SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with the introduction of John Stephens, adventurer, a Massa-husetts man marooned by authorities at Valparajo, Chile. Being interested in mining operations in Bolivia, he was desounced by Chile as an insurrectionist and as a consequence was hiding. At his notel his attention was attracted by an Englishman and a young woman. Stephens rescued the young woman from a drunken officer. He was thanked by her.

CHAPTER III.

in Which Opportunity Comes.
A period of decided depression followed, the earlier vision of youth fading swiftly as I realized what the message of this card plainly meant, and contemplated the social gulf yawning between myself and this woman of the English aristocracy. A cat may look at a king, and a South American adventurer might venture to gaze admiringly upon this beautiful ntlewoman, yet vaulting ambition should have a care lest it o'erleap itself. Oh, well, it was not much I had to overcome—merely an impression, a fugitive admiration which would early perish, for it was hardly probable we should ever meet again, in spite of his lordship's stiff invitation, and her exh, for it was hardly probable we ceeding warm glance secretly sec-

I smiled grimly at thought of so in sane a dream of love at such a time and place. Here was I, alone, unable to change my environment, every movement bringing new danger, almost certain of early detection, the result imprisonment or death; yet rning aside to quarrel with one only too giad to denounce me should he discover the truth, and totally forgetting evers caution in sudden admiration for a girl never seen before, probably never to be seen again. But a smile can leave a deeper wound than a sword, and my-mind would recur, in spite of other interevening thoughts, to the pleasant mystery behind her gracious words and action. I was thus lingering over the nuts and wine, dreaming a fool's dream, and idly won dering at the cause of that endles racket in the streets below, with the chorus of vivas arising from the crowded plaza, when the open window facing my table became suddenly darkened by a burly figure. Before I could push back my chair, the unwelcome intruder on my privacy was politely bowing before me, one hand pressed upon his heart. "Pardon, senor, my so abrupt ap-earance"—and I gazed curiously into round, bronzed face, guarded by closely clipped side-whiskers, and illumined by steady black eyesthe waiter said I should certainly find you alone here, and my need was most urgent. I address the Senor West?"

It was the name I had assumed, and, with closely pressed lips, I bowed in silent acknowledgment of my identity, feeling little doubt about the man's mission. The round, rather complacent face broke into a genial smile of

"Must fortunate I am thus to discover you with such facility," he con- his voice sinking to the merest whis tinued fluently, using both hands in per, as he leaned impressively toward gesticulation. "Senor, it is now a me across the table. "It is Senor great favor I would ask. Could you yield me the honor of a private interview in my own room?" pointing upward impressively. "It is upon the floor above.

"If your mission is in regard to the Sanchez affair, senor." I returned somewhat coldly, "privacy is hardly necessary. The preliminary details can all be arranged here."

He gazed at me in surprise, rub bing his hands together swiftly.

The Sanchez affiair! I know not a to that, senor. The matter on which I come is most delicate, most secret; it is not for other ears. 'Tis because of what I would communicate that seek private audience."

I remained motionless, looking straight at him, my teeth cleached or my cigar, my mind busy with expedihis call had nothing whatever to do with my quarrel with Sanchez, it must be an arrest. Yet why was the fellow so mysterious? What did he require of me in private audience? Ah! a bribe, probably—he desired to learn first what amount I would give for an opportunity to escape. I arose to my feet, the whole affair settled within my own mind, and cool enough to take advantage of every opening thus presented.

Very well, senor; lead the way and I will follow."

"Bueno!" He laid one hand upon my shoulder, his eyes darkening with delight. "You have the courage, senor, the audacity of the brave soul. 'Tis in the face, the eye, and gives me hope of my mission already. We will go by the outside stairway, so as to be unobserved by those within.' I followed him silently up the steep fron steps and along the narrow, din ly lighted hall. He paused finally, uncking a door, and stood politely aside while I entered. A moment he lingered outside, peering suspiciously and, stepping within, closed and bolted the door, even carefully lowering the transom before turning up the gas lights. He hastily crossed the room, shut down the single window, and drew closer the heavy shade. I watche these evidences of excessive caution with considerable amusement—undoubtedly bribery of the Valparaiso secret police was considered a most serious affair. A table occupied the center of the room, and with a wave of his rather fat hand my mysterious companion invited me to occupy a chair beside it. The perplexity exhibited by his troubled face caused me to smile again.

