COUNTRY OFF OF WATER "AGON"

Americans must be a thirsty nation, judging from the imports of drinkables as set forth in a statement just issued by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor. The United States drank the essence of more than a billion pounds of coffee in 1909, valued at $86,000,000. That was about a dollar's worth of coffee for every person in the United States. Tea is not such a favorite. Only a little more than a hundred million pounds, valued at about $16,000,000 came in.

But in spirits, wine and malt liquors the nation touched its highest record for importation in 1909, and consumed foreign products of that kind to the value of more than $26,000,000 more than twice as much as was imported in 1899.

South America supplied most of the coffee; Asia most of the tea, and Europe most of the wines and liquors. The United States is the world's largest coffee drinker, and Great Britain is the world's greatest consumer of tea.—Ex.

The Root of All Good. In the man whose childhood has known carcases there lies a fiber of memory which can be touched to nobler issues.—George Elliot.

SUPERVISORS MEET

The board of supervisors met in their room in the court house Monday afternoon. All the members were present.

The proceedings of the board were as follows:

Homer Shepherd, agent for Mariah J. Shepherd, appeared before the board and requested that the board authorize and direct B. W. Patterson, chairman of the board, to execute and deliver to Mariah J. Shepherd a quit claim deed, consigning to her all the interests of the county of Moultrie in the following described real estate, to-wit: West 1/4 block 1 of the original town of Sullivan. After consideration Parks offered the following resolution, which recommended allowing the request. The resolution was adopted by the board, and B. W. Patterson was authorized to give claim on behalf of Moultrie county to Mariah J. Shepherd in accordance with said resolution.

The following names were selected as grand jurors for the March term of court:

Sullivan township—C. Merritt, J. T. Keile, E. E. Hamlin, C. J. Swisher, T. J. DeHart.

Lovington township—T. L. McDaniel, Roy Dixon, A. B. Dyer, Frank Foster.

The county clerk was instructed to issue warrants for the collection of all personal property taxes for the year 1909 against all persons removing from this county to another and against personal property tax in this county and who neglect or refuse to pay, commanding the sheriff to execute his orders.

County and pauper claims were allowed.

W. J. Warren's bond, $5,000, as supervisor of the poor farm, with himself as principal and J. M. Cummins and H. C. Shrey as sureties was approved and accepted.

On motion the $40,000 insurance against the court house was cancelled and the insurance committee ordered to have a policy of $40,000 written on the county buildings.

BLIZZARD RAGING

HEAVY SNOW, DRIVEN BY HIGH WIND STOPS TRAINS AND CRIPPLES WIRES IN NORTH-WEST.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 15.—The cold wave and blizzard predicted for the northwest in bulletins from the weather bureau at Washington arrived on time. Today the storm was general throughout the northwest. In Minneapolis early last evening snow began falling, accompanied by a high north wind which drifted the snow to a depth of several feet. In the vicinity of Tomah, Wis., sleet prostrated telegraph and telephone wires, and communication all day was badly crippled. This sleet extended as far north as Owatonna, Minnesota.

A Butte, Montana, telegram says that one of the worst snow storms ever known in western Montana prevails. West of there the snow fall reached a depth of four feet. At Lookout mountain the snow is eight feet deep. A half dozen slides on the Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound railroad, one near Divide being 200 feet long and about eight feet deep. All trains are delayed, and no attempt is being made to move freight. All Northern Pacific wires are down through the prostration of poles. The most severe storm of the year is raging in North Dakota. The wind attained a velocity of 40 miles an hour and a heavy snow falling. Trains on the South Line of the Soo from Bismarck were abandoned and trains on the Linton branch of the Northern Pacific held at Bismarck.

At Dickinson, North Dakota, a head on collision between two freight trains occurred and the engineer was injured.

A TRAIN LOAD OF SETTLERS VISITING BURBANK-OCALA COLONY.

WHERE THOUSANDS ARE FLOCKING

A BRIEF STORY OF COLONY BUILDING THAT HAS ASTOUNDED THIS COUNTRY.

BY CLEMENT YORE.

One of the most tremendous land movements ever seen in America is progressing at the present time towards Burbank-Ocala Colony, in Marion County, Florida. One simply cannot comprehend what it means to see a thousand people purchasing farms in just a few days. One has no idea of a country that one month contains no habitations, and the next thirty days is dotted over with cottages; is throbbing and active with life and movement, and is the center of improvement that equals, if not surpasses, those great days of the far west when whole counties were peopled over night.

But this movement towards Florida is far more interesting and of greater import than any movement towards land heretofore recorded in this country. The primal influence of this great movement is Charles H. Sieg and the organization which he has promulgated.

This man is the pioneer of Florida in the matter of placing northern men and women upon Florida farms. Less than one year ago Charles H. Sieg organized his first colony, which was located in St. Johns Park, Florida. Every acre of the 30,000 comprising this colony was sold within 30 days. The demand was so great that Mr. Sieg secured another tract of land, amounting to some 36,000 acres, at Jacksonville Heights, and this in turn was sold out with the rapidity of the first colony.

Today at these two great colonies, St. Johns Park and Jacksonville Heights, are to be seen many beautiful cottages; hundreds of farms are being worked; settlers are thoroughly satisfied; land values have arisen 100%, and many of those settlers who bought land, and have not even improved it as yet, are actually refusing in profits more than the amount of money they paid for their homes.

Then Mr. Sieg began his search for his greatest and his best Florida farm community. After careful scrutiny of all Florida lands, he decided that Marion County, north of the County Seat, Ocala, held the greatest promise for his ideals, and he purchased a large tract of land here.

Upon one side of this property lies the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad; and the other, the Seaboard Air Line; and through the heart of it travels the Ocala & Northern Railroad. Upon the eastern border of the colony, which Mr. Sieg has called Burbank-Ocala, the beautiful Ocklawaha river runs, and over the breast of its waters travel passenger and freight steamers from Palatka to Silver Springs.

This shows how easy it is to clear land, simply by setting fire to the stumps, which contain large quantities of turpentine.

It is thus seen that transportation, the greatest and most necessary of all adjuncts to a farm community, reaches its highest point of development at Burbank-Ocala Colony.

But a short time ago Charles H. Sieg announced through the public press his intention of selling this property, as he had sold his former colonies in 1909. The response to these announcements was so great that it surpassed the ideas of Mr. Sieg. Today the evidence which this man has at his finger ends of the enormous demand for Florida soil, is more astonishing than the reading of a work of fiction.

Surely this is the day of back to the soil.

To take a trip over the Burbank-Ocala Colony is to have a pleasure that amounts almost to a vacation.

As one approaches Florida, upon any of the great railroads reaching this state, one is at once struck with the conversation one hears in the smoking, dining or sleeping car. This conversation is almost wholly confined to the topic of Florida, and gives an insight into the real condition of the fame of this great state, for these people come from almost every section of the North American continent. Every train carries many men and women who are going to Florida, and strange as it may seem, the majority of them are routed to Burbank-Ocala Colony.

From the worn-out hills of New England, from the cold and bleak mountain camps of the mining districts of the Rockies, from beautiful California, from chill and snow-laden Canada, from the cities and from the farms, Catholic and Jew, college professor and bricklayer—these are the people who are settling today in Burbank-Ocala colony. Every race, every religion, every trade and every profession has some man or woman who is a settler at Burbank-Ocala, and who from this fact, prove that this land satisfies all people and all classes of people.

There are three new townships in this colony, places where Chas. H. Sieg and his organization have decided to build cities. When one sees what these cities were but a short time ago, and looks at them when one arrives at Burbank-Ocala Colony, one has an idea of what their appearance will be six months from today.

The people are moving upon the fertile fields of Burbank-Ocala Colony in large numbers; they are preparing those fields for the reception of their first crops; they are building their homes, and in the wake of these settlers is traveling the commerce to the various lines of business; that depend upon an agricultural community for their existence.

Marion County, Florida, is the banner county of the state. It is the county which but a few years ago in competition at Tampa, Florida, with every county in the state, took first prize for agricultural and horticultural products.

Marion County has more fine roads than any county in the state. It has local and long distance telephones upon its farms, and one sees here more luxury in an hour's travel by automobile or team than one would believe possible in a farming section.

