Banium of Paxton gave his lecture upon "Storied Illinois," which was greatly appreciated.

At the close of the lecture a social hour was enjoyed by the guests, during which light refreshments and dancing were enjoyed. The souvenirs of the evening were tiny Illinois pennants, in pink and green, with the club initials.

A Big Success Everywhere

The "Singing Skule Beginment" which the ladies of the Methodist church will present at the Titus opera house, Tuesday night, May 11, is a most wonderful entertainment. It keeps six conductors busy all of the year around, not only does it pack the largest auditoriums in the smaller but iv such cities as Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Nashville, Birmingham, Memphis, Evansville, Louisville, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, etc., it has never yet failed to pack the largest auditorium. The secret of its great success is its quaint humor, bright and pretty songs and spirited choruses.

Card of Thanks.

To the kind friends and neighbors, who so willingly assisted us during the sickness and death of our beloved wife and mother, we wish to express our heartfelt thanks. G. V. JONES AND CHILDREN.

saluting Mehemmed Reshed Effendi as the new ruler of the empire probably will be heard on Friday.

The dignitaries of the church care as little for Abdul Hamid as does the committee of Union and Progress, but the higher clergy are seeking to curb the agitation of the enthusiasts of the Mohammedan league.

Monday determined to make an effort to compel the sultan to abdicate un-der the eccelesiastical law, by which a decree may be issued by the Sheik-ul-Islam, the highest authority of Mohammedanism next to the sultan, pronouncing the sultan incapable of rul

A caucus of senators and deputier has determined to make an effort to compel him to abdicate under the ed clesiastical law, by the terms of which a decree may be issued by the Sheik ul-Islam, the highest authority of Mo hammedanism next to the sultan, pro-nouncing the sultan incapable of rul-

The grounds upon which the is ance of a canonical rescript will be demanded are that the sultan's supremacy is harmful to the church contrary to the sacred law and uncontrary to the sacred law and unjust to the Turkish people. The program as agreed upon at the caucus is that a demand shall be made for the abdication of Abdul Hamid simultaneously from the highest court of the church, from the national assembly and from the military chiefs. The sultan will be offered a release and sultan will be offered a palace and sultan will be offered a palace and liberal allowances.

Depend Upon the Shelk.

The parliamentary leaders wish to discuss this program at a public affiting before they approach the Sheikul-Islam on the subject, for in the popular belief it is with this man, who lives a secuded life of a mysterious, semi-holy character that the difous, semi-holy character that the dif-ficulty lies. He is not likely to act without giving serious consideration to this important matter, taking coun-sel with the principal ulems and seeking the opinion of the wisest and most powerful men in the church.

The Constitutionalists have no wish to oppose ecclesiastical authority nor to undertake the tasks of progress without the support of a majority of the wise men, and if they strongly op-pose the abdication of the sultan, it would hardly be insisted upon at pres-ent, although this is regarded as the simplest course to avoid further complications with Abdul Hamid.

Heir to Throne Was Prisoner.

Mehemmed Rechad Effendi, the heir apparent to the throne, who probably would be selected for the accession, has lived practically a prisoner for 25 years in the large palace and garden not far from the Yildiz Klosk. Since the July revolution, however, he has often been in the streets of Constantinople, looking from the carriage windows upon the scenes in the thoroughfares which must have been strangely interesting very strong, to judge from his appearance. He is 65 years of age and

Last of Troops Surrender. Monday afternoon witnessed the final act in the siege of the Yildiz, Gen. Schefket, commander of the Constitutionalists, over-awing the Albanians into surrender. This force, which was composed of 200 men, was stationed in the Imperial palace. The Albanians were not engaged in the fighting on Saturday, but they per-sistently refused to lay down their ngiting on Saturday, but they per-sistently refused to lay down their arms. Gen. Schefket sent up a strong body of Macedonians and six field pleces were placed in a prominent position above the palace. Other guns were disposed on the neighboring heights, while the troops commanded all the approaches. It is estimated now that at least 10,000 prisoners are in the hands of the Salonikins. Those liable to severe punishment, such as the rebellious Saloniki chasseurs, have been secured. Salonki chasseurs, have been securely roped. Among the civilians arrested are Maurad Bey, editor of the Mizan, Abdur Rahman Effendi, assistant minister of finance, and several high officials of the Porte. A number of resettoners ber of reactionary newspapers have been suppressed.