"So, senor, to you it was all fun," he said, gravely, gesticulating with vigor.
"But I appreciate the danger, the peril of discovery. Everywhere lurk the spies, and what I have to say is not for other ears. Senor, I have addressed you as the Senor West, for so I was hidden: but the man I realls seek is not in truth of any such name, Estevan."

I crossed my legs in apparently care less indifference, my fingers resting on the butt of the revolver in my pocket undecided yet whether this was to be war or peace, but prepared for a bold play in either case.

"I am Jack Stephens; so you may proceed, senor."

"Ah! "Tis as I was told!" his face brightening instantly, his hands delving within an inside pocket of his "This card-see: it is written in coat. the English—it will tell you if I be trusted, if I be all right. You know the handwriting, senor, the man who wrote it?"

I accepted the bit of pasteboard curiously. It was the business card of a well-known sugar firm, and I ran my eyes hastily over the few lines dimly traced on the back: "Bearer is all he represents himself to be; you may do business with him safely.—G. P. L." I glanced upward at the anx I glanced upward at the anxious face of the man opposite; he was evidently tingling with excitement.

"You know him, senor? You know the handwriting? You believe him! What is it he says? I read not the English." "Yes; we are acquainted. He is George Loring, a friend of mine. He says you are what you represent your self to be, and that I may transact business with you in perfect safety Now, then, what are you-an agent of the police?"

He shrugged his broad shoulders spreading his hands deprecatingly. "No, no; Cielo, no! Does he no

"No! He was most cautious. was best so; but now I tell you, and you believe." Again he leaned forward, his voice sinking to a mere whisper. "I am Don Emillo de Castillo." My face must have expressed familiarity with the name, for he sprang briskly to his feet, shaking a fat, official-looking envelope before my eyes.

"What! you recognize it not? Car amba! then I shall show you, senor. You read Spanish, si? This will tell why I speak with the authority of my nation. See—I am admiral of the Peruvian navy. I have the power, the right, the authority, to say what I now speak to you. You believe that, senor?"

"Yes," I replied, soberly, by now fully awakened to the fact that this was to be no ordinary meeting. believe all you say; more, now I re member your name, Don Emilio; but what are you doing here? What is it you desire of me?

"You know not! You know not what all this means?" he questioned, pointing with trembling finger toward the window. Before I could answer he burst forth vehemently: "It is war, senor; war, disgracefully declared this very day between Chile and my country—the pigs! the cowards! the bulcrazed with sudden excitement, and began pacing the room, waving his hands with wild gesticulations. think to fright us, senor, but they will learn a lession. We will fight, senor; fight to the knife. It will not b vivas they will shout—these Chilean when the Peruvians come to their country. Then they will be begging on their knees for mercy. Sangre Cristo! but we will show them what war means!"

I watched him earnestly, already be ginning dimly to perceive in all this a possible opening for my own escape.
"War?" I repeated. "And declared to-day? It has come suddenly, although I am aware there have been months of controversy. Did Peru ex pect such a result? Is she prepared? He naused in his nervous well his hands outspread on the table, his dark eyes glowing into mine.

"Both yes and no, senor. We knew well that nothing save war could ever wipe out the Chilean insults to our country. Yet we hoped for more tim in which to prepare. Cielo! it is not lack of men-no! no! the army is strong, valiant, senor; it will fight to the death. But the navy! Dios de Dios! we have not the ships, senor. They come not yet, those we have bought in Europe. "Tis that which has brought me here in disguise to Valparaiso: 'tis that which brings me now

I watched him closely without venturing response, and he sank into a chair, his elbows on the table.

"Si, now I explain it all to you," his voice falling so low I could scarcely follow. "We know for two weeks past war was to come. We have only a few warships, one, two, three; not can complete the fight Chile, or even guard our own coast. We have the men sufficient, but not the ships, senor. What could I do? I, the admiral? There is was but one hope—the audacity of our later than the could be sufficient.

