MRS. WILLIAM HOGGATT.

(From an Oklahoma paper.)

Mrs. Wm. Hoggatt living northwest of Glencoe, Oklahoma was suddenly killed Sunday when a balky horse backed off of a culvert with her and her husband. The accident happened close to their home while returning from spending the day with a son.

They had started up a hill when the horse suddenly lurched backward until a culvert was reached and the buggy being in a cramped position caused it to go squarely off the end and falling several feet below.

Mr. Hoggatt could not pull his wife from beneath the horse which was making lurches and crushing her body. He ran to the house and called for his two sons who came and lifted the horse from her dead and mangled body.

Mrs. Phoebe Daniels Hoggatt was born in Shelby Co., Ill., June 26 1837. Died June 11 1911 aged 72 years, 11 months and 11 days. She was married to Wm. Hoggatt Nov. 10 1858. To this happy union eight children were born, six sons who survive her and have grown into manhood.

Of the Resurrection

By Pastor Russell Of Brooklyn Tabernacle

Death is spoken of throughout the Bible as an enemy. Many hymn-books theology presents it as a friend, an angel sent of God. Death is introduced to our attention in the Bible as the penalty for sin, with the distinct understanding that had Adam not transgressed the Divine command he need not have died, nor even have been cast out of his Eden home.

Paul emphasizes the fact that death is the penalty of sin and that the resurrection of the dead will come to mankind as the result of the redemptive work of Christ. He says: "Since by man comes death, by man also comes the resurrection of the dead. For as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive; but every man in his own order," I and of cohort (I. Corinthians 15:21-22).

In the poetic language of Scripture death is symbolically represented as a great monster which has been swallowing up the human family, never satisfied. Millions on millions have already been devoured. Mankind in vain has looked for a deliverer—for one able to vanquish death and to deliver the prisoners from the great prison house of sheol, hades, the grave. This monster was granted permission to devour the race by him who created us, because we were unworthy of eternal life. Death, therefore, is backed by the mandate of the Almighty, and he cannot overthrow his own decision.

The Scriptures assure us that the sacrifice that Jesus offered (himself) was a satisfaction, "ransom-price," for the sins of the whole world. They tell us that the heavenly father manifested his approval of the sacrifice when he granted the Pentecostal blessing, and that Jesus is even now at the father's right hand waiting (Hebrews 10:12, 13) until the time shall come when the heathen and the uttermost parts of the earth shall be given to him, that he may establish his reign of righteousness, blessing the world and releasing all the prisoners of sin and death.

The delay is not in any sense an indication of weakness, nor of any change in the divine program. It merely indicates that there is another feature of the Almighty's purpose which we did not for a time discern. The work is to be a great one. Twenty thousand millions are to be delivered from death's prison house. And all of them will need instruction, uplifting, chastening, schooling, to prepare them for the divine blessing of life everlasting. The time for instruction and uplifting is declared to be a thousand years. The power for the instruction is the Messianic Kingdom, the Rulers of which will be Messiah and His Bride—joint heir with him in his kingdom. During the past nineteen centuries God, by his word and providence, has been calling and drawing a "little flock" to Christ to be his bride.

St. Paul points us to the great deliverer, the glorified Messiah, at the time when he shall take the kingdom under the whole heavens and begin the fulfillment of the prayer he taught us: "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as in heaven." He tells us he must reign until he shall have put all enemies under his feet—the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death (I. Corinthians 15:26). The meaning is clear. Messiah's kingdom will address itself promptly to the rectification of every form of unrighteousness, financial, political, social, religious. He will rule the world with a rod of iron and every nation and every system or custom contrary to the divine standards of righteousness will be broken to shivers with his

By Pastor Russell Of Brooklyn Tabernacle

Death is spoken of throughout the Bible as an enemy. Many hymn-books theology presents it as a friend, an angel sent of God. Death is introduced to our attention in the Bible as the penalty for sin, with the distinct understanding that had Adam not transgressed the Divine command he need not have died, nor even have been cast out of his Eden home.

Paul emphasizes the fact that death is the penalty of sin and that the resurrection of the dead will come to mankind as the result of the redemptive work of Christ. He says: "Since by man comes death, by man also comes the resurrection of the dead. For as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive; but every man in his own order," I and of cohort (I. Corinthians 15:21-22).

In the poetic language of Scripture death is symbolically represented as a great monster which has been swallowing up the human family, never satisfied. Millions on millions have already been devoured. Mankind in vain has looked for a deliverer—for one able to vanquish death and to deliver the prisoners from the great prison house of sheol, hades, the grave. This monster was granted permission to devour the race by him who created us, because we were unworthy of eternal life. Death, therefore, is backed by the mandate of the Almighty, and he cannot overthrow his own decision.

The Scriptures assure us that the sacrifice that Jesus offered (himself) was a satisfaction, "ransom-price," for the sins of the whole world. They tell us that the heavenly father manifested his approval of the sacrifice when he granted the Pentecostal blessing, and that Jesus is even now at the father's right hand waiting (Hebrews 10:12, 13) until the time shall come when the heathen and the uttermost parts of the earth shall be given to him, that he may establish his reign of righteousness, blessing the world and releasing all the prisoners of sin and death.

