QUESTIONS ANSWERED

THE PUBLIC DRINKING CUP ACT EXPLAINED BY ATTORNEY GENERAL STEAD.

An Act to prohibit the use of a common drinking cup, glass or other utensil used for public drinking purposes in public and private schools, State educational institutions, halls used for public meetings or entertainments, hotels, lodging houses, theatres, factories or public or municipal buildings, on railroad trains and stations and in other public places in the State of Illinois.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, directly or indirectly connected in any public or private school or in any State institution, halls used for public meetings or entertainments, hotels, lodging houses, theatres, factories or public or municipal buildings in the State of Illinois, to use or permit for use a common drinking cup, glass or other utensil used for public drinking purposes.

SECTION 2. It shall be unlawful for any person or corporation in charge of or in control of any railroad train or any station to permit the use of a common drinking cup, glass or other utensil used for public drinking purposes in or about any train operated by it or in any building or premises used by it whatever.

SECTION 3. No person, firm or corporation in charge of or in control of any railroad train or railroad station, or any State educational institution, or of any hall used for public meetings or entertainments, or hotel, lodging house, theatre, or factory, or of any public or municipal building in the State of Illinois shall furnish any drinking cup, glass or other utensil used for public drinking purposes for public use, nor shall such person or corporation or institution use or have for use in or upon its premises any such common drinking cup.

SECTION 4. Any person, firm or corporation who shall violate any of the provisions of this Act shall, upon conviction, be fined for each offense the sum of not less than five dollars ($5.00) nor more than fifty dollars ($50.00).

Approved June 5, 1911.
The above is a true and correct copy of the Public Drinking Cup Act.
W. H. STEAD,
Attorney General

PUBLIC DRINKING CUP LAW OPINION.

Sections 1, 2 and 3 of this Act, considered together, expressly forbid the use of a common drinking cup, glass or other utensil used for drinking purposes, in public and private schools, State institutions, State educational institutions, halls used for public meetings and entertainments, hotels, lodging houses, theatres, factories, public or municipal buildings, railroad trains, railroad stations, and buildings and premises used by railroads.

It will be observed that the words, "and other public places in the State of Illinois," contained in the title of the Act, are not found in the body of the Act itself. In other words, the title suggests a more comprehensive inclusion of places than does the Act.

Under the broad and general title of the Act it was permissible for the legislature to have prohibited the use of a common drinking cup in the places specifically enumerated in the title "and in other public places in the State of Illinois." But the Legislature did not prohibit the use of the common drinking cup in all public places in the State of Illinois. It dealt with the subject only partially and prohibited the use of the common drinking cup in the place specifically enumerated in the title of the Act, and in addition thereto, in State institutions and railroad buildings or premises, such places, while not specifically mentioned in the title, being comprehended in the general words of the title "and in other public places in the State of Illinois."

The enumeration in the body of the Act wherein the use of the common drinking cup is prohibited is exclusive and its use is prohibited only in the places specifically enumerated in the body of the Act. The body of the Act contains no general language which would extend its provisions beyond the places so enumerated.

In my opinion, the Act applies to the following places only:

1. Public or private schools.
2. State institutions.
3. State educational institutions.
4. Halls used for public meetings and entertainments.
5. Hotels.
6. Lodging houses.
7. Theatres.
8. Factories.
9. Public or municipal buildings.
10. Railroad trains.
11. Railroad stations.
12. Buildings and premises used by railroads.

Replying to specific inquiry, will say that the Act does not apply to the places mentioned in your letter. In my opinion, in the following places (unless connected with a public or private school, State institution, hall used for public meetings or entertainments, hotels, lodging houses, theatres, factories, public or municipal buildings or railroads) the use of a common drinking cup is not prohibited, viz: banks, barber shops, soda fountains, saloons, stores of all kinds, offices of all kinds, galleries, laundries, mines, shops other than factories, restaurants, lunch counters, public parks, public wells and fountains, pool rooms, billiard halls, lodge rooms, club rooms, gymnasiums, hospitals, sanitariums.

The above enumeration of the places to which the Act does not apply does not purport to be full and exclusive. In the nature of things it is impossible at this time to enumerate all the places to which the Act does not apply.

Very respectfully,
Att. Gen. W. H. STEAD.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

Fred Weaver, a farm hand, working for Robert Gramblin, living west of Bruce, had a leg badly broken in a runaway accident that occurred near the Murray farm, south of Sullivan, at 8:30 Tuesday night. Weaver in company with two other men, had been in Sullivan and were on their way home.

The runaway was caused by Weaver's horse becoming frightened when Dr. Davidson passed the buggy in his automobile. Dr. Davidson did not notice any particular trouble when he passed as he turned out wide to give the buggy plenty of room, but he had not gotten far down the road when the rig passed him with the two men who were with Weaver still in it. The horse was running at a break neck speed, but one of the men managed to regain the lines, which Weaver had discarded when he jumped from the buggy immediately after the horse became scared, and stopped the rig without further damage.

No one knew that Weaver had been hurt when he made his jump, but on reaching his destination at Pifer's Park, Dr. Davidson was informed by telephone that Weaver had been injured. He returned to the Murray farm and found that Weaver had suffered a compound fracture of the worst kind. Dr. Davidson brought the injured man to his home in his automobile, and, assisted by Dr. Scarborough, treated and set the crushed bones.

The prevailing opinion is that the blame of the accident lies with the injured man. Losing his head immediately after the horse became scared, he dropped the lines and jumped for safety instead of trying to regain control of the frightened animal.

Fine shades, plenty of good water, and all who go may count on a good time. Everybody will be welcome, so massacre the festive spring chickens, fill up the basket with the fat of the land, hitch old Dobbin to the shay, load in the whole family and come along. A fine attendance is confidently counted upon.

OBITUARY

DELMAR CHESTER McDONALD.
Delmar C. McDonald was born April 12, 1910, died July 13, 1911. Age 15 months and 1 day. He is the youngest child of Ray McDonald and wife, living on South Worth street.

