REPORT OF CHARITY COMMITTEE.

The charity committee, compo of a representative from each of the hurches of the city, which was appointed Thanksgiving evening, to recieve and disburse any money which might be donated for that purpose, has been working in a quiet way, and has succeeded in giving ome assistance to the poor.

This committee was appointed for the express purpose of disbursing the foud, but in order to that this might be done wisely, has given ome time to visiting and investigation. It is evident to anyone, who will give it a moment of considreation, that four women with less than fitty dollars could not go far toward relieving the wants of the poor in a city the size of Sullivan. But the presents too numerous to mention. committee feels thankful for the amount, which was so cheerfully given, and has tried to invest it judi-ciously. We feel that we have been mcrely representatives of the Christian people of the city, and wish to dustrious, respected woman. Many have donated clothing and food, and these have peen distributed to the best of our ability. In making our report it is impossible to estimate the value of these in dollars and cents, but we wish to take cognizance of them in this way.

For the public benefit and particularly for those who contributed in any way towards the fund, we publish the following report:

Oil Takes Geese Alive

An unique story of goose hunting is reported from Wabash county. For ome time a quantity of oil from the Bridgeport field has been running upon the waters of the Wabash river, and the oil collected to a depth of an inch or more just above the dam. Vhen a flock of wild geese settled down upon the river they tailed to notice the oil, and paddling around in the fluid their wings became so saturated that they found it impossible to fly. Farmers of the vicinity discovered the remarkable predicament, and were successful in capturing every member of the flock and carrying them home.

Liberty Bell Crack Grows.

The discovery that the crack in the Liberty Bell has extended seventeen inches beyond its original length caused the starting of another move ment to prevent the proposed trip of the old relic to the Pacific coast.

The second crack, which is scarcely preceptible, extends almost to the top of the bell, and any sudden jolt may cause the bell to split in halves. According to those who have charge of the bell, every trip taken by the relic has caused a slight increase in the original crack.

The theory on which our pensten tiaries are run is that it is a place where the guilty are punished. Really this idea is one of the humbugs of the age. A counterfeiting plant has just been unearthed in the Sing Sing penitentiary in New York state, where bogus coins were made with such perfection as to deceive the very elect. Large numbers of these coins have been put in circulation is eastern New York. It might still be in successiul operation, were it not for the fact that one of the bogus quarters was passed on one of the guards This particular individual was a walking saloon. He carried a long hose wrapped around his body, filled with whiskey, and he had been driving a lucrative business, selling liquo to the convicts at twenty five cents of a bogus quarter on him and this a disgusted him as an evidence of rascality, that he threatered to make trouble. Thereupon, his convict customers turned the tables on him by informing against him. An inquiry was instituted, the counterfeiting plant was unearthed and several of the guards and trusties have been ar rested on the charge of counterfeiting. This is another illustration of the old adage that "when thieves fall out honest men may come by their own. But what about Sing Sing itself, which has always been considered to be one of the model prisons of the country and has hitherto ranked high as a reformatory.

The advent of Billy Sunday in Springfield has caused an unprecadented demand for Bibles. The cot-tage prayer meetings, where in four days out of the week there are from 125 to 130 prayer meetings in as many homes, have created an immense demand for the Word of God. And what is remarkable, the great sale is on pocket editions, showing that people are carrying these around with them so as to be able to refer to them at any time. We rejoice at this prospect of converting Springfield. We fear that the job will not be permanent, for the grafting instinct is so strong in our sister city as to be likely to overcome any momentary impulse toward salvation. Still anything that makes for the uplift, even if it be transient, is better than to allow those poor devils to wallow in their sins, without even an opportunity of ascertaining the truth.

At the present price of eggs, even an old barnyard fowl that is doing anything at all for he country is a pretty valuable piece of property. It is no longer a goose, but a hen that is laying golden eggs.

If you wish to test the soil to see if it needs lime, take small samples from several points in the field and mix toseveral points in the field and mix together thoroughly. Then take a cupful of the mixture and moisten it just enough so it will pack firmly in the cup. Thrust a knife down into this soil and work it back and forth so as to leave an opening. Be ready with strips of blue litmus paper. This is a form of blotting paper colored blue with a dye made from certain mosses of lichens. If there is much acid in the soil the blue color will change to a oil the blue color will change to a link er red—the more acid the darkr the color. Prof. C. B. Lane declares his Lelief that the milking-machine is one of the advance steps in dairying. I have watched its workings very closely and For example: Two men with the ma-chine will milk a herd of 60 cows in less time than it requires four men by hand. This makes it possible for the other two men to go into the fields with the teams early in the morning and work until evening, as it is not necessary for the drivers to take part in the milking. This is no small item, as on many farms it would amount to $10 a week in cash and for 30 weeks a net saving of $300.