"Only through field-glasses from the balcony of the hotel. She rode at anchor well off the government mole in the roadstead the last I remember." He clasped his fingers on my arm, leaning eagerly forward until his face was pressed close to mine.

"She lies there yet, senor, but only for to-night—Dios de Dios! only for to-night! To-morrow they warp her in beside the quay, her crew comes aboard, her armament, her provisions and she is made ready for sea. Holy mother, such a chance, and only for to-night! Think of it, senor, and wonder no longer if I seemed crazed. She lies out there now in the darkness, swinging to a single anchor chain, her steam up, the mearest battery a quarter of a mile away, and not a half dozen men aboard her. It is as a gift of heaven. Yet, sangre de Cristo! he who should lead the venture lies delirious from fever. Was there ever such cursed luck before!" He gripped his head between his two hands, but I was already upon my feet, my mind instantly grasping the situation.

"Don Emilio," I exclaimed, eagerly, gripping his shoulder, and compelling him to look up, "let me understand this clearly. You had perfected plans to capture and run off this Esmer-alda the moment war was formally declared? You have organized a crew for the work, and they are waiting the word here now in Valparaiso? Their leader is suddenly stricken ill, and you have no one capable of taking his place—is that why you have come to

"Si. si. senor." "How did you learn about me?" "From Senor Loring. He has lived in Peru. I have known him long."

"But you must have other officers in your party; what of them?" He spread his hands in a gesture of utter helplessness.

"Senor, I brought with me only the one. It was not safe to bring more. Besides, what need? This Valparaiso is a great seaport; here we may always find the scum of the seven seas; here ever are plenty of men enough to fight and plunder—'tis their trade. Cielo! we could enroll 100 devils in an hour along the waterfront, hell-hounds of the ocean, caring nothing for the flag above them if the pay be good."

"True; and you have them ready at Where are they

"At the wine shop of Rodrigues be-youd the plaza. You know the place?" I nodded, my memory instantly recalling the foul den. "How many?"

"Twenty-it is enough for a surprise, and they are sea-rats, senor. "But they are under officers?"

"Of their own kind, yes, but not of our navy. The first officer is a Yankee whaleman; the second I know not what, only he is a deep-water sailor." manuel God is with us."- think of God in three ways. The man in the street believes in a non-resident God. Occasionally he visits this world, and then we have a miracle. For him God is what the philosophers call transcendent. The men and women who have poetic temperaments, and artistic tastes believe in a God who is everywhere, "whose dwelling is in the round ocean and the living air and the blue sky and in the mind of man." For them God is what the philosophers call "im-manent." - The third way of thinking about God is the Christian way, and it combines what is true in both of the preceding views. It proclaims that God, while still remaining the infinitely holy God, is yet with us, "closer to us than breathing, neare than hands or feet."

This was and is no new idea; it is as old as the Bible. In beautiful and majestic language the first chapters of Genesis picture the coming of the Lord God into the garden to walk and talk with his children in the cool of the day. "Certainly I will be with thee," is the promise of God to Moses, and in promises ofttimes repeated God insists that he will never leave nor forsake his people.

This was the very truth God was trying to reveal to his people throughout the full length of their recorded history. God never changed his attitude toward his children, but they, blinded by prejudice and selfishness, refused to understand. So it was, line upon line, precept upon precept. It is like all great revelations. What is given is not always revealed. We are both being given on every hand facts of municipal corruption and political job-bery, and yet the great majority of our citizens are still unconcerned.

The reason that made the revelations of the Old Testament ineffective lay in the fact that words conceal as mucl as they reveal. All that God could say and tell about himself was not sufficient to create a personal friend-ship. The world did not know God. He was still hidden, misunderstood, and misinterpreted. God was a king, a judge, a detective. The promise of companionship and personal friendship with a detective who is sworn to shadow you and finally arraign you be-fore the bar of judgment is not appealing, to say the least.