The child died at 2:30 p. m. Thursday of spinal trouble.

The funeral was conducted at 10 a. m. Friday, Rev. J. W. Kilborn of the Christian church officiating. The interment was in Greenhill cemetery.

INSTRUCTIONS IN DRESSMAKING.

Miss A. H. Howell is teaching a class of fourteen, dressmaking in the basement of the Christian church.

She teaches them to cut and fit by measurement. The system of cutting is very simple and easily learned. The girls are progressing very rapidly under her instructions. She is precise and firm with her pupils, requiring them to do the work just right.

There is no question about the pupils being benefited.

She can take pupils in the class Monday. She is desirous of adding more to the class. The girls are enjoying the work. They are as busy as a hive of bees. Certainly a great thing for young ladies as it is essential that they should know how to do their own sewing.

A Fish Story.

For the last three weeks several sets of fishermen from Sullivan and Kirksville have been endeavoring to catch a big cat fish that has been sighted a number of times. The fish escapes to a hole about seven feet deep beneath some logs. The fishermen have had him in their grasp several times but can not hold him. He is estimated as being about seven feet long and weighing 150 or 200 pounds. Some Windsorfites became interested and started after him Thursday.

WHO WERE THEY?

A few Sunday evenings ago some girls were at Asa Creek, below the bridge. A man and woman came along in one seated automobile, when on the bridge they stopped. The woman said to the man with her, "When I hollow go," she then tossed a bundle into the creek and hollowed "go." He did so. The curiosity of the girls being aroused they went near and scrutinized the bundle, but did not pick it up. They described it as being eighteen inches long, rolled up in a sheet and pinned with safety pins.

The young girls went home and related what they had found to their mothers. The mothers expressed their opinion as to the content of the bundle. The girls in their excitement went back and while watching the bundle the automobile came back, they saw the girls. Then later in the night the automobile pair were seen back there and hunting in the creek with a pitch fork. They were seen the last time by a woman living near.

The matter was laid before the sheriff and police force, Monday. Policeman Tolly and Deputy Sheriff Webb searched the place next morning, but found no bundle.

WILLIAM A. RADFORD Editor

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects relating to the subject of building, by the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

In spite of speculation in modern house building and the shoddy materials and methods of construction so frequently seen, the fact remains that, on the whole, we build better today than they did in the "good old days" of our forefathers. And this, too, in spite of the fact that the problem of building today is infinitely more complicated than that which confronted the builder of colonial times; owing to the unexampled complexity of commercial and industrial conditions now marking a transitional period in the development of American city and suburban life. In the olden days all life savored more or less of the country, with its comparative simplicity of conditions. Now, however, the scene is transformed. The marvelous progress of mechanical invention, the creation of new materials and processes and of rapid and powerful labor-saving devices used in building construction, the wide development of natural resources, the rise of new and complex industrial conditions, the rapid growth of industrial centers, the extension of the facilities of commerce, the great lessons of the fire risk—all these have been reflected more or less in American contributions to the art of building as such. Moreover, the architect and the builder of today have advantages that were not at their command a century ago. The range of available and adaptable building materials has greatly broadened, thus giving a selection that did not exist in former days; and this advantage is emphasized by vastly improved transportation facilities which place at the disposal of the builder the varied materials, not only of this entire country, but of the entire world.

It is only, however, within the past thirty years, with the revival of the lonia" influence, with its central hall and symmetrical layout on either side, its classic columns and balustraded porch across the entire front, its curved line above the center window in the dormer, etc., have been embodied in the cottage illustrated in the perspective view and floor plans shown in the accompanying cuts. A house like this can be built complete, under favorable conditions as to location and labor, for $2,650 to $3,900. It is 37 feet wide by 21 feet 6 inches long, not including the length added by the front porch. It contains seven rooms, besides a spacious reception hall. This hall, in the very center, entered directly from the veranda, opens at the left into a commodious and well lighted living room running the full length of the house from front to rear. Half way along the outside wall is an ample fireplace, whose hearthstone is the magnet for many a genial and happy family gathering to enjoy the true comforts of home when the weather is too chilly outside to use the spacious outdoor retreat of the ample porch. Along the opposite wall may be ranged the bookshelves, piano, couches, or some of the other furnishings ordinarily found in the room where the family spend much of their time. The dining room is at the right of the hall, and is provided with a buffet. A door opens directly at the rear, on the right, into the pantry, which is also long-lost art of concrete working, the advent of the steel structural frame, and later the combination of steel and concrete in what is known as the "reinforced concrete" type of construction, that anything of great importance really new has been developed in the art of building in this country. Even to this day, outside of the Spanish missions, there can hardly be said to be any distinctively American type of architecture, the results so far developed being merely an eclectic treatment based on well-tried old-world connected with the kitchen in the center of the house by a hallway that may be entered from the vestibule opening directly off the back porch. The stairs to second floor ascend from rear of reception hall, and those to basement open off a closed passage-way connecting the reception hall in the front with the kitchen in the rear.

The hall upstairs opens directly into three spacious bedrooms on the sides and front of the house, each well lighted and provided with ample closet accommodation, the large bedroom on the left having two of these conveniences so much appreciated by the housewife. The designer showed his further regard for the needs of the family by providing a good-sized sewing room directly over the kitchen. The bathroom is on the second floor, opening directly off the upstairs hall. A well-lighted basement extends under the entire house.

traditions, though infused in some rare instances, as in the buildings of the Chicago World's Fair of 1893, with a breadth of conception and an ineffable spirituality of treatment, which have been seen only here.

It is probable that in the colonial style of architecture, a modification of the type developed in England during the reign of the four Georges, and hence sometimes called the "Georgian" style, with its quaint freedom of treatment of the Roman orders, and its traces of classic refinement, we approached as near as we have ever done to the development of a truly national type of American architecture; and, in our modern work, it is not safe utterly to disregard the rules upon which it was based.