Unclean methods are as inexcurable in the barn as in the house. The handling of the milk and the milking in ity than its after handling after it is brought to the dairy room. It is really astonishing to see how careless and unclean a man, who in other things is most particular, will be when it comes to milking. If the good woman comes to milking. If the good woman has been in a hurry when washing the dishes and left a spot on a plate or a fleck of dried egg on the back of a fork, the man of the house is likely to wipe it off ostentatiously on a napkin or the table cloth. But if that same man does the milking that evening it will not be at all surprising if the one who strains the milk finds some straws, hairs, and manure sediment in the strainer or the bottom of the in the strainer or the bottom of the milk pail. There are some men who are careful in milking; they brush off the udder carefully before beginning and they keep the cows clean. But we all know there are a lot of otners who are so careless that the milk they bring in is really filthy. Straining the milk removes the visible dirt, but it does not remove the contamination or make the milk any cleaner. Surely the good housewives bear much from us.

TE STARTS ON A TRAMP

We got across the ocean from Africa alive, but Pa was a wreck. It is a pretty tough proposition to have your appendix removed in a hospital on shore where everything is quiet, but to have an operation performed on board a ship that is running 18 knots an hour straight ahead, and rolling from side to side in a storm, and rearing up on the hind feet one minute and trying to stand on its head the next, is mighty trying on a nervous man.

a negro king loaded with diamonds to a plain white tramp, but when they got the blacking washed off of us, and we saw we were actually white people again, half way respected by the people that run the boat, it was not so bad, and when we landed in Germany where you can get beer and cheese by holding up your fingers, it was great, and it was not long before Pa was well enough to go out nights without a chaperone, and as soon as he out a chaperone, and as soon as he settled up with the Hagenbacks on the wild animal deal, and got his barrel of money, there was nothing too good for us, and we bought new clothes, and begun to be taken for escaped Americans.

So the next day we hired an organ grinder and a monkey and hired the Italian organ grinder to disappear for the day, and give us the machine and the monkey, and we went to a costumers and I got a suit just like the organ grinder wore, and we got a monkey suit for the prince, a dead ringer for the one the monkey wore naturally, and we took the outfit to a place in the park where the emperor and empress walkde to side in a storm.

We nearly broke up the whole family the first day. The emperor has a lot of black dachshunds, these long dogs that are built as though they were grown under a bureau and pulled out by the tail and stretched. Two of them were trained to roll over on the floor when told to do so.

Before breakfast one morning the prince and I were playing with the dogs, and I told him if I could get a length of small stove pips I would show them a trick, so he got the stove pipe and we put one dog in one end of the pipe with his hind quarters sticking out with his tail wagging, and in the other end of the pipe we put the other dog, with his head and fore few out, so it looked like one dog six feet long. We had the thing framed up when the emperor and empress came down to breakfast, arm in arm. The dos whose head was sticking out of the pipe barked a morning welcome, and the dog at the other end of the pipe wagged his tail, and the royal family got a sight of the largest dog in captivity, and the emperor stopped with a frown on his face, and said: "Got in himmel, vot vos der matter fronde hundt," and the empress held up her hands and said: "Och, gott," and just then the prince who was at the head of the dog said, "roll over," and then

The prince's dog at the front of the stove pipe rolled over one way, and the dog at my end rolled over the other way, and there they lay on their backs in the stove pipe, the front legs of one pawing the air, and the hind legs of the other kicking, and we had to pull them out of the pipe, and when the two dogs began to and when the two dogs began to caper around the emperor and empress the emperor said, in the slang the prince had taught him: "Vell, vouldn't that skin me," and the empress said:
"You bed my life already," and then we went into breakfast.

We had sausage for breakfast and I the emperor wanted to know what we meant, and the prince told him that in America bad men made sausage from dogs, and the only way you could tell if sausage was made of dog was to whistle, and if it was pork sausage it would lie still, but if it was dog it would wag itself. They took it all serious, and when the emperor was served with sausage he snapped his fingers and said, "charge down," and the empress held a piece of cracker to the head of her sausage and said, "speak." There was nothing doing, and we ate the sausage without a

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D.,

A proprietor is an owner; a part-ner is a sharer in ownership; a steward neither owns nor shares ownership, but does business with does business with the capital of an-other. A Christian is neither propri-etor nor partner. All we are be-longs to God. "Ye are not your own for ye are bough herefore glorify God in your body and a your spirit, which are God's." (1 For. 6:19, 20.) All we have also be-ougs to God. "What hast thou that thou didst not receive?" (1 Cor. 4:7.)

