

WOMAN SUFFRAGE TEST. Is it a Crime to be a Woman? Many women are now making a career out of it to realize the rights of women in the most southern states...

THE PORTION OF THE BILL THREATENING INJUSTICE to the women in the proposed new state, is found in paragraph 5 of sections 8 and 9, which would allow these states when organized, to disfranchise minors, criminals, lunatics, non-residents, ignoramuses and women.

There may be other objections to this part of the bill, that congress gratuitously interferes to forbid negro disfranchisement, or disfranchisement "for any other conditions or qualifications" which latter will prevent disfranchisement for lack of United States citizenship...

But the injustice to women might be averted if only the word "sex" was stricken from the paragraphs. The pioneer women of the West, who have labored and suffered by their husbands' sides to advance civilization, ought not to be so unjustly classed with felons, lunatics and children...

Will you not ask your organizations to write to the two senators from your own state, to Senator Beveridge, the chairman of the committee on territories, asking each to work for the omission of the word "sex" from the two paragraphs quoted above...

There is need of haste in this matter, and we urge action by your organizations at the earliest possible date. MRS. ELLEN M. HENROTTIN, Honorary President General Federation of Women's Clubs.

CATTLE AND HOG MARKET. Values in the cattle and hog market were weighed somewhat this week, packers having a profitable bargain found day after day, which was due probably to the heavy exportation in the market...

But steers went at $3.75, averaging 1,457 lbs., while a very good drove went at $5.50 with several lots at $6.00 to $6.10 and most of the good fat shipping and export kinds at $5.40 to $5.55 while medium to good grades went at $4.75 to $5.30...

Driver Dick's Last Run.

A Railway Story. BY ROBERT J. C. STRAD.

There, Dick, wake up! You go out in 30 minutes. Hi, Dick!

Eleven loads, seven empty, 13 all, snuggled the sleeping man. Clear for No. 5 at Haysville, open track to—

Two hours later, and Dick sat still at his post, his hand on the throttle, his face a mass of stoic inexpressiveness.

It was an hour before daybreak. The heavy clouds that had obscured the moon for most of the night were beginning to scatter.

Suddenly, in an interval of moonlight, Dick fancied he caught the glint of something red up the track.

An hour later they picked him up, stiff and pallid, but still alive. His bed of soft snow had saved him alike from death by falling, and from revenge from the check-mated outlaws.

"Henderson," said the superintendent, a week later, "I want to do the right thing with you."

"I know," said the superintendent, "that it's no proper return for your sacrifice, but it's the best I have to offer just now."

"Why Henderson!" "It's like this. I like the business, but my nerve's gone."

The superintendent sat for some minutes in deep thought. "I have it," he at last cried, with the eagerness of a school-boy.

Reverently the four men raised the lifeless body in their arms. As they did so Dick felt a solid mass on the chest, and on examining it, found it to be frozen blood.

The statement could not be disputed, and with blanched faces the train crew, so tragically converted into pallbearers, stared at each other.

The moon was again obscured when Dick and Harry climbed into the cab, each with a strange unsteadiness after the nerve-wrecking experience.

A gusty wind swept little eddies of fine snow across the tracks. The electric light threw the shadows of falling flakes upon the whitened earth.

No. 369 stood on a siding with her fog up. Harry, the fireman, dozed peacefully on his cushions.

"Hello, Dick, you pull me to-night, do you? Well, we've an open run, so cut her loose," he said, as he handed up the order sheet.

"What's our load?" asked Dick. "Four coals to give you weight, the Sup's car and my dog-house. Give the old man a whirl for his whiskers."

Stop for orders at division terminal.

Harry slept peacefully. "All right, old boy, take it easy for awhile," said Dick, as he threw on a few shovelfuls of coal.

The swirling snow dashed against the cab windows, and at times he could not see the track. Suddenly a red reflection flickered by the cab.

Twenty, 30, 40 minutes and not a soul had been seen or heard. Half a dozen times Dick felt himself falling asleep, and as often waked up with a start.

Two hours later, and Dick sat still at his post, his hand on the throttle, his face a mass of stoic inexpressiveness.

It was an hour before daybreak. The heavy clouds that had obscured the moon for most of the night were beginning to scatter.

Suddenly, in an interval of moonlight, Dick fancied he caught the glint of something red up the track. The throttle went in with a chuck; the brakes gripped and spluttered on 30 pairs of wheels.

An hour later they picked him up, stiff and pallid, but still alive. His bed of soft snow had saved him alike from death by falling, and from revenge from the check-mated outlaws.

"Henderson," said the superintendent, a week later, "I want to do the right thing with you. You've been off duty since the event. Now we're going to give you No. 4 on the line."

"I know," said the superintendent, "that it's no proper return for your sacrifice, but it's the best I have to offer just now. As soon as I can do better, I will."

"Why Henderson!" "It's like this. I like the business, but my nerve's gone. Every danger signal would now raise that pallid face with the gleaming, sightless eyes. Ugh! Yes," he added with a pathetic mournfulness in his voice.

The superintendent sat for some minutes in deep thought. "I have it," he at last cried, with the eagerness of a school-boy; "I have it! We are opening a division terminal at Bay-ford, hills and forest behind, a rolling prairie away to the south."

