PIANO RECITAL

ENTERED BY MISS TITUS' PUPILS AT HER HOME ON NORTH WORTH STREET SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Miss Annie Titus' piano pupils furnished an unusually pleasing program at their recital at her home on last Saturday afternoon. The pupils all showed a great deal of ability, and their selections were well rendered. Three piano duets were features of the program, in which the young girls played together well and showed good understanding of accent and rhythm. The Misses Mass, My, and Davidson acquitted themselves with credit. The Misses Shirey, Snyder and Purvis played with a finish and independence characteristic of old players. The numbers by the Misses Hudson, Wright and Randol were rendered with good tone, style and expression. There was much in the playing of all these young ladies which deserved commendation.

After the program refreshments were served, and altogether it was an enjoyable afternoon. The program was as follows:

- 1—Schubert—Military March, Freda Shirey, Elva Snyder.
- 2—Lichner—Morning Glory, Fay Mass.
- 3—Heiss—The Cuckoo Clock, Marie Myers.
- 4—Smith—Old English Dance; Lichner—On the Meadow, Nelle Davidson.
- 5—Low—On Parade March, Lydia Purvis, Elva Snyder.
- 6—Kolling—Nocturne; Behr—Victoire; Lewis—Old Black Joe, Lydia Purvis.
- 7—Low German Waltz, Elva Snyder, Freda Shirey.
- 8—Willis—The Wanderer's Dream; Heiss—Sweet Violets; Wachs—La Volkigense; Lewis—Nearer My God To Thee, Elva Snyder.
- 9—D'Onno—Angel's Dream; Dennes—Dance Modern; Massener—Aragnoise; Hoffman—The Mocking Bird, Freda Shirey.
- 10—Rubinstein—Melody; Leschetizky—Valse Chromatique, Gladys Hudson.
- 11—Paderewski—Menuet; Leschetizky—The Two Larks; Wollenhaupt—Valse Styrienne, Reta Wright.
- 12—Newland—Valse; Caprice; Reinhold—Impromptu, Ethel Randol.

Foster-Shepherd Trial.

On the night of the 21st of August 1909, Homer Shepherd accidentally shot and killed Ralph Foster.

This is a deplorable case for all concerned. The two men were intimate friends and cousins. Mr. Shepherd mistook Mr. Foster for a burglar prowling about the premises, and fired the fatal shot that took the life of one man and blighted the life of another; one family left without the husband and father, the other, husband and family facing an accusing world, court and judge.

Monday the civil case of Foster vs. Shepherd was called, and the tedious task of getting twelve jurors for the case began.

One hundred and fifty men had been summoned on the venire of jurors for the case, but as the greater number of them disqualified it looked doubtful Monday and Tuesday if they would get a jury.

Eleven jurymen were at last selected by Tuesday evening. The attorneys and judge decided Tuesday to try the case with eleven jurors instead of twelve, the usual number.

The names of the eleven are: Ambrose Butts, Sullivan township; Rufus Miller, Marrowbone township; Fred French, Carl Munson, S. F. French, East Nelson township; Geo. Rand, Whitley township; Milton Bullock, F. W. Schentz, Eldo Redman, William Kinney, Lowe township; P. P. Pifer, Jonathan Creek township.

The attorneys employed on the case are, W. K. Whitfield, E. E. Wright of this city and John E. Fitzgerald and James T. Whitley of Decatur for Mrs. Foster, Attorney John E. Jennings of this city, E. C. Craig of Mattoon and Harry Green of Urbana, and A. E. Eden a student in the law office of Jennings, for Homer Shepherd. The examination of the jurymen was done by Attorneys Whitfield and Fitzgerald on one side and John E. Jennings on the other.

ILLINOIS CORN AT 100 TO $120

A few crops of broom corn have been sold in the central district this week at prices ranging from $100 to $120 but the sales are so few to establish a market price.

The manufacturers seem content to get along with Illinois corn for the present and only half a dozen manufacturers are now in the district. Central dealers who are buying the western corn are shipping it to manufacturers as fast as received. Conditions and markets in the west are unchanged from last week and prices still have the wide range of thirty to one hundred dollars. Choice corn is in great demand but the inferior grades are finding a slow market.

Farmers generally are just as independent as the manufacturers and are regular stand patters of the Joe Cannon type. One Central dealer yesterday said, "I could pay $120 for two cars of choice corn but the farmers won't even talk to me."

Many farmers report small tonnage John R. Snyder says he won't have as much corn on fifty acres this year as he had on thirty acres last year. Among the early crops sold were M. J. McCafferty at $100; Harry Boucher at $110; Luke Hood, Conner and Taylor, the latter two of $120. McCafferty sold last year at $220 and the year previous at $100. This year on McCafferty's crop was the first brought into Arcola, it was bought by Jas. H. Simmons—Arcola Record. A farmer living near Windsor who has fourteen tons of buccorn ready for the market claims to have been offered $165.50 per ton and turned it down and says he is holding it for $200.—Mattoon Commercial.

NEWEST TOY QUITE AMUSING

Ingenious Plaything, Invented by New York Man, Performs Feats and Wonderful Tricks.

An amusing and ingenious plaything is the acrobatic toy designed by a New York man and shown in the illustration. By merely squeezing the handles of this toy and then relaxing them, the figures at the top whirl about in the greatest abandonment. The framework of this plaything consists of wires bent and twisted to form two uprights, with a transverse member crossing the centers and with eyebolts at the top. A twisted cord is fastened to the eyebolts and the hands of the figures are fixed to the cord. By pressing the lower ends of the uprights together the cord is drawn taut and unwinds, turning the figures as it goes. When the pressure is released the cord winds and the figures turn back somersaults and handstands in place of the forward ones of a moment before. The limbs of the figures are jointed at shoulder, hip and knee, so that they fling about loosely and give the appearance of the most reckless and wonderful acrobatics.

WHERE COWS WEAR GOGGLES

Even So Dazzling Bright in Steppes of Russia Animals Compelled to Wear "Specs."

Many on looking at this picture will declare it is a "fake," and talk about a gullible public being taken advantage of. They are, however, wrong. Go to the steppes of Russia, which are covered with snow for six months of the year. There you will see cows grazing on the tufts of grass which crop above the snow, and they all wear "specs." Why? Simply because the sun is so dazzlingly bright despite the snow; and if these beasts did not wear smoke-colored glasses they would be blinded by the sun's rays.

CATS AND DOGS IN JERSEY

French Poodle Acts as Foster Mother to Maltese Kitten and Cares for Own Puppies.

Dogs must be different in New Jersey. It seems that nothing in New Jersey happens as things do in other parts of the country, and so it does not seem queer that a French poodle should be acting as foster mother to a Maltese kitten. Moreover, the poodle has three puppies of her own to take care of.

The dog's name is Fido. She looks like a roll of curly white cotton, with four legs and a little black nose, and she likes children. Her three puppies were only a week old when her master found a litter of kittens in the barn. Fido was along with him at the time, and she was greatly interested. She examined them all carefully, and then she took up one by the nape of the neck, just as a mother cat carries her children, and trotted across the yard to her own home. She put the kitten among the puppies and prepared to live happily, but the puppies were larger than the kitten and they crowded over it. That would never do, and so Fido got her foster child by the neck again and carried it back to the barn, where she made as good a nest as the little dogs had to lie in. Now Fido passes half her time with the puppies and the other half with the kitten.

Now for a Romp.

Jack, who was very much petted, and spoiled by everybody, had everything his heart could wish for. One day he was very lonely as his big brother was away and his "chum" across the street was sick. He went up to his mother and said, "Oh, dear, I wish I was two little dogs so I could play together."

thumb and index finger. Hold a match to the end of a few seconds, and your friend will drop the strip as if some body had knocked it out of his hand. The strip should be prepared in this way: Take a piece of paper 12 inches long and bend it in the middle; curl both sides by pulling them through your thumb and a knife held in the hand in such a way that they stand out like two clock springs. Place the strips together, holding the two ends between the thumb and index finger, and to try it on yourself, light the other end. As soon as the paper is burned through the two parts of the strip will spring back over your hand and you will drop them in a hurry.

THIRTEEN O'CLOCK AT MINES

Eccentric Duke of Bridgewater Had Unique Plan to Get Men to Work After Dinner.

The eccentric Duke of Bridgewater, who owned extensive coal mines near Manchester, and spent a large fortune in opening them out, and in constructing a canal to carry the coal to Manchester and Liverpool, took great pleasure in watching his men at work. He used to come every morning to the place where they were boring for coal, and stand looking on for hours at a time. He was often there when the bell rang at twelve o'clock, at which hour the men ceased work for their noonday meal and rest. But the men scarcely liked to give up work while the duke was watching them, and they continued on until he went away.

As it was not pleasant to have their dinner-hour deferred day after day in this way, the men tried to avoid working at the boring which the duke was accustomed to visit, and the duke's engineer, Brindley, had great difficulty in finding sufficient men for that particular work. Upon inquiry, he discovered the reason of it, and explained matters to the duke, who took care after that to walk away before the bell rang at noon.