"To many people of the olden times, and to many people even yet, God is a sort of self-appointed detective. His eye is on us; his hand is over us; his ear is open to hear; but his presence distresses when thought of under such categories. So it was that at last God had to speak, not in the words of any human language, but in the language of a human life. "The Word becomes Last of all, he sent his Son, and in the living characters of a human early life we understood what God had been trying to tell the world for centuries. They called his name "Immanuel—God with us."

Under this new conception of the nearness of God to our human life, common things became sacred. The supernatural is expressed to us in the terms of the natural. We look for God no longer in signs and wonders and the spectacular, but in the moving of the Spirit of God through the things among which we live. We no longer see an occasional bush that is aflame with a strange revelation, but we be-hold "earth crammed with heaven and every common bush aflame with God."

The little Child, the manger and the the sheep in the field, the wise men on their long search, fatherhood and motherhood—all become sacred and the new year would become singularly fruitful of blessedness and peace if in the daily round and the common task we could be sure that God is with us.

The presence of God with us in the days and duties of this new year means hope and inspiration. "Will God in-deed dwell with men? The heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain But if it is true that God does indeed dwell with his people there is high hope for all of us in that. The other week our president went down to the slums of New York city and talked to the men who, as the world says, were "down and out." Next day a wondrous thing took place. Men who had trailed their honor in the dust held up their heads with a new-born "If he has faith in us to come here and tell us we still have a chance perhaps it is worth while to try." And if the eternal God has faith in the children of men to enter personally and permanently into their life of sin and sorrow and shame perhaps there is a more wondrous redemption in a love like that. Through him we are born again into a living hope.

If religion is friendship with God, and if God has entered into compan ionship with us, then religion as friendship with God becomes a vital and beautiful reality. Mrs. Browning asked Charles Kingsley to tell her the secret of his happy and beautiful life, and he replied to her sympathetic request: "I had a friend."

There is a funny side everywhere that was put there by an All-wise Providence to give us a chance to etimes forget our troubles and ls a Rude Cone in Form and Stand in Upper Edge of Pond, Near Where Brook Enters.

Up in the mountains at the scource of the North St. Vrain, in Colorado, is a typical beaver home. The house is rude cone in form and stands in the upper edge of the pond near where

Most wild animals are homeless wanderers; the beaver, however, lives in a home of his own building and does so many interesting, useful things that I like him better than any of our wild people except our friends the birds

A beaver dam three feet high and 80 feet long forms this pond by the St. Vrain, around which are thick growths of willow and a few small groves of aspen.

I had long wanted to have a close look at the house and to take some measurements. The opportunity came one November a few days after the pond was frozen over. The pond was feet wide, and, measuring from the place where the brook came in, to the dam, it was 80 feet long. The house was made of a mixture of mud and long willow sticks. I measured the house around the bottom on top of the ice: It took 26 feet of rope to go around it, while the top of the house was exactly five feet above the Wondering how much of the house was in the water under the ice, I thought to measure by thrusting a pole to the bottom. Since the ice was not very thick I attempted to accomplish this by holding the pole in a vertical position, raising it, then bringing it down with all my strength to force it through the ice. It went through the ice—and so did I. The water was 2½ feet deep; so altogether the house was 7½ feet high.

Most beaver houses have two entrances. These usually consist of two holes about one foot in diameter that extend from the floor to the bottom of the pond. Beaver houses do not have any other openings, except some very small air holes in the top of the structure.

The room in this house was like the rooms of most beaver houses; it was circular, four feet across and 21/2 feet high; while the floor, with two enholes in it, was about three inches above water or pond level.

Beavers do most of their work by night, but occasionally work in the daytime. One autumn afternoon hid on top of a rock pile close to this beaver pond and watched three beavers at work. They were cutting down aspens for winter. One beaver concluded to cut down an aspen that was five inches in diameter. In the beginning of his labors he raised up and placed his forepaws against the aspen tree, propped himself by extending his hind legs wide apart, and began cutting. He worked steadily until he had a deep notch in the tree. Then he stopped, tucked his tail between his legs, sat down on it and continued cutting. After gnawing away for one hour and 15 minutes he stopped and thumped the ground three or four times with his tail, then scampered away, and with him scampered the two beavers just in time to escape injury from the falling tree, which came to earth with a resounding crash.