A new feature of modernity is the representing the Lie Direct, the statement that a man was a liar does not bear the weight it used to do. There were times when, if one man called another a liar, that man was called to account for it. It might even be in a duel," said Lord Justice Vaughan Williams, speaking at the Union Society of London with regard to lies told at recent election petitions.

"I have come to the conclusion that the world in general is coming to think that it does not matter very much if one's neighbor calls you a liar or not. You can smile, meet him in society, go out and play golf with him, and shake hands with him, and yet people resented more this imputation for being liars."

LONG AFRICAN TRIP

English Girl Penetrates Wilds of Dark Continent.

Discovers Waterfall on River Map Kaff and French Authorities in Country Name Catastrophe. Chutes MacLeod.

London.—Miss Olive MacLeod, who left England in August last to visit the grave of her fiancé, Lieut. Boyd Alexander, who was murdered by natives in central Africa, recently arrived in London.

She was met by her father, Sir Reginald MacLeod, when she landed, and left for Paddington. Thence she proceeded by motor car to her beautiful home, Vintners, near Maldstone.

Altogether the African journey consisted of 2,700 miles, mostly on foot or horseback. P. A. Talbot, district commissioner of Niagara, and Mrs. Talbot, accompanied her during the whole of the journey, and were responsible for the arrangements.

Among the many trophies that Miss MacLeod brought home were two baby lions, which were presented to her in French Niagra.

Miss MacLeod was very eager to take them home with her, but, being now six months old, they were thought to be rather dangerous pets for Maldstone, and have been sent to the zoo.

During the journey Miss MacLeod traversed land across which no white woman had ever been before. At times the party included as many as 80 natives, these being required to carry stores and food.

Miss MacLeod, with her companions, on arriving at the west coast of Africa, traveled up the Niger as far as she could go in the steamer and canoe.

After going through southern and northern Nigeria the expedition reached French Mbangi in October, and the falls of the Mao Kaff were located.

According to the testimony of French officers and natives, these falls had never been seen before, and in honor of "the brave English girl" going to visit her sweetheart's grave, the French authorities asked for permission to name the falls "Les Chutes MacLeod."

Pushing on into the heart of Africa, Miss MacLeod proceeded through the Tubuli lakes, and eventually reached the Shad down which she traveled to Lake Chad.

Here the picturesque rocks of Had-el-Hamis were inspected, which are held in veneration for miles around.

The highest peak of these rocks was climbed by Miss MacLeod and her companions—a feat which the natives declared to be impossible.

Lake Chad was then crossed in kotoko canoes. This journey took eight days, five of which were spent out of sight of land.

Near Lake Chad the grave of Lieut. Boyd Alexander was visited—the pathetic object of Miss MacLeod's long journey.

Discussing her travels at Plymouth, Miss MacLeod said that the greater part of the route chosen was unknown to Britons.

On arriving at Lagos she said she was surprised to hear rumors that "Miss MacLeod" had been massacred and eaten by cannibals!

Lucky the Snake Crawl.
Cambridge, Mass.—The serpent is even wiser than the woman tells us, according to Professor Maynard, the noted educator here. In a rather startling statement, the professor declares that as a result of a study of snakes he is convinced that had they been able to develop hands and feet instead of being obliged to crawl, their brains would have enabled them to dominate the world. In that event, he asserts, man would probably have remained in a primitive, savage state, or possibly even as an ape.

TWO GOOD GAMES FOR BOYS

"Aunt Sally" and "Frere, On Me Bat," Can Be Played by Any Number of Persons.

"Aunt Sally" is a game that can be played by any number of persons; she herself is a block of wood made in the shape of an old colored woman's head, and painted black. She is placed on the top of a pole set in the ground, and her head is decorated with a frilled cap. You can also dress her with a cape and a ruff, as the picture shows; and do not forget Aunt Sally's pipe. In fact you may stick several pipes in her mouth, and also in her ears, if you wish, for that is part of the game.

The players stand off about twenty feet and throw sticks from twenty inches to two feet in length, trying to break the pipes. Each player throws in turn, and each side pipe broken scores one point, each front pipe two points.

Another good game for boys is one that comes from the French, and is called "Frere, on me bat," which, translated, means "Brother, some one strikes me." Here we will call it "Brother, I am bobbed."

It is a game and a trick combined, and can be played on the green or indoors, which is well, for on rainy days boys want such a game. Two boys are selected as brothers, one of whom must know the game, and the other must never have played it before.

The two brothers are blindfolded, and must stand back to back, but not close together. The one who does not know the game is told that one of the other players, who all stand around the brothers in a ring, will hit one of them with a knotted handkerchief from time to time. The one who is hit must call out "Brother, I am bobbed," and the other asks "Who bobbed you?" If the hit one answers correctly, the hitter takes his place.

Now, this is the trick: As soon as the game begins, the brother who understands the game removes the bandage from his eyes, and quickly knotting it he strikes his brother with it. When he asks "Who bobbed you?" he gets the wrong answer, of course, and so the game goes on until the victim begins to realize that he is being tricked. To throw him off the scent, the other brother must say now and then "Brother, I am bobbed." The players in the ring have the fun of the laugh.

MAKES CYCLE LOOK UNIQUE

Two Wheels Attached to Rear of Machine Gives It Rather Peculiar Appearance.

An inventor in Camden, Maine, has attached two extra wheels to the rear of his motorcycle, converting it into a unique, but, according to him, very practical four-wheeled motorcycle, says the Popular Mechanics. The two extra wheels are held half an inch above the central wheel, so that, when on a level, smooth stretch, they do not come in contact with the road. In rounding corners, two rear wheels and the front wheel, of course, carry the machine, and on rough or soft roads, all three rear wheels come into action.

A change to the right kind of food can lift one from a sick bed: A lady in Weiden, Ill., says:

"Last spring I became bed-fast with severe stomach troubles accompanied by sick headaches. I got worse and worse until I became so low I could scarcely retain any food at all, although I tried about every kind."

"I had become completely discouraged, and given up all hope, and thought I was doomed to starve to death, until one day my husband, trying to find something I could retain, brought home some Grape-Nuts.