The duke was a shrewd, observant man, and he did not fail to notice that his workmen ceased working the moment the bell began to strike twelve o'clock, but they were not so prompt in resuming work at one o'clock.

They came leisurely up one by one, some minutes after the clock had struck. When the duke inquired the reason of this, the men excused themselves by saying that while they heard the clock well enough when it struck twelve, they did not always hear it when it struck one. The duke thereupon had the clock made to strike thirteen at one o'clock, so that the men could no longer plead this excuse for their dilatoriness. This clock was still in use not many years ago, and may be even yet striking its thirteen strokes at one o'clock.

BOATMAN'S CALL WAS AWFUL

Children Thrown in Was Too Much for Little Miss of Five Who Wanted to Ride.

An alert little five-year-old was visiting a city park with her mother for the first time. She had noticed the beautiful red and white swan boats, as they passed through in the morning, and her mother had promised they should come back after the shopping was done and have a ride. Shortly after dinner they stood on the bridge over the lagoon, watching the boats below and listening to the cry of the barker as he tried to induce the passing crowds to patronize his swan boats.

But when her mother started toward the boat landing, little Edith declared, very vigorously that she did not want to go at all, and as her mother urged her, broke forth in tears.

This sudden fear was so different from her former eagerness that her mother could not understand it until she noticed the boatman's call.

He was crying, "Come along, come along—ride clear around the pond—only five cents for ladies and gents—children thrown in!"

Edith's Opportunity.

She was about ten years old and apparently very unhappy. A swollen face served to diagnose the case at a glance as an advanced stage of toothache. Over the door they entered was a sign, which being interpreted read "Doctor of Dental Surgery."

The mother led her to the operating chair and smoothed back her tousled hair as she laid her head in the little rest. Looking her straight in the eye, with finger poised for emphasis, the mother said: "Now, Edith, if you cry I'll never take you to a dentist again."—Lippincott's

TRIFLES OF THE WARDROBE

BLACK WITH COLORS

SOMBER NOTE IN FASHIONABLE GOWNS IS RELIEVED.

Transparent Materials Are Most in Favor—Dainty Dress of Thin Gained Wool Showing Golden Brown-Silk Lining.

At the passing of King Edward dressmakers immediately put their heads together to make black fashionable, and the somber note is more pronounced now than ever. It would be impossible to enumerate the textures being used for black costumes, but one thing is evident—the smartest of these gowns of velvety loveliness are expensive creations—is a bright vest of deep blue, vivid green or orange for a black coat suit of cloth, or serge or satin. A black satin coat suit is immensely smart, though it cannot possibly be becoming without these gay vests or some rich bit of color on the collar and cuffs. If a colored vest is used, however, a coat may only have a bit of satin in the same shade at the back of the collar, this embroidered like the vest if such trimming is used.

Transparent materials still hold first place for frocks of the most elegant sort, and under the textiles, very often, will be displayed the color note, this showing itself in a brief bit of embroidered heading or in the lining. King's blue and Egyptian blue, which is a shade of the utmost brilliancy, combined with a thin black material create a superb effect much exploited by French makers. If the color is in a wide band it is also the fad to put this across the bust of the waist and about the knees of the skirt. Again, an inky chiffon may be hung over a slip of dull gilt or silver gauze, with a superb gilt and black, or silver and black embroidery trimming, also veiled. One frock with the silver under effect had a tulle fringe six inches deep of silver and an embroidery band, far deeper, crossing the apron of the under slip and put on the waist lining in the same way. A smart idea for the woman of means—for of course these gowns of velvety loveliness are expensive creations—is a bright vest of deep blue, vivid green or orange for a black coat suit of cloth, or serge or satin. A black satin coat suit is immensely smart, though it cannot possibly be becoming without these gay vests or some rich bit of color on the collar and cuffs. If a colored vest is used, however, a coat may only have a bit of satin in the same shade at the back of the collar, this embroidered like the vest if such trimming is used.

The illustration shows a very dainty little dress with a girlish quality, which might be made as fine or as simple as one likes. Here the frock is of a black grained wool with a dull finish and thin enough to show a golden brown silk lining. The banding is of black velvet ribbon, and the little founcing on the bodice of the golden brown in chiffon. This unusual color note—that is unusual in this country, for the French are making a feature of the combination—is repeated in a dashing feather which holds up the side of the black beaver hat.

This dress, according to its materials, is perfectly suitable for either house or street wear, and while it responds to the touch of elegance the model is especially adapted to simple materials. The double founcing effect of the skirt is an old idea revived with ardor, house gowns innumerable and many street frocks displaying it, with the separations outlined as here with trimming or else with a plain tuck and hem finish.

Returning to the color note with black, pray let me emphasize the fact that a reckless indulgence in the combination is not regarded as either smart or in the best taste. The color used with black, unless it is in the lining of a garment, is the merest trifle—the little sparkle half revealed and half concealed which is the highest art in dress.

SEASON OF WHITE GLOVES MAKING THE CORNER LIGHT.

How a Long Mirror With Drapery and Flower Box Will Brighten a Dark Room.

There are several valuable hints which can be given as to how to introduce light into a naturally dark room. One plan is to use a long mirror for that purpose. By hanging the mirror in a dark corner, draping the top and sides with a pretty bit of tapestry and placing a flower-box in which will be "growing" artificial flowers, to be reflected in the glass, you have an attractive and ornamented piece of furniture. White framed pictures with glass over them are useful too for reflecting light and shedding it into the room. Many rooms are so badly lighted that it is impossible, unless one sits close against the window, to find a suitable place for reading or sewing, and this accounts for many a case of headache, weak eyes, wrinkles and other unbecoming things.

The Therapeutics of Joy

By RE. REV. SAMUEL FALLOWS, D. D., LL. D. Chicago, Ill.

The Bible is a wonderful therapeutic book. From the viewpoint of the new evangelism of health and happiness it is a new book. A flood of light is poured from its pages upon the surpassing problems of the spiritual regeneration of both the physical, mental and social life of man. These are the fundamental notes of the present mighty movement for the complete deliverance of the race from the thrall of baleful unrest and inhibiting disease.

The inspired word chimes in with the latest teachings of science regarding the great influence of joy upon the human frame. Joy imparts strength, for it belongs to a happy family which numbers cheerfulness, gladness, mirthfulness, contentment, pleasure and delight among its members. It excites the whole muscular system. It increases the activity of all the vital functions. It quickens the pulse, brightens the eye, flushes the cheek, and nerves the arm. It makes play of work. It removes fatigue, while stimulating all the powers of body and mind.

Darwin has told us in the expression of the emotions in "Man and Animals" that with animals of all kinds the requirement of almost all their pleasures, with the exception of those of warmth and rest, have long been associated with active movements, as in hunting in the search after food and other kindred things.

Joy, therefore, naturally shows itself in manifestations of strength. The nostrils are dilated, the angles of the mouth, the eyelids and the eyebrows are raised, all indicative of potential actual energy.

Joy acts powerfully upon all the digestive processes and works a transformation upon the jaundiced dyspeptic. It expands the lungs which have been contracted as if by the strong grip of a giant hand through sadness or disappointment. The sigh of melancholy is changed to songs of gladness. With the change comes the deepening and expanding of these vital organs and the oxygenating and enriching of the blood.

While we Americans are an active people, we are, as a rule, a joyless people. We act as though we were driven like slaves to our tasks. We take our pleasures on a boisterous run. Observant foreigners have noticed this rarity of joy upon our faces. They see, as a keen philosophic writer among us has seen, "lines of thought, and of care and of fear—money lines, shrewd, grasping lines, but how few happy lines." It would seem as if the rarest feeling that lightened our countenances was the genuine contentment of a loving, joyful soul.

It looks also as though our religion did not agree with us. We make it of weights instead of wings. We have gloomy thoughts of ourselves, of God, of our earthly existence, of our fellow men, of the life to come. We hang our harps upon the willows. We think this world to be a prison house. We say we cannot sing the songs of Zion in this strange land.

But this world is our home, our school, our workshop, our temple. We have been placed in it by almighty wisdom, power and love. We are the children of the Heavenly Father. And the joy of Jehovah is to be our strength—the joy that He is the ever watchful, ever providing, ever loving one—God over all blessed forevermore.

Too many of us, as some one has said, "think black is the color of heaven and the more we can make our faces the color of midnight, the more evidence we have of grace." What a supreme mistake we are making! True religion is sunshine and loveliness. The New Testament interprets and emphasizes the Old. The historical Christ, the real, human, divine Christ, not a Christ evaporated into nothingness by the wild speculations of an erratic philosopher, says: "These words have I spoken unto you that my joy might remain in you and that your joy might be full." This fullness of joy in the heart makes life and death radiant with brightness.