Reverently the four men raised the lifeless body in their arms. As they did so Dick felt a solid mass on the chest, and on examining it, found it to be frozen blood.

TITLE GIVEN DELAWAREANS.

How the People of the State Came to Be Called the "Blue Hen's Chickens."

Every true son of Delaware rejoices in the title of the "Blue Hen's Chickens," but the reason and origin of the title are somewhat cloudy in the minds of even the Delawareans themselves.

When the revolution broke out, the first—or, at any rate, the second—company of militia formed in Delaware to uphold the continental cause.

WHAT HE GOT THEM WITH.

At Allenton in the Crowd, But the Factor Had Something That Sold Quickly.

"Gentlemen," began the fair as he arranged numerous bottles on a little table at a downtown street corner.

"No one answered, relates the Chicago Inter Ocean. "Has anyone an errand or a headache?"

"Not a man had anything to say. "Very well, then; but are you troubled with insomnia? Are you low spirited, and do you find yourself thinking of suicide?"

The appeal was like the other—in vain. The crowd ebbed each other, but no one advanced.

"Very well, gentlemen; very well. Now, is there anyone here who indulges in intoxicants and wishes to conceal the fact from the women folks? If so, I guarantee that one drop of this marvelous preparation placed on the tongue will instantly remove the odor of any—"

There was a mad rush from all directions, and for the next five minutes he gave change and passed out the bottles with both hands.

"He did nothing of the sort!" retorted the angry heiress, relates Judge. "I want you to understand that papa did not work a lick for a cent of his."

Headquarters of the Third Japanese Army Before Port Arthur, Nov. 16, via Fusan.—It is reported that a wound received by Gen. Stoessel has necessitated his confinement in a hospital, that he refused to relinquish the command of the garrison, and that he has issued orders to the troops to die at their posts rather than surrender.

Chefoo, Nov. 16.—The Russian torpedo boat destroyer Ratsoropy put into this harbor this morning. Firing was heard half an hour before she entered the harbor. A snow storm and high wind was prevailing at the time, and it is believed that the Russian vessel, under cover of the storm, attempted to escape from Port Arthur.

There is every evidence that the Ratsoropy will disarm here only as a last resort. It is thought that she hopes to elude the Japanese destroyer, reported outside the harbor, at night. The Ratsoropy brought a number of copies of the Novakral, a Port Arthur newspaper.

Mukden, Nov. 13, via Tientsin, Nov. 15.—An unbroken cannonade of siege guns, throwing 50 or 60 shells hourly against the Japanese position in the region of Shakhe station, begun early this morning, ended only at midnight, when more than half a thousand big contact shells had been thrown into the Japanese army's strongest position in the plain, for the purpose of demoralizing the work of fortification concentrated at that point for the past four weeks.

The plants concerned are those of the Smuggler-Union, Liberty Bell, Tomboy, Nellie and Alta. It was the demand for this concession in the mills of the state that precipitated the strike in the mills and mines of Colorado and caused the bitter strife between unionists and mine owners in the Telluride and Cripple Creek districts.

Old Time Controversies. Old time controversies were often vigorous in language. In a controversy with Milton concerning the divine right of kings Salmasius called his opponent a puny piece of a man, a homunculus, a dwarf not having a human figure, a bloodless being, a creature of skin and bones, a contemptible pedagogue fit only to fog boys, a rascal, a rascal, a rascal, a rascal.

THE SCENE PAINTER.

He Plays an Important Part in Staging a Modern Play.

When a play has been accepted for production it is sent to the scene painter, who goes over it carefully, taking note of all details to be reproduced. Then, if the subject is difficult, he makes a sketch of it in the flat.

The scene painter marks out the pieces of his model in tiny squares and then hangs a huge canvas beside the palat bridge with corresponding squares in scale.

Favorite Flowers of Our People.
A table, published in the annual report of the department of agriculture, is enlightening as to the amount of money the people of the United States spent in purchasing favorite flowers at retail in 1909—roses, $5,000,000; carnations, $4,000,000; violets, $750,000; chrysanthemums, $500,000; miscellaneous, including lilies, $1,250,000. TIGERS BESIEGE INDIAN VILLAGE

BOUR OF THE BEASTS CAUSE HAVOC AMONG PEOPLE.

MEN AND CATTLE KILLED

Have Practically Stopped Communication with Other Towns by Taking Possession of the Roadway—Escape the Hunters.

Bombay, India.—The police station at Katigora was a few days ago the scene of great excitement and horror when the corpse of unfortunate Nidas Patali, who met his lamentable death from the claws of a tiger, was carried there for inspection.

Four persons were killed during the course of a few weeks, besides a number of persons mauled; while carrying away of cattle is going on almost every day.

The tigers that have caused so great a havoc here are now proved to be four in number, one tiger, one tigress and two big cubs, and our sympathetic deputy commissioner is said to have offered a reward of Rs. 40 for the destruction of each of them.

The ferocious brutes, having taken their abode by the side of the only important road leading from Katigora to the village Gangapur, have practically laid siege to the village, with the result that communication on foot has been stopped. Several attempts that have been made to afford relief to the unfortunate villagers were all unsuccessful.