"To my surprise the food agreed with me, digested perfectly and without distress. I began to gain strength at once. My flesh (which had been flabby), grew firmer, my health improved in every way and every day, and in a very few weeks I gained 20 pounds in weight."

"I liked Grape-Nuts so well that for four months I ate no other food, and always felt as well as after a banquet as if I had sat down to a fine banquet."

"I had no return of the miserable sick stomach nor of the headaches, that I used to have when I ate other food. I am now a well woman, doing all my own work again, and feel that life is worth living."

"Grape-Nuts food has been a God-send to my family; it surely saved my life; and my two little boys have thriven on it wonderfully." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Of course he tried to be funny. "Maybe it was the night falling?" he said.

"O, I guess not," she exclaimed; "guess it was the day breaking." (Hasty exit of her.)

A DIFFERENT ENTRANCE

WRONG SORT

Perhaps Plain Old Meat, Potatoes and Bread May Be Against You for a Time.

A change to the right kind of food can lift one from a sick bed: A lady in Weiden, Ill., says:

"Last spring I became bed-fast with severe stomach troubles accompanied by sick headaches. I got worse and worse until I became so low I could scarcely retain any food at all, although I tried about every kind."

"I had become completely discouraged, and given up all hope, and thought I was doomed to starve to death, until one day my husband, trying to find something I could retain, brought home some Grape-Nuts.

"To my surprise the food agreed with me, digested perfectly and without distress. I began to gain strength at once. My flesh (which had been flabby), grew firmer, my health improved in every way and every day, and in a very few weeks I gained 20 pounds in weight."

"I liked Grape-Nuts so well that for four months I ate no other food, and always felt as well as after a banquet as if I had sat down to a fine banquet."

"I had no return of the miserable sick stomach nor of the headaches, that I used to have when I ate other food. I am now a well woman, doing all my own work again, and feel that life is worth living."

"Grape-Nuts food has been a God-send to my family; it surely saved my life; and my two little boys have thriven on it wonderfully." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Meadowbrook Farm
By William Pitt

Do not mix sheep and cows.
Keep your chicks on dry ground.

Podder corn should not be neglected.

Roots should always be a part of the ration of dairy cows.

A wet yard is an abomination in the sight of a well-bred hen.

Use the shepherd's crook as little as possible at or before lambing.

The pigs should have clean, pure water always at hand, day and night.

Providing a man knows his business the brood mare is the most profitable farm worker.

Baby beef is not more common because stock raisers generally are not stock breeders.

From the dairy standpoint, the best time in the year for a cow to freshen is the month of September.

Just one setting of thoroughbred eggs may be the means of working a revolution in your poultry business.

If a heifer is to make the best dairy cow she should freshen when she is from two years to thirty months old.

Newly hatched ducklings can be brooded without heat in a box coop at this season, and if well fed will grow rapidly.

The scalper shovel is best for corn cultivation, as the deep running old-style shovel injures the feeding roots.

Dairy butter should be packed in five-pound jars and ten and twenty pound tubs to sell to the best advantage.

If a ewe aborts, remove her at once from the lambing shed; burn all litter, bedding, etc., and thoroughly disinfect the pen.

No extensive grower of potatoes can afford to do without a breeding patch from which to secure seed stock for his own planting.

Orchard grass should be cut just as soon as the blossoms fall, and crimson clover when about two-thirds of the blossoms turn brown.

All sprays after the first should be very fine and so applied as to lightly cover the entire surface of the fruit and foliage with the liquid.

The subject of cutting back young trees when planting is an old one, and the ideal one in favor of which much has been said and written.

It is commonly believed that a warm horse should not be given water to drink, which is correct if the animal is to be allowed all that he will drink.

Some turkey growers who cater to special hotel and club house demands, seek to improve the flavor of the flesh by introducing wild blood into their flocks.

The 1,400-pound mule is becoming a popular draft animal. He is tough, eats less than a horse of the same weight, and if sound will sell for $300 or better.

Alfalfa sown in the fall is almost invariably helped by diskings the following spring, with the disks set quite straight, so as not to cut the crowns, but to split them.

Corn and corn meal are carbonaceous matter, similar in composition to that of cream, and there is no feed that a calf likes so well as shelled corn or corn meal.

Potatoes should be either put over an inch and three-quarters screen or assorted so as not to have anything under an inch and three-quarters in the stock sent to market.

A good mower oil is made by mixing, at about 120 degrees, the ordinary thin oil and the heavy dark grade. If this does not run freely file off a half-inch of the snout of the oil can.

Many a good spirited young horse has his value greatly lessened, if he is not ruined by being compelled to work beside a slow, lazy mate, or one that is so much stronger that to keep up with him requires a constant strain.

Try postings this summer.

Cultivating corn is crop insurance.

Dairymen should not neglect breeding.

A mixture of dead seed can easily be detected by the color.

The standard remedies against cut-worms are poisoned baits.

The range of prices between poor and really good fruit is very great.

Milk is most conveniently pasteurized in the bottles in which it is delivered.

The kicking and straining of a caught ewe, heavy in lamb, may cause her to abort.

Look to the garden. Plant a succession of vegetables to last through the winter months.

To put a heavy load on the low-down wagon is a low-down trick on the willing horse.

A sanitary barn should have from four to six square feet of window-space for each cow kept.

More beef can be produced from young cattle than from older ones, with the same money.

The price of small cattle of high finish is practically as high as that of larger and coarser ones.

Calves fed on whole milk are the best for baby beef, for they are in good flesh at weaning time.

Cut out the useless brush in your old trees and give the sun a chance to reach every part of them.

The market for good horses continues good in spite of the ever increasing number of automobiles.

If you find it necessary to assist the ewe to deliver, be sure to carbolic or vasoline the hands before operating.

Do not give the ewe turpentine or other roots immediately after lambing; it's dangerous to both ewe and lamb.

Large orchard trees will require from six to twelve gallons of spray for a thorough treatment at the first application.