I visited the home of a bereaved Christian who had forgotten the Christian teachings of that New Testament to "rejoice in the Lord always." The room on the north side of the house had every window darkened with heavy shades. She was clothed in garments of blackest black. The lines of her face were drawn down. The room was a fearsome, chilling tomb. Nothing could be more antithetical of a Christian's attitude and environment.

Not until I had thrown the curtains up and let the blessed light stream in could I speak the words of comfort, hope and assurance. Think of such a Christian's understanding of the command of the light-bringing Christ, "Let your light shine." Her light was turned to Egyptian darkness, which "could be felt."

There is no light to stream over land or sea like the light of joy. It must pour itself out amid sorrows and trials and tribulations. It is the one alchemy that can turn the basest metals into pure gold.

We were not made to live continually in the transports of joy. An God carries on His work by average men and carries on the processes of nature in average ways, so He means that our joys shall be on median lines. Ecstasies are only for rare occasions.

His First Lesson in Economy.

"When I was a very small boy and a dime looked pretty big to me, I met John H. Farley—who had always been my good friend—on the street one June day," says Frank Harris.

"Frank," he said, "the Fourth of July is coming soon. You'll want some change then. Let me be your banker until then and you'll have some money for firecrackers, torpedoes, lemonade and peanuts."

"I emptied my pockets into his hand and every day thereafter until the Fourth I turned over to him my small earnings. When the day of days came around I had a fund that enabled me to celebrate in proper style, while many of my playmates were fat broke. It was my first lesson in thrift, and it was a good one. Hundreds of Cleveland people would be glad today to testify to the fact that when John H. Farley was a friend of a man or a boy he was a friend indeed."—Cleveland Leader.

Good Advice, but—

A traveler entered a railway carriage at a wayside station. The sole occupants of the compartment consisted of an old lady and her son, about twelve years old. Nothing of note occurred until the train steamed into the station at which tickets were collected. The woman, not having a ticket for the boy, requested him to "corrie doon."

The traveler intervened and suggested putting him under the seat.

"Man," said the excited woman, "it's as sharp as death; but there's two under the seat a ready!"

A FOOD DRINK.

Which Brings Daily Enjoyment.

A lady doctor writes: "Though busy hourly with my own affairs, I will not deny myself the pleasure of taking a few minutes to tell of my enjoyment daily obtained from my morning cup of Postum. It is a food beverage, not a poison like coffee."

"I began to use Postum eight years ago, not because I wanted to, but because coffee, which I dearly loved, made my nights long weary periods to be dreaded and unfitting me for business during the day."

"On the advice of a friend, I first tried Postum, making it carefully as directed on the package. As I had always used cream and no sugar, I mixed my Postum so. It looked good, was clear and fragrant, and it was a pleasure to see the cream color it as my Kentucky friend always wanted her coffee to look—like a new saddle."

"Then I tasted it critically, for I had tried many substitutes for coffee. I was pleased, yes, satisfied, with my Postum in taste and effect, and am yet, being a constant user of it all these years."

"I continually assure my friends and acquaintances that they will like it in place of coffee, and receive benefit from its use. I have gained weight, can sleep sound and am not nervous."

"There's a Reason."

WHIMS.

The city man who was summering in the country was lounging at a little station on an interurban line. Along came a seedy pilgrim walking up the track.
 "My friend," said the city man, "do you expect to hoof it to the next station?"
 "Sure."
 "How far is it?"
 "Bout six miles."
 "What's the fare from here there?"
 "Fifteen cents, I reckon."
 "Car coming pretty soon?"
 "Yep."
 "Well, just to gratify a whim, suppose you let me lend you money enough to pay your fare to that station."
 "That'll be all right, boss."
 "I haven't the change. Here's a quarter."
 "Thanks. Now, boss," said the seedy wayfarer, "jes' to gratify a whim, I'm goin' to hang on hooon' it. Good-by."

Why Not?

If "Mrs. Dr. Brown" is right, why would it not be fair to speak of "Mrs. Blahop White" or "Mrs. Judge McVair"?

Who Made the Spade.

Two blacksmiths were recently conversing as to which was the first trade in the world. One insisted that it must have been gardening, and quoted the following from Genesis: "When Adam was placed in the Garden of Eden he was told to take care of it and till it."
 "Ah, John!" retorted the other, who stood up for his own trade; "but who made the spade?"

Accounted For.

Belle—I wonder why that good-looking doctor avoids me so and is so cool to me when we meet?
 Nell—I think it is because Ned thoughtlessly told him what you said about him.
 Belle—What did I say that he didn't like?
 Nell—You said, don't you remember, that he had such killing ways.

Just Luck.

 "I know him. If he went up in a leaky balloon he'd be dead sure to tumble into some soft place."

Not That Kind.

Setting the Pace.
 "Henry," insisted the wife of the man who had made his first million, "why do you compel our fashionable butler to go around the house in his shirt sleeves?"
 "So I can enjoy some comfort in my shirt sleeves without shocking his lord mayor of London's sensibilities," elucidated her husband as he settled back for an after-dinner smoke.
 Why They Left.
 "Let me sing the old songs in your parlor," hoped the girl who imagined she was a prima donna.
 "Please don't," begged the landlady.
 "But your boarders will be carried away by my singing."
 "That's just the trouble. The last time you sang they were carried over to the next boarding house."
 A Hurry Call.
 "I'm looking for a doctor. Can you answer a hurry call?"
 "If it comes within my province," said the physician, "I'm a lung specialist, you know."
 "The boy's lungs seem to be all right. It's a green apple specialist want."

BABY'S SKIN TORTURE

"When our baby was seven weeks old he broke out with what we thought was heat, but which gradually grew worse. We called in a doctor. He said it was eczema and from that time we doctored six months with three of the best doctors in Atchison but he only got worse. His face, head and hands were a solid sore. There was no end to the suffering for him. We had to tie his little hands to keep him from scratching. He never knew what it was to sleep well from the time he took the disease until he was cured. He kept us awake all hours of the night and his health wasn't what you would call good. We tried everything but the right thing. Finally I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies and I am pleased to say we did not use all of them until he was cured. We have waited a year and a half to see if it would return but it never has and to-day his skin is clear and fair as it possibly could be. I hope Cuticura may save some one else's little ones suffering and also their pocket-books. John Leason, 1403 Atchison St., Atchison, Kan., Oct. 19, 1909."

Points to Good Futures.
 Seven poor children, four girls and three boys, all about ten years old, went to a nearby seashore resort, in charge of two women, for a day's outing. The funds for the picnic were provided by two boys who sell papers and who live in one of the two houses from which the excursion party was recruited. One of the women in charge of the children said that the boys had arranged the outing "of their own accord," and the remarkable thing is this: They are not good boys by any means and one of them is probably the naughtiest boy in the neighborhood. But we think that when boys do little things like this they will come out all right.—New York Tribune.

Widow Healy indulges in some plain speaking to her devoted but Timid Lover.
 The courting of the Widow Healy by Terence Corcoran was a tedious affair to every one in Magraw place, most of all to the widow herself, who tried various expedients to assist her timid admirer.

 "You go for a sojer!" cried the Widow Healy in mingled scorn and alarm. "A man that calls on a lone widow for two years and more, wid-out pluck enough to spake his mind, hasn't the makings of a drummer boy in him."

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and disarrangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for women's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

The Duration of Dreams.
Something regarding the duration of dreams can be gathered from this experience of a man who, on sitting down for a dental operation, took gas and dreamed. He saw himself finish his work, go to the club, leave for the station, run for the train and miss it. He returned to his club and reclined on a settee in the library. There he passed a miserable, restless night, getting gradually colder and colder as the fire died down, and with a pain gradually growing about his head and face from the hardness of his couch. Five o'clock in the morning came, and the steward roused him to say that the club must now be closed. The sleeper got up feeling very stiff—to find that the steward was his dentist, and that the night's adventures had lasted exactly 42 seconds.

For the Scandalmonger.

The Orleans museum has just been enriched with a curious relic of the past which some workmen in making excavations in the city came across. It is a stone representing a grinning figure, showing the teeth, the countenance being repellent enough. In this way the loquacious woman, the scandalmonger, was brought to her senses. The stone, suspended by a chain, was placed round her neck, and so accoutred she was compelled to walk round the town in which she lived. The stone is supposed to date about the sixteenth century.

The Doctor's Question.

Much Sickness Due to Bowel Disorders

A doctor's first question when consulted by a patient is, "Are your bowels regular?" He knows that 98 per cent of illness is attended with inactive bowels and torpid liver, and that condition must be removed gently and thoroughly before health can be restored.

Rexall Orderlies are a positive, pleasant and safe remedy for constipation and bowel disorders in general. We are so certain of their great curative value that we promise to return the purchaser's money in every case when they fail to produce entire satisfaction.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy, they act quietly, and have a soothing, strengthening, healing influence on the entire intestinal tract. They do not purge, gripe, or cause nausea, flatulence, excessive looseness, diarrhoea or other annoying effect. They are especially good for children, weak persons or old folks. Two sizes, 25 cents and 10 cents. Sold only at our store—The Rexall store, J. K. Pogue, Sullivan, Illinois.