Fresh battalions continue to arrive from the country districts. As they came in each marched to the palace of justice, where the parliament was sitting and saluted the representatives of the new government. Many of the soldiers went to the mosques to pray. Most of the American tourists have left the city. Ambassador Leishman, who has received means to be a support of the same of the sam who has received many telegrams in-quiring whether it is safe to visit Constantinople, has replied to these that such a course would be inadvis-able, as the city is under martial law.

Will Exterminate Plotters.

Gen. Schefket issued a proclamation announcing that the instigators of the recent crimes, including those who have been guilty of stirring up a feeling of discontent, will be exterminated as the worst enemies of the country, in accordance with Sheriat and the unanimous wish of the nation, and that measures will be taken to prevent the propagation of subversive ideas. In no preceding pring has there been greater assumes of advancing development arrosperity. The movement of improsperity. The movement of improsperity assumed large properity assumed large properity. ance of advancing development and prosperity. The movement of immigration has siready assumed large proportions, and is an desirable in character as it is satisfactory in volume; from across the Atlantic sturdy, industrious and thrifty newcomers are arriving in large numbers, homeseekers from Ontario and the other older Provinces are coming in a steady stream, and from across the international boundary a movement is already in full flow, which, it is confidently predicted, will beat the records of all previous years; special settlers trains are crossing the line, loaded with effects, actual material wealth being thus brought into the country at the rate of millions of dollars' worth monthly.

The movement is so imprecedented-ly large that extra Dominion Immigra-tion officials have had to be provided at both North Portal and at Emerson, and it is estimated that the total num-ber of new settlers from the United States this year will be 70,000, at least, and may run well up toward 100,000. Last year's total of new settlers from the South was 53,723; thus the area that will be placed in wheat and other grains this year will greatly exceed that of last year. Settlers are making extraordinary efforts to get on making extraordinary efforts to get on their lands and begin seeding operations. The price of wheat now, away above the dollar mark, is incentive enough, and when one has in view the splendid results that the past few years have shown, it is not to be wondered at that the present will be the banner year for Immigration to Canada. DREAM OF AN UNTIDY BOY.

Careless Youngster Had Visions in His Sleep That Gaused Him to Mond His Ways.

It was plainly to be seen that Mawin stering was a very careless boy, for so matter how hard his mother tried to keep him looking neat and clean his clothes were generally torn and soiled. When he went to bed at night, instead of hanging his clothes nicely on a chair, as his mother had taught him, he threw or dropped them wherever he might happen to be while undress-ing; and when reproved for being so careless, his excuse always was that he forgot, writes Annie Briggs Fox in the Home Journal. He spoke the truth, no doubt, but he might have added, also with truth, that the reason he forgot was that he didn't try to re-iemper. One cold winter's night he flung off his clothes as usual and jumped into bed. Snuggling down under the warm covers, he watched the moon's bright rays which streamed in at the window, rendering objects in the little room distinctly visible. He could see his clothes scattered about on the floor, and the thought came to him how his mother had told him always to arrange his garments neatly for the night; and as he remembered he told himself that he would get up right away and put them in their proper places, but it was so cozy in the warm bed and the room was cold, and where was the use, anyway? They only had to be put on again the next morning; so it really didn't matter. He didn't try to remember any more, but just lay still and watched the moon shining in at the window.

Presently he was amazed at seeing his knickerbockers (which lay in the middle of the room where he had slipped out of them) rise slowly from the floor. "It's a shame to be worn by such an untidy boy," they complained, in a woolly, smothered kind of voice. "It isn't many days since we were spick, span new from the shop, and we're all over spots already; berides, no one would dream we had ever been creased." The knickers shook them-selves vigorously, marched solemnly across the room, folded themselves in exactly the right creases and laid themselves over the back of a chair.

Edwin could hardly believe his eyes or his ears, and shook with laughter at the sight of his knickers walking along just as if he were inside of them, and the idea of clothes actually talking!

It was really too funny. He was telly It was really too funny. He was still chuckling when one of his shoes walked briskly over from the corner where he had kicked it and placed itself primly under the chair on which were the knickers. "Come along," it called out crossly to its mate, which lay in another corner. "It is pretty hard to be kicked around in this fashion after racing about all day long. Just look at my toe, how it is stubbed out, and my sole is almost through, and I not a month old yet. It's a chame I say."