The Jersey cow is a delicate, nervous machine and requires warmth, kindness and liberal feeding to make her profitable.

For a good egg lay, feed plenty of green food and beet scraps, and make the Lewis scratcher for their grain. The eggs must come.

If milk is kept in a cool place and stays sweet too long, it will be bitter and the result is that the cream will make strong butter.

After having assisted in a bad case of lambing do not go to a healthy ewe until hands, clothes, etc., have been thoroughly disinfected.

In summer, if there are no trees in the pasture which afford a sufficiency of shade, some artificial shelters should be there provided.

To breed ewes early in the summer, it is necessary to have them lamb early enough so that they may be dry before attempting to breed them.

We frequently see young colts following along the fields after their dams, walking many miles during the hot weather. Useless and poor business.

After the first week of sleeping and resting, the young calf should be allowed to exercise freely in the open air, in order to develop muscles, lungs and heart.

Get a horse with his shoulders thrown well back over his ribs and his neck rising out of the top of his shoulders, and you have the finest element of style.

Common sense is better than the best dairy instruction of the day, but it clearly shows a lack of common sense when a dairymen discards all recent investigations.

Laying hens should have a continual supply of clean, fresh water to drink, and the little chicks should never be without it from the time they are matched until fully grown.

It has been demonstrated that a light frost does not injure the quality of the silage, provided the corn goes into the soil before the leaf and stalk has lost much of its moisture.

Don't be in too great a hurry to assist a ewe to deliver her lamb; you may do more harm than good; be quite sure that she has absolutely given up before trying to help her.

In case a ewe disowns or refuses to let her lamb suck, sprinkle a little salt of aniseed over the back, and shoulders of the lamb; this will often induce the mother to lick it and effect a reconciliation, and in no way harms the lamb.

PITIFUL SIGHT WITH ECZEMA

"A few days after birth we noticed an inflamed spot on our baby's hip which soon began spreading until baby was completely covered—even in his eyes, ears and scalp. For eight weeks he was banded from head to foot. He could not have a stitch of clothing on. Our regular physician pronounced it chronic eczema. He is a very able physician and ranks with the best in this locality, nevertheless, the disease began spreading until baby was completely covered. He was losing flesh so rapidly that we became alarmed and decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"Not until I commenced using Cuticura Soap and Ointment could we tell what he looked like, as we dared not wash him; and I had been putting one application after another on him. On removing the scale from his head the hair came out, and left him entirely bald, but since we have been using Cuticura Soap and Ointment he has as much hair as ever. Four weeks after we began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment he was entirely cured. I don't believe anyone could have eczema worse than our baby's.

"Before we used the Cuticura Remedies we could hardly look at him, he was such a pitiful sight. He would fuss until I would treat him; they seemed to relieve him so much. Cuticura Soap and Ointment stand by themselves and the result they quickly and surely bring is their own recommendation." (Signed) Mrs. T. B. Rosser, Mill Hall, Pa., Feb. 20, 1912.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 22-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 28 K, Boston.

Settled Tim.
"I've a sight o' sons—thirteen altogether," remarked a prosperous old farmer, "and all of 'em's done me credit save the three eldest, who sowed wild oats at a pretty rapid rate, and then came home and saddled my shoulders with the harvest."

"Well, I own I was glad to see 'em back, and I feasted 'em, and petted 'em, and set 'em on their legs again, only to see 'em skeddaddle off afresh only to see 'em skeddaddle off afresh when things had slowed down, with all the cash they could lay hands on."

"That thereabouts sickened me, so I called the rest of 'em together and 'There's ten of you left, and if any of you 'ud like to follow t'other three I won't try to stop you. But, understand this, though there may be a few more prodigal sons, there'll be no more fattened calves. I've killed the last of 'em!"

"And," continued the old man, triumphantly, "I've had trouble w' none of 'em since!"

To Make Fruit Jar Rubbers Last.
To have fruit jar rubbers last, keep them well covered in a jar full of flour until used, and as soon as removed from empty jars. One can then afford a good quality of rubbers, as kept thus they will safely last several seasons. When there is doubt of old rubbers, they may often be made to eke out one more season by using two of the rubbers to each jar and screwing down tight. Always stand newly-filled jars upside down until cool, to test the tops and rubbers.—Designer.

CARING FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Thirty-Nine State and 134 Local Sanatoria Provided, but These Are Only a Beginning.

In spite of the fact that state sanatoria and hospitals for tuberculosis have been established in 31 states, and 134 municipal or county hospitals in 26 states, vastly more public provision is needed to stamp out consumption, says the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Nearly every state east of the Mississippi river has provided a state sanatorium, and west of the Mississippi river, state sanatoria have been established in Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Oregon. There are 35 sanatoria provided by these states, Massachusetts having four, Connecticut and Pennsylvania three and Texas two. Including special pavilions and almshouses, there are 114 municipal or county hospitals for the care of tuberculosis patients.

Apart from these institutions, however, and a few special pavilions at prisons, hospitals for the insane, and some other public institutions, a grand total of hardly 200, the institutional care of the consumptive is left to private philanthropy.

Burglar Befriended Him.
A burglar was arrested for robbing a house up the state some time since, and the next morning the victim rushed wildly into the magistrate's office. As soon as he could get his breath to working again he told the official that he had come to "see about the prisoner."

"Glad you came down," was the affable response of the magistrate. "I suppose you want to appear against him?"

"Well, I guess not," exclaimed the victim with a glad smile. "I want to see him on the brow and give him $10. Among other things that he stole from the house was a package of love letters that I wrote to my wife before we were married."

Would Try Another.
There was going to be a picnic that morning, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The little boy prayed before he retired at night that it might be a fine day. And when he looked out of the window at the peep of dawn, it was raining.

"You don't like educated Indians!"
"Oh, yes, I like them well enough, but I always feel a sense of shame when I meet one. He knows that my ancestors cheated his ancestors out of their land, and he knows that I know he knows it."