"O Sharp" the Housekeeper's Note.
The late Sir Frederick Gore-Ouseley, professor of music at Oxford, was once going to call on a friend in London, and asked a fellow-musician the number in which he lived in a certain street. "I don't know the number," answered the other, "but the note of the housekeeper is O sharp." Sir Frederick went on, completely picked the housekeeper all down in the street until he came to the right one, when he rang the bell and went in.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75 cents. Take Hall's Catarrh Cure.

ANOTHER DISASTER.

ONE HUNDRED MINERS BURIED IN THE COAL MINE.

Another Cherry disaster may be a result of entombment of men in the Hartshorn mine at Danville Thursday. Shaft on fire and flames are raging so fiercely that rescuers are unable to reach the mouth.

It is reported that 150 men are entombed in the Hartshorn coal mine and that the mine is on fire, and the flames are raging with such fury and intensity that rescuing parties are unable to get near the shaft.

It is yet too early to tell whether any of the men in the mine are dead, but unless they are rescued within a short time, they all must perish.

Relatives of those entombed—mothers and children—are gathering at the mouth of the shaft, moaning and crying, fearing a like disaster as that which snuffed out the lives of several hundred miners at Cherry. Later reports are that all the entombed men made their escape, and the flames are now under control.

STOLEN AUTOMOBILE

Frank Hammond, banker, and a mechanic, of Hammond, Ind., were in Bement Sunday en route to Lovington to recover Mr. Hammond's automobile which had been stolen from his garage at Hammond the week previous. The Jads who stole the machine got as far as Lovington, where they tried to sell the machine, which was (an) Overland, at such a low price that suspicions were at once aroused. W. B. Shirey of Lovington, who thought of buying the machine, wired the Overland factory to investigate the affair. Mr. Hammond had notified the factory immediately upon discovery of the theft and they, in turn wired him of the inquiry from Lovington and he hurried there. The boys who were only about sixteen and twenty years of age had in the meantime sold the machine to Willis Howell of Lovington who had made a partial payment and was to wire the remainder, $665, to them at 481 State street, Chicago. That was the address at which they hoped to arrest the thieves. The automobile had been changed in every conceivable way to prevent discovery, license number and other numbers and speedometer been removed, and it certainly showed hard usage. One rear axle had been broken. However the engine number could not be effaced and that was Mr. Hammond's proof of ownership.

The gentlemen returned to Hammond, Ind., in the machine Sunday.

ROLL REVEALS 29 DEAD; 11 MISSING

FINAL CALL SHOWS NUMBER OF SAILORS DROWNED WHEN BARGE SWAMPED.

ONE OFFICER FACES TRIAL

Bodies Washed Far by Tide, Elude Police Grappling Hooks—Midshipman in Charge of Fatal Trip to Be Court-martialed.

New York City.—In an official statement authorized by Rear Admiral Charles N. Vreeland and given out by Capt. Thomas S. Rodgers, of the battleship New Hampshire, the number of the New Hampshire's sailors who are believed to have been on the battleship's sailing launch, when it filled in the Hudson Saturday night and who are still missing is set down at 29. Eleven members of Saturday's liberty party of the New Hampshire who were not known to have been in the sailing launch, but who are still missing, were noted in Captain Rodgers' list.

Captain Rodgers gave out his statement after the expiration of the last liberty party's shore leave. He said that the names published in the list of missing represented a careful process of elimination made in conjunction with the calling of the entire ship's roll.

Court Makes Inquiry

On board the flagship Louisiana Rear Admiral Vreeland convened a court in inquiry to determine the exact cause of the accident and place the responsibility. A number of the men who were on board the ill-fated boat told their stories, and a report of the findings of the court when completed will be forwarded to the navy department.

Various suggestions as to how the accident occurred were in circulation. The generally accepted one, however, was that the barge, heavily loaded with sailors and marines, returning from shore leave, was caught in the heavy swells from a passing steamboat. Rising for a moment like a cork, the barge then plunged into a trough between two waves, one of which broke over the side and swamped it.

New York.—With four dead, almost a score injured, several mortally, the sixth Vanderbilt cup race that was run on Long Island pled up the most appalling list of casualties that has attended any similar event in the history of motor car racing in this country. Harry Grant, driving a 120 horsepower Alco, won the cup.

There was not a cheer from the grand stand when the race finished, for while the three leaders were tearing around the course in the final dash from every side there came reports of dead and dying, and for two hours the air hung red with the clang of ambulance bells.

Delays Marriage

By HELEN OLDFIELD

It GENERALLY is agreed that young men nowadays show much less disposition to marry, above all to marry young, than was manifested by their fathers and grandfathers. Judging by observation, which is less misleading than statistics, young men, as a rule, do not tumble headlong into matrimony in the happy-go-lucky, cheerful, not to say reckless fashion which was comparatively common fifty or a hundred years ago.

"Different times, different manners," the changed conditions of social life have much to do with this change of heart. It seems to take the young man of today at the least ten years longer to screw his courage to the sticking point than it took his father so to do, and there is good reason to regard such hesitation merely as prudence upon his part.

In these degenerate days things sadly are altered and he, who would marry at twenty-five either must have a comfortable and assured income or be possessed of a sublime belief in himself and his bride-elect. He must be ready to forego most of the pleasures and luxuries which custom and popular habit have converted into almost necessities, and, alas, he will discover that the young wife of the present day expects much more and performs far less than did her mother thirty years or so ago.

She by no means will be content to sit at home evenings and darn stockings while her husband goes to the club, or, if he be the exemplary man his father was, stays at home also and reads aloud from some improving book.

It is because of all these things that the man of today drifts past the susceptible age and settles down into a steady-going, club haunting bachelor, who is content with his billiards and bridge, and has no inclination toward marriage.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that, when a man truly is in love, still more when passion seizes him in its grip, the question which exercises him is not whether he shall marry Her, but whether She will marry him. Then it is, for her sake, that he should weigh the pros and cons and remember that it is the part of true love to shield the beloved from privation.

Proper Care of Our Old People

By WELLS ANDREWS, M. D.
Chicago

The periods of advanced life from sixty to eighty, and of old age, from eighty years upward, may be considered together. It has been said that "when a man turns his toes out much in walking and treads upon the whole base of his foot, and is always stopping to look back, he is already old."

The decline of life is characterized in all humankind alike by an indurating condition of every tissue. The arteries harden, and nutrition proceeds more slowly. The muscles waste and fat lessens. The blood becomes paler, the skin dry, scaly and wrinkled. The heart up to an uncertain period grows larger and more muscular to meet the obstacles offered to the circulation, but finally it, too, ceases these efforts.

The dryness of the skin casts harder work upon the kidneys in eliminating water and increases the disposition to disease of these organs.

A prime necessity for old age is warmth. Nothing kills the aged so certainly as cold. It is of first hygienic importance, after seventy-five, that the individual should be loved and cared for. Those who live longest and enjoy the fullest measure of activity are those who do not overtax their stomachs when their teeth begin to fail them and who adapt their aliment to their enfeebled powers of mastication by having their food properly cooked for them. Stews, minces, meats boiled and afterward baked (cooked, that is, twice) are more easily digested; vegetables and fruits (not bananas) are better than overloading the stomach with milk and farinaceous foods.

Great attention should be paid to the functions of the bowels and of the skin. A hot bath once a week and a hot foot bath every night may be advised.

Further, their clothing should be warm and their bedrooms heated and well ventilated. A short nap in the afternoon is the natural habit of the aged and certainly advisable.

Farmers in Need of Good Helpmates

By DOW C. CONDON

Another shortage has bobbed up in the country. It's a shortage in farmers' wives. Without waiting for any outside assistance, farmers who are affected by this situation are casting about for relief, and the latest effort in this line is an appeal to the humane societies in the cities. The Manneapolis Humane society recently has received several letters from farmers seeking wives. One of the most remarkable of these missives comes from a young man in Wisconsin, who declares he owns a 160-acre farm but has been unable to secure a suitable wife. And of course a farm is not a farm without a farmer's wife. This enterprising tiller of the soil says he is thirty-five years old, admits he is good looking, and believes he would make an ideal husband for a factory girl between the ages of eighteen and twenty-six.

Not only that, but he is willing to share the income from a productive tract of 160 acres with any good looking and congenial woman who would like to get "back to the farm."

Here is an opportunity for the practical application of the return-to-the-land idea. Officers of the humane societies, however, are not especially anxious to shoulder this new task of matchmaking between the city and the country, and the situation suggests the organization of an official matrimonial bureau.

Uncle Sam in the role of Cupid would be a new one. But if the problem of securing a larger country population is as important as some believe it is, it is apparent that farm recruits must be found in some way, and possibly an honest matrimonial bureau would help.