A party of local shikaries mustering strong and equipped with firearms marched into the jungle at the head of our energetic Naib Tehsildar Maulvi Mohammed Israil to hunt the tigers, but with all their efforts they could not make the master stripes come out of their recesses.

The next day, however, another party, consisting of four European gentlemen, with a large number of coolies, surrounded the jungle and succeeded in arousing the tigers, which managed to escape through the line without giving

BODIES OF HUMANS SERVED IN BIG STEW.

Missionary from Darkest Africa Tells of His Horrible Experiences While There.

Manchester, N. H.—Returned to their old home after 20 years spent in educating the natives of darkest Africa in the great benefits to be gained from Christianity, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Mead, who are visiting with Dr. Babbit, at 721 Beach street, tell strange tales of cannibals and struggles in savage Africa that drive fear into the hearts of the uninitiated.

Mr. Mead said: "In Malanga, a part of Angola, Africa, we worked among the Kimbundu tribe, one of the most intelligent of the African races. About 100 miles north of the main village of the Kimbundus is a large cannibal camp, at which one of the men in my party had an experience he does not care to repeat.

"The man had been sent with presents to the chief of the cannibal tribe.

FURSUED BY A BAND OF CANNIBALS.

Now, if a cannibal chief does not accept a gift, it is time for the gift-giver to beware. Our man's gift of cloth was refused.

"A little cannibal girl volunteered the cheerful information that the stew was made of victims of war, and that unless our man took care he would favor the stew for the morrow.

"At that our man thought out a plan. He went to the chief and told him that, seeing he was at war with the tribe, he would need powder, and that if the chief would allow him to go back to the village, he would furnish him with powder. The chief fell into the trap and allowed the man to escape.

"Our man got his comrades together and told them their lives depended upon reaching their homes as soon as possible. Needless to say, they escaped, pursued by a band of cannibals, who soon gave up the chase.

"It is not only during times of war that the cannibals eat human flesh. At other times they are like any other savage people."

FORCES WIFE TO PRAY ALL NIGHT.

Says He Wants to Cast Out the Evil Spirits That Possess Her.

Everett, Wash.—Fleeing from her husband, who she said was trying to kill her, Mrs. Richard Vaughn sought protection of the police here.

She stated that she was treasurer for the African Methodist church and that her husband tried to get some of the money, about $14, away from her. He had threatened to kill her. She evaded him, and ran to the railroad station, where Officer Gordon took her in charge and put her on a car to go to the police station while he sought for Vaughn.

The woman declares that Vaughn keeps her on her knees praying all night. She would become exhausted, and crying, would beg for mercy. He would exclaim in answer:

"Cry, will you? Dat's de debil in you! Pray, or I'll cut yo' throat from ear to ear!"

In jail Vaughn spent most of the time in prayer. He was so devout that church people, who attempted to hold the regular Sunday evening services, gave up in despair and left him master of the situation.

HE HAS NO TONGUE, BUT CAN TALK WELL.

Robbed of the Organ by Operation, Man Articulates Better Than Before.

Philadelphia.—Tongueless, yet able to talk better than when in possession of his organ of speech—that is the remarkable condition of William Bunting, of Elmer, N. J., who is receiving treatment in this city.

Mr. Bunting came to the Hahnemann hospital five weeks ago to have his throat treated for what he believed to be inflammation, caused by a severe cold. Upon investigation the doctors found the disease to be more serious than the patient had suspected, and that to save his life his tongue must be removed. It was swollen to twice its normal size, so that Mr. Bunting was unable to articulate plainly.

After the operation the first words the patient spoke: "Is it all over?" were the plainest he had spoken since the trouble began, several years ago. Those in attendance were able to understand everything he said.

WIFE SUES POET HE SHIES AT SOAP

WOMAN ASKS DIVORCE FROM ALLEGED TRAMP HUSBAND.

HE BARS BEDS AND BATHS

Says That He Sleeps in His Clothes in the Cellar—He Does Not Appreciate Her Fashionable Friends.

Chicago.—A rich Lake View woman wants a divorce from her tramp husband because she says:

He sleeps in his clothes. He sleeps in the basement. He washes his face in a bucket. He refuses to take a bath. He eats in the kitchen.

The husband replies: Silver plate, cut glass, feather beds, elegant toilet facilities, arm chairs and fireplaces are too good for me.

Mrs. Lilly Hintz is the wealthy wife. Adolph G. Hintz is the tramp husband. They are still living together in elegant apartments at 608 Evanston avenue.

This is the gist of the story Mrs. Hintz tells:

Hintz wrote a love poem for a German newspaper.

She read it, and sought him out. He accepted her heart, hand, home and fortune.

She took him into her home and offered him every luxury.

She tried for ten years in vain to get him to enter the parlor.

She could only get as his excuse that the place was "too good for him."

He sat for hours, days, weeks in a corner of the cellar gazing into space, thinking, dreaming.

She came to suffer from neighborhood ostracism, but loved him still and admired his great intellect.

He kept up a constant output of entrancing poetry which was never published.

Finally, her beautiful stepdaughter left home and she sued for divorce.