The delay is not in any sense an indication of weakness, nor of any change in the divine program. It merely indicates that there is another feature of the Almighty's purpose which we did not for a time discern. The work is to be a great one. Twenty thousand millions are to be delivered from death's prison house. And all of them will need instruction, uplifting, chastening, schooling, to prepare them for the divine blessing of life everlasting. The time for instruction and uplifting is declared to be a thousand years. The power for the instruction is the Messianic Kingdom, the Rulers of which will be Messiah and His Bride—joint heir with him in his kingdom. During the past nineteen centuries God, by his word and providence, has been calling and drawing a "little flock" to Christ to be his bride.

SYNOPSIS

James Wilson or Jimmy as he is called by his friends, is a young man who is not much older than he really is. His ambition in life was to be taken seriously, but people steadily refused to do so, his art is considered a huge joke, except to himself. If he asked people to dinner anyone expected a frolic. Jimmy marries Belle Knowles; they live together a year and are divorced. Jimmy's second marriage to celebrate the first anniversary of his divorce. The party is in full swing when Jimmy receives a telegram from his Aunt Selma, who will arrive in four hours to visit him and his wife. He neglects to tell her of his divorce. Jimmy takes Kit from his confidence. He suggests that Kit play the hostess for only one night. Jimmy Wilson pro tem. Aunt Selma arrives and the deception works out as planned. Jimmy's big servant, taken from Belle, Jimmy's divorced wife, enters the house and asks Kit who is being taken away in the ambulance. Belle insists it is Jim. Kit tells her Jim was with her in the house. Harbison steps out on the porch and discovers a man taking a card on the door. He demands an explanation. The man points to the photograph of Belle. Alison sees the word "smaller" printed on it. He tells him the guests cannot leave the house until the guarantee is lifted. After the lifting of the guarantee several letters are found in the mail-box undelivered, one is addressed to Henry Jewell, a politician. Chills which were written by Harbison. The guarantee is lifted and their incarceration, also of his indignation for Mrs. Wilson. Aunt Selma is taken ill with what Betty calls a "stomach ailment." Harbison finds Kit sulking on the roof. She tells him that Jim has been treating her outrageously. Kit starts downstairs, but is stopped by Harbison in the arms of a man who kisses her several times. She believes that Harbison did it and is humiliated. Aunt Selma tells Jimmy that he has caused a breach and other articles of jewelry have been stolen. She accuses Betty of the theft. Jimmy tells Aunt Selma all about the strange happenings, but she persists in suspecting Betty of the theft of her valuables. Harbison demands an explanation from Kit as to her conduct towards him. She tells him of the incident on the roof. He does not deny nor confirm her accusation. One of the guests devises a way to escape from the house. They get to the reception room and attempt to leave the house from the rear. The guards discover the escape and prevent them from escaping. Max says that Betty's slip is in Jimmy's studio in a discarded coat. Jimmy is suspected of the theft, but denies the accusation. Kit finds a watch hanging in a pillar in the hall and engraved upon it with initials "H. H." engraved upon it. Harbison takes the case and finds a picture of herself that had been in the newspaper. Kit shows Harbison the watch. He explains that he had been looking for it and believed it had been stolen.

"It seems that the gentle Bella has been unusually beautiful today to Jim, and I believe she's jealous of you, Kit. Jim followed her up to the roof before dinner with a box of flowers, and she tossed them over the parapet. She said, I believe, that she didn't want his flowers: He could buy them for you, and be damned to him, or some lady-like equivalent."

"Jim is a jellyfish," I said contemptuously. "What did he say?"

"He said he only cared for one woman, and that was Bella. That he never had really cared for you and never would, and that divorces courts were not unmitigated evils if they showed people the way to real happiness. Which wouldn't amount to anything if Harbison had not been in the tent, trying to sleep!"

Dal did not know all the particulars, but it seems that relations between Jim and Mr. Harbison were rather strained. Bella had left the roof and Jim and the Harbison man came face to face in the door of the tent. According to Dal, little had been said, but Jim, bound by his promise to me, could not explain, and could only stammer something about being an old friend of Miss Knowles. And Tom had replied shortly that it was none of his business, but that there were some things friendship hardly justified, and tried to pass Jim. Jim was instantly enraged: He blocked the door to the roof and demanded to know what the other man meant. There were two or three versions of the answer he got. The general purport was that Mr. Harbison had no desire to explain further, and that the situation was forced on him. But if he insisted—when a man systematically ignored and neglected his wife for some one else, there were communities where he would be tarred and feathered.

"Meaning me?" Jim demanded, apologetically.

"The remark was a general one," Mr. Harbison retorted, "but if you wish to make a concrete application—"

Dal had gone up just then, and found them glaring at each other, Jim with his hands clenched at his sides and Mr. Harbison with his arms folded and very erect. Dal took Jim by the elbow and led him downstairs, muttering and the situation was saved for the time. But Dal was not optimistic.

"You can do a bit yourself, Kit," he finished. "Look more cheerful, flirt a little. You can do that without trying. Take Max on for a day or so: It would be child's play for you."

Don't let Tom Harbison take it into his head that you are growing over Jim's neglect, or he's likely to toss him out of the roof."

"I have no reason to think that Mr. Harbison cares one way or the other about me," I said primly. "You don't think he's in love with me, do you, Dal?" I watched him out of the corner of my eye, but he only looked amused.

"I love with you!" he repeated. "Oh, bless your wicked little heart, do! He thinks you're a married woman! It's the principle of the thing he's fighting for. If I had as much principle as he has I'd put it out at interest."

Max interrupted us just then, and asked if we knew where Mr. Harbison was.

"Can't find him," he said. "I've got the telephone together and have enough left over to make another. Where do you suppose Harbison hides his tools? I'm working with a corset-needle and two palette knives."