The Experiment Farm at Burbank-Ocala Colony.

over Florida, that these people whose homes we see, and whose fields we marvel at, make their money and build their homes, not by the man-killing toil of working 160 acres of ground like is done in the north, but Florida is the spot where a man is rich who owns a ten acre farm.

Without the question of a doubt, the greatest and most delightful portion of Florida, where pleasure and profit are wound and inter-wound, is Marion County, and in the very heart of this great county is located Burbank-Ocala Colony.

If you want to read something of this great colony; if you want to know in the language of irrefutable proof and undeniable facts and figures; if you want to see with the eye of a camera what is now being done at Burbank-Ocala, write for "Ten Acres and Freedom," a book issued by Chas. H. Sieg, and prepared with a most comprehensive knowledge of all questions arising in the mind of a man who contemplates making Florida his home.

This great book is very expensive, and it is filled with absolute proof that tells a story which no man can deny, and it tells it in the language of common sense.

In an interview with Mr. Sieg recently, he made the prediction that every acre of Burbank-Ocala Colony would be sold before farmers in the north were enabled to start plowing. This means that many thousands of acres must be sold each and every week, and that hundreds of settlers are buying this land every day.

The office of the Burbank-Ocala Colony is located at the city of Ocala, in Marion County, is filled with settlers and prospective settlers to this colony, and the best part of it all is that these settlers are satisfied. Many of them are sent to Burbank-Ocala for the purpose of investigating and making sure, not only for themselves, but for their friends, relatives and neighbors, and most of these men buy immediately after seeing this land for many people.

To give one some idea of the value of this property, and how firmly convinced the Company is that it will stand any investigation, the Board of Directors of the New South Farm & Home Company have authorized Chas. H. Sieg to sell this colony land upon the strict guarantee that if it is not satisfactory to the purchaser, he may ask for and receive back every cent he has paid, together with 6% interest, any time before the actual delivery of the deed.

This land is selling at the price of $25.00 per acre, upon the terms of 50 cents per acre down, and 50 cents per acre per month until the land is paid for, thus giving every purchaser 48 months after his application has been received to complete his payments, while he can move on and take possession of his farm after a single payment of only 50 cents per acre. This is at the basis of 17 cents per day for each 10 acres purchased.

My advice to every man who really wants to make an investment out of his daily savings, that will come back to him in profits that are limited only by his own capabilities, is to write at once for the great book called "Ten Acres and Freedom," and inform himself thoroughly before he buys, and prove to his own satisfaction that Burbank-Ocala Colony is really entitled to all of the tremendous patronage which it is receiving today.

Just send in the coupon below. No letter is necessary, and you will receive by return mail this great book free.

The Waiter Was Too Smart.

"I ate my breakfast this morning in a Market street restaurant," said a down-town business man, "and something occurred that particularly appealed to my sense of humor. A man and a woman were seated opposite me, and the waiter placed a large plate of biscuits before the two. 'I prefer bread,' said the woman. In a jiffy the biscuits were whisked away and replaced with the staff of life. I noticed a wistful sort of expression on the man's face as the biscuits disappeared, but he made no remark. 'I guess she's the boss of that ranch,' I thought, and then the woman turned and said: 'I believe the girl thinks we are together.' As the waitress came back to give the couple a check she was just about to punch the amount of two meals on one when she looked up suddenly and asked if they were together. In one breath they said 'No!' Well, you should have seen that girl's face. She blushed furiously and then capped the climax by saying: 'Oh, you eat there so quiet like, not speakin', I thought you were married.'"—Philadelphia Record.

Sight-Seeing with Reservations.

Out of the Grand Central station the other day came a couple the sight of whom caused citizens who saw them to admit to themselves that there might be, after all, some basis of truth in the "Uncle Josh" jokes of the allegedly funny papers. The old man grasped his carpet bag and bulging green umbrella firmly, and looked up and down the street, his mouth agape.

"There's a heap o' sights in New York, I guess, Maria," he said. "I misdoubt if we see them all."

The old lady's mouth set grimly. "Well, Silas," she replied, and her manner was more than significant, "bein' as I'm with you, there's some, I expect, that you ain't goin' to see!"—Lippincott's.

Pushing the Goods.

A number of drummers were sitting in a hotel lobby, when one of them began to boast that his firm had the most number of people pushing its line of goods.

There was a little argument and then a drummer who had not had much to say before suddenly rose and said: "I'll bet any man in the house that my firm has the most number of people pushing its line of goods!"

"Done!" exclaimed the boastful one. The money was accordingly put up with a stakeholder, and then the boastful drummer asked: "Now, what is your firm's line of goods?" "Baby carriages," murmured the quiet man as he took the money and made for the side door.—Exchange.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the shipwreck of the steamer on which Miss Genevieve Leslie, an American heiress, Lord Winthrop, an Englishman, and Tom Blake, a brusque American, were passengers. The three were tossed upon an uninhabited island and were the only ones not drowned. Blake, stranded on the boat because of his roughness, became a hero as preserver of the helpless pair. The Englishman was suing for the hand of Miss Leslie. Winthrop wasted his last match on a cigarette, for which he was scolded by Blake. All three constructed huts to shield themselves from the sun. They then feasted on coconuts, the only procurable food. Miss Leslie faced an unpleasant situation. Blake recovered his surveyor's magnifying glass, thus insuring fire. He started a jungle fire, killing a large leopard and smothering several cubs. In the leopard's cavern they built a small home. They gained the cliffs by burning the bottom of a tree until it fell against the heights. The trio secured eggs from the cliffs. Miss Leslie's white shirt was decided upon as a signal. Miss Leslie made a dress from the leopard skin. Overhearing a conversation between Blake and Winthrop, Miss Leslie became frightened. Winthrop became ill with fever. Blake was poisoned by a fish and almost died. Jackals attacked the camp that night, but were driven off by Genevieve. Blake constructed an animal trap. It killed a hyena. On a tour the trio discovered honey and oysters. Miss Leslie was attacked by a poisonous snake. Blake killed it and saved its poison to kill game. For the second time Winthrop was attacked by fever. He and Blake disagreed. The latter made a strong door for the private compartment of Miss Leslie's cave home. A terrible storm raged that night. Winthrop stole into her room, but she managed to swing her door closed in time. Winthrop was badly hurt. He died the following morning. The storm tore down the distress flag, so a new one was swung from a bamboo pole. Miss Leslie helped in covering Winthrop's grave with stones. Genevieve took a stone liking to Blake. On exploration tour they were attacked by a lion.

CHAPTER XXIV.—Continued.

The lion stilled his roars and crouched as if to spring, snarling and grinning with rage and uncertainty. His eyes, unaccustomed to the glare of the mid-day sun, blinked incessantly, though he followed the man's every movement, his snarl deepening into growls at the slightest change of attitude.

In his blind animal rage Blake had forgotten that the purpose of his lateral advance was to place as great a distance as possible between him and the girl before the clash. Yet instinct kept him moving along his spiral course, on the chance that he might catch his foe off his guard.

Suddenly the lion half rose and stretched forward, sniffing. There was an uneasy whining note in his growl. Blake let the club slip from beneath his arm and drew his bow until the arrow-head lay upon his thumb. His outstretched arm was rigid as a bar of steel. So tense and alert were all his nerves that he knew he could drive home both arrows and still have time to swing his club before the beast was upon him.

A puff of wind struck against his back and swept on the nostrils of the lion, laden with the odor of man. The beast uttered a short, startled roar, and, whirling about, leaped away into the jungle so quickly that Blake's arrow flashed past a full yard behind.

The second arrow was on the string before the first had struck the ground. With a yell, Blake dashed on across to the nearest point of the jungle. As he ran he drew the burning glass from his fob and flipped it open ready for use. If the lion had turned behind the sheltering grass stems he was too cowardly to charge out again. Within a minute the jungle border was a wall of roaring flame.

The grass, long since dead, and bone-dry with the days of tropical sunshine since the cyclone, flared up before the wind like gunpowder. Even against the wind the fire ate its way along the ground with fearful rapidity, trailing behind it an upwhirling vortex of smoke and flame. No living creature could have burst through that belt of fire.

A wave of fierce heat sent Blake staggering back, scorched and blistered. There was no exultance in his bearing. For the moment all thought of the lion was swallowed up in awe of his own work. He stared at the hell of leaping, roaring flames from beneath his upraised arm. To the north sparks and lighted wisps of grass driven by the gale had already fired the jungle half way to the farther ridge.