Our beaver then removed the limbs of the tree and gnawed the trunk into short lengths so that he would be able to carry them away. While he was working on the fallen tree one of the other beavers, who had felled a very small aspen, was dragging it, limbs and all, to the pond. This was hard work and it consumed much time. When the tree was finally placed in the water the beaver caught one of the limbs in his teeth and swam away, easily dragging the tree through the water to the pile of other green trees in the water beside his house.

While the beaver with the five-inch aspen was still busy cutting it into ctions a coyote came along and tried to catch him, The awkward beaver, however, fied for the pond and jumped in just as the coyote snapped for his in just as the coyote snapped for his tail. He escaped, but it was a close call. Once in the water he was safe. Beavers have very short legs and on land are so slow and clumsy that their enemies often catch them. In water, however, they swim and dive so easily that they usually escape thats.

IN THE SNOWDRIFT.

The earth was covered with snow one day,
When three little children went out to play.
They climbed to the top of a drift of when all of a sudden the crust fell

And down they went with a dreadful crash,
To have climbed that drift was very rash,
But one of the three—his name was Ned—
Turned to the others and calmly said:

"Well, kids, we came down easy enough, But going up will be rather tough. For climbing is slower than falling, you know,
If it happens to be a soft drift of snow."

Then out of their prison of cold snow walls
Which Ned declared was full of pitfalls.
They slowly, laboriously dug themselves free, And I feel quite sure you will believe me When I tell you that not again that day Did those three children go out to play In the snow so cold, but home did run, Where in their playroom they had such great fun.

TWO AMUSING MEXICAN GAMES

"Hanging Judas" and "The Flying Game" Not Generally Known o Played Anywhere Else.

While children play pretty much the same games the world over, here are two the Mexicans play which are not used anywhere else:

"Hanging Judas" is a popular one with the boys. They dress a big rag doll in funny clothes (much like a scarecrow) and stuff it with straw. They then put a firecracker in the toes and hang the figure on a line stretched across the narrow street Then the fuse is lighted and "Judas" is pushed out on the line, Bang! go the firecrackers. Judas is all ablaze and the children laugh and dance about as he burns. This game is commonly played around Easter time.

"The flying game" is another sport popular in Mexico and their records show it was played before the time of Columbus.

A tree is cut, its branches removed and steps are made out of ropes. Others affixed to the corners of the frame are then wound around the pole. Four boys, dressed as eagles or hawks, climb up the steps and each of them, taking a rope, swings off, while another boy whirls the square frame around. This unwinds the ropes and makes the boys fly round and round in larger circles until they reach the

STOMACH CENTER OF HUMAN LIFE. ALL ELSESECONDARY

The immense success which has followed L. T. Cooper during the past year with his new preparation has exceeded anything of the kind ever before witnessed in most of the leading cities where the young man has introduced the medicine. Cooper has a novel theory. He believes that the human stomach is directly responsible for most disease. To quote his own words from an interview upon his arrival in an eastern city: "The average man or woman cannot be sick if the stomach is working properly. To be sure, there are diseases of a virulent nature, such as cancer, tuberculosis, nature, such as cancer, tuberculosis, diabetes, etc., which are organic, and are not traceable to the stomach, but even fevers can, in nine cases out of ten, be traced to something taken into the stomach. All of this half-sick, nervous exhaustion that is now so common, is caused by stomachic conditions, and it is because my remedy will and does regulate the stomach that I am meeting with such suc-

"To sum the matter up—a sound digestive apparatus that is doing its full duty, getting every particle of vitality out of the food by transferring it to the bowels in a perfectly digested state—this above all else brings health."