I heard nothing more of the trouble that night. Max went to Jim about it, and Jim said angrily that only a fool would interfere between a man and his wife—wives. Whereupon Max retorted that a fool and his wives were soon parted, and left him. The two principals were coldly civil to each other, and smaller issues were left as the famine grew more and more insistent. For famine it was.

They worked the rest of the evening, but the telephone refused to revive and every one was starving. Individually our pride was at low ebb, but collectively it was still formidable. So we sat around and Jim played Grieg with the sort stops on, and Aunt Selma went to bed. The weather had changed, and it was raining, but anything was better than the drawing room. I was in a mood to battle with the elements or to cry—or both—so I slipped out, while Dal was reciting "Give me three grains of corn, mother," throw somebody's overcoat over my shoulders, put on a man's soft hat—Jim's I think—and went up to the roof.

It was dark in the third floor hall, and I had to feel my way to the foot of the stairs. I went up quietly and turned the knob of the door to the roof. At first it would not open, and I could hear the wind howling outside. Finally, however, I got the door open a little and wormed my way through. It was not entirely dark out there, in spite of the storm. A faint reflection of the street lights made it possible to distinguish the outlines of the boxwood plants, swaying in the wind, and the chimneys and the tent. And then—a dark figure disentangled itself from the nearest chimney and seemed to hurl itself at me. I remember putting out my hands and trying to say something, but the figure caught me roughly by the shoulders and knocked me back against the door-frame. From miles away a heavy voice was saying, "So I've got you!" and then the roof gava from under me, and I was floating out on the storm, and elect was beating in my face, and the wind was whispering over and over, "Open your eyes, for God's sake!"

I did open them after a while, and finally I made out that I was lying on the floor in the tent. The lights were on, and I had a cold and damp feeling, and something wet was trickling down my neck.

I seemed to be alone, but in a second somebody came into the tent, and I saw it was Mr. Harbison, and that he had a double handful of half-melted snow. He looked frantic and determined, and only my sitting up quickly prevented my getting another snow bath. My neck felt queer and stiff, and I was very dizzy. When he saw that I was conscious he dropped the snow and stood looking down at me.

"Do you know," he said grimly, "that I very nearly choked you to death a little while ago?"

"It wouldn't surprise me to be told so," I said. "Do I know too much, or what is it, Mr. Harbison?" I felt terribly ill, but I would not let him see it. "It is queer, isn't it—how we always select the roof for our little differences?" He seemed to relax somewhat at my gibe.

"I didn't know it was you," he explained shortly. "I was waiting for some one, and in the hat you wore, and the coat, I mistook you. That's all. Can you stand?"

"No," I retorted. I could, but his summary manner displeased me. The signal, however, was rather amusing, for he stooped suddenly and picked me up, and the next instant we were out in the storm together. At the door he stooped and felt for the "Turn it," he commanded. "I can't see it."

"I'll do nothing of the kind," I said shrilly. "Let me down—I can walk perfectly well."

He hesitated. Then he slid me slowly to my feet, but he did not open the door at once. "Are you afraid to let me carry you down those stairs, after Tuesday night?" he asked, very low. "You still think I did that?"

I had never been less sure of it than at that moment, but an imp of perversity made me retort, "Yes."

He hardly seemed to hear me. He stood looking down at me as I leaned against the door-frame.

"Good Lord!" he groaned. "To think that I might have killed you! And then—he stooped and suddenly kissed me."

The next moment the door was open, and he was leading me down into the house. At the foot of the staircase he paused, still holding my hand, and faced me in the darkness.

"I'm not sorry," he said steadily. "I suppose I ought to be, but I'm not. Only—I wanted you to know that I was not guilty—before. I didn't intend to now. I am—almost as much surprised as you are."

I was quite unable to speak, but I wrenched my hand loose. He stopped back to let me pass, and I went down the hall alone.

CHAPTER XVIII.

It's All My Fault.

I didn't go to the drawing room again. I went into my own room and sat in the dark, and tried to be furiously angry, and only succeeded in feeling queer and tingy. One thing was absolutely certain: Not the same man, but two different men had kissed me on the stairs to the roof. It sounds rather horrid and discriminating, but there was all the difference in the world.

But then—who had? And for whom had Mr. Harbison been waiting on the roof? "Did you know that I nearly choked you to death a few minutes ago?" Then he rather expected to finish somebody in that way! Who? Jim, probably. It was strange, too, but suddenly I realized that no matter how many suspicious things I mustered up against him—and there were plenty—down in my heart I didn't believe him guilty of anything, except this last and unforfeitable offense. Whoever was trying to leave the house had taken the necklace, that seemed clear, unless Max was still foolishly trying to break quarantine and create one of the sensations he so dearly loves. This was a new idea, and some things upheld it, but Max had been playing bridge when I was kissed on the stairs, and there was still left that ridiculous incident of the comfort.

Bella came up after I had gone to bed, and turned on the light to brush her hair.

"I don't leave this mausoleum upon I'll be carried out," she declared. "You in bed, Lollie Mercer and Dal flirting, Anne hysterical, and Jim making his will in the den! You will have to take Aunt Selma tonight, Kit; I'm all in."

"If you'll put her to bed, I'll keep her there," I conceded, after some parley.

"You're a dear." Bella came back from the door. "Look here, Kit, you know Jim pretty well. Don't you think he looks ill? Thinner?"

"He's a wreck," I said soberly. "You have a lot to answer for, Bella."