Step by step Blake drew back. His heel struck against something soft. He looked down and saw Miss Leslie lying on the sand, white and still. She had fainted, overcome by fear or by the unendurable heat. The heat must have stupefied him as well. He stared at her, dull-eyed, wondering if she was dead. His brain cleared. He sprang over to where the flask lay beside the remnants of the lunch.

He was dashing the last drops of the tepid water in her face when she moaned and her eyelids began to flutter. He hung down the flask and fell to chafing her wrist.

"Tom!" she moaned.

"Yes, Miss Jenny, I'm here. It's all right," he answered.

"Have I had a sunstroke? Is that why it seems so—I can hardly breathe—"

"It's all right, I tell you. Only a little bonfire I touched off. Guess you must have fainted, but it's all right now."

"It was silly of me to faint. But when I saw that dreadful thing leap—"

"The Man I Love!"

She faltered and lay-shuddering. Fearful that she was about to swoon again Blake slapped her hand between his palms with stinging force.

"You're fit!" he shouted. "The joke's on you! Kitty jumped just the other way, and he won't come back in a hurry with that fire to head him off. Jump up now and we'll do a jig on the strength of it."

She attempted a smile, and a trace of color showed in her cheeks. With an idea that action would further her recovery he drew her to a sitting position, stepped quickly behind, and, with his hands beneath her elbows, lifted her upright. But she was still too weak and giddy to stand alone. As he released his grip she swayed and would have fallen had he not caught her arm.

"Steady!" he admonished. "Brace up; you're all right."

"I'm—I'm just a little dizzy," she murmured, clinging to his shoulder. "It will pass in a minute. It's so silly, but I'm that way—Tom, I—I think you are the bravest man—"

"Yes, yes—but that's not the point. Leave go now, like a sensible girl. It's about time to hit the trail."

He drew himself free, and without a glance at her blushing face began to gather up their scattered outfit. His hat lay where he had weighted it down with the coconut. He tossed the hat on his head, pulling the brim far down over his eyes. When he had fetched his club he walked back past the girl with his eyes averted.

"Come on," he muttered.

Inside the barricade Blake was waiting to close the opening. She crept through and rose to catch him by the sleeve.

"Tom, look at me," she said. "Once I was most unjust to you in my thoughts. I wronged you. Now I must tell you that I think you are the bravest—the noblest man—"

"Get away!" he exclaimed, and he shook off her hand roughly. "Don't be a fool! You don't know what you're talking about."

"But I do, Tom. I believe that you are—"

"I'm a blackguard—do you hear?"

"No blackguard is brave. The way you faced that terrible beast—"

"Yes, blackguard—to've gone and shown to you that I—to've let you say a single word—Can't you see? Even if I'm not what you call a gentleman, I thought I knew how any man ought to treat a woman—but to go and let you know, before we'd got back among people!"

"But—but, Tom, why not, if we—"

"No!" he retorted, harshly. "I'm going now to pile up wood on the cliff for a beacon fire. In the morning I'll start making that catamaran—"

"No, you shall not—You shall not go off and leave me, and—risk your life! I can't bear to think of it! Stay with me, Tom—dear! Even if a ship never came—"

He turned resolutely, so as not to see her blushing face.

"Come now, Miss Leslie," he said in a dry, even tone; "don't make it so awfully hard. Let's be sensible, and shake hands on it like two real comrades—"

She struck frantically at his outstretched hand.

"Keep away—I hate you!" she cried. Before he could speak she was running up the cleft.

CHAPTER XXV.

In Double Salvation.

WHEN, an hour or more after dawn the next morning, the girl slowly drew open her door and came out of the cave Blake was nowhere in sight. She sighed, vastly relieved, and hastened across to bathe her flushed face in the spring. Stopping every few moments to listen for his step down the cleft she gathered up a hamper of food and fled to the tree-ladder.

As she drew herself up on the cliff she noticed a thin column of smoke rising from the last smouldering brands of a beacon fire that had been built in the midst of the bird colony on the extreme outer edge of the headland. She did not, however, observe that, while the smoke column streamed up from the fire directly skyward beyond it there was a much larger volume of smoke, which seemed to have eddied down the cliff face and was now rolling up into view from out over the sea. She gave no heed to this, for the sight of the beacon had instantly alarmed her with the possibility that Blake was still on the headland, and would imagine that she was seeking him.

She paused, her cheeks aflame. But the only sign of Blake that she could see was the fire itself. She reflected that he might very well have left before dawn. As likely as not he had descended at the north end of the cleft and had gone off to the river to start his catamaran. At the thought all the color ebbed from her cheeks and left her white and trembling. Again she stood hesitating. With a sigh she started on toward the signal staff.

She was close upon the border of the bird colony when Blake sat up and she found herself staring into his blinking eyes.

"Hello!" he mumbled, drowsily. He sprang up wide awake, and flushing with the guilty consciousness of what he had done. "Look at the sun—way up! Didn't mean to oversleep, Miss Leslie. You see I was up pretty late tending the beacon. But of course that's no excuse—"

"Don't!" she exclaimed. There were tears in her eyes; yet she smiled as she spoke. "I know what you mean by 'pretty late.' You've been up all night."

"No, I haven't. Not all night—"

"To be sure! I quite understand, Mr. Thomas Blake! Now sit down and eat this luncheon."

"Can't. Haven't time. I've got to get to the river and set to work. I'll get some jerked beef and eat it on the way. You see—"

"Tom!" she protested.

"It's for you," he rejoined, and his lips closed together resolutely.

He was stepping past her, when over the seaward edge of the cliff there came a sound like the yell of a raging sea monster.

"Siren!" shouted Blake, whirling about.

The cloud of smoke beyond the cliff end was now rolling up more to the left. He dashed away towards the north edge of the cliff as though he intended to leap off into space. The girl ran after him as fast as she could over the loose stones. Before she had covered half the distance she saw him halt on the very brink of the cliff and begin to wave and shout like a madman. A few steps farther on she caught sight of the steamer. It was lying close in, only a little way off the north point of the headland.

Even as she saw the vessel, its siren responded to Blake's wild gestures with a series of joyous screams. There could be no mistake. He had been seen. Already they were letting go anchor, and there was a little crowd of men gathering about one of the boats. Blake turned and started on a run for the cliff. But Miss Leslie darted before him, compelling him to halt.

"Wait!" she cried, her eyes sparkling with happy tears. "Tom, it's come now. You needn't—"

"Let me by! I'm going to meet them. I want to—"

But she put her hands upon his shoulders.

"Tom!" she whispered, "let it be now, before any one—anything can possibly come between us! Let it be a part of our life here—here, where I've learned how brave and true a real man can be!"

"And then have him prove himself a snail!" he cried. "No; I won't, Jenny! I've got you to think of. Wait till I've seen your father. Ten to one he'll not hear of it—he'll cut you off without a cent. Not but what I'd be glad myself; but you're used to luxuries, girls, and I'm a poor man. I can't give them to you—"

She laid a hand on his mouth and smiled up at him in tender mockery.

"Come, now, Mr. Blake; you're not very complimentary. After surviving my cooking all these weeks, don't you think I might do, at a pinch, for a poor man's wife?"

"No, Jenny!" he protested, trying to draw back. "You oughtn't to decide now. When you get back among your friends things may look different. Think of your society friends! Wait till you see me with other men—gentlemen! I'm just a rough, uncultured, ordinary—"

"Hush!" she cried, and she again placed her hand on his mouth. "You shan't say such cruel things about Tom—my Tom—the man I trust—that I—"

Her arms slipped about his neck and her eyes shone up into his with tender radiance.

"Don't!" he begged, hoarsely. "Tain't fair I—I can't stand it!"

"The man I love!" she whispered.

He crushed her to him in his great arms.

"My little girl!—dear little girl!" he repeated, and he pressed his lips to her hair.

She snuggled her face closer against his shoulder and replied in a very small voice: "I—I suppose you know that ship captains can m-marry people."

"But I haven't even a job yet!" he exclaimed. "Suppose your father—"

"Please listen!" she pleaded. There was a sound like suppressed sobbing.

