.

Through the kindness of Elmer McIlwain of the Bethany Echo and Findlay Enterprise I attended a meeting planned by Stanley Elam of Eastern Illinois College for editors of this district at Charleston on Friday night.

After reading Monday evening's weather prediction of "snow" for Tuesday I have thoroughly enjoyed Tuesday's weather. Anytime the weather man's predictions go wrong for the better, I like it.

With quail and pheasant hunters out in full force at noon Tuesday it isn't hard to figure what the chief topic of conversation will be in the various barber shops, cafes, et cetera, about the city for the next week.

Asks Pheasant Hunter To Return Band From Birds

At least as good as last year is the way Dr. Harlow B. Mills, Chief, Illinois Natural History Survey sums up the ring-necked pheasant situation after studying reports from various parts of the state.

Whether hunters will be able to bag the birds depends upon how far along the harvesting of corn and soybeans has progressed in the areas they hunt, but indications are that at least as many shootable birds are hiding out on the wildfowlers as in 1946.

"A better hatch than expected in view of the heavy spring rains," is the report Dr. Mills received from Dr. Ralph E. Yeatter, Natural History Survey game specialist, who has been studying pheasants in central Illinois for six years.

Dr. Yeatter found that, although heavy spring rains delayed nesting, the late hatches were more successful than late hatches in most years.

Paul J. Moore and A. B. Cowan, in charge of a Federal Aid pheasant study administered jointly by the Natural History Survey and the State Department of Conservation, reported pheasants relatively numerous in northern Illinois counties, they have studied. Stationed in Kendall County, they have made numerous counts of old and young birds in their own and nearby counties.

Although the size of broods this year is about two birds less per brood than a year ago, an increase in the number of broods approximately compensates for the smaller brood size. In northern Illinois, broods averaged 8.8 young per brood in 1946 and 6.7 per brood this year, according to Moore and Cowan.

Moore believes that pheasant populations in many Illinois counties are building up to pre-war levels. He points out that, under conditions usually prevailing over much of the Illinois pheasant range, 50 per cent or less of the hens are successful in bringing off broods.

The late spring of 1947 delayed haying and small grain harvesting to such an extent that the proportion of hens bringing off broods was about equal to that of last year.

A large number of pheasants released by the Department of Conservation have been banded, and hunters are asked to turn in all bands recovered, either from birds they kill or birds found dead from other causes to the Department of Conservation at Springfield.

Schools To Get Copies Of Preamble To U. N. Charter

Vernon L. Nickell, superintendent of public instruction, announced that his office will send copies of the preamble to the United Nations Charter to each of the schools in Illinois for display in classrooms.

The preambles are issued by the public information department of the United States and will eventually be presented to the schools of each of the 48 states. Illinois will be the first state to make distribution, according to Mr. Perkins.

Sullivan Travelers Find Thrills . . . and Rain

By Blanche Bradbury
Thursday, Oct. 2. "Rain, rain go away!" 'cause we don't know what the people do on a rainy day in Seattle. Or should I say "a heavy fog" that always clears away. We got as far as three blocks from the hotel, to a movie, for the afternoon, which was the extent of our sightseeing for the day. We are in a very nice little hotel in the heart of Seattle and keeping dry. But today, Friday, the sky is blue and we are mapping out another tour. First a shot of Lake Washington and the Floating Bridge which is the world's largest concrete pontoon bridge. The floating part is over a mile long. And now back to the waterfront on Puget Sound for a second visit. This spot seems to fascinate us more than any other part of town. We took in an Alaskan shop where one could spend hours and money, then a sea fish aquarium and of course a stroll along the docks and wharves, with their ships of many different flags. One ship looked no larger than our small navy gun boats and was flying a British flag. It must have been ready to sail as the young sailors were coming aboard with their duffelbags over their shoulders.

We stopped at pier 54 and watched the old salmon get canned. First we saw him hauled up from the hold of a small fishing boat, in a large wooden tub by a small derrick after having been cleaned at sea, then dumped onto a large table where they were all pushed, by a couple young men in yellow oils, into square-like metal carts and hauled by men who dumped them on conveyors that moved them along the washing table from which they went into the quick-freeze room to be brought out later in wooden carts, to the men in heavy gloves that did the cutting job. Each fish was cut by an electric saw into steaks, then picked up by the conveying belt and sorted for size by men who packed the best steaks in boxes of ice which were nailed closed before they reached the freight car for shipment east. The pieces too small were hauled to the canning department, which was one great mass of conveying belts and tin cans. The fish was packed in the cans, then a large number were stacked on a low wooden truck and pushed into a large round metal tube at one end and pulled out from the other end steaming hot and ready for tables. This tunnel affair must have been the cooking oven. And of the many men working here most of them were Filipinos.