Bella went over to the cheval glass and looked in it. "I avoid him all I can," she said, posing. "He's awfully funny; he's so afraid I'll think he's serious about you. He can't realize that for me he simply doesn't exist."

Well, I took Aunt Selma, and about two o'clock, while I was in my first sleep, I woke to find her standing beside me, tugging at my arm.

"There's somebody in the house," she whispered. "Thieves!"

"If they're in they'll not get out tonight," I said.

"I tell you, I saw a man skulking on the stairs," she insisted.

I got up ungraciously enough, and put on my dressing-gown. Aunt Selma, who had her hair in curls, tied a veil over her head, and together we went to the head of the stairs. Aunt Selma leaned far over and peered down.

"He's in the library," she whispered. "I can see a light."

The lust of battle was in Aunt Selma's eye. She girded her robe about her and began to descend the stairs cautiously. We went through the hall was empty, but from the den beyond came a hum of voices and the cheerful glow of frelight. I realized the situation then, but it was too late.

"Then why did you kiss her in the dining room?" Bella was saying in her clear, high tones. "You did, didn't you?"

"It was only her hand," Jim, desperately explaining. "I've got to pay her some attention, under the circumstances. And I give you my word, I was thinking of you when I did it."

The wretch!

Aunt Selma drew her breath in suddenly.

"I am thinking of marrying Reggie Wolfe." This was Bella, of course. "He wants me to. He's a dear boy."

"If you do, I will kill him."

"I am so very lonely," Bella sighed. We could hear the creak of Jim's shirt bosom that showed that he had signed also. Aunt Selma had gripped me by the arm, and I could hear her breathing hard beside me.

Willing to Support Proxy.

Albert Tiedemann, a freshman of the University of Pennsylvania, was called upon to vote for officers in a recent gathering. Not being well acquainted with the nominees, he thoughtfully hesitated before filing out his ballot.

One of the company left the room with the explanation that he would "vote by proxy."

"So will I," said Albert, and with his pencil poised above his paper, leaned over to a companion on his right and asked:

"Say, what's Proxy's first name?"

The Worth of the Voice.

How wonderful is the human voice! It is indeed the organ of the soul. The intellect of man sits enthroned visibly upon his forehead and in his eye, and the heart of man is written upon his countenance. But the soul reveals itself in the voice only; as God revealed himself to the prophet of old in the still, small voice, and in the voice from the burning bush. The soul of man is audible, not visible. A sound alone betrays the flowing of the eternal fountain, invisible to man—Longfellow: Hyperion.

Some Day Ask Your Physician

To tell you the curious story of how the mind affects the digestion of food.

I refer to the condition the mind is in, just before, at the time, or just following the taking of food.

If he has been properly educated (the majority have) he will help you understand the curious machinery of digestion.

To start you thinking on this interesting subject, I will try to lay out the plan in a general way and you can then follow into more minute details.

Pavlov (pronounce Pavloff) a famous Russian Physician and Chemist, experimenting on some dogs, cut into the tube leading from the throat to the stomach.

They were first put under chloroform or some other anesthetic and the operation was painless. They were kept for months in very good condition.

When quite hungry some unappetizing food was placed before them and, although hunger forced them to eat, it was shown by analysis of the contents of the stomach that little if any of the digestive juices were found.

Then, in contrast, some raw meat was put where they couldn't reach it at once, and a little time allowed for the minds of the dogs to "anticipate" and create an appetite. When the food was finally given them, they digested it exceptionally and with every evidence of satisfaction. The food was passed out into a dish through the opening before it reached the stomach. It was found to be mixed with "Ptyalin" the alkaline juice of the mouth, which is important for the first step in digestion. Then an analysis was made of the contents of George Ade, at a luncheon in Chicago, paid a gallant compliment to a well-known actress.

The actress wore a harem skirt of the new flame color and Mr. Ade said to her:

"It is pretty. And what an odd color it is! Tell me the name of the color."

"Flamme de Vesuvius—flame of Vesuvius," the actress answered.
"Be jabbers," said Mr. Ade, "ye make a verry purty crater."

(A short human-interest story written by G. W. Post for the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.)

the stomach, into which no food had entered. It was shown that the digestive fluids of stomach were flowing freely, exactly as if the desirable food had entered.

This proved that it was not the presence of food which caused the digestive juices to flow, but the flow was caused entirely and alone as a result of the action of the mind, from "anticipation."

One dog continued to eat the food he liked for over an hour believing he was getting it into his stomach, whereas, not an ounce went there: every particle went out through the opening and yet all this time the digestive juices flowed to the stomach, prepared to quickly digest food, in response to the curious orders of the mind.

Do you pick up the lesson?

Unappetizing food, that which fails to create mental anticipation, does not cause the necessary digestive juices to flow, whereas, food that is pleasing to the sight, and hence to the mind, will cause the complicated machinery of the body to prepare in a wonderful way for its digestion.

How natural, then, to reason that one should sit down to a meal in a peaceful, happy state of mind and start off the breakfast, say with some ripe delicious fruit, then follow with a bowl of crisp, lightly browned, thin bits of corn like Post Toasties, add a sprinkle of sugar and some good yellow cream and the attractive, appetizing picture cannot escape your eye and will produce the condition of mind which causes the digestive juices nature has hidden in mouth and stomach, to come forth and do their work.

These digestive juices can be driven back by a mind overcast with worry, hate, anger or dislike of the disagreeable appearance of your present nature.