"The earth is the Lord's and the fullmess thereof; the world and they that dwell therein." (Psalms 24:1.) "The dilver is mine and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of hosts." (Hag. 2:8.) God owns us and all we have by right cool owns us and all we have by right of creation, and he has never surrendered that right. "In the most ancient of all land records in the world," says C. A. Cook, "we find this entry: 'In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.'"

The basal principle of Christian stewardship is the fact that God is proproprietor, owning us and all we have, while we are stewards doing busi-ness with his capital. "Moreover, it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful." He must do business with the capital of his master according to the master's directions and must make such returns to the master as he may demand. The steward is to have no will and way of his own except as permitted by the master. e Getting Hand.

The Getting Hand.

The capacity to get money is a gift of God which should be cultivated and used for him. "Thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth." (Deut. 8:18.) The wage-earner's strength of body, skill of hand and alertness of mind are gifts of God. The intelligence of the farmer, the merchant, the artist, the banker, the writer and the speaker is the gift of God. A godly business man prayed daily: "Lord, give me a hand to get, and a heart to give."

There are four legitimate ways of

There are four legitimate ways There are four legitimate ways of getting money. (1) By earning it. (2) By buying and selling. (3) By making it work for you through wise investments. (4) By inducing others to give for the benefit of any good cause you may represent. These four methods of getting money define the wave convertible. fine the wage-earner, the mer-chant, the capitalist and the agent, all of whom, if Christians, are stewards using their capacity as capital for Christ and his cause. The Spending Hang.
Spending is also a part of stewardship. Some one has said: "Acquisi-tion makes money. Distribution makes the man. Distribution without acquisition dissipates money. Acquisition without distribution dissipates the man." Dr. Cuyler says: "What a young man earns in the day goes into his pocket; what he spends in the evening goes into his character." Tell me how a man spends his money and I will tell you his character. A faithful steward of money entrusted to him by Christ will be careful to consult the master as to how he should spend it and thus spending money becomes an act of worship as holy and joyful as prayer

Saving money is an important part of stewardship. We need to learn this lesson, for Americans are great spenders. Economy with a view to doing good with the money we can save is a grace to be coveted. We are commanded to lay by in store as God has prospered us with a view to giving it to the work of Christ as need may arise, and we are commanded to lay up treasures in heaven—which is really one act, for laying by for Christ is laying up in heaven. The money we lay by for Christ and use wisely in his services continues to work through time and eternity.

Paying money is also a part of stewardship. Some men who get money by labor or investments are slow about paying their debts, and a reputation for dishonesty in falling to pay debts is as bad as a reputation for dishon-esty in methods of getting money. The world does not want the religion of a man who will not pay his debts, and it has Scriptural grounds for it, because Jesus said: "If ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?" (Luke 16:11) which means that God himself does not en-rich with his graces the man who is unfaithful in the use of money.

Bound to Enforce It.

Kansas is now planning the organisation of a special court system for the enforcement of the state prohibitory law. It is expected to have a new court created in each of the 105 countles of the state, which will have nothing to do except to see to the en-forcement of the prohibitory law and look after the juvenile court business.

Body and Soul.

Philip Brook wrote: "The care of the body and the care of the soul are not two duties, but two parts of one duty."

ESCAPED WITH MEE

BUT SWITCHMAN WAS FORCED TO SACRIFICE LEG.

Caught in Switch, Robert Cochran o Richmond, Va., Threw Body from Wheels of Oncom-ing Train.

The tale of Chillon's prisoner pale into insignificance beside the Spartar like courage of Robert Cochran of Richmond, Va., who, finding himsel wedged between the ratis of a switco on the Chesapeake & Ohio ratiroas realizes that his life must pay the forfeit, yet, with a sixth sense, sees thone bare possibility of escape—sacr ficing a limb to the onrushing morster in steel. ficing a lim ster in steel Cochran was employed as switch-man on the main line of the Chess-peake & Ohio railway, his hours of duty being at night. While performing his usual tasks, with his lantern swinging gayly from his hand, and his thoughts at home with his little ones, he, una-ware, caught his foot in the guard rail of a switch on the main track, over which the fast flying Virginian, the fastest train operated by the company, was to pass shortly.