The other shoe, grumbling to itself, glided swiftly over the floor and took

Edwin went off again into bursts of merriment. It was as good as a circus, thought he, and even better, for when had anyone heard clothes talk at a circus, or any other place, for that matter? He waited eagerly for the

The stockings, which lay in a small heap where Edwin had dropped them, now stirred themselves, turned themselves inside out and, skipping lightly across the room, hung themselves, one on each side of the knickers. "Dear me, what a rent there is in your knee," said one, as it settled itself for the

"Yes, I know," returned the other with a sigh; "and I was only put on new to-day; but perhaps you are not aware that you have a great hole in

"Yes, I am," observed the first, "but I am not to blame. It is that careless boy over there in the bed. He is a most wearing child."

The last sentence sounded strangely

The last sentence sounded strangely familiar to Edwin. He had often heard his mother say the very same thing.

When the stockings had had their say a dejected voice was heard from the center of the room where lay a little cotton blouse. "Clean only this morning, and I'm positively ashamed to show myself. I've three buttons off, too. It's a disgrace to belong to such e seat.

Edwin watched and waited, hoping ere would be more interesting things come, but the moon happening just en to disappear behind a passing out, the room was left in total darkers and nothing more was said or learn.

heard.

The next morning when Edwin awoke he saw his clothes on the chair, just as they had placed themselves the night before. But when he was dressing he found there was a difference. His knickers were free from spots; a clean blouse had taken the place of the soiled one; his shoes were freshly blackened and the holes in his stockings neatly darned.

And that was why he knew it was all a dream, and the clothes hadn't done anything to help matters, after all; it was just mother.

Then and there he made up his mind he would try as hard as ever he could he would try as hard as ever he could to keep himself neat and clean, as his mother loved to see him, so that at night, when she came into his room to look after his clothes, there wouldn't be a thing to do. And he kept on trying, day after day, until he found, to his surprise, it was just as easy to be tidy as to be untidy.

WHAT IS MY THOUGHT LIKE?

monkey," "Like a table," "Like a fish,"

"Like a mischievous boy," and so on.

When all have answered, the "thinker" tells them the object thought of. Perhaps it was a person present. Each player must then justify his reply or, failing this, pay a forfeit.

For instance, the one who said the object was like a monkey, when told the name of a gentleman present as the object, would reply: "I said Mr.

— was like a monkey because he is fond of nuts." The next would say:
"I said Mr. — was like a table because he is rather wooden looking."
"He is like a fish because he is fond of water," and so on. of water," and so on.

In both cases the reader will find that the sum of the numbers in the upright of the cross is the same as the sum of the numbers in the horizontal arm. It is quite easy to hit on such an arrangement by trial, but the problem is to discover in exactly how Young men's suits with plenty of grace and full of ginger-built in in a way that grey-beards won't fancy and built in that fancy way because they're not meant for old folk. Wide-shouldered coats. Built-out chests and shapely waists. Full-pegged trousers with the new wide spring cuff at bottom. The shape that you find in 'em the first day will last to the last. It's permanent—tailored into the cloth—a matter of needle work—not pressing.

They wear so much longer that they're by all odds the cheapest clothes when you divide the number of months through which they give satisfaction into the price you give for them,

THE OLD FLINTLOCKS.

They Seem to Have Done Some Rathe "These old shooting irons," said a man from Virginia, who was examining an old flintlock rifle, "always have my profound respect. Our grandfathers and great-grandfathers did their hunting with them and used them in our two victorious wars with England. They were always good weapons and are now, if they are equipped with a good stock and a good lock. They could do fine service. Any man who was any sort of a marksman could do effective work with them in their day. This fact was well illustrated in an incident that happened several years ago near Richmond. The story was printed in some of the leading news-papers in Virginia and was the cause of much interest.

SULLIVAN . . . ILLINOIS one of the peninsular counties who was coming on the cars to Richmond and had with him one of those old fash ioned weapons. In the train he got into conversation with a small party of gentlemen, who expressed much in-terest in his old rifle, and the farmer told of some rather extraordinary feats of marksmanship that he had performed with it.

"Finally he was persuaded to give an exhibition of his skill with the old relic, and a trial came off at Rocketts in the presence of a few gentlemen. The old flintlock was fired seven times and only missed the mark once. At first the old man fired it at some small objects—to get his hand steady, so he said. Then the old fellow handed to his son, who had every faith in his father's skill, a large potato and sta-tioned him at fifty yards distance, holding the potato between his thumb and forefinger.

"The rifle cracked, and the potato was split into several pieces. Another shot was made at the bowl of a pipe which the boy was smoking, and the bowl was smashed. Several other shots were made at various objects, but in trying to hit a copper cent that was ed in the air the marksman made a miss. He was considerably mortified at this and laid the blame on a by stander who sneezed loudly at the critical moment, but made another attempt, which was successful.