"What is it?" he ventured, and he listened, greatly perturbed. The muffled voice sounded very meek and plaintive: "I'll try to do my part, Mr. Blake—really I will! I—I hope we can manage to struggle along—somehow. You know, I have a little of my own. It's only three—three million; but—"

"What!" he demanded, and he held her out at arm's length, to stare at her in frowning bewilderment. "If I'd known that, I'd—"

"You'd never have given me a chance to—to propose to you, you dear old silly!" she cried, her eyes dancing with tender mirth. "See here!"

She turned from him, and back again, and held up a withered, crumpled flower. He looked, and saw that it was the amaryllis blossom.

"You—kept it!"

"Because—because, even then, then, down in the bottom of my heart, I had begun to realize—to know what you were like—and of course that meant— Tom, tell me! Do you think I'm utterly shameless? Do you blame me for being the one to—to—"

"Blame you!" he cried. He paused to put a finger under her chin and raise her down-bent face. His eyes were very blue, but there was a twinkle in their depths. "Oh, yes; it was dreadful, wasn't it? But I guess I've no complaint to file just now."

THE END.

Trying.

If there is anything on earth that will try all the Christian graces of the average man, it is to crawl into a union suit on a chilly morning only to discover that the washerwoman has turned it wrong side out.

NEWS OF ILLINOIS

Springfield.—Illinois coal mines will close on April 1 for an indefinite period, according to statements made by officials of the Illinois Mine Workers' union. The joint conference of miners and operators called to meet in Peoria to consider a new wage scale has been declared off. The refusal of the Illinois operators to enter the Toledo interstate conference has caused the Illinois miners to deliver their ultimatum that Illinois must now wait until all other states in the competitive district have signed up their scales. There is a decided split among the operators. Some of them do not want suspension of mining, and others favor cessation of work. Frank J. Hayes, the secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Mine Workers and just elected national vice-president, stated that the Illinois miners would observe to the letter the decision of the Toledo meeting that no state shall sign a scale until all are ready to do so.

Venice.—Fireman G. R. Williams of Bloomington was crushed to death; Engineer J. A. Raymond of St. Louis suffered a broken leg and twenty or more spectators were knocked down and trampled by stampeding cattle as the result of a head-on collision between two Chicago & Alton freight trains in the railroad yards in this city. Six cars loaded with steers also rolled down the bank, killing a score or more of the animals and turning loose more than fifty others. Crazed with fright, the animals stampeded in every direction through a crowd of several hundred persons, many of them women and children, which had collected about the wreck, knocking down scores in their flight.

Chicago.—Mrs. Annie Van Eyck was found guilty on a charge of manslaughter by a jury before Judge McEwen. The woman who is said to be the common law wife of Joseph Van Eyck, owner of a saloon at 459 South State street, was tried in connection with the killing of Philip Hardy in her home, 721 West Twenty-fifth street, October 24.

Chicago.—"I want $50 or I will shoot, and when I shoot I will shoot to kill. I am doing this because my wife and child are sick and I need the money. I will pay you back July 1 if you do not report this to the police. I have known you since mates of a disorderly resort on complaint of the minister."

Chicago.—John Herold, a saloon-keeper on Monroe street, and his bartender, Robert McGall, were held to the grand jury by a coroner's jury at the inquest held over the body of Prof. Stanley Frydrychowicz, who died at a hospital Thursday from injuries suffered in a fight with Herold and McGall.

Tolono.—Miss Annie Kelley, the young school teacher of Tolono, against whom Mr. and Mrs. William Burke secured a judgment in the federal court for $1,200 for whipping their child in school, it is said, has fled from the village and her present whereabouts is shrouded in mystery.

Chicago.—Paul O. Stensland, the Chicago bank wrecker recently paroled from the Joliet penitentiary, probably will never leave St. Elizabeth's hospital alive. It is positively stated that he is suffering from tuberculosis of the bronchial tubes, a disease which is practically incurable.

Sterling.—George Burden has filed a bill in the Bureau county circuit to break the will of his father, the late Thomas Burden, who died leaving real estate in Bureau and Whiteside counties valued at $200,000. The fortune was divided among three children, Emma and Lillian, daughters.

Peoria.—Health Commissioner Rex Sholl of this city has ordered an immediate investigation as the result of what is declared to be a widespread epidemic of stomach trouble, the cause of which is thought to be embalmed beef.

Chicago.—The body of John Loesche, 704 West North avenue, who is believed to have committed suicide January 27, was found washed ashore at the foot of Goethe street by William Schramm, 1707 North Forty-second avenue.

Chicago.—Pearl Hook, who attempted to commit suicide January 29 by swallowing poison in her room at the Alhambra hotel, is dead at St. Luke's hospital. The police were unable to learn of any motive for the act.

Pontiac.—The world's oldest spinster is Miss Carrie Millhouse, who is past 104, and who lives in Grundy county. She was born in Norway and came to this country 70 years ago.

Sterling.—Mrs. William Senneff of Milledgeville is dead as the result of freezing her feet two weeks ago, blood poisoning having ensued.

Chicago.—Viola Swanson, two years old, died from burns. She was playing with matches when her clothes became ignited.

Calro.—The seventeenth annual convention of the Illinois Retail Merchants' association will be held in Calro. Heavy demands have already been made upon the hotels for accommodations and a large attendance is looked for. Ellis Howland will address the convention on the science of advertising.

Harrisburg.—The six-year-old child of Duncan Malcolm of Independence township was burned to death by its clothes catching fire while playing near a burning brush pile. The mother was severely burned in attempting to save her.

COULDN'T DO IT.

"That'll do! Dry up this minute!" "I c-can't, pa. Willie just soaked me."

LEG A MASS OF HUMOR

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. It irritated me so that I began to scratch it and it began to spread until my leg from my ankle to the knee was one solid scale like a scab. The irritation was always worse at night and would not allow me to sleep, or my wife either, and it was completely undermining our health. I lost fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with pain and chagrin as no matter where the irritation came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoe. I simply cannot describe my suffering during those seven years. The pain, mortification, loss of sleep, both to myself and wife is simply indescribable on paper and one has to experience it to know what it is.

"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies but I might as well have thrown my money down a sewer. They would dry up for a little while and fill me with hope only to break out again just as bad if not worse. I had given up hope of ever being cured when I was induced by my wife to give the Cuticura Remedies a trial. After taking the Cuticura Remedies for a little while I began to see a change, and after taking a dozen bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, in conjunction with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my leg was as fine as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months with no signs of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I shall always recommend them to my friends. W. H. White, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 and Apr. 13, 1903."

The Fight Against Tuberculosis.

Interest in the anti-tuberculosis campaign now being waged throughout the United States is evidenced by the fact that in the year 1903 163 new anti-tuberculosis associations were formed, 133 tuberculosis sanatoria and hospitals were established, and 91 tuberculosis dispensaries were opened. Compared with previous years, this is the best record thus far made in the fight against consumption in this country.

During the year 1903, 43 more associations were formed than during the previous 12 months, and 63 more hospitals and sanatoria were established. On January 1, 1910, there were in the United States 394 anti-tuberculosis associations, 386 hospitals and tuberculosis sanatoria at a 265 special tuberculosis dispensaries.

A Gift to Bryn Mawr.

Miss Cynthia M. Wesson of Springfield, Mass., has given $7,000 to Bryn Mawr college. Miss Wesson, who was graduated from Bryn Mawr in 1903, was prominent in the athletic affairs of the institution, and her gift is to be expended toward the betterment of the swimming pool. All undergraduates are required to qualify as swimmers, as the exercise is one of the most popular of the college sports.

CLEAR-HEADED Head Bookkeeper Must Be Reliable.

The chief bookkeeper in a large business house in one of our great Western cities speaks of the harm coffee did for him:

"My wife and I drank our first cup of Postum a little over two years ago, and we have used it ever since, to the entire exclusion of tea and coffee. It happened in this way:

"About three and a half years ago I had an attack of pneumonia, which left a memento in the shape of dyspepsia, or rather, to speak more correctly, neuralgia of the stomach. My 'cup of cheer' had always been coffee or tea, but I became convinced, after a time, that they aggravated my stomach trouble. I happened to mention the matter to my grocer one day and he suggested that I give Postum a trial.

"Next day it came, but the cook made the mistake of not boiling it sufficiently, and we did not like it much. This was, however, soon remedied, and now we like it so much that we will never change back. Postum, being a food beverage instead of a drug, has been the means of curing my stomach trouble. I verily believe, for I am a well man today and have used no other remedy.