Louise Jennings, Elsie Hathaway and Florence Brinthal are three schoolmates whose indulgent parents provided a picnic for each of them, giving carte blanche as to the number of their guests and the manner of entertainment on the beach. Three parties in ten days means a lot to young ladies of the tender age of eight. But they recovered quickly enough from the fatigue. Followed comparisons.

"I notice all my guests rode round on the carousel as often as they wanted."

"I'm sure my party was the best of all," spoke up Flo. "Father says every kid in town was there."

"Where is that spot you call the 'lovers' lane'?" diffidently asks the young man while the young lady waits on the hotel piazza.
"Right down yonder," replies the clerk. "Just keep going until you see the porter from the barber shop. 'Lovers' lane' is so crowded now that we have him stationed there to give the guests' checks, so that each may have his turn."—Judge's Library.

SUICIDE ATTEMPT.

There is a good story going the rounds, says the Fulton Co. Democrat, about a traveling man who was up in Maine, that dry state where the saloon people say you can get a drink quicker than you can in Canton.

It is noticed that Duffy, the proprietor of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, has departed this vale of tears. For many years his product has been advertised as a sort of elixir of life that would keep people on earth until they were at least one hundred and ten years old.

OWNING A HOME.

The man who does not know where he is to live from year to year is like the tree that is constantly replanted, he does not take root and grow any where. This is so true that ownership of real estate presumes prosperity and interest in local affairs and lack of one presumes lack of the other.

The renter not only loses the advantages already mentioned, but he contributes his labor and money to the improvement, upkeep and beautifying of another's property and is deprived in this way of investments that would be for his own benefit if he owned the property.

Life Saver

In a letter from Branchland, W. Va., Mrs. Elizabeth Chapman says: "I suffered from womanly troubles nearly five years. All the doctors in the county did me no good. I took Cardui, and now I am entirely well. I feel like a new woman. Cardui saved my life! All who suffer from womanly trouble should give Cardui a trial."

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

50 years of proof have convinced those who tested it, that Cardui quickly relieves aches and pains due to womanly weakness, and helps nature to build up weak women to health and strength. Thousands of women have found Cardui to be a real life saver. Why not test it for your case? Take Cardui today!

Knowledge of this fact alone prevents the renter from making improvements that he otherwise would make.

The home of the family largely reflects its character and the house that is planned by the family and built to order can be made more nearly to meet that family's needs than any other house it may casually rent.

But the owning of a home carries with it intangible benefits not measured in any medium of exchange. To the family reared in the old homestead every room has a history and about the whole house cluster memories too sacred to be expressed in words, for after all the world is largely governed by matters of sentiment.

The habit of moving from place to place, and it is largely a habit, is peculiarly American, and it is a serious fault. For by that habit Americans deprive themselves of all the home sentiment, a real important element in the makeup of the well rounded out character.

Less Alcohol in Hospitals. The drink bill at most London hospitals is much less than it used to be. At Guy's, for instance, the sum yearly expended on alcoholic liquors for the patients is at the rate of 9s. a bed. In 1862 it was no less than 23 9s.—London Mail.

Sullivan Has to Bow to the Inevitable—Scores of Endorsements Prove It.

After reading the public statement of this fellow-sufferer given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cures you in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

Mrs. J. W. Ritchey, 715 S. Thirty-Second Street, Mattoon, Ill., says: "I never used another medicine that did me as much good as Doan's Kidney Pills. For years I suffered from backache and I found the greatest difficulty in stooping or lifting. At times I felt so languid and weak that it was almost impossible for me to put one foot before the other. My condition was alarming and I was constantly trying one preparation or another without being helped. My husband finally procured a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills for me and I began their use. In a few days I was relieved and by the time I had finished the contents of one box of Doan's Kidney Pills, I was practically cured. Only those who suffer as I did can understand how grateful I am to Doan's Kidney Pills." (Statement given March 1, 1909.)

Do your duty, also no knowledge, beauty or love will ever lead you to the peace of God. He who says, "I may not be great; I may miss all peace, but I will be true," stands at the altar from which the divine benediction is ever pronounced.—Pennsylvania Grit.

There is more Ostarb in this section of the country than all the other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly falling to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Ostarb to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. A Humble Queen. Queen Adelaide, the wife of King William IV., was a woman of unaffected piety and humility. These qualities were conspicuous in the directions left in her will: "I die in all humility, knowing well that we are all alike before the throne of God, and I request therefore that my mortal remains be conveyed to the grave without any pomp or state. I die in peace, and wish to be carried to the tomb in peace and free from the vanities and the pomp of this world."—Home Notes.

Malthoid Roofing

Wherever you see a roofing advertisement remember that its words of self-praise and description came from the original advertisements of the Malthoid Roofing makers—The Paraffine Paint Co. of San Francisco and Chicago.

Twenty-six years ago they said of their roofing all the nice things that are now said of every other roofing.

These "others" have stolen their words—imitated their methods—but they cannot duplicate the quality of Malthoid roofing—it always was the best and always will be.

Whenever you see a roofing advertisement think of Malthoid the original.

Biggest Steamship

That the Hamburg-American Line is to make an effort to eclipse in grandeur and speed all that is promised for the giant White Star ships, Olympic and Titanic, was revealed here to day when it was learned that the German company had placed an order with Harland & Wolff for a vessel 950 feet long.

This will exceed by nearly 70 feet the length of the White Star Ships. The newest liner will be the biggest ship in the world.

It is also regarded as significant that the German company has gone to the builders of the White Star Leviathans, one of which, the Olympic, will start on her maiden voyage for New York on June 28.

The Olympic and Titanic are each 882 feet long, with a tonnage each of 60,000 tons. The Mauretania is 762 feet long, tonnage 31,938; the Lusitania, the same length, 31,550 tonnage. The new German vessel will be nearly 200 feet longer than either Cunarder.

There is much speculation in ship ping circles here as just to where the new giant of the sea will dock, as there is no pier at the Hamburg-American Line's Hoboken docks to take in the new ship completely. The Chelsea pier, recently allowed to be lengthened, would just about berth the new German boat, with about 50 feet to spare.