The old man then declined any further trials of his skill and when offered a sum of money to repeat his feat of ahooting a potato from his son's hand refused, saying he didn't care to exper-iment any further unless his weapon was freshly cleaned. The boy was willing, but the old man was obdurate. The young man showed not the least anxiety during the dangerous experi-ment upon himself."—Washington Post a sensation. Punch said it had of-fered £100 to any person who would reasonably explain one single line and that after a year no one had claimed this reward. Builesques were writ-ten on it, and in one of these it was claimed that the funniest lines were some of the exact original ones.

A story is told of witty Douglas Jer rold, who met a friend one day and "There was an old farmer residing in Does it mean anything?"

The friend replied that it meant nothing whatever. "Thank heaven!" said Jerrold. "Then I am not mad! I

The Critics Had Lots of Fun With the

When Robert Browning was twen ty-eight years old and after he had written "Paraceleus" and his tragedy of "Strafford," he wrote "Sordello," about which there has always been such a variety of opinion. Dante in his "Purgatory" wrote of Sardello, who was a poet of Provence.
"When "Sordello" appeared it made

Another story was that criminals at Newgate prison who were condemned to death were offered full pardon if they would listen to the reading of "Sordello," but in every instance they hastened with glee to the gallows. Browning once said that he blamed nobody but himself for the work and that it had many faults of expres that he meant to lay stress on incidents in the development of a soul and that little else is worth study. This estimate of his work was given twenty-five years after it was written, when he had revised it and dedicated it to a friend. He rewrote very little of it, and his followers have a belief that he considered "Sordello" his best literary work. It certainly has many beautiful lines, and in particular there is a word picture as striking as anything in our language:

That autumn eve was stilled. A last remains of sunset dimly burned O'er the far forests like a torch fla turned turned
By the wind back upon the bearer's hand
In one long flame of crimson; as a brand
The woods beneath lay black.

MAXWELL JUNIOR $500 STANDARD AMERICAN RUNABOUT

The latest addition to the Maxwell line. Comprising all the features of our larger cars, the Model A is characterized by that economy of maintenance, sturdiness of construction and absolute reliability which has made the Maxwell line famous. It will go anywhere a horse and buggy can, it will go there at eight times the speed and as often as desired, and its performance can be absolutely relied upon. With full-elliptic springs in front and rear, it rides as easy as care of the longest wheelbase, and its motor runs as silently as those of the most carefully constructed four-cylinder type. This is the car for those who want to get there and back quickly, and without possibility of failure.

Specifications for Model A Two-Cylinder HP. Runabout

Motor-Two-cylinder, horizontal-opposed, 1 x 4 inches, giving to horsepower actual at normal speed. Range of motor, 150 to 1,500 revolutions. Valves me hanically operated and inter-changeable. Valve cams and camshaft, con-tained in seperate frame, can be removed without change of timing. Motor thoroughly protected by sheet metal pan.

CARBURETER-Our standard design; float-feed type. IGNITION-Jump spark, with double coil on dash Oiling—Compression ofler, located on front of dash under hood; automatically oils engine; three sight-feeds in view of operator.

Transmission-Planetary type, two speeds forward, one reverse, direct on high. Transmission enclosed and runs in oil, obviating the difficulties encountered in the usual type of planetary gear, in which the oil is thrown out by centrifugal force. Dust and mud proof. Slow-speed and reverse bands quickly adjusted by set screws extending through the side of case.

COOLING-Honeycomb cooler, natural circulation-

CLUTCH-All-metal; multiple-disc. -

DRIVE Bevel gear, with two universal joints, in-suring perfect flexibility.

FRAME-Pressed steel.

WHEELS-28 inches, wood, artillery pattern. Tirks-28 x 3 inches, standard cylinder type.

WHEELBASE- 82 inches; tread, 56 inches. SPRINGS-Full elliptic.

Brakes -Double-acting on rear hubs.