Long-distance matchmaking for the farmer is not a new idea by any means, and there are plenty of willing hands to represent either party in an effort of this kind for a small fee.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

It is one of the foundation principles of agriculture that no system can long be followed at a profit which does not make provision for returning to the land in some form the elements of fertility taken from it by crops. So, no system of farming has ever been successful for any great length of time in any climate which does not include the keeping of live stock as one of its important features.

The special purpose character of the Dorset Horns lies in the fact that ewes will breed at any season of the year, but they are very prolific, are decidedly heavy milkers, give birth to unusually strong and vigorous lambs, care for them well, and that their lambs are able and ready to use grain at a very young age.

No feed produces better milk or more of it than good June pasture. Next to this is good soiling crops and third in the list is ensilage. As the first and second of these are available for only short seasons, the silo is worthy of consideration as the best year round substitute.

One of the most difficult things for the beginner in poultry raising is to cull closely. A bird looks like a bird to him and the chances are that he will keep some that are not profitable merely because it does not seem right to eat them.

Keep fine grit and charcoal where the chicks can have access to it at all times. They must have the grit, and while they can get along without the charcoal, they will do a great deal better if they have it. It aids digestion and promotes health.

Pigs need some roughage for the winter. A few dry rods, put up in a pile now and thrown into the pens during the winter, will be greatly relished and will help to keep the digestion of the pigs in good shape.

Dairymen no longer rely upon the average of the herd as a basis of computing their profits, but with proper utensils and accurate records calculate the producing ability of each individual in the herd.

A statement just to hand shows that the value of frozen meats imported by Canada from Australia grew over 50 per cent. from 1908 to 1909 and that in the latter year the trade amounted to $87,235.

No one who attempts to raise two litters of pigs in one year from a herd of brood sows should expect them to do so successfully and profitably unless they are given the very best of care.

Requiring almost the same care and using feed almost identical, chickens and squabs should be inseparable. With a large flock of hens producing winter eggs, and a number of squabs at a time when young chickens are not obtainable, the poultryman has practically no competition. The supply in most instances is so limited and the demand so great that the young squabs are sold at the best price coming after them to be sure of getting them.

Brood sows on the average farm may be almost entirely supported by waste products. And those same waste products form the best sort of balanced ration. Skim milk, buttermilk, windfall apples, parings, a run in the orchard, with shads, and after the litters are weaned and growing nicely, a run in the stubble to clean up every kernel of grain, and in the clover fields after hay has been cut.

A hen that lays 180 eggs in a year will earn for her owner a certain net profit of one dollar and twenty-five cents, and if he is careful about marketing his profit may be increased by an additional 50 cents, so that if he wants to increase his income by $250 or $500 it is only necessary for him to keep 200 or 400 hens.

If you can do no better by way of making troughs for the sheep to eat their grain out of, you can nail two boards together in the shape of a V, with a couple of short pieces across the ends to keep them right side up. This will save much grain, and grain is money this year.

Salting the cows is most important, especially when they are on green grass. About an ounce per day is required by each cow and this is better given regularly and in small quantities than only occasionally and in large lots.

With hired help almost impossible to get at any price, it would seem that all farmers would hesitate about taking more land upon themselves for cultivation, for a poorly-cared for crop is surely a failure, but they plunge in regardless of consequences.

Some breeders claim that sex can be selected from which males and females can be hatched at will. Old hens mated with cockerels produce about 75 per cent. pullets, while mating pullets with old cocks give a greater per cent. of cockerels.

Did your cows fall off in their milk while passing from summer to winter conditions? This is a trying period and the cow that does ever it all right will, with normal conditions, be safe for a good flow till spring.

Spillflowers are usually grown for the seeds, and the stalks are allowed to go to waste. They contain so large a percentage of woody fiber when mature that they would be of no value for feeding purposes.

It will pay to market old and useless hens now, rather than carry them through the molt which begins this month. Many of them will not lay again until spring and will not pay their keep.

There are two great and common mistakes in landscape gardening. One is to make a garden without any flowers in it; the other is to have a mass of plants assembled without any design.

If you wish to improve the quality of your flock without serious expense the best thing to do is to cull out a pen of the choicest birds and hatch their eggs.

Very often when the large farm has been obtained at the expense of the home, so much of it goes to waste for the want of cultivation—thorough cultivation—that it is really unprofitable.

Now that the hatching season is over, all the male birds should be taken away from the hens. Your chances for fresher eggs and more of them will be increased.

Manure is just what is needed to bring up the yields and to increase the water-holding capacity of our soil, for without water no amount of fertility is of any avail.

THE AMERICAN HOME

W. A. RADFORD EDITOR

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 194 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

It has been said it is a very commendable fact that rapid advancement has been made by all connected with building operations toward better and improved construction methods, but at that there are certain types which are not given the amount of attention that they should receive. The element of the cost of materials is entering more and more into the problem. Lumber is growing scarcer by the process of natural consumption, and lately we have witnessed the enormous destruction of thousands of square miles of forests by fire. This does not tend to lower prices for materials.

Cement stucco as a finish for the exterior seems to be the salvation of the home builder. There have been some failures with stucco, but not through the fault of the material, but because of ignorance in the proper manner of handling it. So much depends upon the selection of proper materials, thorough mixing, the proper amount of water and the proper application that only skilled mechanics should be employed. There has been the whole trouble. A novice cannot do good cement work. The material involves chemical action that only the mechanic with an understanding of it can handle. This truth should not be

house. The additional feature that a stucco house requires no painting except on the trim adds to its advantages. The house we show here is a stucco house to be finished with Portland cement mortar. It is 20 feet, six inches wide and is 30 feet long. The design is simple and well adapted to the man of moderate means. This house should be constructed on a large lot that will admit of lawn decorations; shrubs and trees and possibly a formal garden. One of the attractions of this house is the living room, which takes the place of the parlor of the old style house. There is a window seat in the front and a similar attraction is provided in the dining room. The kitchen is of ample size and the pantry is arranged so that the refrigerator can be filled without coming into the house. Every woman will be pleased with the second floor, and her eye will light on the sewing room the first thing. When this room not in use, it can be used as a play room for the children. There are two bedrooms, each provided with a closet, and a bathroom. There is also a linen closet in the hall.

much success. The asbestos fiber has a tendency to hold the water which is used to mix the concrete mass longer, thus giving the Portland cement ample opportunity to set. In this way stucco mixes are possible that are more uniform in color and less liable to crack, as the fiber furnishes additional bond. There is one point which is frequently lost sight of and that is that it is possible to make cement slab that can be exposed to the elements for an indefinite time without discoloration. Therefore, should cracks develop in a well-constructed stucco work it can be invariably traced to a setting or

TYPIST IS OF ROYAL BLOOD

Third Lady of England Proves Her Interest in the Writing Machine to Be Real.

London.—Even the daughters of royalty do not scorn knowledge of useful occupations. Often we read of pretty and youthful princesses who have begun the study of some art, perhaps along domestic lines, cookery or sewing, or have finished a course in nursing, or can show a certificate testifying to their ability in some business line. The daughters of the late King Christian of Denmark, namely the Queen mother of England, the Dowager Empress of Russia and the Duchess of Cumberland, were taught to make all their own clothes and, furthermore, to trim their hats. The Empress of Germany holds that a knowledge of children, kitchen and church is to be preferred before all other accomplishments. The latest student of royal blood in the business world is the 13-year-old daughter of King George, Princess Victoria Alexandra. This little lady, the only daughter in a family of six, became much interested in the typewriters in daily use where she resided. There are two lady typists attached to the secretarial staff of Marlborough house, which has been the King's residence, and finally the young princess declared her enthusiasm and asked one of them to give her the necessary instruction that she might operate a typewriter. She has learned to use the machine at a fair rate of speed.

QUEER OLD HAND-MILL FOUND

"Quern," as This Implement is Called, First Used in America by the Indians.

Reading, Pa.—Ever since the Israelites gathered manna, ground it in mills, or beat it in mortars, or since the time the Hebrews grew corn and the Romans pounded the wheat they grew, we have had in history the quern and nether millstones. In primitive times the method of grinding and pounding cereals was all done by querns. The housewives of Scotland, who had too far to go to the millstone water mills, ground their oats and corn by hand with those little stone mills, known as querns, and which were from one foot to one and one-half feet in diameter.

In American history the quern was the first mill that the Indians used to grind their Indian corn. The photos of the quern, shown in this article, are those of the only Indian mill, still in existence in Pennsylvania, and they were picked up on a cemetery lot in a cemetery at Lobsachville, Pa., in the Oley valley, where the Indians had a number of their villages. No one seemed to recognize the historic value of the little stones, thousands viewing them, with the simple remark, "queer stones," passing on and never thinking about them any more. Some time ago a number of historians happened to hunt old inscriptions on tombstones several centuries old in this cemetery, when they accidentally came across the curious quern. Lifting the same apart, they recognized this primitive Indian mill. The quern is now in the rooms of the Berks County Historical society here, where it is one of the most important historical relics on exhibition.

Quern Ready for Work.