Almost simultaneously with his im-prisonment came the shrill blast of the engine carrying its load of human freight to the city. In playful irony a gust of wind extinguished his lantern, making it impossible for him to signal the train, which was now but a short hundred yards off. Apparently short hundred yards off. Apparently there was no possibility of escape, and thoughts of the grinding, crushing death began to rise before the impending danger. To release the foot without tearing away the shoe was an obvious attempt, and the time was too short to unfasten the offending shoe. By turning his head he could see the blasing headlight almost upon him. Seconds were precious, though each seemed an age. With dogged determination, and with unexampled nerve. seemed an age. With dogged determination, and with unexampled nerve, Cochran quickly made up his mind to make a last desperate effort for life. It was dear to him. His wife and babies needed him, and with this thought to spur him on he leaned his bady with the same of the same o body with an energy born of despair as far from the rails as he could, and, well-nigh crased, swaited the approach of his doom. This is the story in his own words:

"I had my back to the train. It was my right foot which was caught. In order to lean away from the track I had to cross my right leg over the left while getting the rest of my body out of the way. Even after I had cleared my body I didn't know but what the engine might pull me entirely under the wheels. Then I waited. I know I was conscious, but it was certainly a funny kind of consciousness. Maybe people just before they die feel that way. The next thing the train struck me. I didn't feel any pain, though I let out one long yell when the wheels first struck. After each of the coaches had passed I was still conscious, but there was nobody to whom I could tell my sorry plight.

"I was getting cold and shaking all over, still I crawled away from where I had been hurt, and after covering about 150 yards I met a track hand, whom I told of the accident. Then I swooned and the next thing I remember I was in the hospital at Hinton, W. Va. In less than two weeks' time I was back home with my wife."

The Telephone Dispatcher. The Telephone Dispatcher.

The following is a description of the telephone dispatcher, which many railroad men believe eventually will supersede the telegraph in the disatching of trains:

Each dispatcher is provided with a chest transmitter and a head set, while the equipment of the station operators consists of a special set, including a desk arm and a hand set. It was found more convenient to do away generally at the stations with the head pieces, because of the fact that operators at stations are obliged to attend to switches and signals, so that the headpiece to them is a nui-sance. In issuing orders over the dis-patcher's circuit the same rules gov-erning the movement of trains by tele-graph are followed. This equipment has given such good service that at no time has it been necessary to resort to the telegraph service.

It has been found, after careful study, that the trains on one section of the division have been safely handled with much greater speed than is possible under the old telegraph system. In fact, the dispatcher is busy only about 55 per cent. of the time, while other dispatchers adjoining have been kept busy all the time

Fifty-Two Years in Service.

George R. Hough, the veteran Wabash train conductor, was buried from his home at Clayton, Ill., February 21. He was 74 years old. Had Mr. Hough lived until April 15 he would have completed his fifty-second year of continuous service with the Wabash, he being the oldest man in length of continuous service on the entire Wabash being the oldest man in length of con-tinuous service on the entire Wabash system, beginning his service at Springfield, III., April 15, 1857. Ha served as passenger conductor for 32 years between Keckuk and Bluffs. The Wabash railroad ran two spe-cial trains, one from Decatur and one from Keckuk, to enable its employees

Of Bad Scaling and Itching

"I have been successfully cured of dry ecsema. I was inspecting the removal of noxious weeds from the edge of a river and was constantly in the dust from the weeds. At night I cleansed my limbs but felt a prickly sensation. I paid no attention to it for two years but I noticed a scum on my legs like fish scales. I did not attend to it until it came to be too fitchy and sore and began getting two running sores. My ankles were all sore and scabby and I could not wear shoes. I had to use carpet and felt slippers for weeks. I got a cake of the Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment. In less than ten days I could put on my boots and in less than three weeks I was free from the confounded itching. Capt. George P. MAXWELL JUNIOR $500 STANDARD AMERICAN RUNABOUT

The latest addition to the Maxwell line. Comprising all the features of our arger cars, the Model A is characterized by that economy of maintenance, sturdiness of construction and absolute reliability which has made the Maxwell line famous. If will go anywhere a horse and buggy can, it will go there at eight times the speed and as often as desired, and its performance can be absolutely relied upon. With full-elliptic springs in front and rear, it rules as easy as cars of the longest wheelbase, and its motor runs as silently as those of the most carefully constructed four-cylinder type. This is the car for those who want to get there and back quickly, and without possibility of failure.

Specifications for Model A Two-Cylinder HP. Runabout

Motor—Two-cylinder, horizontal-opposed, 4 x 4 inches, giving to horsepower actual at normal speed. Range of motor, 150 to 1,500 revolutions. Valves mechanically operated and interchangeable, Valve cams and camshaft, contained in seperate frame, can be removed without change of timing. Motor thoroughly protected by sheet metal pan.