From here we went to "Ivar's Acres of Clam's Restaurant" for another fish dinner. I really don't think we look like fish yet but so sure our one bottle of Old Spice will not be strong enough to battle this aroma. We have enjoyed fresh tuna, fresh salmon, a dozen or more smelt, Alaskan shrimp, no larger than a dime, baked clams, barbecued crab as large as a dinner plate, broiled lobster, french fried scallops, baked oyster Hong Kong, and a few lake and mountain trout. How long can this diet go on?

After a little city life in a hotel we are now back in one of these lovely tourist courts a few miles south of Seattle and just out of Tacoma with Mt. Ranier at our front door. In this cottage the furniture is the blonde wood, with heavy carpets, davenport, radio, ten cents per thirty minutes, lovely drapes, venetian blinds, electric stove, refrigerator, tiled bath and shower and of course a very restful bed, and nice garage. Everything.

Saturday, Oct. 4, and up bright and early. Or maybe I am not awake yet. It is not bright nor early. The heavy fog is drooling again and no Mt. Ranier at our front door. But we took time out after breakfast to see the tallest totem pole in the world, so the plaque says and made from one single cedar tree by Alaskan Indians, which stands in down town Tacoma.

From here it was a short drive to Olympia where we put another capital building on our list, with the fog permitting. This noon we ate oysters at a little waterfront oyster bar, a place noted for its home grown oysters. And do believe me when I say there were seventy-one Olympia oysters on my plate which really is not much more than a handful. They are very small and when cooked they are not much larger around than a dime. We were shown the shells and given a couple for our souvenirs.

From Olympia we took route 101 northwest to circle the Olympic Peninsula. It was a nice trip along Puget Sound in spite of the rain. We saw the many oyster beds with their "Keep Off" signs along the beach. And after a drive of about ninety miles Mt. Olympus came out from behind the fog to greet us into blue skies for the rest of the day. We were at sea level and the mountains were 8000 feet at the highest point and with their slopes covered with snow they say these are the largest glaciers in continental U. S.

We arrived in Port Angeles, the topmost of our circle, around 4 o'clock and after registering at the Lee hotel we went for a drive on Ediz Hook, a long arm of sandbar that is connected with the shore and forms a natural breakwater for the harbor and also the home of the Port Angeles Salmon club.

We will turn in early tonight so we can get an early start at sightseeing tomorrow. And we will not try to tell you about our hotel room. It just doesn't compare with last night's cottage.

Well, we are up early for that tour of the city, but some how we are getting sidetracked. After breakfast we drove down to the docks just as a large boat was coming in. We watched them discharge a lot of people and saw the cars go thru' inspection and after a question or two we found ourselves buying tickets for this ferry that took us to Victoria, B. C., along with all the other tourists. This was a modern streamlined ferry that took us thru' the straits in one hour and 20 minutes. We took an 11 mile drive out to Butchart Gardens and a drive along the coast road before getting a room at the Empress Hotel and settling down for an evening in their lovely lobby. We had forgotten the day of the week but it didn't take us long to get into our Sunday best before joining the throng in the lobby waiting for the dining room to open and where we still enjoyed a fish dinner. And I don't think we will be stopping in another room like this one. There just isn't anything to compare this one with. These rooms are so large and with such high ceilings. The bath room is enormous and Helen counted six steps the length of the clothes closet.

Monday has found most of the tourists gone but we still have some down-town sightseeing to do before we leave. And another tour of the island. The homes all seem to have large flower gardens. I don't see how one family can keep them up so well because it is not just the large estates alone but every little yard and home as well.

We saw a fisherman with three large salmon coming in from shore and he told us about the fourth one that got away. We had lunch in a little tea room down town and then took in the china shops. From there we took a few shots in the rose garden at the hotel and across the street in the totem pole park and some harbor pictures before calling it a day. After dinner we listened to the violin music in the lobby and one more night in that large room.

And now it is Tuesday and what a day! This should be written with a red pencil. First we hate to leave this lovely old Empress hotel and ferry back to the U. S. only we don't have our birth certificate or our voting papers or what the immigrant officers want to see. Then we can't find the little yellow slip that was handed us on arrival. Then we find it, and somehow or other they believe we were born, at least in the U. S. Then we go aboard a much smaller and older ferry, where the cars have to pull forward and back up a few times to get all on, and after two or more hours we are in Port Angeles and headed south on the west side of the Peninsula on route 101, under a very black cloud that looks as tho' it will break open any minute and wash us away, and after about 20 minutes of this we come to a man in the middle of the road who tells us to hold up for a few minutes, the road is under construction for the next half mile.