The quern is in two parts, and weighs seventy-five pounds. The lower stone is hollowed out to a depth of about four inches in which the upper or grinder part of the quern fits. Through the center of the grinder a round hole is drilled, and through this opening the operator of the quern dropped the corn, feeding the mill as fast as it would grind it. On each side of this hole was a smaller hole in which a handle, made either of wood, stone or iron, fitted, and by pushing the handles in a half circle, the grinding operation was completed.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was soreness in my right side. In a short time a bunch came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. It kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote to you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away."—Mrs. R. B. ## New They Sleep Indoors.

George H. Beattie, jeweler in the old Arcade, and L. E. Ralston, auditor of the News, have jointly and severally decided that sleeping out in the open isn't all that it has been declared to be, says the Cleveland Leader. They were both in a deep snooze out at the Beattie farm, near Chagrin Falls, the other night, when a runaway team from the county fair city turned into the lane leading up to the Beattie estate and came along at full speed. Found asleep, but dreaming of impending danger, Ralston rolled out of his cot toward the north, and Beattie from his cot toward the south. The runaway horses dashed between the sleepers, upsetting everything in the way, but missing Beattie and Ralston by margins too narrow to be measured. Since that night Ralston has slept in his town house and Beattie has found shelter under the ample roof of his house on his big plantation.

A Question. Vera (eight years old)—What does transatlantic mean, mother? Mother—Across the Atlantic, of course; but you mustn't bother me. Vera—Does "trans" always mean across? Mother—I suppose it does. Now, if you don't stop bothering me with your questions I shall send you right to bed. Vera (after a few minutes' silence)—Then does transparent mean a cross parent?—Ideas.

Federal officers in New York are making strenuous efforts to locate some part of the $5,000,000 the curb brokerage firm of H. B. Scheffels & Co. is said to have gotten from its customers on its many western mining schemes.

Fred C. Wahlenmeyer, aged 26, is under arrest, caught a few minutes after placing a bomb beside the beautiful home of Mrs. Potter Palmer in Chicago. He had slashed his clothes in shreds with a butcher knife which pierced his skin, supposedly to bear out a story that he had seen another man placing the bomb and had fought with him to prevent it.

Another victim was marked against the "Forty Thieves" when a man believed to be John McDoyle, a western miner, was shot through the heart in New York. "Kid" Seery, a member of the gang, was arrested and admitted the killing.

A sensation was created in Mormon circles when the twelve apostles of the church announced that Israel Barlow, of Woodcross, Utah, one of the leading members of the Mormon church, had been excommunicated for polygamy. The action is believed to be the beginning of a campaign to exterminate plural marriages from the church, because of charges made by Eastern magazines.

Governor Carroll of Iowa is not guilty of the charge of criminally libeling John Cowine. This is the verdict of the jury. The verdict was expected, as it was generally conceded the state had failed to make a case.

Governor Charles N. Haskell of Oklahoma, Walter Eaton, W. T. Hutchings and C. W. Turner were freed from all charges of conspiracy to defraud the government when Presiding Judge Marshall of the United States district court in McAlester dismissed the case.

Alimony in $145,000 was awarded to Mrs. Badden Talcott in the circuit court in South Bend, Ind., after a divorce had been granted to her. She and her husband had been married 44 years. Mrs. Talcott charged cruelty and infidelity. Talcott's estate is valued at $400,000.

What probably is the most radical platform accepted in a generation by a Republican convention was adopted in Wisconsin. The document is about four thousand words in length and touches with no uncertain hand on a great variety of subjects. It is generally designated as a radically progressive pronouncement. No mention of the national administration was made save to disparage.

As a result of Theodore Roosevelt's embroglio with the Vatican during his visit in Rome last spring, three Catholic prelates—an archbishop and two bishops—have refused to sit at the table with the former president when he is a guest of honor at a banquet to be given by the Knights of Columbus in Peoria, October 12.

The body of Elmer E. Bryson, long a prominent citizen of Omaha, was found in one of the city parks. Death is attributed to poison. The police believe Mr. Bryson killed himself because of financial losses.

Injuries to the skull of Sam K. McIlhenry, Jr., who died in New Orleans Friday night, caused an autopsy to be performed, and there is reason to believe that McIlhenry was murdered.

Walter R. Brookings, aviator, will attempt a flight with a Wright brothers' aeroplane from Chicago to Springfield, Ill., Thursday, in an effort to win a $10,000 purse offered by the Chicago Record-Herald for such a feat.

George Luther Brown, Thomas Baird and George T. Bascaster, three former directors of the defunct Citizens and Farmers' State bank of Arkansas City, Kan., were arrested, charged with receiving deposits when they knew the bank was insolvent.

According to Francis E. Ward, general manager of the Burlington, who was on the stand at the hearing of the Western rate case at Chicago, the value of the road is near $30,000,000. Ward insisted the Burlington was worth $10,000,000 more than it was capitalized for.

A boiler bursting in the engine of a Northern Pacific freight train at Cheater, Mont., hurled the locomotive and cars over an embankment. Fireman Starr Roberts was killed and Engineer Walter Owens and Brake-man C. E. Connors seriously injured.

A bold attempt was made to rob the bank of McClelland, Iowa. A man giving the name of Tom Kirby, whose home is said to be at Oakland, Iowa, entered the bank and, presenting a revolver, demanded that the cashier, Walter Julius, turn over the bank's cash. Instead, Julius opened fire. Both men emptied their revolvers, and the robber was slightly wounded in the arm. Julius was not hurt.

O. F. Skinner of Indianapolis, Ind., organizer of the Royal Order of Mopsed, died at a hospital in Temple, Tex., where he underwent an operation several days ago.

A state convention that will go down in history as one of the most remarkable in the history of the Democratic party in New York closed by nominating John A. Dix, chairman of the party's state committee and a wealthy Washington county business man, to run on a progressive platform of the widest type.

Leah A. Waterman of Providence, R. I., was nominated for governor on the Democratic ticket. Judge Arthur Brown of the United States circuit court was endorsed as candidate for the United States senate to succeed Aldrich.

Aviator Walter Brookings alighted gracefully in the fair grounds in Springfield, Ill., seven hours and 12 minutes out of Chicago, after having sailed his Wright biplane the 1924 miles with two stops. They were at Gilman, Ill., 80 miles from Chicago, and at Mount Pulaski, Ill., 163 miles from Chicago.

Representative H. J. C. Beckmeyer, on the witness stand before the Lorimer investigating committee, in Chicago, testified that he received $1,000 after he had voted for Senator Lorimer and that the money was paid to him because of his vote for the junior senator from Illinois.

"Suppress disturbances without mercy," was Police Commissioner von Jagow's order in Berlin, Germany. The police followed out their instructions to the letter. They rode down and sabred mercilessly wherever a small group of people had gathered in the district of Moabit. For two days this district had been the scene of riots, the like of which had not been witnessed in Berlin for many a day.

Bodies, Washed Far by Tide, Eclude Police Grappling Hooks—Midshipman in Charge of Fatal Trip to Be Courtmartialed.

New York City.—In an official statement authorized by Rear Admiral Charles N. Vreeland and given out by Capt. Thomas S. Rodgers of the battleship New Hampshire, the number of the New Hampshire's sailors who are believed to have been on the battleship's sailing launch, when it filled in the Hudson Saturday night and who are still missing is set down at 29. Eleven members of Saturday's liberty party off the New Hampshire who were not known to have been in the sailing launch, but who are still missing, were noted in Captain Rodgers' list.

Captain Rodgers gave out his statement after the expiration of the last liberty party's shore leave. He said that the names published in the list of missing represented a careful process of elimination made in conjunction with the calling of the entire ship's roll.

Court Makes Inquiry: On board the flagship Louisiana Rear Admiral Vreeland convened a court in inquiry to determine the exact cause of the accident and place the responsibility. A number of the men who were on board the ill-fated boat told their stories, and a report of the findings of the court when completed will be forwarded to the navy department.

Various suggestions as to how the accident occurred were in circulation. The generally accepted one, however, was that the barge, heavily loaded with sailors and marines, returning from shore leave, was caught in the heavy swells from a passing steamboat. Rising for a moment like a cork, the barge then plunged into a trough between two waves, one of which broke over the side and swamped it.

Delays Marriage

Young Man of Present Day Lacks Courage

By HELEN OLDFIELD

IT GENERALLY is agreed that young men nowadays show much less disposition to marry, above all to marry young, than was manifested by their fathers and grandfathers. Judging by observation, which is less misleading than statistics, young men, as a rule, do not tumble headlong into matrimony in the happy-go-lucky, cheerful, not to say reckless fashion which was comparatively common fifty or a hundred years ago.

"Different times, different manners," the changed conditions of social life have much to do with this change of heart. It seems to take the young man of today at the least ten years longer to screw his courage to the sticking point than it took his father so to do, and there is good reason to regard such hesitation merely as prudence upon his part.