It believed that the German company intended to use the proposed new landing at Montauk Point, L. I., for the new boat. There is also the matter of sufficient depth of free water for the German boat in the channel at the entrance of New York Harbor. The new White Star monsters draw nearly 40 feet and it is expected the German vessel will draw more.

Fashion Moulds The Woman.

Alas for the decree of fashion that we men should be thin! A distinguished scientific sharp announces that thin women are always abnormal physically and mentally and, in a broad sense, morally. It is the thin women who are scolding wives, who drive the children frantic and cause the servants to leave after a week's stay. It is an economic loss for a woman to be thin, and it argues that there is some functional disorder that calls for the surgeon's knife. This man says that every thin woman should be operated on at once. It may be that he is a surgeon.

Far be it from us to dispute the statement of the learned physician. The experts are getting entirely too many for us. There was a time when it was possible to keep up with the general trend of scientific development, but we have abandoned that long ago, and take every statement with simple, child-like faith even when the experts are diametrically opposed to each other. We find it easier to believe everything than to sift out what seems most logical. But we make the point that all doctors in creation, including those of the female sex, cannot make women believe that it is worth while becoming fat. The world just now is filled with women railing at dressmakers or style makers because prevailing fashions are only for thin women. One might suppose that the fat ladies—we speak with all due respect—would give up the game and wear that which is comfortable and makes least conspicuous. On the contrary, they will follow fashion's demand at any cost, and hence we see things on the street, in the home and at the opera which make strong men weep.

The only thing for fat women to do is to organize and make fashion do something for them. The trouble is that no woman will confess that she is fat. She may admit to herself that she is rather plump with a tendency to embonpoint; but fat! Never! If you want to curry favor with a woman who is carrying flesh, just remark that she is growing thin. You are in her good graces forever; but the man who suggests even to his wife that she ought to train down a little in for more peace and fears than wars or women have.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

RURAL CARRIERS TO GET INCREASE

FORTY THOUSAND EMPLOYEES TO BE RAISED $100 A YEAR BY GOVERNMENT

BUT MORE WORK IS ADDED

Parcel-Post System, If Adopted, May Make Present Salary Self-Supporting. Present Rate is $25.00, 000 Per Annum.

Washington.—The 40,000 rural free delivery carriers in the United States are to receive salary increases as a result of a decision reached by Postmaster General Hitchcock.

The order will provide for the disbursement during the current fiscal year of $4,000,000, which will mean an increase of $100 over the present salary of $900 for all carriers on standard routes.

Congress provided last session for the expenditure of this extra $4,000,000, but left it to the discretion of the postmaster general as to how much of it should be expended. Mr. Hitchcock decided to authorize the expenditure of the full amount.

His desire to compensate the carriers for any additional burden which may be placed on them if the parcel post system, as he has recommended for rural routes is approved by congress, was the important consideration, Mr. Hitchcock declared, which led him to make the authorization.

In the current year the rural service will cost the government about $40,000,000, the estimated loss being about $25,000,000. The postmaster general expressed the belief that the parcel post system, under proper management, would insure the maintenance and extension of the rural free delivery service as a self-supporting branch of the postal service.

The rural delivery system was started 15 years ago with 83 carriers, who were paid only $200 a year. On July 1, there were 41,563 carriers, their aggregate salaries being $37,783,000.

Types of the Christian Life

By Dr. Hugh T. Kerr, Chicago

Jesus loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus. Jesus loved them all. Yet he loved each of them. Martha and Mary and Lazarus. Each of them has a place in his heart. Yet they are so different. Jesus does not seek for monotony, but variety in his kingdom. The kingdom of grace is like the kingdom of nature. No two varieties are alike. In my Father's house are many mansions. One family, but many members. One home, but many hearts.

That was the revelation of God's character in the Old Testament. He was the son of Abraham, of Isaac, of Jacob. How different they were Abraham—the faithful, the consecrated, the pathfinder. Isaac—the legalistic, the indifferent, the father of an illustrious son, the son of an illustrious father. Jacob—the Jew-crafty and cunning, yet tender-hearted and visionary, and God was the father of each and yet loved them all.

The fault with us is we want religion to level human nature at a dead uniformity, and we think Christians should all be conformed to our type, forgetting that Christ is the universal type—so universal that we may all be unlike each other and yet all be like him. It is the fault that belongs to our education. We grind all our children through the same mill. Black and white, delicate and robust, brilliant and underhand, they must all submit to the same polishing process.

It is the fault of our church system, also. We want to level down the whole congregation to our own miserable level. We think Christ has conceived in us the true conception of his saint. There is the Sunday school type and the Christian Endeavor type and the prayer meeting type. There is the elder type and the trustee type. The W. C. T. U. type and the Y. M. C. A. type. The temperance type and the missionary type. There is the Presbyterian and the Methodist and the Baptist type. The Mary and the Martha and the Lazarus type. But the love of God is broader than the measure of man's mind, and all may be included in his all embracing love.

Let us remember that Jesus loved Mary and Martha and Lazarus. Mary the passive, Martha the active, and Lazarus the patient. Mary—satisfied to be. Martha—to do. Lazarus—to do without. Mary—the waiter. Martha—the worker. Lazarus—the watcher. Mary content to sit. Martha content to serve. Lazarus content to suffer. And Jesus loved each and he loved all. Jesus loved Martha. That is what the record says. The active, busy serving Christian Martha. She is in the majority today and is greatly in demand. Sometimes she is apt to think she is the only one whom the Lord loves. She has much Scripture to quote in favor of her disposition and she has the authority of great men who favor the strenuous life. What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy. Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction. "Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only."

Martha is everywhere respected and honored today because she does things. She is the Sunday school, the prayer meeting, the church services, the missionary society, the ladies aid. She is cooking, praying, sewing, visiting, collecting for the kingdom of God, until when night comes she falls asleep too tired to say her prayers. And Jesus loved Martha. And we must love her too. A religion that finds its joy in service and in consecrated activity is apt to be a moral power. A religion that finds God nearer in moments of sentiment or musical ecstasy, instead of in moments of moral endeavor, is extremely dangerous. Jesus loved Martha.