Dan discovered a woman at the door, Janitor Olfagan assured him no one had been within that day. Dan discovered a woman's inage, prints in dust on his desk, along with a letter from his attorney. Maitland dined with Banneyman, his attorney. Dan set out for Greenfields, to get his family jewels. During his walk to the country seat, he met the young woman in 'eray, whom he had seen leaving his beolelors' club. Her auto had broken down. He fixed it. By a ruse she "lost" him. Maitland, on reaching home, surprised lady in gray, cracking the safe containing his gems. She, apparently, took him for a well-known crook. Daniel Anlaty, Haif-hypnotized, Maitland opened his safe fook therefrom the sewels, and gave them to her, first forming a partnership in crime. The real Dan Anlaty, sought by police of the world, appeared as the same mission. Maitland overcame him. He met the girl outside the house and they spied on to New York in her Buto. He had the jovels and she promised to meet him that day. Maitland received "Mr. Smaiths" for one of the kircling in gray, Anlaty, supposedly last, was felled by a blow from "Smaiths" cane. The latter proved to be Anlaty himself and he secured the heat ansay, who was Maitland's double, manuermed as the latter. The oriminal kept Maitland's engagement with the girl in gray. Anlaty feared for the safety of the gems.

No one knows that I had any hand in it. Bestdes, no one knows me—that I—steal." Her tone fell lower. "The policy of the property of the policy of the lice have never heard of me. Dan!"

"I could get away," she interrupted; and then, if they stopped you—"

"You're right, by the powers!" He struck the table smartly with his first. "You do that and we can carry this through. Why, lacking the jewels, I am Maitland—I am even wearing Maitland's clothes!" he boasted. "I went to his apartments this moraing and saw to that, because it suited my purpose to be Maitland for a day or two."

"Then—"." Her gaze questioned his.

"Then—?" Her gaze questioned his.
"Waiter!" cried Anisty. And, when the man was deferential at his elbow:
"Call a cab, at once, please."

"Certainly, sir."

"Certainly, sir."

The rest of the corps of servants were at the other end of the big room. Anisty made certain that they were not watching, then stealthily passed the canvas bag to the girl. She bent her head, bestowing it in her hand-bag. "You have made me... happy, Dan," came tremulously from beneath the hat brim.

Whatever doubts may have assailed him when it was too late, by that rewinatever doubts may have assailed him when it was too late, by that remark were effaced, silenced. Who could mistrust her sincerity?

"Then when and where may I see you again?" he demanded.

'The same place."

It was a bold move; but she was standing; the waiter was back, announcing the cab in waiting, and he dared not protest. Yet his pat riposte commanded her admiration.

"No. Too risky. If they are watching here, they may be there, too." He ok his head decidedly. The flicker of doubt was again extinguished; for undoubtedly Maitland had escorted her home that morning; her reference had been to that place. "Somewhere else," he insisted, confident that she was playing fair.

appeared to think for an instant, then, fumbling in her pocketbook, extracted a typical feminine pencil stub-its business end looking as though it had been gnawed by a vindictive rat—and scribbled hastily on the back of a menu card:

"Mrs. McCabe, 205 West One Hundred and Eighteenth street. Top floor. "I shall be there at seven," she told him. "You won't fail me?"

"Not if I'm still at liberty," laughed

And the waiter smiled at discretion, a far-away and unobtrusive smile that could by no possibility give offense; at the same time it was calculated to convey the impression that, in the opinion of one humble person, at least, Mr. Maitland was a merry wag.

"Good-by . . . Dan!"
Anisty held her fingers in his hard palm for an instant, rising from his chair.

"Good-by, my dear," he said, clum-He watched her disappear, humid, temples throbbing. "By the powers!" he cried. "But she's worth if!"

Perhaps his meaning was vague, even to himself. He resumed his seat mechanically and sat for a time staring dreamily into vacancy, blunt fingers drumming on the cloth.

"No," he declared at length. "No; safe enough . . . in hands."

Once secure from the public gaze, the girl crowded back into a corner of the cab, as though trying to efface herself. Her eyes closed almost automatically; the curve of laughing lips became a doleful droop; a crinkle appeared between the arched brows; waves of burning crimson flooded her face and throat.

In her lap both hands lay clenched into tiny fists—clenched so tightly that the hurt, numbing her fingers—a physical pain that, somehow, helped her to the instrument, lifted receiver from the hook, and applied it to his ear.

endure the paroxysms of shame. That she should have stooped so low!

Presently the fingers relaxed, and her whole frame relaxed in sympathy. The black squall had passed over; but now were the once tranquil waters ruffled and angry. Then languor gripped her like an enemy; she lay listless in its hold, sick and faint with disgress of self disgust of self.

This was her all-sufficient punish ment; to have done what she had done, to be about to do what she contemplated. For she had set her hand to the plow; there must now be no drawing back, however hateful might prove her task.

The voice of the cabby dropping through the trap, roused her. "This is the Martha Washington, ma'am."