CARBURETER—Our standard design; float-feed type. IGNITION-Jump spark, with double coil on dash. OILING—Compression oiler, located on front of dash under hood; automatically oils engine; three sight-feeds in view of operator.

Transmission—Planetary type, two speeds forward, one reverse, direct on high. Transmission enclosed and runs in oil, obviating the difficulties encountered in the usual type of planetary gear, in which the oil is thrown out by centrifugal force. Dust and mud proof. Slow-speed and reverse bands quickly adjusted by set screws extending through the side of case.

COOLING-Honeycomb cooler, natural circulation-

CLUTCH-All-metal; multiple disc.

DRIVE Bevel gear, with two universal joints, in-suring perfect flexibility.

FRAME—Pressed steel.

WHEELS-28 inches, wood, artillery pattern. Tires-28 x 3 inches, standard cylinder type. WHEELBASE- 82 inches; tread, 56 inches.

SPRINGS-Full elliptic. BRAKES -Double-acting on rear hubs.

BODY-Metal, with stamped molding; 'runabout type, divided seat; open deck in rear with metal tool box.

TANK CAPACITY—Gasoline, 10 gallons; water 21/2 gallons; oil I quart.

WEIGHT-about 1,100 pounds.

EQUIPMENT—Two oil side lights, one oil tail lamp, one horn with flexible tube, set of tools, tire repair kit; ironed for top.

COLOR-Speedster Red. No options.

PRICE-$300, f. o. b. factory where manufactured.

OTHER MODELS OF THE MAXWELL

We also handle six other models of the Maxwell, consisting of two and fourcylinder touring cars We have a simple, quiet, easy-running car, with plenty of power to take you up any hill. So if you are in the market for a car, you will be well paid for your time to come and see us before you buy.

The Maxwell is a standard make machine, by an old reliable company, whose business has been a success. We can give you the best piece of machinery on the market today for the money, for they send us nothing but the best.

THE VOTING CONTEST

One more count settles the ques-tion as to who will be the winners in the contest.

As soon as we receive the informa-tion as to where the box is to be left for the final count we will make it known. We are very desirous to see this ended and want to see the con testants awarded for their efforts.

If any of the contestants can bring us the name of a party who will purchase a piano it will give them a big vote. Several names have already been handed in. Give us the names and we will give them to the firm of fering the votes.

A letter received recently from the Piano Company states, "Our Mr. Alm has been so busy recently in other-localities he has been unable to get to Sullivan. You need have no fear about getting the piano."

"Mad" Dan Mattland, on reaching his lew York bachelor club, met an attractive young woman at the door. Janitor Hugan assured him no one had been thin that day. Dan discovered a woman's finger prints in dust on his desk, long with a letter from his attorney. Janitand dired with Bannerman, his atorney. Dan set out for Greenfields, to et his family jewels. During his walk othe country seat, he met the young roman in gray, whom he had seen leaving his buchelors' club. Her auto had roken down. He fixed it. By a ruse she lost' him. Mattland, on reaching home, urprised lady in gray, cracking the safeontaining his gems. She, apparently, sook him for a well-known crook, Daniel Inisty,

Did he catch a gleam of admiration in the eyes behind the goggles?

"Now, if ever they get hold of my portrait and print. Well!" sighed the girl wickedly, lifting slim, bare fingers in affected concern to the mass of ruddy hair, "in that event I suppose I shall have to become a natural blonde!"

Her humor, her splendid fearlessness, the lightness of her tone, combined with the half-laughing, half-serious look that she swept up at him, to case the tension of his emotions. For the first time since entering the room, he smiled; then in silence for a time regarded her steadfastly, thinking.

So he resembled this burglar, Anisty, strongly enough to be inistaken for him—sh? Plainly enough the girl believed him to be Anisty. Well, and why not? Why shouldn't he be Anisty for the time being, if it suited his purpose so to masquerade?

It might possibly suit his purpose. He thought his position one uncommonly difficult. As Maitland, he had on his hands a female thief, a hardened character, a common malefactor (strange ay dimcuit. As Maitland, he had on his hands a female thief, a hardened character, a common malefactor (strange that he got so little relish of the terms!), caught red-handed; as Maitland, his duty was to hand her over to the law, to be dealt with as—what she was. Yet, even while these considerations were urging themselves upon him, he knew his eyes appraised her him, he knew his eyes appraised her with open admiration and interest. She stood before him, slight, delicate, pretty, appealing in her ingenuous candor; and at his mercy. How could he bring himself to deal with her as he might with—well, Anisty himself? She was

As woman, he a gentleman.