The woman is 51 years old and still handsome. The man is 51, too. They have lived since their marriage at 608 Evanston avenue. Their flat is palatial. Mrs. Hintz owns the big apartment building, besides other large properties in Lake View.

The two are still on the best of terms. "He is wonderful," she said, a great high accompanying her tribute, "but I cannot understand him."

"I had always lived the life of a tramp before I met her," said the husband. "I love it still. I must rove."

In the ten years that the wife has lived in splendor while her husband dwelt in the cellar Mrs. Hintz says she has been able to get but one reason from Mr. Hintz for his conduct:

"It is too good for me."

Every day for ten years she has invited, begged, implored him to come into the parlor, eat in the dining-room, lounge in the library, but there always came the same answer:

"No, it is too good for me."

Mrs. Lilly Von Arendt was an attractive German widow, about the "perfect age of 35," with a nice fortune, at the opening of the story. She was heart-free and care-free, and somewhat sentimental in her loneliness.

One day her eye accidentally fell on a little poem in her German newspaper.

"If Only I Had Thee" was the title of the half dozen verses, and they breathed the passionate longing of a true heart for the kindred soul of a feminine mate, which Mrs. Von Arendt thought described her.

She was much impressed by the yearning verses. She read and reread them until she began to feel a new interest in life.

The widow was so fascinated by the poem that she determined to seek out the writer. Going to the office of the paper she induced the editor to tell who his contributor was and give her an introduction.

Mrs. Von Arendt, thinking of her comfortable fortune and still further charmed by his soulful conversation, was not daunted by her hero's rather discouraging appearance and thought to rehabilitate him.

They were married. The wedding took place February 3, 1924.

What followed Mrs. Hintz tells best in her complaint for asking a divorce.

BABY ATTRACTED BY ITS MOTHER'S CRIES.

Parent Fell into Well, But Stopped Screaming to Save Her Child.

Edwardsville, Ill.—Mrs. Frank Deida, of New Douglas, through a misstep fell into a well at her home. She plunged down 30 feet, and on coming to the surface of the water she clung to the chain and screamed for help.

To her horror, her first brought her baby to the well curb, and it peered down the hole to see what was the matter, creeping perilously over the edge. Fearful that the child might slip and fall into the well, the mother was compelled to cease her cries for assistance. She hung on the chain for an hour and a quarter before her husband discovered her predicament.

HE HAS CARRIED A MILLION LOVE NOTES.

The Bearer of Sweet-Scented Billets to the Girls at Bryn-Mawr College.

Bryn Mawr, Pa.—William Armitage, chief herald and bearer of billets d'amour, sweet-scented notes and bonbons for Bryn Mawr college, has rounded the twentieth year in that service.

Probably no mail carrier in America has delivered as many love letters as Armitage. In honor of his anniversary, the girls congratulated him when he made his trip to the college—an errand that has made many a girlish heart leap with joy in the past.

Happy as was the veteran carrier over this tribute from the students, the day brought one sad remembrance. He missed his faithful horse, "Bill," the big bay, who began his trips to the college the day he entered upon his duties.

Worn by the years of service, "Bill" recently began to fail. His legs lost that pristine sprightliness that had made his gait the admiration of the countryside; he began to totter and show other signs of ebbing vitality. To end "Bill's" misery, Armitage chloroformed him to death.

In Armitage's six trips a day in the delivery of letters to the 50 students and professors at the college, the two "Bills" had become a traditional feature of the institution. Lumps of sugar and sweetmeats were often fed from dainty hands to the old horse as Armitage would drive up with his precious burden of letters.

Armitage has another horse now. But he is not "Bill," the idol of the college girl. Sweet glances greeted the carrier, but there were no sweetmeats for the new horse.

LOVE LAUGHS AT ALLEGED JOKERS.

A To-Be Bride Found a Surplus of Would-Be Grooms When She Arrived.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Anna Wilt, coming all the way from the western part of the state to wed Joseph Custman, the sweetheart of her girlhood, whom she had not seen for many years, found when she arrived at the station at Audensick a group of men each holding a hat in one hand and a handkerchief in the other. They bowed and smiled and waited for her to descend the steps of the car, where she stood irresolute.

The girl surveyed them with embarrassment, but presently sprang with a glad cry into the arms of a man who was frowning, and the next minute he was laughing with her. He was Custman.

It appears that when he finally induced his sweetheart to come on and marry him he told her that he would stand at the station with a hat in one hand and a handkerchief in the other, so that she would recognize him. Then, in his happiness, he told a couple of friends. They spread the news, and practical jokers couldn't resist the opportunity.

WANTS TO REVIVE WHIPPING-POST

SOUTHINGTON, CONN., SELECTMAN WANTS NEW LAW.

TO PUNISH WIFE-BEATERS

He Says We Need Speedy Assurance to Support for Legislation He Will Ask For from Next Legislature.

Bridgeport.—Selectman Augustine Martin Lewis, of the town of Southington, favors the whipping post for wife beaters. At a recent meeting of the managers of charity boards and selectmen, held in Hartford, Mr. Lewis advocated the advisability of having a whipping post bill introduced at the coming session of the general assembly. He said:

"If a bill is introduced I will not be the only one who will support it. From all over the state I have received assurances of support. Still, I meet a few persons who hold up their hands in horror and declare that to return to the whipping post would be going back to the days of barbarism. Then, too, there are politicians who admit that a whipping post would be a good thing, yet they fear it would cause trouble for the party passing the measure, and it would lose votes in consequence."