Mechanically she descended from the hansom and paid her fare; then, summoning up all her strength and resolution, passed into the lobby of the hotel and paused at the telephone switchhoard

> CHAPTER VIII. Dance of the Hours.

Four p. m.

The old clock in a corner of the study chimed resonantly and with de-liberation; four double strokes; and while yet the deep-throated music was shrieked impertmently.

Maitland bit savagely on the gag and knotted his brows, trying to bear it. The effect was that of a coarse file rasped across raw quivering nerves. And he lay helpless, able to do no more toward endurance than to dig nails deep into his palms.

Again and again the flendish clamor shattered the echoes. Blinding flashe of agony danced down the white-hot wires strung through his head, taut from temple to temple.

Would the fool at the other end never be satisfied that he could get no answer? Evidently not; the racket continued mercilessly, short series of shrill calls alternating with imperative rolls prolonged until one thought that the tortured metal sounding-cups would crack. Thought! nay, prayed that either such would be the case, or else that one's head might at once mercifully be rent asunder.

That anguish so exquisite should be the means of releasing him from his bonds seemed a refinement of irony. Yet Maitland was aware, between spasms, that help was on the way. The telephone instrument, for tween obvious convenience, had been equipped with an extension bell which rang simultaneously in O'Hagan's quarters. When Maitland was not at home the junitor-valet, so warned, would answer the calls. And now, in the still intervals, the heavy thud of unhurried feet could be heard upon

"Well, well?" he demanded with that impatience characteristic of the illiterate for modern methods of communication. "Pwhat the divvle alls ye?"

"Rayspicts to ye, ma'am, and 'tis corry I am I didn't know 'twas a

"He's not."

"Wan o'clock, there or thereabouts." "Faith, and he didn't say." "Pwhat name will I be tellin' him?"

"Kape ut to yersilf, thin. 'Tis none of me business.

"If ye do, I'll not answer. Sure, am I to be climbin' two flights av sthairs iv'ry foive minits—"

"Good-by yersilf," hanging up the re-ceiver. "And the divvie fly away wid ye," grumbled O'Hagan. As he turned away from the instru-ment Maitland managed to produce a sound, something between a moan and a strangled cough. The old mar whirled on his heel. "Pwhat's thot?" whirled on his heel. "Pwhat's inot."

The next instant he was bending over Maitland, peering into the face drawn and disfigured by the gag. "The saints presarve us! And who the divvle are ye at all? Pwhy don't ye Maitland turned purple; and emitted a furious snort.

"Misther Maitland, be all thot's strange! Is ut mad I am? Or how did ye get back here and into this fix, and me swapin' the halls and polishin' the brasses fernist the front lure iv'ry minute since ye wint out?"

Indignation struggling for the upper hand with mystification in the Irish-man's brain, he grumbled and swore; yet busied his fingers. In a trice th binding gag was loosed, and ropes and straps cast free from swollen wrists and ankles. And, with the assistance of a kindly arm behind his shoulders. Maitland sat up, grinning with pain of renewing circulation in his limbs

"Wid these two oles mesilf saw ye lave three hours gone, sor, and I c'u'd swear no sowl had intered this house since thin. Pwhat does ut all mane, be all thot's holy?"
"It means," panting, "brandy and soda, O'Hagan, and be quick."

Maitland attempted to rise, but his legs gave under him, and he sank back with a stifled oath, resigning himself to wait the return of normal con ditions. As for his head, it was threat ering to split at any moment, the tight wires twanging infernally between his temples; while the corners of his mouth were cracked and sore from the pressure of the gag. All of which totted up a considerable debit against Mr. Anisty's account.

For Maitland, despite his suffering had found time to figure it out to personal satisfaction-or dissatisfac tion, if you prefer—in the interval be tween his return to consciousness the arrival of O'Hagan. It was sin enough to deduce from the knowledge in his possession that the burglar, hav-ing contrived his escape through the disobedience of Higgins, should have engineered this complete revenge for the indignity Maitland had put upon him.

How he had divined the fact of the ewels remaining in their owner's pos reasonable, after all, to presume that Maitiand should prefer to hold his own. Possibly Anisty had seen the girl slip the canvas bag into Maitland's pocket while the latter was kneeling and hinding his carting Herman pocket while the latter was kneeling and binding his captive. However that was, there was no denying that he had trailed the treasure to its hiding place, unerringly; and succeeded to taking possession of it with consummate skill and audacity. When Mattland came to think of it, he recalled distinctly the trend of the burglar's distinctly the trend of the burglar's inquisition in the character of "Mr. Snaith," which had all been calculated to discover the location of the jewels.