As Anisty, however—if he chose to assume that expert's identity for the nonce—he would be placed at once on a plane of equality with the girl; from a fellow of her craft she could hardly refuse attentions. As Anisty, he would put himself in a position to earn her friendship, to gain—perhaps—her con-Adence, to learn something of her necessities, to aid and protect her from the consequences of her misdeeds; possibly—to sum up—to divert her footsteps to the paths of a calling less hazardous and more honorable.

Worthy ambition—to reform a bur giar! Maitland regained something of his lost self-esteem, applauding him-self for entertaining a motive so laudable. And he chose his course, for better or worse, in these few seconds. Thereby proving his incontestable title to the name and repute of Mad Mait-

"I will agree," he said, slowly, "to crack the safe, but upon conditions."

She drew back imperceptibly, amused, but asserting her dignity. "Yes?" she led him on, though in no ccent of encouragement.

"A gentleman for all that!"

"A gentleman for all that!"

"I promise you I mean no harm," he prefaced. "But don't you see how I am putting myself in your power? Every moment you know me better, while I have not yet even looked into your face with the light full upon it. Honor among thieves, little woman!"

She chose to ignore the intimate note in his voice. "You're wasting time," she hinted, crieply.

"Self-preservation," he corrected, with magnificent gravity. She hesitated but a moment longer, then with a quick gesture removed her mask. Maitland's breath came fast as he bent forward, peering into her face; though he schooled his own features to an expression of intent and inoffensive studiousness, he feared the loud thumping of his heart would be tray him. As he looked it became evident that the witchery of moonlight had not served to exaggerate the sensitive, the almost miniature, beauty of her. If anything, its charm was greater there in the full glare of the electric chandelier, as she faced him, giving him glance for glance, quite un-dismayed by the intentness of his scrutiny.

In the clear light her eyes shone lustrous, pools of tawny flame; her hair showed itself of a rich and luminous coppery hue, spun to im-measurable fineness; a faint color burned in her cheeks, but in contrast her forehead was as snow—the pure, white, close-grained skin that is the heritage of red-headed women the world over, and their chiefest charm as well; while her lips-

As for her lips, the most coherent statement to be extracted from Mr. Maitland is to the effect that they were altogether desirable, from the very first:

The hauteur of her pose, the sympathy and laughter that lurked in her mouth, the manifest breeding in the delicate modeling of her nostrils, and the firm, straight arch of her nose, the astonishing allurement of her eyes, combined with their spirited womanilness—these, while they completed the conquest of the young man, abashed him. He found himself of a sudden endowed with a painful appreciation of his own imperfections, the littleness of his ego, the inherent coarseness of his masculine fiber, the poor futility of his ways, contrasted with her perfections. He felt as if re-buked for some unwarrantable pre-sumption. . . . For he had looked into eyes that were windows of a soul; and the soul was that of a child, unsullied and immaculate.

You may smile: but as for Maitland he deemed it no laughing matter. From that moment his perception was clear that, whatever she might claim to be, however damning the circumstances in which she appeared to him, there was no evil in her.

But what he did not know, and did not even guess, was that, from the same instant, his being was in bondage to her will. So Love comes, strangely masked.

CHAPTER IV. Midsummer Night's Madness. At length, awed and not a little shamefaced, "I beg your pardon," he stammered, wretchedly. "For what?" she demanded, quickly, head up and eyes alight.

"For insisting. It wasn't—ahcourteous. I'm sorry." t was her turn now to wonder; delicacy of perception such as this was not ordinarily looked for in the person of a burglar. With a laugh and "The thief apologizes to the thief?"

"Unkind!"

Briefly hesitant, with an impulsive gesture she flung out a generous hand. 'You're right; I was unkind. Forgive me. Won't you shake hands? I . . . I do want to be a good comrade, since it has pleased Fate to throw us together like this, so—so oddly." Her tone was almost plaintive; unquestionably it was appealing. Maitland was curiously moved by the touch of the slim, cool fingers that lay in his palm. Not unpleasantly. He frowned in perplexity, unable to analyze the sensation.

"You're not angry?" she asked.

"You're not angry?" she asked. "No—but—but— "Yes?"

"Why do you do this, little woman? Why do you stoop to this—this trade of yo—of ours? Why sully your hands—and not only your hands—imperil your good name, to say nothing of your

She drew her hand away quickly, interrupting him with a laugh that rang true as a coin new from the mint, honest and genuine.