"A wife beater is too lazy to work for his family. When he is arrested and placed in prison he is comfortable, and gets three square meals a day. I have several times asked men arrested in Southington what would become of their families when they are in jail, and invariably their answer has been: 'What do I care for my family?' I am of the opinion that a dose of the whipping post for such men would have a good effect, not only on the ones whipped, but on others who have a leaning toward wife beating and neglecting their families."

"I should be very conservative if I had the framing of a whipping post law. I have never advocated a whipping post for thieves and other criminals of that class, but something ought to be done to meet the cases of these wife beaters. I would not advocate whipping every man arrested for assault upon his wife; but such a man should be given to understand that repeated offenses will bring him under the lash. A good whipping will hurt the brutes themselves. The jail sentences only temporarily disarrange their plans, and they do not at all mind the little discomforts of prison life. But whip them just once, and I warrant they never will return to the post.

"The whipping should never be publicly administered. Let the judge of the court have all to say in regard to that matter. The selectmen and charities board officials could give the judge the history of the offenders, so that he would know just what to do with them."

A GIRL DIVER WILL EXPLORE EAST RIVER.

To Search for Box of Valuable Papers Lost in General Slocum Disaster.

New York.—Miss Frances L. Baker, of Detroit, has come to this city in search of a box of valuable legal papers which she hopes to find at the bottom of the East river, off North Brother island, where the General Slocum went down.

Miss Baker's uncle, A. P. Baker, of Port Huron, Mich., who died a short time ago, was one of the survivors of the Slocum disaster. Just before his death he told his niece that at the time the flames were raging, when he had despaired of getting ashore alive, he threw the small box containing the papers into the river.

The papers are of such value that Miss Baker is going to make an effort to find them. She says that she has certain directions given her by her uncle, which she thinks will enable her to locate the box.

Arrangements have been made with the Merritt & Chapman Wrecking company to furnish a tug and a diving crew, with which Miss Baker will prosecute the search.

Miss Baker, whose father was a diver on the great lakes, will herself wear a diving costume, working with the other divers and directing the search in person.

A CHICAGO MONKEY GOES ON A DRUNK.

Lincoln Park Pet Takes to Drink and Beats His Wife and Children.

Chicago.—"Jim the Bum," one of Dr. De Vry's pet monkeys, always heretofore considered in the monkey colony at Lincoln park a total abstemious, and regular in his habits, was drunk the other day. He was led astray, the animal keeper says, by Oliver D. Kramer, who was seeking a congenial companion to share a bottle of rum with him.

Kramer poured some whisky into the palm of his hand and Jim drank it. Then Jim tried to find the crackers and cream, and also the towel to wipe his lips.

Only one of the monkeys in the cage saw Jim take the drink, but that one ran over to the others and told them the scandal.

At once there was a great chattering, and they all looked at Jim, who was taking another with his friend Kramer. Jim's family, consisting of his wife and two young sons, covered in a corner. The other monkeys went to them and kept telling them what a shame it was. The female monkeys sympathized with Mrs. Jim, and told her how glad they were that their husbands did not drink.

Nothing else was talked about in the cage but Jim's downfall and what a shame it was, with all he had to live for.

All the time Jim was having a time with Kramer and telling him about his ancestors back a few generations, and about his relatives who are still alive in Brazil.

Then there was a commotion. Jim started for his family in the corner of the cage, reeling and waving his arm in the air. He attacked his wife, beat her up, and grabbed two peanuts that his sons were about to eat. These he carried staggering to the front of the cage, and offered them for more whisky.

MOTHER OF THIRTY MEETS DEATH ALONE.

Not One of Them with Her When She Died in a Hospital in Denver.

Denver.—"One of the most remarkable patients at the county hospital, to my mind," said Dr. Charles Swindt, of the county hospital recently, "has just died. She was Mrs. Mary Gillespie, a woman of 56 years. During her lifetime she was the mother of 30 children, and, what was the strangest of all, they consisted of 15 pairs of twins."

"Mrs. Gillespie came to the hospital in 1901. She had emigrated to the United States in 1840 from England, where she was born. In 1856 she came to Colorado for her health, as she was suffering from tuberculosis, not seriously, but enough to bring her to this state from Massachusetts, where she had made her home since coming from England. I imagine that her life had not been a happy one, though during her stay here she steadily refused to tell anything of her past history save the part that I have just related."

"When she came to us at the age of 53 practically all signs of tuberculosis had disappeared, and the woman was suffering from nothing save old age and generally decrepit condition. In this condition she might have lived had she not, about three days before her death, fallen and broken her thigh bone. The utmost that medical skill could do for her was done, but all to no avail. Her system was too feeble to stand the shock."

"Of her thirty children we have only succeeded in locating one, Mrs. Eva Hildebrand, of Sioux City, Ia., who upon hearing of her mother's death wrote us and offered to pay funeral expenses."