And, when he did recall this fact, and how easily he had been duped, Maitland could have ground his teeth in melodramatic rage—but for the circumstance that when first it occurred to him such a feat was a physical to. o him, such a feat was a physical impossibility, and even when ungagged the operation would have been painful to an extreme.

Sipping the grateful drink which Sipping the grateril drink which o'Hagan presently brought him, the young man pondered the case; with no pleasure in the prospect he foresaw. If Higgins had actually communicated the fact of Anisty's escape to the police, the entire affair was likely to the police, the entire affair was likely to the police, the entire affair was likely to come out in the papers—all of it, that is, that he could not suppress. But even figuring that he could silence Higgins and O'Hagan—no difficult task—though he might be somewhat late with Higgins—the most discreet imaginable avalanceing of his extraction. inable explanation of his extraordinary conduct would make him the laughing stock of his circle of friends, to say nothing of a city that had been ac-customed to speak of him as "Mad Maitland" for many a day. Unless— Ah, he had it! He could pretend (so long as it suited his purpose, at all events), to have been the man caught and left bound in Higgins' care. Simple enough. The knocking over of the butler would be ascribed to a natural ebullition of indignation, the subsequent flight to a hare-brained notion of running down the thief. And yet even that explanation had its difficulties. How was he to account for the fact that he had failed to communicate with the police—knowing that his treasure had been ravished?

It was all very involved. Mr. Maitland returned the glass to O'Hagan and, cradling his head in his hands, racked his brains in vain for a satisfactory tale to tell. There were so many things to be taken into consideration. There was the girl in gray.

Not that he had forgotten her for an instant; his fury raged but the higher at the thought that Anisty's interference had prevented his (Maitland's) keeping the engagement. Doubtless the girl had waited, then gone away in anger, believing that the man in whom she had placed faith had proved himself unworthy.
But that telephone call?

"O'Hagan," demanded the haggard and distraught young man, "who was that on the wire just now?"

Being a thoroughly trained servant, O'Hagan had waited that question in silence, a-quiver with impatience though he was. Now, his tongue un-leashed, his words fairly stumbled on one another's heels in his anxiety to get them out in the least possible time.

"Sure, an' 'twas a leddy, sor, be the v'ice av her, askin' were ye in, and mesilf havin' seen ye go out no longer ago thin wan o'clock and yersilf sayin' not a worrud about comin' back at all at all, pwhat was I to be tellin' her, aven if ye were lyin' there on the die-van all unbeknownest to me, which the same mesilf can not— "Help!" pleaded the pleaded the young man feebly, smiling. "One thing at a time, please, O'Hagan. Answer me one ques tion: Did she give a name?"

"She did not, sor, though mesilf—"
"There, there! Wait a bit. I want to think."

Of course she had given no name; it wouldn't be like her. What was he thinking of, anyway? It could not have been the gray girl; for she knew him only as Anisty; she could never have thought him himself, Maitland. But what other woman of his acquaintance did not believe him to be out of town?

With a hopeless gesture, Maitland gave it up, conceding the mystery too deep for him, his intellect too feeble to grapple with all its infinite ramifications. The counsel he had given O'Hagan seemed most appropriate to his present needs: One thing at a time. And obviously the first thing that lay to his hand was the silencing of O'Hagan.

Maitland railied his wits to the task "O'Hagan," said he, "this man, Snaith who was here this afternoon, called himself a detective. As soon as we were alone he rapped me over the head with a loaded cane, and, I suspect, went through the flat stealing everything he could lay hands on. Hand me my cigarette case, please."

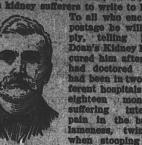

"Tis gone, sor—'tis not on the desk, at laste, pwhere I saw ut last."

at laste, pwhere I saw ut last."

"Ah! You see? Now for reasons of my own, which I won't enter into, I don't want the affair to get out and become public. You understand? I want you to keep your mouth shut, until I give you permission to open it."

Ropy milk is caused by a ferment and develops after the milk is drawn and is due to bacteria, but it is not considered an unhealthy condition, for cheeses are nearly all made from milk which has undergone this fermentation. The peasants of Norway consider ropy milk a desirable beverage. Most people, however, object seriously to milk with any tendency to form threads. This trouble frequently affects the milk of a dairy day after day, and is removed only by the most drastic measures. Outbreaks of this nature ferquently occur in the cold months, because the bacteria of this group thrive better at low temperatures than the lactic-acid bacteria which hold them in check under normal conditions. In one case it was found that these bacteria were abundant in the dust of the stable. The trouble was removed by a thorough cleaning and whitewashing.