Solid facts that are worthy the attention of anyone who esteems prime health and human happiness as a valuable asset in the game of life.

Risks His Life For New Foods.

Frank N. Meyer, an American field explorer, working under commission of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture, is today in a lonely land and before his mission is ended he will pass through still lonelier lands. His collecting journey began at St. Petersburg and will end at some sea coast port of Eastern China. His trip already has been successful enough to make it worth much more than the money it has cost. He has frozen and melted alternately as the altitudes have changed; he has encountered wild beasts and men nearly as wild; he has scaled glaciers and crossed chasms of dizzying depths; he has been the subject of the always alert suspicions of government officials and strange peoples jealous of intrusions into their land—but he has found what he was sent for.

A plant hunter! Official and peasant are accustomed to the coming of hunters of wild beasts. They understand the lust of killing and the desire for danger which make men take long journeys into strange places. But a plant hunter—it seems to them the thinnest pretense to hide some design on the peace of the government or the community. The specimen bag must hold some strange instrument of destruction, the more deadly because it is unknown. The experienced botanists in the Eastern mountains, though with an added element of real danger are like those of the peaceful opera glass ornithologist whose sanity is doubted and whose arrest is threatened by the country folks because he prefers to study the living bird rather than to kill it, fill it with cotton and arsenic, and to pierce it with wires for mounting in painful and grotesque attitude.

Admittedly the expression falls within the limits of what the objectors call the bromides, but it is the desire of David Fairchild, the Agricultural Explorer in charge, and of his fellow laborers in field and capital to make such deserts as the United States has to bloom like the rose or, if not the rose, the pear, the apple, the orange, the pomegranate or the olive. The nature of much of the land which is under search today for plant treasures in stony and forbidding places apparently for the thistle and the thorn, and it would appear that he who looks for fruitage there must be one who thinks yes the answer to the question of thorns and figs of thistles.

The explorer now in the Himalaya Mountains carries in his head a botanical chart of the United States. He finds a species of plants useful or ornamental, or a variety of a species, and by reference to the mental map he knows instantly in what part of the United States it has a chance to flourish and to prove a blessing. He gathers with full knowledge of the locality in which one day Americans may sit under the shade of a Himalaya tree or gather fruit from a Himalayan vine.

In the plant hunter's head there is also a weather map. He knows the sections of the United States where long periods of drought would wither quickly any form of introduced vegetation whose life is moisture. He knows the places where the rainfall is apt to be excessive and he knows where there are shadow and sunshine in about equal parts. He is a work of selection, and it can be said that in large part the judgment of the plant finder has been justified by results.—Technical World Magazine.

WILLIAM A. RADFORD
Editor

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice, FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all things building. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 173 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

To anyone who is interested in home building and who goes about with eyes open to what is going on in the building world, it is very plainly evident that we are building very much better today in America than at any former time. Not only in our designs is better taste being used, but we are building more substantially and are equipping our homes with all modern conveniences to make them comfortable, sanitary and labor-saving.

It used to be said that there was no such thing as an American style of architecture, and looking at some of our residence sections which were built up, say 30 years ago, we are inclined to agree that at that time there was no American domestic architecture worthy of the name. The styles of our houses were borrowed from every quarter of the globe; very often the same structure containing borrowings from a dozen different lands and foreign climes. Over our land has been scattered a great conglomeration of Queen Anne cottages, Swiss chalets, Italian villas, Indian bungalows, and more recently art nouveau creations. A few of these have been at peace with their environment and look to be in their natural, appropriate setting; but most of them seem very much out of place.

However, in the houses that we see going up today there is a directness of design and a sincerity of treatment that is very satisfying. One of our metal lath in a durable coat from one half to three-quarters of an inch in thickness, this material produces a very neat and at the same time durable, attractive appearance. It stands on its own merits, it does not imitate anything. If ornamentation is desired, the broad flat surfaces are divided up into panels in any way to suit the fancy of the architect. Small and irregular spaces, corners, etc., are handled just as easily as the straight, flat work.

It is scarcely to be wondered at that this type of construction has received such favorable attention. The cost is just about the same as for clapboards or shingles, and it has the advantage of being more fire resisting. One of the problems in connection with this type of construction in the past has been that of waterproofing. Especially where metal lath has been used, this has been a matter for serious consideration. Unless particular pains were taken to make the very outer surface thoroughly waterproof moisture was bound to penetrate the thin layer of plaster and get to the metal, causing rusting and serious weakening of the walls.

To solve this problem has been the task of the paint men; and evidences are that they have now solved it satisfactorily. Numerous paints, stains, waterproofing compounds, etc., are now on the market to meet every need along these lines.

The design illustrated herewith is a very good example of what can be done with cement plaster in the design and construction of a small-sized house or cottage. This is a four-room cottage which has been built for $2,000, and from that up to $2,500. It is 24 feet 4 inches wide by 35 feet 6 inches long, exclusive of the porch. The exterior is extremely attractive, philosophers has said, "There is a settled relation existing between home architecture and the human heart and the expression of that relation should be the ideal of domestic architecture." Today we may be said to be approaching that ideal, for we are insisting first of all that our homes express simple beauty and hospitable comfort and liveableness.