"And this," she cried, "this from Dan Anisty! Positively, sir, you are delightful! You grow more danger-ously original every minute! Your scruples, your consideration, your sympathy—they are touching—in you!" She wagged her head daintily in pretense of disapprobation. "But shall I tell you?" more seriously, doubtfully. "I think I shall . . . truly. I do this sort of thing, since you must know, because—imprimis, because I like it. Indeed and I do! I like the danger, the excitement, the exercise of cunning and—and I like the rewards, too. Besides—"

The corners of her adorable mouth drooped ever so slightly.
"Besides—?"

"Why . . . But this is not business! We must hurry. Will you, or shall I—?"

A crisis had been passed; Maitland inderstood that he must wait until a more favorable time to renew his importunities.

"I will," he said, dropping on his knees by the safe. "In my lady's service!"

"Not at all," she interposed. "I insist. The job is now yours; yours must be the profits."

"Then I wash my hands of the whole affair," he stated in accents of finality. "I refuse. I shall go, and you can do as you will—blunder on," scornfully, with your nitroglycerin, your rags, and drills and—and rouse the entire countryside, if you will."

"Ah, but-" "Will you accept my aid?" "On conditions, only," she stipulated.

Halvers?" He shook his head. "Half shares, or not at all!" She was firm. "A partnership?" This educed a moue of doubt, with:

I'm not worthy the honor." "But," he promised rashly, "I can save you—oh, heaps of trouble in other -lays."

She shrugged helplessly. "If I must then I do accept. We are partners, Oan Anisty and I!"

He nodded mute satisfaction, brushed the tools out of his way, and bent an attentive ear to the combination.

The girl swept across the room, and there followed a click simultaneous with the total extinction of light.

Startled, "Why—?" he demanded.
"The risk," she replied. "We have been frightfully careless and thought-

Helplessly Maitland twirled the combination dial; without the light he was pholly at a loss. But a breath later skirts rustled near him; the slide of the bull's-eye was jerked back, and a circle of illumination thrown upon the lock. He bent his head again, pretending to listen to the fall of the tumblers as the dial was turned, but in point of fact covertly watching the letters and figures upon it.

The room grew very silent, save for the faintly regular respiration of the girl who bent near his shoulder. Her breath was fragrant upon his cheek. The consciousness of her propinguity almost stifled him. . . One fears that Maitland prolonged the counterfeit study of the combination unneces-

Notwithstanding this she se amazed by the ease with which he solved it. "Wonderful!" she ap-plauded, whispering, as the heavy door wung outward without a jar. "Hush!" he cautioned her.

In his veins that night madn running riot, swaying him at its will. With never a doubt, never a thought of hesitancy, he forged ahead, willfully blind to consequences. On the face of it he was playing a fool's part; he of it he was playing a fool's part; he knew it; the truth is simply that he could not have done other than as he did. Consciously he believed himself to be merely testing the girl; subconsciously he was plastic in the grip of an emotion stronger than he—moist clay upon the potter's whirling wheel.

HOW TO DISSOLVE A COIN.

Uncle Ben allowed the children to marvel for awhile, and then he picked up the tumbler, emptied the water from it, and, reaching his fingers down into the bottom, fished up—what had until then been invisible—Fred's lens.

'Now, Fred, I'll show just how to do s trick. You may use either this lens or any round disc of glass about the size of the coin used in the experiment.

"Before starting the trick, hide glass disc in the palm of your hand-(A—Fig. 2) while

Fig. 2. you hold the coin plainly in sight between your thumb and forefinger (B—Fig. 2). When your hand is hidden within the handkerchief in which you are apparently leaving the coin, shift the coin and give the person who is to hold the handkerchief the glass disc to hold instead. In doing this be sure that the person's fingers will grasp the edge of the disc and not the flat surface, because if your dupe happens to have sensitive finger tips you may be given away by his sense of touch.

When the disc is dropped into the water it becomes instantly invisible, as you have seen, lying on the flat bottom of the tumbler (the trick should always be done with a flatottomed glass), and if you are at all nimble with your fingers you will have no trouble in slipping the coin into your friend's pocket—and now bring cluded Uncle Ben, laughing.

"What!" he exclaimed a minute later. "Don't want your micro-scope fixed now? Why, I thought you did!"—People's Home Journal.

A GOOD TRICK.

Fun Which Can Be Had with Two Pieces of String.

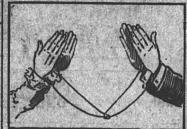

String tricks always take with the young people, and they are easy to do, as nearly all children carry string in their pockets.