In these degenerate days things sadly are altered and he who would marry at twenty-five either must have a comfortable and assured income, or be possessed of a sublime belief in himself and his bride-elect. He must be ready to forego most of the pleasures and luxuries which custom and popular habit have converted into almost necessities, and, alas, he will discover that the young wife of the present day expects much more and performs far less than did her mother thirty years or so ago.

She by no means will be content to sit at home evenings and darn stockings while her husband goes to the club, or, if he be the exemplary man his father was, stays at home also and reads aloud from some improving book.

It is because of all these things that the man of today drifts past the susceptible age and settles down into a steady-going, club haunting bachelor, who is content with his billiards and bridge, and has no inclination toward marriage.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that when a man truly is in love, still more when passion seizes him in its grip, the question which exercises him is not whether he shall marry her, but whether she will marry him. Then it is, for her sake, that he should weigh the pros and cons and remember that it is the part of true love to shield the beloved from privation.

Proper Care of Our Old People
By WELLS ANDREWS, M. D.
Chicago

The periods of advanced life from sixty to eighty, and of old age, from eighty years upward, may be considered together. It has been said that "when a man turns his toes out much in walking and tredds upon the whole base of his foot, and is always stopping to look back, he is already old."

The decline of life is characterized in all humankind alike by an indurating condition of every tissue. The arteries harden and nutrition proceeds more slowly. The muscles waste and fat lessens. The blood becomes paler, the skin dry, sallow and wrinkled. The heart up to an uncertain period grows larger and more muscular to meet the obstacles offered to the circulation, but finally it, too, ceases these efforts.

The dryness of the skin casts harder work upon the kidneys in eliminating water and increases the disposition to disease of these organs.

A prime necessity for old age is warmth. Nothing kills the aged so certainly as cold. It is of first hygienic importance, after seventy-five, that the individual should be loved and cared for. Those who live longest and enjoy the fullest measure of activity are those who do not overtax their stomachs when their teeth begin to fail them and who adapt their aliment to their enfeebled powers of mastication by having their food properly cooked for them. Stews, minces, meats boiled and afterward baked (cooked, that is, twice) are more easily digested; vegetables and fruits (not bananas) are better than overloading the stomach with milk and farinaceous foods.

Great attention should be paid to the functions of the bowels and of the skin. A hot bath once a week and a hot foot bath every night may be advised.

Further, their clothing should be warm and their bedrooms heated and well ventilated. A short nap in the afternoon is the natural habit of the aged and certainly advisable.

Farmers in Need of Good Helpmates
By DOW G. CONGDON

Another shortage has bobbed up in the country. It's a shortage in farmers' wives.

Without waiting for any outside assistance, farmers who are affected by this situation are casting about for relief, and the latest effort in this line is an appeal to the humane societies in the cities. The Manneapolis Humane society recently has received several letters from farmers seeking wives. One of the most remarkable of these missives comes from a young man in Wisconsin, who declares he owns a 160-acre farm but has been unable to secure a suitable wife. And of course a farm is not a farm without a farmer's wife. This enterprising tiller of the soil says he is thirty-five years old, admits he is good looking, and believes he would make an ideal husband for a factory girl between the ages of eighteen and twenty-six.

Not only that, but he is willing to share the income from a productive tract of 160 acres with any good looking and congenial woman who would like to get "back to the farm."

Here is an opportunity for the practical application of the return-to-the-land idea. Officers of the humane societies, however, are not especially anxious to shoulder this new task of matchmaking between the city and the country, and the situation suggests the organization of an official matrimonial bureau.

Uncle Sam in the role of Cupid would be a new one. But if the problem of securing a larger country population is as important as seems believe it is, it is apparent that farm recruits must be found in some way, and possibly an honest matrimonial bureau would help.

Long-distance matchmaking for the farmer is not a new idea by any means, and there are plenty of willing hands to represent either party in an affair of this kind for a small fee.

NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

It is one of the foundation principles of agriculture that no system can long be followed at a profit which does not make provision for returning to the land in some form the elements of fertility taken from it by crops. So, no system of farming has ever been successful for any great length of time in any climate which does not include the keeping of live stock as one of its important features.

The special purpose character of the Dorset Horns lies in the fact that ewes will breed at any season of the year, but they are very prolific, are decidedly heavy milkers, give birth to unusually strong and vigorous lambs; care for them well, and that their lambs are able and ready to use grain at a very young age.

No feed produces better milk or more of it than good June pasture. Next to this is good soiling crops and third in the list is ensilage. As the first and second of these are available for only short seasons, the silo is worthy of consideration as the best year round substitute.

One of the most difficult things for the beginner in poultry raising is to cull closely. A bird looks like a bird to him and the chances are that he will keep some that are not profitable merely because it does not seem right to eat them.

Keep fine grit and charcoal where the chicks can have access to it at all times. They must have the grit, and while they can get along without the charcoal, they will do a great deal better if they have it. It aids digestion and promotes health.

Pigs need some roughage for the winter. A few dry sows, put up in a pile now and thrown into the pens during the winter, will be greatly refreshed and will help to keep the digestion of the pigs in good shape.

Sunflowers are usually grown for the seeds, and the stalks are allowed to go to waste. They contain so large a percentage of woody fiber when mature that they would be of no value for feeding purposes.

It will pay to market old and useless hens now, rather than carry them through the molt which begins this month. Many of them will not lay again until spring and will not pay their keep.

There are two great and common mistakes in landscape gardening. One is to make a garden without any flowers in it; the other is to have a mess of plants assembled without any design.

If you wish to improve the quality of your flock without serious expense the best thing to do is to cull out a pen of the choicest birds and hatch their eggs.

Very often when the large farm has been obtained at the expense of waste for the want of cultivation—thorough cultivation—that it is really unprofitable.

Now that the hatching season is over, all the male birds should be taken away from the hens. Your chances for fresher eggs and more of them will be increased.

Manure is just what is needed to bring up the yields and to increase the water-holding capacity of our soil, for without water no amount of fertility is of any avail.

Don't forget the supply of sharp gravel or grit even in the fall; fowls can not always pick up a suitable supply even when on a range and the weather is good.

If a little rape seed is sprinkled in with the rye a variety of feed will be provided and the hogs will do even better than upon rye alone.

Pleasant surroundings and modern conveniences, easily obtainable, will go a long way in keeping the boys and girls on the farm.

A hog should have some grain every day of its life although hogs cannot be raised and fattened on grain alone at a profit.

The dairy heifer is sure to be a profitable product of the farm as long as the demand for dairy cows continues.

In applying the spray to low growing trees and bushes make the application when the dew is on the plants.

All the nest boxes should be kept perfectly clean to give the little chicks an unhampered start in life.

The trouble with most of our farms is too little capital to the acre.

Requiring almost the same care and using feed almost identical, chickens and squabs should be inseparable. With a large flock of hens producing winter eggs, and a number of squabs at a time when young chickens are not obtainable, the poultryman has practically no competition. The supply in most instances is so limited and the demand so great that the young squabs are sold at the nest, people coming after them to be sure of getting them.

Brood sows on the average farm may be almost entirely supported by waste products. And those same waste products form the best sort of balanced ration. Skim milk, buttermilk, windfall apples, parings, a run in the orchard, with shade, and after the litters are weaned and growing nicely, a run in the stubble to clean up every kernel of grain, and in the clover fields after hay has been cut.

A hen that lays 180 eggs in a year will earn for her owner a certain net profit of one dollar and twenty-five cents, and if he is careful about marketing his profit may be increased by an additional 50 cents, so that if he wants to increase his income by $250 or $500 it is only necessary for him to keep 300 or 400 hens.

If you can do no better by way of making troughs for the sheep to eat their grain out of, you can nail two boards together in the shape of a V, with a couple of short pieces across the ends to keep them right side up. This will save much grain, and grain is money this year.

Salting the cows is most important, especially when they are on green grass. About an ounce per day is required by each cow and this is better given regularly and in small quantities than only occasionally and in large lots.

With hired help almost impossible to get at any price, it would seem that all farmers would hesitate about taking more land upon themselves for cultivation, for a poorly-cared for crop is surely a failure, but they plunge in regardless of consequences.

Some breeders claim that sex can be selected from which males and females can be hatched at will. Old hens mated with cockerels produce about 75 per cent. pullets, while mating pullets with old cocks give a greater per cent. of cockerels.

Did your cows fall off in their milk while passing from summer to winter conditions? This is a trying period and the sow that tides over it all right will, with normal conditions, be safe for a good flow till spring.

Dairy men no longer rely upon the average of the herd as a basis of computing their profits, but with proper utensils and accurate records calculate the producing ability of each individual in the herd.

A statement just to hand shows that the value of frozen meats imported by Canada from Australia grew over 50 per cent. from 1908 to 1909 and that in the latter year the trade amounted to $87,235.

No one who attempts to raise two litters of pigs in one year from a herd of brood sows should expect them to do so successfully and profitably unless they are given the very best of care.

The good cow is an industrious creature, but she is also a ruminating one and requires time and should have comfort in which to do her end chewing.