In this architectural development cement plaster exteriors, stucco work, has played a great and important part. The use of cement plaster has freed the architect to a certain extent from certain of the old time fixed rules, and has allowed a greater freedom in composition than with either wood, stone or brick. New styles have been evolved and new rules formulated which are in accord with the ideals of today. Stucco has been used in connection with exterior work for hundreds of years, but only as applied over brick and rough stone buildings, and was usually ruled off into neat oblongs to imitate the fine dressed stone work. It is hardly surprising that as an imitation it was far from being a success. In recent years stucco or cement plaster exterior in connection with frame buildings has made its appearance and has gained a wonderful popularity. Applied over wood or expanded being of the type that is so popular at the present time—neat, home-like, substantial looking, finished with cement plaster.

The floor plan shows a very large sized living room, 14 feet 6 inches by 20 feet long. This is to the left of the central hall, while to the right are two large-sized bedrooms, each with a clothes closet. A large kitchen is in the back of the house and is intended to be used as a dining room also, if desired. The bathroom, pantry, etc., are very conveniently located. This is a design that works out very well in practical use and prospective home builders cannot do better than to follow it.

Set Him Right.
At Broadway and Forty-second street, New York, a man and his wife were making valiant efforts to cross the street, dodging among trolleys and automobiles. They finally landed on the opposite curb, agitated and breathless, having, at the last moment, narrowly escaped destruction under the tires of a huge motor car. "I wish," said the man fervently, "that all automobiles were in hades and the chauffeurs in heaven."
"My dear," remonstrated his wife, mildly, "you ought to reverse that wish, because in heaven the roads are so good."

Slightly Qualified.
Fred A. Beckwith, a Clevelandian in exile, spoke of Cleveland's enormous growth, but on being pressed was unable to say that he had visited either the new west end, or the south side, or yet the hilltop. Still, in a general way, he knew the town had grown a heap.

"He reminded me," said Fred Bright, "of the farmer who sent his young son to find four sheep that had strayed from the herd."
"At night the farmer asked the son if he'd found the missing sheep. "Yes, sir," replied the boy, "I've found them all but three."—Cleveland Leader.

The Real Theater.
"Why don't you ever drink on me?" demanded the bibulous man. "Got any objections to having a drink on me?"
"None whatever," answered the other citizen. "What I object to is drinking on your strutting family."

CORNER FOR THE JUNIORS

"FIVE GESE IN A FLOCK"

Particularly Amusing Game to Play When Your Little Friends Come to Pay Short Visits.

When your friends come to see you play "Five Geese in a Flock." The children sit on the grass, or on a bank or bench, side by side. One stands as Market Woman opposite the row of players.

She walks along the row and touches each child, beginning where Children Making Merry.

she pleases, and saying one word of the following rhyme to each as she touches her:
"Please—good—farmer—cut—the—corn.
Keep—the—wheat—and—burn—the—thorn.
Shut—your—gate—and—turn—the—lock.
Keep—the—five—geese—in—a—flock."

As soon as she says the word "flock," the one first touched jumps up and runs away. The market woman pursues her. But while she is catching her, the other geese have fled, and she has to catch each player and reset her in her place before the game can begin again. The one first caught becomes in her turn the market woman.

"Den" is a good out-of-doors game. Each boy takes the name of a wild beast and has a tree to himself, which represents his den. Any player who leaves his den is liable to be tagged by the next one out. The best runner generally starts out first, a second pursues him, and so on until all may be out at once. If a player can tag any one he has a right to capture, he takes him home to his own den, and the latter must help him to take the rest. The pursuer cannot be tagged while bringing home a prisoner.

The children sit in a row with hands folded to play "Button, Button, Who's Got the Button?" One takes a button and, holding it between both hands, pretends to give it to each one of the players, who open their hands as if to receive it.

As she does this the leader says to each one, "Keep all I give you." When she has finished, she puts the question to each one in turn, "Button, button, who's got the button?" The answer is "Next door neighbor." When she returns to the head of the line and asks "Who's got the button?" the player mentions the name of the one she thinks has it. The successful guesser takes the leader's place.

Acting Animals.
This is a game called acting animals. One child pretends to be some kind of animal and acts just as that animal would act. Then the other children guess what he is trying to be. The child who guesses correctly may be the next one to represent an animal. It is really very funny, especially if you try to imitate something like a stork standing on one leg or a rhinoceros or a turtle or even a mosquito, for insects are included as well as animals. Sometimes it is well to allow the guessers three questions that may be answered by "yes" or "no."

CAN YOU FOLLOW THIS YARN?

Tom and Vera have been between them and each in turn of confidence talk friends.

Tom and Vera had a secret between them. In a burst of confidence Tom told it to a mutual friend, Will; but, regretting his action, obtained a promise from Will that he would never let Vera know that the secret had been told.

Will, however, told Vera that Tom had let him into the secret, but made her promise not to tell Tom that he (Will) had informed her of having obtained the information from Tom. A little later Tom decided to let Vera know that he had told the secret to Will, but instructed her not to tell Will that he (Tom) had admitted to giving away the secret to Will.

Vera went to Will and told him that Tom had confessed to having let him into the secret, but she made Will promise not to let Tom know that she had given him this information. She also went to Tom and told him, in strict confidence, that Will had told her about having learned the secret from him.

Will next went to Tom and informed him of Vera having stated that he (Tom) had admitted to giving away the secret. Tom retorted by saying that Vera had told him that he (Will) had advised her of being let into the secret. They both promised not to tell Vera of having given away the confidences which she had lately given.

But this is the question: Were any more confidences necessary? Or had all of the three friends heard enough to be convinced that the others knew everything that could be told?

Sue's disposition was so sweet—She couldn't bear to cross the street—And I have even heard her beg Her mother not to beat an egg!