We were the first car so we had a front row seat to watch the big caterpillar, a couple shovels, and the many men work. And after waiting a few minutes and then an hour, we saw the side of the mountain slide out and down from a dynamite blast, then we watched for another few minutes or hour until the big cat pushed the road clear and just as that was finished a nice large pine tree or whatever, came slipping down to give the poor old cat a larger job than it could do, so light trucks went racing here and there for big log chains and after four and a half hours we got moving again. And did I say that our lunch hour passed right on by while we sat there with only one apple in the car? Of course the rain started just about the same time we did and in 20 miles farther on night time caught up with us. We have found an inn. It has seven rooms, without heat, without bath, but it does have a bed and a cafe across the street where we dashed too for food and water. We were the only two out in the rain and the cafe lady and her husband came over to our table to visit. They said it was so nice to see white women again. Now what? And here we close another day under five army blankets that weigh a ton. From Hotel Empress last night to this tonight.

And now Wednesday morning, a new day and a broken back from those heavy blankets. And now we know why it is nice to see white women again. We are in an Indian Reservation with just the two white families living here.

We are now in Portland, Ore., for the night and with two fresh hair-do's but I don't think the little car will get a wash yet. It really needs one but we have been in rain all day and it is still raining with the paper stating rain for tomorrow.

We were thru' blueberry country this morning and cranberry country this afternoon and all around Portland are large truck gardens with every green vegetable there is. They have four crops of some out here.

Will close this for the week and more to come.

How Much Will Eastern Illinois General Hospital Cost You?

The following figures are based on the maximum assessment required to retire the bonds over a 20 year term at 2½% interest. The limit of bonds that can be issued upon the establishment of the authority is 1½% of the assessed valuation of all the taxable property in the area which is $165,197,764. If state or federal aid is available, the amounts will be correspondingly reduced.

- The annual tax would be 9 cents per $100 assessed valuation.
- Assuming that $3,000 is the assessed valuation of the average city property, the annual tax would be $2.70.
- The annual tax on farm lands would vary from 4.3 cents to 13 cents per acre.
- Also, the Authority Law provides for a maintenance or operations tax, if necessary, not to exceed .075% or ¾ of one mill, per $100 assessed valuation.

S. T. H. S. — NEWS ABOUT OUR SCHOOL — S. T. H. S.

Staff
 This week's column was written by Hi-Scout sophomore editors, Beverly Riley, Pat Saltzman, Sondra Stonecipher, and Marilyn Wood. Reporters were Mary Lou Donaker, Lorene Lane, Wilma Lindley, Joan Welch, Esther Whitchurch, Shirley Wolf, and Marjorie Ann Wood.

Our Reditorial
 Coach Miller says the game at Lovington (our last, by the way) was a real "team victory" for which it is very hard to pick out individual stars. He considers both the blocking and pass-defense in this game the best Redskins have done this season. There were good blocks for each of Stuart Lane's scoring runs; the first time it was Pat Slevin who spilled the would-be tackler, and Bob Merri-man took out three men with one block to clear the way for the second touchdown. There were seven Lovington passes attempted and none completed; Ted Davis, Duane Boyd, and Stuart Lane intercepted three of these, and the other four, were knocked down. Credit should also be given to Brad Lane for a good job of calling signals, and to both Fritz Buxton and David Stone for some excellent defensive work.

It was pretty cold at Lovington Friday night. The cheerleaders didn't take off their coats except between quarters, and even then it took courage! These four girls (Esther, Delores, Marjorie and Beverly) want to express their appreciation to all the Sullivan fans for their fine cooperation in supporting the team at football games this fall.

There were lots of arguments among the fans at the game last week, and this was to be expected considering the old rivalry which has existed for years between the two schools. In 1943 the Redskins won their nineteenth consecutive annual football game from the Panthers, but in 1944 Lovington nosed out Sullivan 27 to 25, then thundered forth with a terrific 54 to 0 victory in 1945 when the Panthers had one of the highest scoring teams in the state. They are still powerful enough to beat us 9 to 6 in 1946, and good enough to take their own conference championship this year. Our boys had to play some real football to break that 28 game winning-streak.

The Reds have had a good season with four wins, two ties and two losses. Our two defeats came at the hands of Arcola and Tuscola, the two teams who played their final game on the afternoon of Armistice Day. Arcola's hopes for an undefeated conference season and the Okaw championship hung on that game.

Music and Art
 We wish to make two corrections of last week's news of this department. At the South Central Band Association concert in St. Elmo on Dec. 6, instead of ten members being selected from each school for the combined band of 150 pieces, the number will be chosen on a percentage basis according to the size of each high school. We also listed certain selections to be played by small groups representing one or two towns at the High School Band Festival at Mattoon on Dec. 14—we should have stated that each number will be played by the large 100 piece band. We are sorry for these errors, which were due to a misunderstanding between our reporter and writer.

