Walking Ruins.

"Once when I was abroad," said a New England congressman, "I met a fellow countryman in Italy who was touring the old world. What he was bound to have was ruins. His system craved them," he said: "the more ancient the better." I fell in with him in London a few months later. He had just arrived, but he bore a disgusted countenance. As soon as he had greeted me he hailed a friendly bobby.

"Say," said he, "ain't there any ruins in this place?"

"Yes, sir; plenty of them," the bobby replied, "but they're walkin' round in the street, sir."

"By thunder, so they are!" exclaimed my western friend, with a grin of delight.

"And from that on," laughed the congressman, "he was perfectly satisfied with London."

The Runner-up.

The best man thought he'd take a look around and see that everything was running as a fastidious bride would wish it, and up in the room where the presents were displayed, alone and unhappy looking, he came upon a youth, seemingly ready, like the wedding guest of the English poet, to "beat his breast." He was wandering about, looking at silver and cut glass without seeing them, and the best man hardly knew how to approach him.

"Er—have you kissed the bride?" he asked at last.

And the answer told far more than its two meager words might have been expected to. It was, "Not lately!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Good Retort.

Thackeray was not a vain man, and he disliked vanity in others and made it the subject of his ridicule and sarcasm. After long pleading his family induced him to have his portrait painted, and Lawrence, a famous London artist, gladly undertook the task. Soon after the picture was completed Thackeray chanced to be dining at his club, when a pompous officer of the guards stopped beside the table and said:

"Haw, Thackeray, old boy, I hear Lawrence has been painting yer portrait."

"So he has," was the response.

"Full length?"

"No. Full length portraits are for soldiers, that we may see their spurs. But the other end of the man is the principal thing with authors," said Thackeray.

Emptied It.

"Why did you keep that boy so long, Jane?" recently asked a Kansas City lady of her new servant girl who had just taken in a siphon of soda water.

"Please, ma'am, he wanted to know if he could have a returned empty," so I drew off the water into a jug and let him 'ave it. I drew it all off, ma'am," was the reassuring reply.—Kansas City Newsbook.

"Pa, what is a dilettante?"

"One who would like to be, but never quite succeeds."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Ticket Scalper's Story.

[Original.]

I'm a ticket scalper. It's not much of a business and doesn't give a man much of a position in the world, but a scalper has a human heart, just like any one else. A scalper may feel inclined to bestow that heart upon a woman. I had that inclination once, but I'm never going to have it again. Women are the most ungrateful creatures in the world. A woman who would treat a man as one of 'em treated me isn't fit to live on the face of the earth.

One day a pretty, melancholy looking girl of perhaps twenty-two came into my office and said she wanted to get to her mother, who was lying sick in Cincinnati. She said she was broke and wanted a ticket for about nothing. I had half a mind to give her a ticket, charging up the amount to myself, but that would be giving a stranger something like $10, and, while, as I said, a ticket scalper has a heart, he isn't the kind of man to give things away that he can't afford to give. I was looking among my old stock for something pretty cheap when I came across an unused half of an old excursion ticket, the limit of time of which had long ago expired. It occurred to me that if the girl worked on the sympathies of the conductor as she had on mine she might induce him to pass her through on it. I told her what I was thinking about and that if she was inclined to try it on I would give her the ticket free of charge. She asked if there would be anything dishonest in such an act, and I told her I didn't think there would be; there would be no misrepresentation. If the conductor wouldn't accept the ticket the worst he could do was to put her off at the first stop and she would be just so far on her journey. If she got stranded in a strange place she could get on the next train and go farther on the same ticket, and so on.