"My work as chief bookkeeper in our Co.'s branch house here is of a very confining nature. During my coffee-drinking days I was subject to nervousness and 'the blues' in addition to my sick spells. These have left me since I began using Postum and I can conscientiously recommend it to those whose work confines them to long hours of severe mental exertion."

"There's a Reason."

Decatur, Ill., Jan. 28, 1910.
Mr. Geo. W. Woolsey, Danville, Ill.

Dear Sir:—We notice that you state in your letter of the 22nd that the "wets" of Danville make the claim that there is now more drunkenness in Decatur than when we had saloons. This is absolutely false which I can prove by numerous business and professional men who have been keeping close watch of conditions in Decatur.

When the saloons were closed a large number of saloon men, gamblers and prostitutes left the city, and we were glad to have them leave for the homes were quickly occupied by decent and law abiding people who are a help to the city rather than a hindrance. In years past it was unsafe for ladies to be on some of the business streets after dark on account of loafers, gamblers and bad characters, but things have changed radically for the better.

The operators of "Soft Drink parlors" are being vigorously prosecuted, some of them having been fined as much as $800 and the costs and their places of business ordered closed by the court until they furnish bond that they will not again sell intoxicants while this is Anti-Saloon territory. Others who have been convicted, and serving jail sentences after having paid a heavy fine. Over a dozen of these soft drink parlors have been closed, and others have gone out of business as they could not make it profitable to run their places and not sell intoxicants.

I own the 5-story and 4 story business buildings shown on this letter head. When Decatur was voted dry, at that time I had seven vacant suites of offices and apartments. Today every room of every kind in both buildings are well rented, and numerous calls for more rooms. The rents on ground floors rooms has increased over 25 percent in the last two years. We do a large installment piano business, and we have found that customers who could not make their payments; regular when we had saloons, now can pay, and other men who never came up town with their families on Saturday evening now do so, and they buy clothing and shoes instead of drink with their money.

Over 450 new homes are being built in Decatur yearly, and several good business buildings are now in course of construction and it is claimed that this is going to be one of the greatest years Decatur has ever had in the building line. A new $250,000 High School building is now being built. Families are moving to Decatur from several states on account of it being a decent and clean city, and on account of the excellent school facilities.

The "Wets" have had a majority in the city council and have opposed to the fullest extent most every move for the right and the enforcement of law, but the law is being enforced and it is hard for a person to buy any liquor in Decatur.

The class of citizens who soak themselves with booze, starve their families, fail to pay their house rent, and make a nuisance of themselves, and throw their families on the county in the winter time, we do not want.

Yours very truly,
FRANK L. SUFFERN

RETIRED FROM BUSINESS.

W. W. Eden, a prominent business man of our town, has been obliged to retire from business owing to ill health. For several years he was associated with his father, J. F. Eden, in the furniture and undertaking business. After the death of his father, in connection with his brother A. E. Eden, they continued the business until January 1907, when their establishment was gutted by a disastrous fire. They then went into business in the Shepherd room at the southwest corner of the square. In the summer of 1908, A. E. Eden retired from the firm and went to California, since which time W. W. Eden conducted an undertaking parlor, book store and cigar store. He was prosperous and highly respected, but unable to longer attend the store, he sold it Monday to Guy Uhrich.

Mr. Eden is undecided as to what course he will pursue, but has planned to go to Hot Springs, Ark., for a time until he recuperates.

We are sorry to have Mr. Eden leave our town, but hope in time to see him restored to health and enjoying life.

VALENTINE PARTY
Miss Edith McCune planned a very pleasant surprise party for Miss Zoe Emel Monday evening. Twelve young women constituted the party; Misses Edith McCune, Myrtle Bean, Eva Heacock, Inis Bristow, Lottie Wolf, Sadie Poland, Neil Fison, Clara Bragg, Hazel Moore, Katherine Wright and Mrs. Dr. Kellar. To make the surprise complete Myrtle Bean, Sadie Poland and Inis Bristow invited Miss Emel to go to the Nickelodeon with them. During their absence the others of the party went to Miss Emel's home and decorated the dining room with hearts and had everything ready for her coming. Miss Emel returned, and much to her surprise, found the company awaiting her. Refreshments, consisting of two kinds of sandwiches, pickles, ice cream, cake, salted peanuts, and fudge, were served. The evening was very much enjoyed by the entire party.

"I must make more friends, don't you know," said the Englishman. "You see what I mean? Heh? I have a pretty poor bunch of friends, upon my word I have. Among the lot of them, when all is said and done, there isn't one that I can borrow more than $25 from. There isn't. Upon my word!"

Amputated His Own Toes.
A German tourist has been found by a gendarme lying unconscious to a stable at St. Sulpice, in the Cantons of Neuchatel, Switzerland. The man lost himself in the snow, and his feet became frost bitten. He crawled to the stable, and in his agony took out his pocket knife, and amputated two of his toes. Then he fainted, and is now in hospital.

Daily Health Hint.
Candies and sweet articles are highly concentrated nourishment that ought, when eaten, to be mixed with coarser food in order to secure proper digestion. This kind of food is more likely to turn acid on a weak stomach than any other, while none so surely tends to produce constipation.

Wagon Accident Takes One Life.
A Paris sporting paper keeps up its statistics designed to show the rarity of catastrophes resulting from the automobile. It states that during the month of June 46 persons were killed and 774 injured by wagon accidents, 18 killed and 228 injured by railways, 4 killed and 124 injured by bicycles and only 6 killed and 60 injured by automobiles.

Tree Resembles Umbrella.
A curious tree grows in one of the numerous islands which are studded about the Pacific ocean. It grows, at its full height, to nearly 30 feet, with branches spreading like a huge umbrella, yet it is completely leafless, the species having never been known to show signs of a single bud. Its sap is useful as a medicine, but as fuel the wood is worse than useless being as hard as iron and quite as difficult to burn.

WARREN TOPPAN, Lynn, Mass.

Cured of severe compound cold and cough by Vinol

"From Dec. 20, '05, to March 1, '09, I had three bad colds, one on top of the other. I got so weak I could hardly get around. Nothing seemed to help me until I began to take Vinol. The change was magic. Three bottles completely fixed that compound cold and stopped the terrible cough—and what surprised me most, at the same time it cured me of a severe stomach trouble that has bothered me for 20 years. Vinol is certainly a wonderful medicine."

Mr. Toppan is one of Lynn's most prominent and highly respected merchants, whose word is as good as his bond.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it contains the two most world-famed tonics—the medicinal, strengthening, body-building elements of Cod Liver Oil and Tonic Iron.

A three week's continuous performance in a St. Louis theatre to crowded houses every time; is the recommendation with which "St. Elmo" the wonderfully successful book play comes to the Titus opera house on Wednesday night, February 23.

A fire was discovered in the interior of Mrs. Sarah Trowbridge's residence on west Jefferson street, about 5 a. m. Thursday. The fire originated in the dining room and is supposed to have been started from a lighted lamp exploding. The lamp was sitting on top of the china closet. The partition of the room burned, and a big hole in the floor, which let the china closet fall into the cellar. The noise made by the crash awakened the family, who were sleeping in the back bedroom. Timely assistance saved the house, but most of the furniture belonging to Mr. Love, who occupied the house, was badly damaged.

While it is often impossible to prevent an accident, it is never impossible to be prepared—it is not beyond any one's power, to invest 25 cents in a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and you are prepared for sprains, bruises and like injuries. Sold by all dealers.

That Lame Back Means Kidney Disease

And to Relieve the Lame and Aching Back, You Must First Relieve the Kidneys

There is no question about that at all—for the lame and aching back is caused by a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder. It is only common sense, any way—that you must cure a condition by removing the cause of the condition. And lame and aching back are not by any means the only symptoms of derangement of the kidneys and bladder. There are a multitude of well-known and unmistakable indications of a more or less dangerous condition. Some of these are, for instance: Extreme and unnatural lassitude and weariness, nervous irritability, heart irregularity, "nerves on edge," sleeplessness and inability to secure rest, scalding sensation and sediment in the urine, inflammation of the bladder and passages, etc.

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are an exceptionally meritorious remedy for any and all affections or diseased conditions of these organs. These Pills operate directly and promptly—and their beneficial results are at once felt.

They regulate, purify, and effectually heal and restore the kidneys, bladder and liver, to perfect and healthy condition—even in some of the most advanced cases.