The band played at the Lovington game Friday night, and we had lots of fun singing as we rode over in the bus. On a football field, between halves, we made a letter "S" and did the caterpillar formation which every one likes so much. It was "a little chilly," so we decided to wear black slacks instead of the white skirts or trousers. The members of the chorus had their pictures taken on Tuesday of last week. This week pictures of the band, in full uniform, were to be taken on Wednesday. This is for the year book, of course.

The art class is now learning some of the essentials of drawing, such as shading, the four basic forms, etc.

Girls' Athletics
 The P. E. classes are still practicing volley-ball. Every one seems to be enthusiastic according to the yells heard from the gym.
 Preparations for the Sadie Hawkins Dance, which is being sponsored by the G.A.A., are coming along fine. Refreshments of apples, doughnuts, and cider will be sold. Some posters with pretty clever ideas have appeared in business windows downtown.
 The G.A.A. hike was postponed because of bad weather and the meeting for high-school teachers in Decatur last Thursday.

Future Homemakers
 At the last meeting of the F. H. A., on Wednesday, Nov. 5, all of the new members were welcomed into the club. They wore long sloppy shirts and a different shoe and stocking on each foot. The meeting was in the nature of a candlelight affair, and refreshments of ice-cream were served. It was a very nice meeting.

Future Farmers
 At the F.F.A. meeting last Wednesday the nineteen Green Hands were invited — the Green Hand is the first of the two degrees obtainable in our chapter. To be eligible a boy must be a member of the vocational agricultural class and have plans for his farming program and project. Since the F.F.A. is a state and National organization, there are two more degrees to be obtained. These are the State Farmers and National Farmers. The following members became Green Hands, Jim Burwell, Jim Buxton, Oscar Buxton, Kenneth Davis, Everett Elzy, Frank Elzy, Jake Frederick, Douglas Hinton, Dwane Holsapple, Bob Hood, Francis Kirk, Ronnie Sanders, Carrol Lee, Sager, Frank Sentel, Charles Taylor, and Berwyn Yates.

Listen in!
 A new kind of ball? No, Shirley Wolf's shoes—the Woods. Bill and Stanley threw them up the aisle and Shirley had to go get them in her stocking feet.
 Sadie Hawkins dance coming up, and all the gals are grabbing Grabbing what? Boys, of course. On our Armistice Day holiday this Tuesday, all the girls were busy getting their Dogpatch costumes ready. It's gonna be mighty chilly for some of them—thar costumes!
 The kids are working hard on the Junior play, and it promises to be very good. The date has been tentatively set for Nov. 25.

Mr. Jones' geometry classes say that they need "thermomers" instead of "theroms in their two-week's tests.
 Miss Collins wasn't at school Monday; we're very sorry.
 Pat Saltzman is sporting a track letter; could it be Jake Highland's? Pat says no, she went out for track last year; don't you remember?
 We have heard that football is a rough game, but here is one on volley-ball: Priscilla Harshman was heard to say "Do or Die," and just as she finished saying it the ball came down and hit her on the head. Fate—or was it Ida Allen?
 We hear a few pranksters (using the alias C. G.) bought Peg Beltz an engagement ring (price 12c) and now they are objecting because she leaves it in her purse!
 The kids who went to Lovington in the bus with the band found out that Miss King is a very good soloist. We really enjoyed her company on the return trip.

Teensy Says
 Aint it the truth? To be perfectly honest, no it aint! We mean these jokes:
 Shirley—My car has an indifferent horn.
 Duane—What kind of horn is that?
 Shirley—It doesn't give a hoot.
 Mr. Jones—What is a circle?
 Marie—A figure with two sides.
 Mr. Jones—Now think - how can a circle have two sides?
 Marie—Inside and outside.
 Bill H.—What is bought by the yard and worn by the foot?
 Shelia M.—I don't know - - - what?
 Bill—Carpet.

Preference For Better Students

Continuation of the University of Illinois' plan for giving admission preference to high school students in the higher scholastic ranks was endorsed today by President George D. Stoddard.

Commenting also on the problem of educational opportunities for women, now outnumbered more than three to one by the men, the president indicated that the strengthening of courses in certain fields will eventually result in the attraction of a larger group of women students. It's not a healthy situation, he said, to have "only a corporal's guard of women in a co-educational institution."

The progressive admissions plan, inaugurated this year, will probably be continued next year because of limited facilities,

President Stoddard said. He observed that the system of favoring the more talented students may be expected to show benefits in the percentages of students "surviving," especially in such areas as chemistry and architecture where it has been necessary to curtail sharply the number of admissions.

The co-ed enrollment is expected to grow because curriculum developments are to be made along lines more attractive to women than Illinois' traditionally strong fields—science and engineering. These include the fine arts, graphic arts, the teaching of specialists in such fields as mental hygiene and speech correction, journalism, radio, and some aspects of commerce. Increased housing facilities for women will also help level the enrollment ratio.