No combination of factors is more conducive to prosperity, wealth, fertile farms and good homes than are well bred dairy cattle, capacious silos and productive alfalfa fields.

New corn from the fields is a great treat to poultry, if not overfed. Take a solid block and a corn knife and cut the corn in half-inch sections, and the fowls will do the rest.

There can be but little question about the advisability of feeding the dairy cow on pasture this year. If she does not get feed in the barn she is apt to starve.

There is no big money in sheep unless the operator understands his business thoroughly and it is no sphere for the novice these days.

If the calves must be kept up during the summer be sure to protect them from the flies and give plenty of ventilation all of the time.

A great many progressive poultrymen are beginning to realize the value of crushed charcoal as a conditioner for their stock.

Take care of the boards when blanching celery. They should never be used as walks in the field.

Alfalfa ground may be pastured if not overstocked. The third crop in particular may be profitably grazed by sheep.

Green corn need not be a dangerous feed. If used right it is one of the best things that can be given the hogs.

The calf pens must be scrupulously clean if the youngsters would be kept in a healthy, thrifty condition.

April and May hatched chicks give us best results.

W. A. RADFORD EDITOR

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 294 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

It has been said it is a very commendable fact that rapid advancement has been made by all connected with building operations toward better and improved construction methods, but at that there are certain types which are not given the amount of attention that they should receive. The element of the cost of materials is entering more and more into the problem. Lumber is growing scarcer by the process of natural consumption, and lately we have witnessed the enormous destruction of thousands of square miles of forests by fire. This does not tend to lower prices for materials.

Cement stucco as a finish for the exterior seems to be the salvation of the home builder. There have been some failures with stucco, but not through the fault of the material, but because of ignorance in the proper manner of handling it. So much depends upon the selection of proper materials, thorough mixing, the proper amount of water and the proper application that only skilled mechanics should be employed. There has been the whole trouble. A novice cannot do good cement work. The material involves chemical action that only the mechanic with an understanding of it can handle. This truth should not be the building or the shrinking of the frame. By insisting on thicker stucco walls the liability of cracks is reduced to a minimum. The price of lumber is steadily advancing and the desire for fireproof exteriors, especially in the suburban districts, as well as artistic effects that may be obtained from stucco, are creating a universal demand for this type of house. The additional feature that a stucco house requires no painting except on the trim adds to its advantages.

The house we show here is a stucco forgotten by anyone who is going to have a stucco house.

A stucco house costs about the same as a frame house now and certainly is much more imposing and substantial in appearance. Some trouble has arisen from a lack of uniformity in the color of Portland cement finishes. This is due also to ignorance on the part of the workman. He does not use the same amount of water in each batch. The result will be a variation in the color, or a mottled appearance. Trouble arises also from the use of dirty sand. Clean sand will make a uniform color with thorough mixing and a uniformity in the amount of water in the batches. If there is any loam in the sand or other foreign substance there will be trouble. The use of asbestos fiber and rock to take the place of sand is meeting with much success. The asbestos fiber has a tendency to hold the water which is used to mix the concrete mass longer, thus giving the Portland cement ample opportunity to set. In this way stucco mixes are possible that are more uniform in color and less liable to crack, as the fiber furnishes additional bond. There is one point which is frequently lost sight of and that is that it is possible to make cement slab that can be exposed to the elements for an indefinite time without discoloration. Therefore, should cracks develop in a well constructed stucco work it can be invariably traced to a settling of Small Weather Prophet. Several of the schoolgirl friends of little Miss Elinor Farnham were at a party one afternoon not long ago. Some plans were being talked over for the evening.

"No use planning anything for out of doors," said little Miss Farnham, "for it's going to rain."

"Going to rain!" exclaimed the other girls in chorus. "How do you know?"

"Because this fudge won't fudge," was the reply as she bent over the boiling sweetness.

The other girls laughed, but their teacher, who was present as a guest, said: "Elinor is right. There is no surer sign of rain than the refusal of fudge to fudge."

And that night there was a hard downpour lasting an hour.

An Omnivorous Insect. There is a little, shaggy, black-and-tan insect, about an eighth of an inch long, that eats everything under the sun which is not disturbed every day. It has to be surprised at its work like a burglar. In most countries ivy brushes are pretty safe from insects; in Egypt this little terror eats the ivy and eats the bristles; it eats your toothbrush and eats your tooth-pick; it eats the wool with which you are going to mend your husband's socks—the cards as well as the wool; it eats the handles of your knives and forks; it rejects nothing but glass and china and metal.

TYPIST IS OF ROYAL BLOOD

Third Lady of England Proves Her Interest in the Writing Machine to Be Real.

London.—Even the daughters of royalty do not scorn knowledge of useful occupations. Often we read of pretty and youthful princesses who have begun the study of some art, perhaps along domestic lines, cooking or sewing, or have finished a course in nursing, or can show a certificate testifying to their ability in some business line. The daughters of the late King Christian of Denmark, namely the Queen mother of England, the Dowager Empress of Russia and the Duchess of Cumberland, were taught to make all their own clothes and furthermore, to trim their hats. The Empress of Germany holds that a knowledge of children, kitchen and church is to be preferred before all other accomplishments.

The latest student of royal blood in the business world is the 13-year-old daughter of King George, Princess Victoria Alexandra. This little lady, the only daughter in a family of six, became much interested in the typewriters in daily use where she resided. There are two lady typists attached to the secretarial staff of Marlborough house, which has been the King's residence, and finally the young princess declared her enthusiasm and asked one of them to give her the necessary instruction that she might operate a typewriter. She has learned to use the machine at a fair rate of speed.

QUEER OLD HAND MILL FOUND

"Quern," as This Implement is Called, First Used in America by the Indians.

Reading, Pa.—Ever since the Israelites gathered manna, ground it in mills, or beat it in mortars, or since the time the Hebrews grew corn and the Romans pounded the wheat they grew, we have had in history the tipper and nether millstones. In primitive times the method of grinding and pounding cereals was all done by querns. The housewives of Scotland, who had too far to go to the mill-water mills, ground their oats, and corn by hand with those little stone mills, known as querns, and which were from one foot to one and one-half feet in diameter.

In American history the quern was the first mill that the Indians used to grind their Indian corn. The photos of the quern, shown in this article, are those of the only Indian mill, still in existence in Pennsylvania, and they were picked up on a cemetery lot in a cemetery at Lobachville, Pa., in the

Quern Ready for Work.

Oley valley, where the Indians had a number of their villages.

No one seemed to recognize the historic value of the little stones, thousands viewing them, with the simple remark, "queer stones," passing on and never thinking about them any more. Some time ago a number of historians happened to hunt old inscriptions on tombstones several centuries old in this cemetery, when they accidentally came across the curious quern. Lifting the same apart, they recognized this primitive Indian mill. The quern is now in the rooms of the Berks County Historical society here, where it is one of the most important historical relics on exhibition.

The quern is in two parts, and weighs seventy-five pounds. The lower stone is hollowed out to a depth of about four inches in which the upper or grinder part of the quern fits. Through the center of the grinder a round hole is drilled, and through this opening the operator of the quern dropped the corn, feeding the mill as fast as it would grind it. On each side of this hole was a smaller hole in which a handle, made either of wood, stone or iron, fitted, and by pushing the handles in a half circle the grinding operation was completed.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Galena, Kans.—"A year ago last March I fell, and a few days after there was a rupture in my right side. In a short time a lump came and it bothered me so much at night I could not sleep. I kept growing larger and by fall it was as large as a hen's egg. I could not go to bed without a hot water bottle applied to that side. I had one of the best doctors in Kansas and he told my husband that I would have to be operated on as it was something like a tumor caused by a rupture. I wrote you for advice and you told me not to get discouraged but to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did take it and soon the lump in my side broke and passed away." Mrs. E. E. Now They Sleep Indoors.

George H. Beattie, jeweler in the old Arcade, and L. E. Ralston, auditor of the News, have jointly and severally decided that sleeping out in the open isn't all that it has been declared to be, says the Cleveland Leader. They were both in a deep snooze out at the Beattie farm, near Chagrin Falls, the other night, when a runaway team from the county fair city turned into the lane leading up to the Beattie estate and came along at full speed.

Bound asleep, but dreaming of impending danger, Ralston rolled out of his cot toward the north, and Beattie from his cot toward the south. The runaway horses dashed between the sleepers, upsetting everything in the way, but missing Beattie and Ralston by margins too narrow to be measured. Since that night Ralston has slept in his town house and Beattie has found shelter under the ample roof of his house on his big plantation.

A Question.

Vera (eight years old)—What does transatlantic mean, mother?

Mother—Across the Atlantic, of course; but you mustn't bother me.

Vera—Does "trans" always mean across?

Mother—I suppose it does. Now, if you don't stop bothering me with your questions—I shall send you right to bed.

Vera (after a few minutes' silence)—Then does transparent mean a cross parent?—Ideas.