E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ill., want every man and woman who have the least suspicion that they are afflicted with kidney and bladder diseases to at once write them, and a trial box of these Pills will be sent free by return mail postpaid.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS
Do Not Endanger Life When a Sullivan Citizen Shows You The Cure
Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor: why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?
Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.
If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Sullivan testimony:
Elijah Smith, Sullivan, Ill., says: "I found Doan's Pills to be an excellent remedy for kidney trouble. For some time I was afflicted with this complaint and my back was extremely lame and painful. My health was poor and I knew that something must be done. When suffering in that way Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention and I got a supply at Hall's Drug Store. They use entirely relieved me. I hope that other kidney sufferers will be lead to try Doan's Kidney Pills."

CORN
Champaign county, according to the Gazette, produced over 14,000,000 bushels of corn. This is a larger amount than twenty of the states of the Union produce. But the farmers of Champaign are not satisfied with this. They propose to push the production of corn this year to a higher point than it has ever reached before. They are satisfied that the yield ought to be 100 bushels per acre, and they will not rest until they reach this amount.

THE AMERICAN HOME

W. A. RADFORD
EDITOR

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 124 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

During the past two or three years the building world has been considerably stirred up over the bungalow. This style of home architecture has been enthusiastically urged by its devotees for all classes of buildings for all locations, irrespective of the special needs of the case. While I would not deny this type of building, realizing that it has done wonders in arousing not only the architects but the people in general, to the necessity of art and convenience in small home building; still I do believe that the California bungalow has at times been recommended when some other type of house would prove more appropriate and desirable.

Without questioning for a moment the attractiveness of the low, rustic, bungalow cottage, with its sweeping lines and open framing for country sites, it is certain that some radical change must be made to adapt this in a practical way to the ordinary, narrow city lot. The bungalow is above all a house suited to a hilly country. A one-story house, low and broad, looks well indeed if it can be placed on a hill or knoll well above the street, and if it can have plenty of space around it for light and air and shrubbery.

With the average city lot, however, ranging in width from 25 to 40 feet, the problem of securing good light and air on all four sides of a house demands careful attention. The artifice has to yield to the practical matter of sanitation. It becomes desirable to keep the house narrow and high above the ground. In this way the best air and sunlight is secured for all the tional in material and lines and the wide open rafter cornice gives it a real bungalow flavor.

A glance at the floor plans will show the thoroughly desirable arrangement of this house. It furnishes just about the maximum of roominess for a house of its size. It is really a small house, but the arrangement of reception hall with its open stairway, living room and dining room separated by two columns and cased opening gives a space 13 by 29 feet, which is larger than a good many really larger sized houses can boast of. The kitchen and pantry occupy the fourth corner the arrangement being very good for convenience between kitchen and dining room, between kitchen and front of the house, and stairway to cellar, etc.

On the second floor there is one very large bedroom and two smaller ones besides three closets and bathroom.

A striking feature of this entire plan is the number and arrangement of the rooms. This matter of good air and sunlight is more important than a great many seem to realize. We have learned during the last few years that a large proportion of the ills that human flesh is heir to are directly chargeable to bad air or poor ventilation of living and sleeping rooms, and to the absence of sunlight, allowing dampness and the development of poisonous moulds. Tuberculosis in its many forms is caused by bad air and quickly yields in almost every case to the modern fresh air treatment.

The house design presented herewith is especially designed to furnish an abundance of light and air to all rooms, even when erected on a narrow, city lot. The extreme width of the design is 23 feet 6 inches, which

There are five windows in the living room, six in the dining room and two each in the hall and kitchen. Upstairs each of the smaller bedrooms has three windows, while the larger bedroom has five. Two of the closets have windows in them for light and ventilation. The windows in the bedrooms are so placed that there is a cross ventilation in each of the rooms. This house cannot fail to be cheery and healthful at all times. The windows are set rather high from the floor, so that there is no lack of privacy.

The cost of this six-room house is estimated at $2,500, using best construction and materials, birch trim down stairs, yellow pine upstairs and oak floors throughout.

Prof. Webb's Tests for School.
In the following ten tests Prof. Webb indicates the course of study he would suggest for the present day school: What useful work can you do? How do you spend your evenings? How would you spend an income of $20 a week for a family of two? In what phase of altruistic endeavor are you most interested? What are some of the objections to buying cheap clothing? What do you know about juvenile courts? Write an interesting paragraph about each of the following men: Tolstol, Saint Gaudens, Richard Watson Gilder, John Burroughs, Booker Washington. Make up a list of ten important rules of hygiene and the reason for their necessity. What civic improvements are most needed in your city? State briefly your views on the conservation of national resources. —Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

Telephone in 'Speeding Auto.'
During one of the automobile endurance tests between San Antonio and Dallas, Tex., one of the entrants, who is president of a telephone company, carried telephone apparatus with him, and by using a long fishing pole could tap the telephones along the route without leaving his car. By this means he was able to keep in touch with points in advance of the run and arrange for relief in case of accident or for hotel accommodations.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Cut alfalfa when it is dry.

Give the brood sows plenty of exercise.

Low, damp ground is no place for a henhouse or yard.

British brewers last year used about 63,000,000 pounds of hops.

Keep the pig pens, troughs and barrels clean. Don't overlook that.

Thousands of young pigs are annually lost through lack of exercise.

The cost of the product is lessened by pushing the pigs for early maturity.

The early spring chicken catches the good price. Raise early spring chickens.

The well-bred farmer is not content with poorly bred stock nor with poor crops.

An average orange tree produces 20,000 oranges, and an average lemon tree 8,000 lemons.

Keeping a cow because she is beautiful may show an esthetic taste, but not good business sense.

Hens that lay soft-shelled eggs may be helped by a little more vegetables or green food and oyster-shell.

The apple crop for 1909, was of much poorer quality than that of 1908, and about three million barrels short.

A well-broken horse will stand until his owner adjusts the robe, takes up the reins and gives him the word to go.

The growing pig requires protein and not much corn. It is all right to give a little corn but too much is harmful.

In purchasing a boar it is well to bear in mind that one with heavy bones is more to be desired than one of slight build.

The practical remedy for little pigs that are liable to be troubled with thumps is to provide plenty of exercise and large range.

If you cultivate your orchard, see that the ground is kept finely mulched, in order to conserve the moisture which the trees should have.

Dairy profits should go into the pockets of the farmers and not the feed dealers'. If they don't, there is something wrong with our system.

In sorting turkeys for breeding stock, choose the best, if large birds are expected in spring, and avoid keeping hens of the same brood as the Tom.

The farmer who marketed his corn in the hog yard and who is now marketing the hogs, can look any man in the face and tell him to go to any old place.

Pigs will live and grow on rape without a supplement of grain, but a small addition of the latter is profitable. Dry sows will, however, do well on rape alone.

Be sure fruit trees are set where they will have sufficient drainage. Many a tree is blamed by its owner for being a bad variety, when the fault is in the drainage.

Keep the hens in the best possible condition, clean the houses often, feed carefully of good, clean feed, spray for mites and lice, and you will be as apt as anybody to get eggs.

Farmers' and stockmen's meetings, college short courses and farmers' institutes are important educational opportunities at this season of the year. It will pay to make the most of them.

Then there will be found forked crochets which need strengthening and can be nicely accomplished by boring a small hole through each limb, inserting an iron bolt with washers upon each end.

The turkey is an intelligent bird and if understood and properly handled according to its instinctive nature, it will respond at once to any training in the way of proper habits, ranging, etc.

Poultry by nature crave animal food. They get insects in season to satisfy this need, but when deprived of animal food in winter they cease to do well, they eat their eggs, pull feathers and do other mischief that they are not to blame for.

Buy meat bones for the hens.

White grape is the best of white currants.

Concrete beehives form the subject of a recent patent.

Look after the comfort of the sleeping quarters these days.

A sheep in the pasture field is good scavenger of weeds and briars.

The man; the cow; the feed; are three essentials to successful dairying.

Too much exposure and too much confinement are alike injurious to the colts.

To keep off lice sprinkle the nests of sitting turkeys each week with snuff.

Some sloppy food is responsible for a great deal of mortality among small chicks.

Except during the breeding season, keep males away from the flock, hens lay better if left alone.

The amount of feed required to produce a pound of gain increases as the chicks approach maturity.

The farmer who has not time to fuss with a young colt would better go into some other business.