Mr. A. C. Brock, chef of the Brock Restaurant, Market District, Boston, Mass., who is a staunch believer in Mr. Cooper's theory and medicine, has this to say: "I had chronic indigestion for over three years. I suffered terribly, and lost about thirty pounds. I was a physical wreck when I started this Cooper medicine, a month or so ago. To-day I am as well as I ever was in my life. I am no longer nerv ous, my food does not distress me in the least, and I have a splendid appetite. I am gaining flesh very rapidly—in fact, at the rate of a pound a day. I would not believe any medicine on earth could have done for me what this has done. It is a remarkable preparation, and Mr. Cooper deserves all his success." Cooper's New Discovery is sold by all druggists. If your druggist cannot supply you, we will forward you the name of a druggist in your city who will. Don't accept "something just as good."—The Cooper Medicine Co., Day ton. Ohio.

KICKED PASTOR DOWN STAIRS

Hasty Act of Vestryman That Ministe Has So Far Found It Hard to Forget.

A certain Episcopal clergyman in West Philadelphia received a most in-hospitable reception the other night when he went to call on a member of his vestry. The vestryman in ques-tion was alone in the house, the serv-ants being out, when he heard a ring at the bell. Going down stairs he found an intoxicated negro, who demander money for a drink. Highly incensed the vestryman went back up stairs, after ordering the man away, but hardly had he seated himself when the bell rang for a second time.

A second visit to the door found the same negro back again, and the ves-tryman, thoroughly aroused, seized the offender by the shoulder and pushed him down the steps.

While all this was going on the clergyman was walking down the street and a few minutes later had mounted the steps of his vestryman's house and rung the bell. He stood with his back to the door, when suddenly, to his as-tonishment, the portal flew open, a man rushed out and he received a most painful kick, sending him flying down the slippery steps. It required a lot of explanation and apology to close the breach caused by the incident. The clergyman and his vestry man are still on rather cool terms.

is there no way to make him show some signs of emotion?

Will he maintain the cold, indifferent attitude that he has shown through the long trialeven to the place of execution?

Such were the questions that passed through the minds of those who had followed the case from day to day. The judge still waited in dignified silence. Not a whisper was heard anywhere, and the situation had become painfully oppressive, when the prisoner was seen to move. His head was raised, his hands were clinched, and the blood had rushed into his pale, careworn face His teeth were firmly set, and into his haggard eyes came a flash of light Suddenly he arose to his feet, and in a low, firm but distinct voice, said:

"I have! Your honor, you have asked me a question; and I now ask the last favor on earth, that you will not interrupt my answer until I am through.

"I stand here before this bar, convicted of the wilful murder of my wife. Truthful witnesses have testified to the fact that 1 was a loafer, a drunkard and a wretch; that I, returning from one of my prolonged debauches, fired the fatal shot that killed the wife I had sworn ot love, cherish, and protect. Whie I have no remembrance of having committed the fearful, cowardly and inhuman deed, I have no right to complain or to condemn the verdict of the twelve good men who have acted as a jury in this case; for their verdict is in accordance with the evidence.

"But, may it please the court wish to show that I am not alone responsible for the death of my wife!"

This startling statement created tremendous sensation. The judge leaned over the desk, the lawyers wheeled around a n d faced the prisoner the jurors looked at each other in amazement. The prisoner paused a few moments, and then in the same firm, distinct voice.

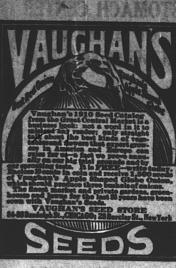

"I repeat, your Honor, that I am not the only one guily of the murder of my wife. The Judge on the bench, the Jury in the box, the lawyers within this bar, and most of the witnesses, are also guilty before almighty God; and will have to appear wite me before his His judgement throne, where we all shall be righteously judged. "If ewenty men conspire to ther for the murder of a n the law will arrest the twenty, and each will be tried, convicted executed for a whole murd r. and not for one-twentieth of a crime

"I have been made a drunkard by law. If it had not been for the legalized saloons of my town, I would never have become a drunkard; my wife would never have been murdered, I would not been here now, ready to be hurled into eternity. Had it not been for the human traps set out with the consent of the govern ment, I would have been a sober man and an industrious workman a tender father and a loving husband. But today my home is destroyed, my wife murdered, my little children-God bless a n d care for them-cast out on the mercy of a cold and cruel world while I am to be murdered by the strong arm of the law.