Bull Kills Woman.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Wilhelmina Masur, aged 50 years, wife of John Masur, one of the oldest newspaper men of Pittsburg, has been stamped to death by a bull in the stable of their home in Allegheny. The animal was raised by Mrs. Masur. It had been kept in the barn and she was about to replace the chain on its neck when she was trampled down and killed.

Flucky Woman Kills Copperhead.

Wilmington, Del.—As she left the home of Simon Cheyney, Miss Frances Lehane, of Greenville, was attacked by a copperhead snake, but the young woman picked up a big stone and killed the reptile. Several residents of the neighborhood have been attacked by snakes recently.

FELL UPON NIDAN.

the hunters an opportunity of discharging bullets.

They pursued the animals and made them swim across a beel. It is a matter of regret that the brave hunters failed to hit the animals while they were struggling in the water, although a good number of shots were fired.

The tigers got to the other side of the beel without encountering further opposition and fell upon the said Nidan Patali, who was grazing cattle near his house, and killed him on the spot.

THIS JEALOUS DOG BURIES KITTEN ALIVE.

Resents Attention Paid to Cat and Tries to Kill It in an Odd Way.

London.—A curious instance of a dog's intelligent jealousy is reported from Llanishen.

A happy family there consisted of a woman, a cat, a kitten, and a Yorkshire terrier. All four were on excellent terms until the terrier took umbrage at attentions which its mistress bestowed upon the kitten.

The terrier straightway began to dig a hole in the garden, and finished its task to its satisfaction in three days.

Then the kitten disappeared. A search was made, and as the terrier was seen patting down the earth over the hole which it had refiled, the soil was removed, and the kitten was found to have been buried alive.

The dog was punished, but it took the kitten to the grave again, and the following day took it to a ditch and left it there.

Chance for Bald Heads.

Cleveland, O.—Mrs. Anna Finch, a Cleveland hair expert, says she can grow an abundant crop of hair on John D. Rockefeller's head. She added:

"First, he must rid himself of the stomach trouble, get his blood into good condition and kill the little germs which have entrenched themselves in his scalp."

"The hair is controlled by the moon. That is where the science comes in. Never cut your hair in the full of the moon. Each hair is hollow and filled with oil. Cut your hair in the full of the moon and it will bleed and change color."

ANOTHER LIFE SAVED.

Dr. W. W. Fuchs, of Salisbury, Md., writes of G. W. Fuchs, Sheriff of Worcester County, says: "I suffered with kidney complaint for eight years. It came on me gradually. I felt tired and weak, was short of breath and was troubled with bloating after eating, and my limbs were badly swollen. One doctor told me it would finally turn to Bright's disease. I was laid up at one time for three weeks. I had not taken Don's Kidney Pills more than three days when the distressing aching across my back disappeared, and I was soon entirely cured."

Feeling Sted.

At a little dinner the other night the statement was made that the colored race had longer memories than white folk. Mark Twain, who was present, agreed with the remark, and to prove it told the following:

"Some years ago, when south, I met an old colored man who claimed to have known George Washington. I asked him if he was in the boat when Gen. Washington crossed the Delaware, and he instantly replied: 'Lor, massa, I steered dat boat.' 'Well, said I, 'do you remember when George took the hack at the cherry tree?' He looked worried for a minute, and then, with a beaming smile, said: 'Why, suah, massa, I drove that hack mahself.'—N. Y. Herald.

Curious Scotch Custom.

Natives of the northeast coast of Scotland observe a curious custom at funerals. After the burial service the coffin is carried outside the house and placed upon the two chairs on which it had rested within doors. As soon as the pallbearers lift up their burden and begin their journey to the graveyard these chairs are at once thrown sharply on their backs. In this position they are kept until the interment has taken place, when they are taken indoors again. Any attempt to place the chairs on their legs or to take them in before the proper time is at once frustrated by the relatives of the dead.—Chicago Daily News.

GIRL AND WOMAN

CARE NEEDED AT THE ORANGE FROM ONE TO THE OTHER.

Many a Life Spent in Suffering Because Troubles Were Allowed to Develop—At This Time.

Every mother of a growing girl should remember that there will come a time when her daughter will be a girl no longer but will share with her the blessings of womanhood. Unless nourishment keeps pace with growth the foundations of a life of suffering are laid at that time. Mrs. John MacKinney, of No. 479 Thirteenth street, Detroit, Mich., writes a timely word. She says:

"I did not get proper care at the first critical time in my life and for seventeen years I suffered as a result. I had dizzy spells, felt a constant fear that something dreadful was about to happen and was afraid to go out alone. My breathing was very short and I had palpitation of the heart so badly that I could not go up stairs nor walk even moderately fast. I was so nervous that I could not sit still. At different times for years I was under the care of the best physicians in Detroit and I tried a number of advertised medicines. Nothing helped me until, on the advice of a neighbor, I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I felt relieved before the first box was finished and I kept on taking them until I was cured."

"Last winter my little girl had rheumatism and I gave her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and she got well right away. My niece was thought to be going into consumption and, upon my advice, she tried the pills. They cured her cough and she is now well and strong. My entire family are enthusiastic over Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and we cannot say enough in their praise."