The tobacco acreage in the United States for 1909 was 1,180,000 as against 875,000 acres in 1908.

The little red chicken mite and erstwhile the louse thrive these days. Whitewash and kerosene for them!

Raising young squabs to supply the city markets is always profitable if they are given careful management.

Every owner of a dairy must figure on receiving more in the milk pail than he puts into the feed trough.

An experiment by an Ohio company of curing tobacco by heat from natural gas stoves has proved successful.

Provide a shelter for pigs running on winter pasture. It need not be expensive, but one that is well ventilated.

To make fall pigs do well they must be provided with warm sleeping quarters at night and filled with sunshine during the day.

It is an advantage to raise turkeys, not only for swelling your bank account, but also for the many injurious insects they destroy.

When the old turkey hens are set take the same method with them as with the hen mother and brood, and take care to provide a large coop.

Do not pick out the poorest soil you have for the orchard. The best is none too good. A slope to the south makes a good location for most fruits.

See that the poultry houses are properly ventilated at night. To compel fowls to roost in a close, filthy place is a good way to have unhealthy stock.

In the last fiscal year experts of the department of agriculture inspected before slaughtering 53,544,255 animals at 876 establishments in 240 cities and towns.

Never wait until milk becomes coagulated before skimming and when adding a fresh skimming to the cream already collected stir well, so all may ripen evenly.

In purchasing new male birds, secure those that have something back of them in the line of good ancestors. The males are worth considering, for they are half the flock.

Feed fall pigs during winter a moderate ration of corn and supplement with bran, shorts and such other nitrogenous feeds as you have on hand to give variety to the ration.

The use of automobiles for delivering milk from the farm to the shipping station saves much valuable time and has been the means of widening the territory where milk can be profitably raised.

If you have hens with little chicks do not put the coops near the ones where there are little turkeys, as a hen with chicks will likewise kill the chickens.

Experiments made by the department of agriculture at Washington have demonstrated that crown gall is caused by a bacterial parasite and that it will affect a large number of plants where infected.

Flockmasters all over the country will complain in February and March about their ewes disowning lambs, lambs coming dead or weak and ewes having no milk. These conditions are caused by innutritious, dry and constipating feeds and lack of water.

When one is growing baby beef, there are good reasons for forcing the feeding. With that class of animals forcing is necessary, but it is not necessary with animals that are to stand at the head of herds. Development more than normally quick will be of no advantage to them. With them that style of development should be followed that will result in fullest and most vigorous growth when matured.

OLD AND NEW DAYS

By HENRY F. COPE
Chicago

For the former things are passed away. —Rev. 21:4

The old is but the soil from which the new springs into life. To-day must not lie buried in yesterday, nor to-morrow in to-day. The former things must not remain in their old places; they have passed away; on them we stand only to build the fairer edifices of the future. The old year must not be carried into the new as a burden, but as an inspiration.

The new has its roots in the old, but its fruits are farther on. The use of yesterday is to see it as yesterday; that which has been passed is gone in fact, is cherished in memory only for what it has done for us. It holds our guiding lights not to beckon us back but to guide us on. It may be fair with memory's pictures, but they are only promises of what is to be.

Some feel oppressed by the passing of the years. To them each one seems as the smell of a bell that counts itself toward the end. Years spell only age. But the greatest blessing of time is this passing of the days that some of the pages of life may be turned and new ones begun, that such a thought is possible as this of the past with its complement, the future.

The passing days remind us of the possibilities of new beginnings. They teach us to live the forward looking life, to cherish hope, to know that, though we may have failed, though yesterday's page be dark with stains and blotted over with tears, yesterday is not all; there remains the new day and this we may essay with a noble courage, with a chance at a cleaner, brighter page.

In the failures of the last year may have been the discipline that trains for success the coming year. Our old days are not to be simply ignored; they are to be woven up into the structure of the new. They are to be like the lessons we painfully wrought out on our slates at school, forgotten in the sense that they have been carried forward into the enriching, the skill, and power of higher grades.

Here is this new year; what does it mean to us? He must be a dull hind indeed to whom it has no significance of new beginnings; who looks not forward to its first days with expectation, hope and some determination for its enriching. Life is full of such occasions, anniversaries that serve as marks along the way, times when we can stop and ask whether we move forward or go back.

This is a good time for high resolves, a time to shake ourselves free from any burdens of the past and to face the days that are to be with heart nerved for nobler living, nobler service, higher attainments. This is the time to seek for larger meanings in life for ourselves and richer living for others.

Once men talked about a new birth as taking place once for all in life. How eagerly hearts that counted life as a failure, or saw it as sin stained and sorrow burdened, looked forward to such a new beginning. How much better it is to see each new day as a possible new birth, each as a new beginning, each as a chance to do better, to move forward, to recover from the past and to remedy the old mistakes.

A worthy faith will never see man slipping back into the dust; it will feel him ever climbing toward God. A worthy faith will not mourn over the tracks marked in the yesterdays; it will trace with confidence the way that goes before; it will see that way leading into a clearer knowledge of truth; a closer, keener joy in doing the will of the Most High, and a joyous fellowship with all the great family of earth and heaven.

True faith will say, as the new days approach: Here in each of these is just the chance to find out what life means, to make real some of my best and fairest dreams, to do some of the things I have been learning to do and longing to do, in the past, to make some life as fair as I know all lives ought to be, to wipe the tears from some eyes, just another chance to love and go to find life.

God's Purpose in All.

While the masses are drifting into materialism because of the failure of the religious teachers of the age to proclaim God's whole truth in its full simplicity, we know that his eternal purpose moves unceasingly on, and, as shocking as may be the assertion to some really good people, out of this materialism will come a clearer perception of the truth, and relieved of the nightmare of superstition and supernaturalism which has hampered the religion of the past, humanity will move on to grander and better things through a just appreciation of the wonderful revelation which Jesus brought. —New York Herald.

New Standards in Life.

This is an age when new standards are entering into our business and commercial life, when we are measuring our efficiency not only by the product in goods and the profits in dollars, but by the effects on the lives of the workers and by the value of the product to society as a whole. In other words, we are really setting up religious tests in business.

A mother never lives so little in the present moment as when she rocks the cradle.

The Washington Boy

Which Caption Will Be Seen, Does Not Mean What the Reader Probably Thinks It Does

By Earl Marble

GUY PARSONS was a Washington boy. He had read a great deal about the Father of His Country, and was trying to emulate his example, and live up to the ideals which the great Washington had set, and loved to read the many anecdotes told about him in his boyhood.

Of course he had had many backsets in his career, even though he was a very small boy as yet. One of these came near being disastrous, though at least it resulted comically. He had heard his father and a neighbor discussing Washington, and heard his father quote from his "Farewell Address" a paragraph advising his countrymen to "Beware of foreign influence." Going to school that morning, with the words fairly sizzling in his mind, he said over the words, when he was confronted suddenly by a crowd of boys of mixed nationality, who proceeded to roll him in a mud-puddle—one of them, a lively little "mick," as Guy described him afterward, saying, "We'll teach him to howl his tongue about foreign influence, sure."

I have neglected to say that Guy was born on the 22d of February, which was what first caused him to be called a "Washington boy." When Guy was about 12 years of age, or nearing his 13th year, the winter was a particularly hard one. The snow came down early, and staid late. It prevented the animals in the woods from finding food, and they came down to the farms to see what could be discovered in that direction. The rabbits even gnawed the bark from many of the fruit trees in the orchards; and hunters and trappers went in quest of them, that the fruit crop for the next year and subsequently should not be a failure.

"Well," said Guy, bright and early on the morning of his 13th birthday, that winter, "what do I get to-day—a present or a licking?"

"Well," said his sister Madge, two years younger, who looked at him reverently, seeming to wish that it had been her lot to have been born on some heroine's birthday, that she might have a model to strive for, "I hope it will be a present. Lickings are awful."

The family dog came along just then, and licked Guy's hand, which hung down just within his reach.

"Well, I don't know about all lickings," said Guy. "That one seems to be all right. So, as I've had my licking, I'll not get another one, may be."

He seemed to look upon this as an omen of good, and went away with the dog, ostensibly to have a play, possibly to get into some mischief.

Through the orchard they went, and presently the dog started up a rabbit, and soon ran him down.

Guy laid the rabbit down beside the step, and went in, with the dog.