"God knows, I tried to reform, but as long as the open sal o o n was in my pathway, my weak, diseased will was no match against the fearful, agonizing appetite for liquor.

"For one year our town was without a saloon. For one year was a sober man. For one supremely happy, and our little homea perfect paradise,

"I was one of those who signed remonstrances against reopen ing the saloons in our town. The names of one-half of this jury can be found today on the petition calling for a vote that made possible the re-opening o the saloons falsely saying that the sale of liquor was necessary in our town.

The impassioned words of the prisoner fell like coals of fire upon the hearts of those present. ane many of the lawyers were moved to tears. The Judge made a motion as if to stop any further speech on the part of the prisoner when the speaker hastily said: "No! No! Your honor, do not close my lips, I am nearly through, and they are the last shall utter on earth.

"I began my downward career at a saloon bar, legalized and protected by voters of this commonwealth, has received annually a part of the blood money from the poor, deluded victims. After the Stale had made me a drunkard and a murderer, I am taken before another bar-the bar of justice? By the same oower of law that legalized the will conduct me to the place of execution and hasten my soul into eternity: I shall appear before another bar-the judgment bar of God and there you who have legalized the traffic, will have to appear with me Think you that the Great Judge will hold me-the poor, weak, helpless victim, of your trafficalone resqonsible for the murder of my wife? Nay, I, in my drunken, frenzied, irresponsible condition have murdered one, but you have deliberately willtully murdered your thousands, and the murder mills are in full operation today with your con-

While driving a three out to the fair ground after school Tuesday evening, George Vaughan, to whom the horse belonged, Leslie Kibbe and Clarence Underwood experienced quite an exciting incident. They had turned east on the pavement, when the horse started to run. He had gone about a block when he hit the curbing, and George Vaughan who had the lines, made his exite Kipbe and Underwood staid in. Just as they crossed Asa |Creek the horse turned south suddenly and ran up in Lynn Craig's yard, where the buggy turned over. Kibbe and Underwood were thrown out when the buggy went over, and the horse was thrown on his knees. Kibbe jumped to the horse's head and held him, Although somewhat shook up nobody was hurt. The seat of Vaughan's pants received serious injury:

Aurora. — Impelled by a desir or revenge because a locomotive him, Nicholas Buhn, a tramp, sought to wreck the Omaha fiyer on the main line of the Burlington road near Plano, according to a confession made by him to the police. Buhn obtained a pick from a section shed and stuck a pick from a section shed and stuck it into a tie in such a way that its metal head was placed firmly across the track. It was seen by the en-gineer of a passing freight train and removed before the Burlington fiyer arrived. Buhn was trying to beat his way from Mendota to Aurora and rode on the tender of an engine pulling a local passenger train. When Fireman Phelan turned the hose onto the coal some of the water struck Buhn in the face and after the train stopped at Plano he alighted and cursed Phelan and the engineer.

Radford, No. 124 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

In the building of a town situated in a rolling country the level tracts are the first to be occupied usually. Next come those which are easily and inexpensively graded, and finally the side hill lots, offering problems in building that many people are prone to avoid. The situation on a side or gentle slope is exceedingly attractive. It offers, first, a fine outlook. The houses overtop each other like the seats in a theater, and each commands not only a larger view, but more of the sunshine, more of breeze, and a certain amount of added privacy which cannot be secured when all the houses are on the same In fact, the fundamental principle in selecting the site for a home is to find a rising piece of ground which will afford good drainage, and also add to the dignity of the house to be placed on it. The early treatises on the building of an English dwelling make the narrow terrace, banked against foundation, a vital part of the design; and the tendency of the ordinary present-day builders to set the house high above the ground is due not entirely to a desire to avoid deep excavation, but comes as the result of this old idea of a terrace and a little formal garden to connect the house with its surroundings. The high hill, therefore, or a part of it, in the form of a hillside lot, should offer no insurmountable clate. This room is 10 feet 6 inches feet in length. It has a reception hall 15 feet square and the parlor in 15 feet 6 inches by 14 feet 6 inches in size. A delightful living room is provided that is 17 by 15 feet. The dining-room is the same size. The kitchen is 13 feet 6 inches by 16 feet 10 inches.