These pills affect such cures because they go to the root of the disease. Other remedies act on the symptoms—these marvelous vegetable pills remove the cause of the trouble. They have proved themselves to be an unfailing specific for all diseases arising from impure blood and weakened nerves—two fruitful causes of nearly all the ills to which humankind is heir. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold in boxes at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct from Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

The STRANGERS' THANKSGIVING

By ELIZABETH FERGUSON SEAT

Mrs. Harmon went about her Thanksgiving preparations with a heavy heart; for the first time within her recollection the relatives, each and severally, had sent regrets. By reason of illness, company, sudden journeys, not one of the large connection could be present. With a sigh she had turned to those two perennial guests, the minister and the school teacher; but they, too, had other plans. It was a dreadful disappointment; the Thanksgiving dinner and the household of guests were the very crowning episode of her yearly labors. Her husband and three sons felt her distress, but rather in a reflected way, for no matter whether guests came or went, they would be present, and their interest in the success of the great dinner was as vital as it had ever been. They had helped to feed the two pampered turkeys and gather in the stores of fruits and vegetables, and they looked forward to the realization of their anticipations with lively interest. The day dawned clear and cold, and Mrs. Harmon began her final preparations for the event, the lack of guests, or even the anticipation of any, disturbed her so greatly that she appealed to her sons. Dick and John and Benjamin watched her spread the table upon a fruit cake sympathetically.

"Tell you, mother, what'll we do," declared Dick, mischievously, "we'll go down to where our line joins the big road, and we'll just invite whoever passes, along, providing we like his looks."

His mother looked doubtful. "Well, not too many, you know, Dick; and do it in the right way. I don't suppose that anybody'll come, or even pass by, for that matter. That 'big road' is a pretty lonesome one, especially so late in the season."

The boys departed upon their novel mission in high glee, but presently Dick asked: "Your folks won't mind you?"

The young man's merry countenance was instantly saddened. "No, they won't mind me. You needn't be afraid."

As the guest disappeared down the lane, following the guidance of the nimble Benjamin, the two boys turned hopefully to the highway. It only another traveler as desirable were abroad and willing to be feasted, the day would be a triumph after all. But travelers did not seem to be journeying, and the minutes lagged dreadfully. From the position of the sun and the state of his appetite John knew that it was almost 12, and instead of watching the highway he kept his wistful gaze fastened upon his elder brother, who was employed in whitening unknown species of animals from a piece of soft pine. So a surly, drawn by a handsome pair of bays, was upon them before they were aware of its approach. The boys sprang to their feet and shouted just as it was dashing past. The driver drew up with difficulty, and the only occupant, an old gentleman, with white hair and a very wrinkled face, looked out to see what was wanted. Rather incoherently, and in some confusion, Dick told his story and gave his invitation, omitting to state the presence of the other stranger. The driver of the surrey, which was from a livery stable in a small town ten miles away, looked displeased, and prepared to drive on, but the old gentleman said: "I shall miss the New York train anyway, as it lacks but ten minutes to 12, and I consider it a privilege to eat Thanksgiving dinner with such hospitable people. If the young men will get into the carriage and indicate the way we will accept their kindness and that of their good mother with many thanks."

As the surrey dashed up to his residence, Mr. Harmon was stepping upon the front porch with the big horn in his hand. He dropped it in astonishment and hastily summoned his wife. The boys scrambled out and the old gentleman followed. As he was about to introduce himself, the young man, with Benjamin, appeared at the end of the porch. The two strangers stared at each other. The younger one grew very pale while the other grew very red. Then, sent Benjamin back to inquire how long they were to keep the invitation open. Satisfied that all their offers of good cheer would be honored up to the blowing of the big dinner horn, they hurried down the frosty lane in high spirits. The road made a sharp turn in front of the lane, and that they might not be taken unaware, Dick posted John, who was too shy to address any stranger, where he might watch in one direction for the faintest tokens of the approach of anyone, and he and Benjamin located themselves upon a fallen log on the opposite side of the road to keep an eye out in the other direction. The sky was blue and cloudless; the dead leaves fell in showers at every gust of wind; in the woods, not far away, there was now and then a clatter of falling nuts.

THE TWO STRANGERS STARED AT EACH OTHER.

The boys waited in silence for a few minutes, but no one appeared. Benjamin grew restless. "I can't sit so still and proper. I guess I'll run over there in the woods and pick a pocketful of those nuts. They're shellbarks, and the squirrels are working for their lives." But just as he started, John made signs of distress, and Dick, as master of ceremonies, came up very properly, and hastily began to rehearse a little speech which he had prepared as they came along. A young man, riding a gray pony, trotted down the highway. As he approached the curve in the road the three boys stood up, and were so evidently waiting for him that he stopped his horse in great astonishment and stared at them quite as earnestly as they were staring at him. Gravely and politely Dick described the state of affairs at his home, and asked the young man to lend the sauce of his presence to their feast.

The stranger gazed at the three boys nutely for an instant, and then a twinkle crept into the corners of his eyes, and he took out his watch. "Eleven o'clock," he exclaimed, gravely. "Are you sure it's not too late?"

"Oh, no," cried Benjamin, hopefully, "the horn hasn't blown, and mother said 'twouldn't be too late till after that."

while the whole Harmon family were staring with all their might, the younger man rushed forward and cried: "Father, won't you forgive me?"