"Ma," said Guy, a little later, "what are we going to have for dinner?"

"Oh, just ordinary stuff, I guess. We didn't make any preparations for dinner to-day. I s'pose we'll have some cider to drink."

"Well, ma, if I should get a rabbit, could we have rabbit fricassee?"

"Well, go along, and see what you can do."

"Tower, you understand?" he said, opening the door, and motioning to the dog. "Go along, and get a rabbit."

The dog went out, and in a few moments was whining at the door.

"Here he is, ma."

He opened the door, and in walked the dog, with the rabbit, which he laid at Guy's feet, after which he looked up at him, and wagged his tail.

"Well," said the boy's mother, "you go and skin him, Guy, and I've got just about time to get him cooked."

The rabbit fricassee seemed to "touch the spot" with Mr. Parsons, and he praised the boy highly.

"And your mother has cooked it splendidly too," he said.

"Yes, she had the right kind of wood," said the boy.

"What kind was that?" asked the father.

"Green cherry," was the reply. "I thought, seeing as it was my birthday—and Washington's—I'd down a cherry tree, and I did, and ma used it to cook the rabbit with."

"You young rascal!" said the father, changing his tune, as he glanced at the grinning boy. "I'll see you after dinner out in the woodshed, and maybe I'll cook your goose for you."

"But, father—"

"Never mind. I don't want any butts from you now. Wait till we get to the woodshed. We'll take a look at the cherry stump, too, and then we'll see how things stack up."

Somehow the boy did not seem to be much afraid, though his sister looked at him compassionately.

"Well, sir, come along," said the father, after waiting for his dinner to settle. "We'll see about this cherry tree business now."

They soon reached the stump of the tree, and the father looked at it and groaned.

"Why did you do it?" asked the father.

"Well, pa, you see I had read so much about cutting down that cherry tree, and being born on the same day as Washington was, you know—"

"Cut it out. Give me a good reason, or—"

"Sure thing, pa. You see, when I was out this morning, and Tower and I got the rabbit—"

"Yes?"

"Well, I cut it down."

"So I see. Now take off your coat." The boy did as directed.

"Take off your vest."

He took it off.

"Take off—"

"No, pa—not my trousers. It's cold."

"I'll make it warm for you."

"But I was going to tell you why I cut down the tree. See that stump there?"

"I'm not blind. Why didn't you cut it closer to the ground, while you were about it, and not leave such a long, ungainly stump?"

"Well, you look and see. See down below where I cut?"

"Yes. What of it?"

"See where it's gnawed?"

"Yes. But it would have been all right unless it was gnawed all the way around."

"Well, you look and see if it isn't gnawed all the way around, while I put on my coat and vest. It's getting cold."

"Oh, I see. And that is why you cut the tree down?"

"Yes, pa—so to cook his goose for him. And we got the very fellow that had done the gnawing. I saw him at it. But Tower and I got his goat."

"I wonder why he chose a cherry tree instead of an apple," mused the father, examining the stump more carefully. "They most always take the apple trees."

"Maybe he was sick, and wanted some cherry bark for medicine," said the boy slyly.

"Well, I'm glad I didn't have to use this," said the father.

"So am I, pa."

"But you came near getting into trouble because you are a Washington boy, didn't you?" said the father, swishing the whip as though he still had a desire to use it, while Tower whined and scurried out of the way.

"But not as near as the rabbit did," said Guy. "I wonder if he was a Washington rabbit?"

When Washington Swore.

"Did you ever know that Washington had one of the closest calls of his life within a stone's throw of Times square?" remarked a New Yorker to an out-of-town visitor. "There's the record of it—an adventure that came near changing the history of the country."

The New Yorker pointed to a bronze tablet on the row of houses facing Times square above Forty-third street.

It seems that in the revolution the redcoats were seizing Manhattan and the Americans were getting out as fast as they could, bag and baggage. Times square was open farm land then, and the fugitives came up Broadway or Bloomingdale road. Gen. Putnam and his men were nearly caught by the British, but got away and were coming up the road when Washington met them.

"The Father of His Country let out a string of curses and tried to stop them. The man who wrote histories hasn't the nerve to set down what he said, but he could swear like a trooper when he got started. Putnam's men were so scared, though, that they kept on running. Washington was wild with rage; and galloped away with his staff across the fields. Where Bryant park now is, he ran into 50 redcoats and would have been taken if his companions hadn't pulled him back. What would have happened if Washington had been made a prisoner?"—New York Times.

Refused First Mansion.

The Pennsylvania legislature voted a sum of money for a presidential residence, but when Washington saw it he said indeed he wasn't going to spend the money necessary to properly fit up such a big place, and it didn't occur to congress that the president's home should be furnished out of the public treasury, so he rented a house from Robert Morris.

PHYSICIANS OF OMAHA DISAGREE

DIFFERENT OPINIONS ON COOPER'S REMARKABLE SUCCESS HELD BY MEDICAL MEN OF NEBRASKA METROPOLIS.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 16.—The astonishing sale of Cooper's preparations in this city has now reached such immense figures that the medical fraternity at large have become forced into open discussion of the man and his preparations.

The physicians as a whole seem to be divided with regard to the young man's success in Omaha—some being willing to credit him for what he has accomplished, while others assert that the interest he has aroused is but a passing fad which cannot last, and which will die out as quickly as it has sprung up.

The opinion of these two factions is very well voiced in the statements made recently by two of a number of physicians who were interviewed on the subject.

Dr. J. E. Carass when questioned about the matter said: "I have not been a believer in proprietary preparations heretofore, nor can I say that I believe in them at present. But I must admit that some of the facts recently brought to my notice concerning this man Cooper have gone far towards removing the prejudice I had formed against him when the unheard-of demand for his preparations first sprang up in this city. Numbers of my patients whom I have treated for chronic liver, kidney and stomach troubles have met me after taking Cooper's remedy and have stated positively that he has accomplished wonderful results for them. I notice particularly in cases of stomach trouble that the man has relieved several cases of years' standing that proved very obstinate to treatment.

"I am the last man on earth to stand in the way of anything that may prove for the public good simply through professional prejudice, and I am inclined to give Cooper and his preparations credit as deserving to some extent the popular demonstration that has been accorded them in this city."

Another well known physician who was seen took the opposite view of the "Cooper-mania," as he called it, which now has this city in its grip. He said: "I can only liken the present state of affairs to a certain kind of hallucination. For want of a better name, I might call it 'Cooper-mania.' The people of Omaha seem to be firm in the belief that this man Cooper has health corked up in a bottle.

"Some of them imagine that he has completely cured them of various ills, judging from their statements. It is beyond me to say why the city has gone crazy over the man. It may be safely put down, I think, to one of the passing fads that so often attack the American public.

"Sooner or later the people are bound to regain their senses and will then realize that the reputable physician is the one to whom their health had best be entrusted."

In the meantime Cooper meets several thousand people daily, and only smiles when statements of the above character are quoted to him.

Put a Shirt on Greeley.

The excellent cut of Horace Greeley's birthplace at Amherst, N. H., in the Sunday Herald of recent date suggests this anecdote which may be of interest:

The room in which he was born is now occupied as a sitting room. A visitor some years ago asked a lady living near by if she remembered ever seeing Horace Greeley, and she replied: "Well, yes; I have a very early remembrance of him. I put the first shirt on him."—Boston Herald.

ROCKY BOY INDIAN LANDS OPEN FOR SETTLEMENT.

Secretary Ballinger has issued instructions to throw open 1,400,000 acres of land in Eastern Montana to white settlers.

This land was withdrawn about two years ago for the purpose of allotting to the Rocky Boy Indians. The tract contains the very choicest lands in Valley County and wherever farming has been carried on; it has produced yields of from 20 to 30 bushels of wheat per acre, 40 to 70 bushels of oats and large crops of hay, alfalfa and vegetables.

There are over 8,000 160-acre homesteads in this tract, which is considerable more than the combined total in the Flathead, Spokane and Coeur d'Alene Reservations, which were opened to settlement last summer.

Pure Iron is only a laboratory preparation. Cast iron, the most generally useful variety, contains about five per cent of impurities, and the curious thing is that it owes its special value to the presence of these. Pure iron can be shaved with a pocket knife; impure iron can be made almost as hard as steel.

Important to Mothers. Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it bears the Signature of Dr. J. C. Watson.