To do the trick arrange two pieces of string, each a yard long, in the manner shown in the picture.

One end of the first string is tied around each of the girl's wrists, and the second string is in like manner tied around the boy's wrists, being first passed inside the girl's string. Now the four hands are bound and the trick is to release the captive hands. To do this the boy must pass the bight of his own string from the arm outward, through the loop which encircles one of the girl's wrists, over the hand and back again, when it will be found that the two will be free from each other. The string about the wrists must be untied separately.

In an article on "Photographing Big In an article on "Photographing Big Game as a Recreation," in Recreation, Charles M. Whitney, who has been unusually successful in making photographs of wild game, declarer that to achieve success in wild animal photography is no sinecure; in reality it usually is a process of evolution. It order of development it appears later and perhaps most after this wise: It is not unlikely that the hunter has gone into the woods early in Septement. gone into the woods early in September, to be on hand when the hunting season opens, and at that time the game is still to be found along the water-courses. As the guide paddles him along in his cance, on a "prospecting" excursion, they suddenly come upon a deer or a moose at close range, and as the hunter watches the animal's beautiful or characteristic poses, the thought occurs to him that it would be worth a great deal just then to have a camera. The succeeding stages are painful, to say the least. The veteran hunter soon finds he still has a lot to learn about the habits of game, and a very great deal to learn about photography. The first season is invariably one of high ambitions, hard work, patience-trying mistakes and disappointments, and in the end, failure. Generally this comes from going it blind, with inadequate photographic knowledge and equipment. But the camera hunter is dead game and his enthusiasm knows no bounds; I say this knowing not a few who have had no success worth mention-ing, but who I know will make good evenutally, just because they are litevenutally, just because they are literally wrapped up in the sport. Whoever seeks to photograph the wild animals of the wilderness country must make up his mind at the outset to avoid the places which would please him the most. He cannot remain on picturesque lakes or streams which tempt him to pitch his tent and enjoy the scenery or the fishing, but stead-fastly he must push forward until he finds himself away from the beaten frack, in the regions more enjoyed by the animals than by their unwelcome

Cook Lady (at intelligence office)—
Before I engage with you I'd like to ask a few questions. How many servants do you keep?

The Woman—Two.
Cook Lady—Where do you live?
The Woman (meekly)—Oh, that doesn't matter. We are willing to move anywhere you want to go.

WHAT WIFE SAYS "GOES."

ut it cometimes to Bad for the

When a proporty-owner knows nothing about paint it is bad for the property-owner, and bad for the property-owner, and bad for the property-owner would always hire a skilled painter, and then really leave everything to him. But the house-owner so often fools himself on one or the other of these things.

The skilled painter in every community has some of the most incompetent competitors that ever vexed a conscientious workman or contractor, and the incompetents get jobs generally by working cheap. In the next place, when the skilled painter is hired, they do not leave everything to him, as so many property-owners boast they do. They interfere most ignorantly and most fatally. They insist sometimes on using paint materials without investigating whether they are good or not. Or perhaps they insist on the painter's hurrying the work.

"I'm not going to have that painter's mess around my house a month," the wife says, and what wife says goes—at the cost of a lot of wasted painting money.

If the painter stays away a few money.

If the painter stays away a few days to allow the paint to thoroughly dry the owner says: "That painter's neglecting this work—guess he's sidetracking me for Jones' work, I won's stand it."

What chance does a painter have to do

What chance does a painter have to do good work for a man who is continually nagging at him and otherwise handicapping him (without meaning it, of course)? A poor job is the inevitable result of such interference.

Poor painting costs the houseowner money—don't forget that. It might pay you to get the practical paint book, painting specifications and instrument for detecting paint adultyrants, which National Lead Co. are offering under the title of House Owner's Painting Outfit No. 49. Address National Lead Co., 1902 Trinity Bldg., New York City. This company do not make paint (they leave that to the painter to do) but they make pure-white lead ("Dutch Boy Painter" trademark kind), and they can tell you how to save money by securing durable painting. durable painting.

CONSOLING.

Artist—Yes, my art is my fortune.

Model (cheerily)—Never mind. Poverty is no crime.

"It cannot be," sighed the maid. "I respect you highly, Mr. Hunter, but we are incompatible."

"Well, I suppose it cannot be helped," the young man replied, pock-eting his chagrin and looking about for his hat. "But it defeats all my cherished hopes. I had planned a house, in which I fondly imagined we might be happy. It was to have had a pantry twice as large as the ordi-nary size, with a roomy closet in which to stow away the new cooking uten-sils, and things that a woman natur-ally buys when a peddler comes