Access is had to the second floor by a good size stairway leading from the reception hall. One of the fea-difficulty to the builder. But following out the idea of the terrace he should strive for a design fitted to the larger elevation upon which the house is to be placed. In the country, where one usually has a larger area from which to pick a site, the problem is much simpler. Room must of course be allowed for the stable or garage. Ease of access must be considered, and also the relation of the dwelling to other parts of the property. But if it has been decided to place the house on the side of a knoll certain things must be studied in order to secure the best results. The shape of the knoll itself should determine the contour of the house. Placed on a hillton where the ground falls away in all directions, the lines of the house should conform to those of the site. The slope of the roof should repeat that of the hillside. Hipped or hooded, piered by low dormers and spreading int over the hillton in long and pleasing lines, such a house will add to the beauty of the landscape and well repay the extra care given to the design. Since its site is high its windows and porches will afford a pleasing view, and unless the ground is heavily wooded no tower or lookout will be needed. When desirable that a portion of the house should be more elevated care should be taken to make the tower wide and low, and the pitch tory at London.

square. There is one bedroom 1 feet 6 inches by 15 feet; another 17 feet 6 inches by 13 feet, and a third bedroom 13 by 15 feet. The serv-ant's room is 9 feet 6 inches by 8 feet. The bathroom is 9 feet 6 inches by 7 feet 6 inches. A noticeable fea-ture about this house is the large amount of closet room offered. There are six closets, all of good size.

This house can be built at a moderate cost and will afford much delight to the owner if placed on a rise of ground, on account of the abundance of light offered by the numerous windows. A feature of modern con struction, which is based on sanitary principles, is an abundance of sun light, which is deemed essential to happiness and good health. Home builders are coming more and more to appreciate these essentials in con struction, and it certainly is vital to the welfare of the race.

"Athens of Missouri" Disincorperated by Court Order.

Edinburg Dies a Natural Death When Railroads Pass It By-Noted for Beauty and an Excellent College.

Trenton, Mo. - Edinburg, known ver the state before the war as the "Athens of Missouri," and for many years the rival of Trenton as a tra-ding point and political center, where many men, afterward prominent m state affairs received their first col-legiate training, was disincorporated recently by an order of the county court.

The order marks the last step in the little town's retrogression since the Chicago, Rock Island & Quincy and Omaha & Kansas City railways bassed the village by.

The story of the settlement, growth and decline of the village of Edinburg is full of interest. The town came into existence in 1838 when Isaac J. Harvey built a store there. Not so favorably situated as Trenton, the growth of the town did not compare with that of the county seat until after 1850. At the half-way mark of the century Grand River college was established in Edin-

Then came an era of prosperity. The fame of the school grew, and, instructors of the best were numbered in the faculty. The pretty little town was in itself an attraction to students, and the name of Edinburg became widely known. Business boomed, the town took on a thriving air and the county seat feared for its own growth. Then came the war and progress stopped. The luster of the classic school became dim. After the war there was a revival of learning in Edinburg, and the prospect was fair again, until the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad came through in 1871 and marked Trenton as the future city of the section.

Business projects were killed in Ed-

Grand River College.

Another railroad came through from Quincy and Edinburg's hopes quickened that it would reach that place. When this failed, however, the doom of the village was sealed.

Steadily since then the town has lost in population and business. A few years ago the college itself was removed to Gallatin in order to secure railroad advantages. In December, 1909, the petition for disincorporation was presented to the court. J. G. Mcwaid was appointed trustee for the incorporation, to settle up its affairs, and classic Edinburg is no more.

curred at Liverpool, England, in connection with work in the graving dock on the Cunard liner Mauretania. A gang of men were engaged in bringing to the quay-side a steel plate of the vessel's hull. Just as the operation was in progress the tidal chain snapped. This set all the ropes at-taching the ships to the quay in a state of dangerous commotion. of the laborers on the quay were knocked down. One, named Wilson, was struck by a rope with such force that he turned a somersault, and, fall-ing on his head, was picked up dead. The other four men were removed to a hospital.