GREAT STADIUM AT TACOMA

Structure is Shaped Like a Horseshoe and Will Comfortably Seat Twenty-Five Thousand.

Tacoma's high school, which plays an important part in Pacific-Coast athletics, is the only high school in America having an Olympic stadium, if not the only one in the whole world. It is a ponderous mass of steel and concrete, just completed at a cost of more than $100,000 in a gulch at one side of the high school building. The gulch happened to be just the right shape for the stadium, so but little excavation was required. The structure is shaped like a horseshoe, with the open end overlooking Commencement bay. It will seat twenty-five thousand people, has a center sufficiently large for baseball, football, track and field events, and will also be used for outdoor musical concerts and entertainments.

A movement is already on foot to secure the next Olympic games in America, the people of Washington believing that in the Tacoma stadium they have one of the best arenas in the United States for such an event.

Baby on its Mind Legs.
Little Bessie was so accustomed to seeing the baby crawl around the room that she thought it was his natural mode of traveling. One day when he succeeded in standing up with the aid of a chair she was much astonished and, running to her mother, exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, come quick! Baby is standing up on his hind legs!"

HAD BEEN SILENT SUFFERER

Subordinate Officer the Recipient of Hints Intended for His Superior.

A sea captain's wife tells this story of a maiden woman, sister of one of the owners of the ship on which she once made a long voyage. She had very decided opinion on most matters, and she and the captain had many spirited arguments at the dinner table.

The captain's wife, a meek, submissive little soul, fearing that in the heat of argument her husband might say something to offend their august passenger, was in the habit of kicking him on the shins to hint at moderation. Nevertheless, all these reminders passed unheeded.

One day she administered a more vigorous kick than usual, and noticed an expression of pain flit across the face of the mate, who sat opposite her.

"Oh, Mr. Brown, was that your shin?" she asked.

"Yes, Mrs. Blakie," said the mate, meekly, "hit's been my shin all the voyage, ma'am."—Youth's Companion.

WANTED TO SLEEP

Curious That a Tired Preacher Should Have Such Desires.

A minister speaks of the curious effect of Grape-Nuts food on him and how it has relieved him.

"You will doubtless understand how the suffering from indigestion with which I used to be troubled made my work an almost unendurable burden; and why it was that after my Sabbath duties had been performed, sleep was a stranger to my pillow till nearly daylight.

"I had to be very careful as to what I ate, and even with all my care I experienced poignant physical distress after meals, and my food never satisfied me.

"Since I began the use of Grape-Nuts the benefits I have derived from it are very definite, I no longer suffer from indigestion, and I began to improve from the time Grape-Nuts appeared on our table.

"I find that by eating a dish of this food after my Sabbath work is done, (and I always do so now) my nerves are quieted and rest and refreshing sleep are ensured me.

"I feel that I could not possibly do without Grape-Nuts food; now that I know its value. It is invariably on our table—we feel that we need it to make the meal complete and our children will eat Grape-Nuts when they cannot be persuaded to touch anything else." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Michigan.

NOTES FROM DOWD BROS. FARM

Keep on cultivating the corn.
The foolish man sells his best corn.
Electricity is coming to be a farm possibility.
Carelessness is the greatest cause of failure in farming.
The teeth and feet of the horse should receive special attention.
Protein, starch, fat, sugar and fiber are the nutrients that make up foods.
A rest just after foaling is worth more to the brood mare than just before.
In building a dairy barn one of the main points is to see that it is light enough.
A good tomato plant should yield 30 pounds or one-half bushel, at a low estimate.
The feet of the horse should be cleaned every morning before he leaves the stable.
Government whitewash will preserve the wood of old buildings more cheaply than paint.
Corn grown to rid land of weeds should be checked sowed. On clean land drilling is satisfactory.
A fully ripe tomato taken from the vine will weigh 30 per cent more than one pulled and ripened indoors.
The new born colt must have milk during the first half hour of its life, or the chances are that it will die.
Apple trees should be sprayed immediately to kill the eggs and the hatching young of the apple aphid.
The west has probably reached its limit in sheep production. Now the native lamb will get better attention.
The churn should be thoroughly scalded and cooled with clean, cold water before the cream is put into it.
It is said that 30 acres of corn put into the silo is worth more in feeding a dairy herd than 30 acres in the crib.
The best dairy cow is the one that will convert the forage raised on the farm into the greatest amount of butter fat.
White pine is one of the most profitable trees to raise, and can be planted to advantage on overland or worn-out pastures.
Brush the mud off the cow's udder and flank, then wipe off with damp cloth. You can't strain mud out of milk. Keep it out.
No man or woman to whom the chickens are mere machines to swallow corn and shell out eggs can ever hope to get best results.
There are some excellent dry chick feeds on the market at the present time, ones that are both cheap and possess a good feeding value.
The white grub, or larva of the June beetle, is found in sod land; hence the best preventive is not to plant strawberries on freshly-broken sod.
For black loams, clay and limestone lands, the sod should be deeply plowed in the fall or early part of winter to the depth of six to eight inches.
Tender chickens for table use are a rarity in the cities at practically all seasons in the year, and it seems that this particular demand will never be satisfied.
About 3,000 Dutch farmers are coming to America to settle upon farm lands in Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin. About 250 have already arrived and all have large families.
For the thrift and product of the hen—to keep her in a good, healthful condition and produce many eggs—both carbonaceous and nitrogenous foods must be used with proper balance.
If chickens are confined in the hen-house until late in the morning they are sure to fly off the roost as soon as it is light and scratch around in the filth, thereby laying the foundation for disease.
A blanched ration, in poultry diet, means a sufficient amount of carbonaceous material in a mixture to counteract any bad results that might arise where an entirely nitrogenous ration is given, and vice versa.
Groom the horses in the morning and rub down at night; bathe the shoulders with cold water both morning and evening; the horse collar should be scraped clean before putting on in the morning.
While it is true that April weather is sometimes a little severe on young chicks, it must not be forgotten that June heat is too. It is really better to be a little too early with chicks for next winter's laying than a little too late.
Chicks hatched under a hen are quite apt to have lice. Do your best to have the sitting hen free from these pests. Sprinkle the nest boxes with insect powder when the eggs are first set and look out for the lice all the way through.