WHAT THE WORLD OWES TO THE METHODISTS

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D., sater of the Chicago Ave. (Moody Church, Chicago

The world owes vival of apostolic Christianity in an age of decay and doubt. The latter teenth and the first part of the eighteenth centur-ies make a black Friday in the hos tory of the church. Books like those of Fielding give a glimpse into a so-rotten to the core. The archbishop of rotten to the core. The archbishop of Canterbury wrote: "Christianity is ridiculed with very little reserve and the teachers of it with none at all." Southey declared that the clergy had lost all authority and respect. Archbishop Leighton pronounced the church a "fair carcass." Voltaire in France was ridiculing the ecclesiastics and making the world laugh at the Bible. Frederick in the very home of Luther was leading all Prussis into rationalism. Methodism was a sunrise of evangelical truth. It was the projection of the German Refromation, with evangelical truth. It was the projection of the German Refromation, with greater spiritual life than Luther gave it, into the thought and hearts of the English-speaking people. And it is interesting to note the intimate connection between Luther and Weeley. It tion between Luther and Wesley. It was while listening to the reading of one of Luther's essays on "Salvation by Faith and Its Fruits" that Wesley said: "I felt my heart strangely warmed."

The five cardinal points of Metho dism were Repentance, Faith, Justi-fication, Sanctification and the Wit-ness of the Spirit.

Repentance meant a turning from sin in heart and life to Christ. It was sin in heart and life to Christ. It was taking God's side against sin. To the early Methodists sin was a terrible reality, and, therefore, Christ as a Saviour from it was a glorious personality. They believed in the guilt, pollution and power of sin in this world and the next. Wesley's sermons on hell made no attempt to soften or on hell made no attempt to soften or modify the words of Christ concerning the worm that dieth not and the fire that is not quenched. To him sin brought, as the Bible teaches, ever-lasting retribution, and the one es-cape from it was through Jesus Christ. There was a bottomless pit of degrada-tion from which the sinner might be saved to the topless height of glorifi-

Faith was not simply the assent of the mind, but the consent of the heart. It was not a cold intellectuality which held a creed, but a loving reception of Jesus Christ as Saviour from all sin. Justification was the act of God by which the sinner was pronounced just on the merit of Jesus Christ. Though Methodism insisted on works as the fruits of conversion, it believed in salvation only by grace. Character did not bring salvation, but salvation made character.

Sanctification meant a holy life in the service of Christ. The witness of the Spirit brought assurance of salvation.

The pioneer Methodists, led by Wesley and Whitefield, believed in instantaneous conversion. Theirs was a gospel with power enough to bring down Saul of Tarsus in his persecuting zeal and make him like a little child sitting at the feet of Christ. A lieu tenant in the English army, hearing that a humble Methodist preacher had an appointment at a certain place, went there with the intention of lead vent there with the intention of lead ing the mob and breaking up the meet Unable to stir the mob as he thought he could against the pres he decided to listen for awhile and learn what he had to say. The result was that before the meeting closed he was weeping, broken hearted, made a confession of faith and joined the Methodist society. Methodism was not only evangelical, but evangelistic. Long before P. P. Bliss wrote "Hold the Fort for I Am Coming," the Metho dist preachers, in heart if not in word taught the church to sing, "Storm the Fort for God Is Leading." They obeyed the command of Christ and went to the multitude in the epen air.

Methodism has given to the world a long list of heroes. John Wesley was himself a hero of courage, industry and patience. More than once was he dragged through the streets by the hair of his head. More than once he preached on the blood of Christ while the blood was trickling down his face, the result of an attack by the mob. John Nelson, the stone mason, was a Christian hero. When arrested as a vagrant, though he was making an honest living, and pressed into the English army, he kept faithful to Christ. His wife appearing before the jail window and saying to him: "John, be true; God will take care of me and the children," shows that there was a Methodism has given to the world a the children," shows that there was a heroine in the family.

The world owes to Methodism the demonstration of the fact that there need be no divorce between faith and learning. Methodism had its rise in the University of Oxford, The Holy club, with John Wesley at its head, met for the study of the Greek New Testament.

And so with other great religious movements. There is no more conflict to-day between true learning and faith than there was in the time of Wesley. The conflict is between the Bible and the vagaries of learned men.