She said she wouldn't do that, but if the conductor would let her go through on the ticket she would do so. The ticket had been paid for by some one, and she didn't think the road had a moral right to refuse it. I agreed with her as to that, and she accepted the ticket with heartfelt thanks and tears in her eyes. She looked hungry, and I asked her if she was going through without anything to eat. She said she'd have to, and I felt so sorry for her that I asked her to go out to a restaurant and filled her up with oysters, beefsteak and a lot of other things. I remember the bill was $3.50. Her train went at 12:05 o'clock, so I took her to the theater. If you want to love any one, just do something for 'em. The more I did for this poor girl the more I thought what a lovely home she could make for me. By the time I left her at the station I would have bought her a good ticket, but I'd spent all my money. I told her to keep up her courage and she'd go through all right. She said that I was one of nature's noblemen and I would be rewarded for my kindness to her. As the train moved away she waved her hand to me out of the coach window, looking at me with tearful eyes.

It wasn't a week before I received a note from the attorney of the road over which I'd given the girl a ticket stating that they had a case against me for swindling and must either shut up my shop or they would send me to state prison. I went at once to the attorney's office and asked to know what it meant. He showed me the ticket I had given the girl with a sick mother and asked me if I'd sold it to a deaf and dumb girl. I denied the charge and admitted I'd given it to a girl who could talk as well as I could. Then he told me how the ticket had been used.

The girl had poked it at the conductor when he came around, and he told her it was no good. She began to talk to him with her fingers, and, seeing her condition, he had given her a pencil and paper on which she wrote that a ticket scalper had sold the ticket to her for the regular fare. The road was trying to get a case to scare us scalpers, and the conductor, backed by the passengers, who were indignant at such treatment of a poor deaf and dumb girl, passed her through, but he stipulated that she should give the name of the scalper, which she did willingly, expressing the hope that they would punish him soundly.

Well, I told my side of the story, and when they sent to the address the girl had given them for corroboration of her side they found there was no such street and number in existence. The officers of the road believed that the poor girl shrank from appearing against me and had, therefore, thus concealed her abode. But, not having any evidence against me, they didn't prosecute me, though I remained under a cloud with them.

Not long ago in looking over a newspaper my eyes were attracted to an item headed, "Working the Deaf and Dumb Racket." The item stated that Mary Moyer had been arrested for traveling on railroad trains on worthless tickets and pretending to be deaf and dumb. She represented that the tickets were sold her by ticket scalpers, thus exciting the sympathy necessary to get herself passed and often to draw forth a contribution from the passengers. I sent the clipping to the officers of the railroad she had swindled, and they wrote me a note of apology.

But I don't want any more women in mine. MERRICK ANGIS.

We are a queer people we,
love to deceive ourselves; we love to pose for something above what we are, and oh how it hurts when forced to step down from our pedestal.

It is not becoming for you or me or any one of us as individuals, to rail at graft, corruption or corporate wrong doing, when on a smaller scale we are guilty of the same practices.

Democrats throughout the State are expected to put up their best men for the Legislature this year, also for their county and other offices. As might has been right, but now there seems to be a reversal and Right is striving to down Might. Solid ability is needed to keep this old Ship of State from floundering in the gale.

Lack of honor and honesty in politics and business is what is ruining our country. This trying to get something for nothing;
get rich quick schemes, prosper without work, soft snap, easy cushion jobs. Let us each individually try to conduct our business or business entrusted to us on honest, conservative, legiti-mate lines.

We are the leading nation of the world in manufacturing laws.
In fact we elect men to the legislature to grind out laws by the wholesale, with no intention of obeying them or attempting to enforce obedience. Even away down in our little country town of Sullivan an ordinance will be brought to light once and awhile to answer a necessity and then find it too faulty to answer the purpose.

A fear is expressed that Bryan cannot be nominated without a struggle, and that if nominated cannot be elected because the scnisms in New York would lose him the State and consequently the election. The Democracy of the nation has for more than forty years past heard this same song of the siren: That to succeed the party of the nation must obey the Tammany leaders, who dominate New York. The reverse is true, as history shows.
No Democrat who attended the St. Louis convention in 1876 can forget how the redoubtable John Kelley led these Tammany braves in their fight against Tilden. How they swarmed the hotels, lobbies and the convention hall, predicting dire disaster, defeat in New York and the nation, if Tilden should be nominated. Despite this onslaught, he was nominated and elected, carrying New York State by 40,- 000 majority.