WISDOM BROKER.
Jiggs—That marriage broker was to get 10 per cent of the girl's estate for arranging a match with a French marquis, but he did better than that—he took it all.
Wiggs—How?
Jiggs—Married the girl himself.
Historic Event Celebrated.
Australia recently commemorated the one hundred and forty-first anniversary of Captain Cook's first landing. It was in 1770 that H. M. S. Endeavor, a barge of 370 tons, entered the inlet first called Sting Rays Harbor, but afterwards Botany Bay, from the beauty and variety of the plants growing about its shore. The vessel remained eight days, and before she left the British flag was hoisted. As is the custom on each recurring anniversary, the flag was again unfurled upon the spot where it was first displayed, and was saluted by the guns of the warships in the harbor.
Their Great Value
Is Most Appreciated by Those Who Have Tried Them.
I was afflicted with Eczema in the palms of my hands and between my fingers. The treatment used gave no relief and my hands were in a dreadful condition when I was advised to try Resinol. I began with it by applying the ointment twice a day and using the Soap when bathing. This effected a cure in less than a month. I heartily recommend those excellent preparations," writes Mrs. Amy Crain, Padonia, Ky. At all drug stores.
Old Superstition.
It was prescribed by an old superstition that if those who were affected with ague would visit at dead of night the nearest crossroad five different times and then bury a new laid egg, the disease would be cured. If the experiment failed, they attributed it to some unlucky accident that may have befallen them on the way.

The Old Gag.
Miss Lillian B. Rowe, at an advertisement writers' dinner in Denver, said of the harem skirt:
"It will soon be so widely worn that the old gag, perpetrated in the '40s on men, may profitably be revived for women victims."
"Some sharper, you know, will revive the gag by advertising in the Ladies' Own."
"Send $1 and learn how to keep your harem skirt from becoming fringed at the bottom."
"Thousands of dollars will pour in, and to each victim the sharper will reply:
"Wear knickers."

FREED FROM SKIN DISEASE

"Our boy was born in Toronto on Oct. 13, 1908, and when three months old a slight rash appeared on his cheek. What appeared to be a water blister would form. When it broke, matter would run out, starting new blisters until his entire face, head and shoulders were a mass of sores and you could not see a particle of clear skin. Other parts of his body were affected, but not to such an extent. We tried about every advertised remedy without avail, indeed some of them only added to his suffering and one in particular, the Remedy, almost put the infant into convulsions. The family doctor prescribed for him and told us to bathe the baby in buttermilk. This did not do any good, so we took him to a hospital. He was treated as an out-patient twice a week and he got worse, if anything. We then called in another doctor and inside of a week the boy was, to all appearances, cured and the doctor said his work was done. But the very next day it broke out as bad as ever.
"We decided that it could not be cured and must run its course and so we just kept his arms bandaged to his side to prevent his tearing his flesh. We left Toronto and shortly after our arrival in Duluth, the Cuticura Remedies were recommended. We started using them in May, 1909, and soon the cure was complete. You would not think he was the same child for Cuticura made his skin perfectly clear and he is entirely free from the skin disease. There has been no return this time. We still use only Cuticura Soap for baby's bath. Robert Mann, Proctor, Minn., May 3, 1910."
Showed Tact of King.
It was the order of the day at a late shoot at Sandringham that when pheasants should not be shot, and one of the guests brought down a hen which fell near King Edward's place in the line. Anxious not to hurt the offender's feelings by an over rebuke, the king pointed to the corpus delicti and said: "Ah, Gurney, what a man you are for the ladies!"—Life of Edward VII.
Fathers Advice.
"Now that you are married, my son, listen to me."
"What is it, dad?"
"Try to be a husband, not merely an ex-bachelor."

A MARVELOUS RECOVERY.
How a Chronic Invalid Regained Perfect Health.
Mrs. Ray Trimmer, 30 West Third St., New Albany, Ind., says: "Kidney disease had rendered me a chronic invalid. I lay in bed unable to move hand or foot. My right hand was swollen to twice normal size. I looked the picture of death and my case puzzled the doctors. The kidney secretions were highly colored and scalded terribly. Marked improvement followed the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. In six weeks I was a well woman. My friends and relatives marvel at my recovery."

"I Am Well"

writes Mrs. L. R. Barker, of Bud, Ky., "and can do all my housework. For years I suffered with such pains, I could scarcely stand on my feet. After three different doctors had failed to help me, I gave Cardui a trial. Now, I feel like a new woman."

The Woman's Tonic

A woman's health depends so much upon her delicate organs, that the least trouble there affects her whole system. It is the little things that count in a woman's life and health. If you suffer from any of the aches and pains, due to womanly weakness, take Cardui at once, and avoid more serious troubles. We urge you to try it. Begin today.