Mrs. Harmon sat down upon the doorstep and cried, the boys shrank back to the very corner of the porch, the other father leaned against a pillar and waited, for this proud father was taking a long time to open his heart. But at last he did it; he sighed, and a host of the hard, fine wrinkles vanished from his face as he said: "My son!" and held out his arms.

The Harmon crowd forward; even the driver pressed nearer. The very air grew fragrant with Thanksgiving. Then forgetful of the great dinner, everybody waited while the old gentleman explained. It was the old story. His son and he had quarreled, and the young man had gone west to make his fortune. That was two years ago, and there was a white-haired old lady far away in New York who cried every day for a boy that never came, but who was coming at last, for after dinner they would drive over to the station, and in a couple of days there would be another Thanksgiving, and this old lady would be at the feast.

Then Mr. Harmon blew the horn, notwithstanding everybody was on the spot, and Mrs. Harmon announced dinner. It was the most thankful feast that she had ever served, though, for the first time in her career as a housekeeper, she had to share the credit for it, for Dick insisted that at least half the glory was his.—Young People.

THOUGHT HE HAD NO MONEY

Had Five Dollars in His Pocket After Going Broke Playing Poker.

"I was brought up to use a good line of talk," says a young man who lives out near the Catholic university, relates a New York exchange. "I've been married now six months, and the only time my wife has ever heard a curse word from my lips was last Sunday morning. I went to a poker party over by the navy yard Saturday night. My wife knew I was going, and just to show her what a harmless little game it was going to be, I gave her most of my money before I left home. It was a very mild game we played, but the grain of the table was against me and by midnight I was broke. I didn't want to make a touch right there, so, as I was young and strong, I concluded I'd stroll downtown and borrow car fare from a newspaper man I knew. It was a nice night for a walk. Well, I frisked into the newspaper man's office and found that he'd gone to Baltimore. I've lived in Washington all my life, but I am not known at any hotel. There was no place where I'd be allowed to stay without baggage except on the O. O. D. basis, so off I set for home, alone in the starry night, with a brand new pair of patent leathers on. I romped under the wire two lengths ahead of the milkman, and went to bed. Along about nine o'clock my wife came in and woke me.

"What's the matter?" I said. "Are they ready to appreciate my feet?"

"I just wanted some money for the Sunday papers," said she, picking up my vest.

"You'll have to pawn something," I said. "I'm broke."

"She was poking in my watch pocket. 'Don't take my watch,' I said."

"I don't want it," she answered. "I want that five-dollar bill I put here before you went away."

"It was there, too. I bet you any man would have said exactly what I said."

Has Walked Many Miles.

Two hundred thousand miles afoot since January 1, 1890, is the remarkable record made by Francis S. Suayberger, of Molino, Lower Schuylkill county, Pa. Mr. Suayberger kept a diary of his daily walks from January 1, 1890, to January 1, 1891, and in that period he tramped 67,000 miles. Mr. Suayberger is a justice of the peace, pension attorney and insurance man. He is 66 years old, but he keeps up his daily trips afoot because he enjoys walking and thrives on it. Last week he walked 30 miles in one day and made 25 business calls.

Disenchanted Don.

A novel illustration of the saying: "Listeners never hear any good of themselves," comes from the London Tatler. An Oxford don, more highly esteemed for intellectual activity than modesty, was asked to speak into a phonograph. A little later the machine was turned on again, and he was requested to listen to his own voice. He listened in silence, then turned to the company. "It is very strange," he said, in a tone of mingled surprise and resentment. "I can't understand it, but through this machine I am made to speak in a peculiarly bumptious and affected manner!"

TILL NOON

The Simple Dish That Keeps One Vigorous and Well Fed.

When the Doctor takes his own medicine, and the grocer eats the food he recommends, some confidence comes to the observer.

A Grocer of Ossian, Ind., had a practical experience with food worth anyone's attention. He says: "Six years ago I became so weak from stomach and bowel trouble that I was finally compelled to give up all work in my store, and, in fact, all sorts of work, for about four years. The last year I was confined to the bed nearly all of the time, and much of the time unable to retain food or any sort on my stomach. My bowels were badly constipated continually, and I lost in weight from 185 pounds down to 88 pounds."

"When at the bottom of the ladder I changed treatment entirely, and started in on Grape-Nuts and cream for nourishment. I used absolutely nothing but this for about three months. I slowly improved until I got out of bed and began to move about."

"I have been improving regularly, and now in the past two years have been working about fifteen hours a day in the store, and never felt better in my life."

"During these two years I have never missed a breakfast of Grape-Nuts and cream, and often have it two meals a day, but the entire breakfast is always made of Grape-Nuts and cream alone."

"Since commencing the use of Grape-Nuts I have never used anything to stimulate the action of the bowels, a thing I had to do for years, but this food keeps me regular and in fine shape, and I am growing stronger and heavier every day."

"My customers, naturally, have been interested, and I am compelled to answer a great many questions about Grape-Nuts."

"Some people would think that a simple dish of Grape-Nuts and cream would not carry one through to the noonday meal, but it will, and in the most vigorous fashion."