Jesus loved Mary. Mary—the quiet, retiring sister who sat at his feet. Mary's claim to recognition came from being willing to wait upon his words. She is like the beautiful picture through which you look into the great far beyond. She is like whispering music singing comfort into troubled hearts.

In a world of sin and turmoil Mary sat in the confidence of a beautiful trust. She was like another beautiful girl upon whose tombstone her friends carved the words: "It was easier to be good when she was with us." That was Mary's tribute. "What interests the world in Mr. Gladstone," writes John Morley, "is even more what he was than what he did." What interests the world in Jesus is not so much his beautiful teaching as his more beautiful life.

It was a hard lesson for Elijah to learn. He was the child of the storm and the tempest. He lived in reformations and revolutions. "Behold, the Lord passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains and brake in pieces the rocks before Jehovah." My dear friends, let us not take away from the boundless power the love of God. He loved Mary and Martha and Lazarus. All with their differences. And they all loved him. Mary sits at his feet. Martha hurries to supply his wants. And Lazarus is content to glorify him with his radiant resurrection glory. With all our differences and misunderstandings and selfishness we love him and each in turn is loved by him.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

All Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had headache and nervousness, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DEMA BERTHOX, Sikeston, Mo.

CHAPTER XXI.

A Bar of Soap.

Late that evening Betty Mercer and Dallas were writing verses of condolences to be signed by all of us and put under the door into Jim's room when Bella came running down the stairs.

Dal was reading the first verse when she came. "Listen to this, Bella," he said triumphantly.

There was a fat artist named Jas, who cruelly called his friends nas. When, altho' shut up tight, He broke out over night With a rash that is maddening, he claa.

Then he caught sight of Bella's face as she stood in the doorway and stopped.

"Jim is delirious!" she announced tragically. "You shut him in there all alone and now he's delirious. I'll never forgive any of you."

"Delirious!" everybody exclaimed. "He was sane enough when I took him his chicken broth," Mr. Harbison said. "He was almost fluent."

"He is stark, staring crazy," Bella insisted hysterically. "I—I locked the door carefully when I went down to my dinner, and when I came up it—it was unlocked, and Jim was babbling on the bed, with a sheet over his face. He—he says the house is haunted and he wants all the men to come up and sit in the room with him."

"Not on your life," Max said. "I am young and my career has only begun. I don't intend to be cut off in the flower of my youth. But I'll tell you what I'll do; I'll take him a drink. I can tie it to a pole or something."

But Mr. Harbison did not smile. He was thoughtful for a minute. Then: "I don't believe he is delirious," he said quietly, "and I wouldn't be surprised if he has happened on something that will be of general interest. Think I will stay with him to-night."

After that, of course, none of the others would confess that he was afraid, so with the South American leading, they all went up-stairs. The women of the party sat on the lower steps and listened, but everything was quiet. Now and then we could hear the sound of voices, and after a while there was a rapid slamming of doors and the sound of some one running down to the second floor. Then quiet again.

In an hour or so they sent for Flannigan and he went up-stairs. He came down again soon, however, and returned with something over his arm that looked like a rope. It seemed to be made of all kinds of things tied together, trunk straps, clothesline, bed sheets, and something that Flannigan pointed to with rapid lips. "I hadn't been able to keep his clothes on all day. He refused to explain further, however, and trailed the nondescript article up the stairs. We could only gaze after him as he disappeared at all events.

The convalescent lasted far into the night. The feminine contingent went to bed, but not to sleep. Some time after midnight Mr. Harbison and Max went downstairs and I could hear them rattling around testing windows and burglar alarms. But finally every one settled down and the rest of the night was quiet.

Betty Mercer came into my room the next morning, Sunday, and said Anne Brown wanted me. I was over at once, and Anne was sitting up in bed, crying. Dal had slipped out of the room at daylight, she said, and hadn't come back. He had thought she was asleep, but she wasn't, and she knew he was dead, for nothing ever made Dal get up on Sunday before noon.

There was no one moving in the house, and I hardly knew what to do. It was Betty who said she would go up and rouse Mr. Harbison and Max, who had taken Jim's place in the studio. She started out bravely enough, but in a minute we heard her flying back. Anne grew perfectly white.

"He's lying on the upper stairs!" Betty cried, and we all ran out. It was quite true. Dal was lying on the stairs in a bath-robe, with one of Jim's Indian war-clubs in his hand. And he was sound asleep.

He looked somewhat embarrassed when he roused and saw us standing around him. He said he was going to play a practical joke on somebody and fell asleep in the middle of it. And Anne said he wasn't even an intelligent liar, and went back to bed in a temper. But Betty came in with me, and we sat and looked at each other and didn't say much. The situation was beyond us.

The doctor let Jim out next day, there having been nothing the matter with him but a stomach rash. But Jim was changed; he mooned around Bella, of course, as before, but he was abstracted at times, and all that day—Sunday—he wandered off by himself, and one would come across him unexpectedly in the basement or along some of the unused back halls.

Aunt Selma held service that morning. Jim said that he always had a prayer-book, but that he couldn't find anything with so many people in the house. So Aunt Selma read some religious poetry out of the newspapers, and gave us a valuable talk on Deception versus Honesty, with me as the illustration.

Almost everybody took a nap after luncheon. I stayed in the den and read Ibsen, and felt very mournful. And after Hedda had shot her rifle, I lay down on the divan and cried a little—over Hedda; she was young and it was such a tragic ending—and then I fell asleep.

When I wakened Mr. Harbison was standing by the table, and he held my book in his hands. In view of the armed neutrality between us, I expected to see him bow to me courteously, turn on his heel and leave the room. Indeed, considering his state of mind the night before, I should hardly have been surprised if he had thrown Hedda at my head. (This is not a pun. I detect them.) But instead, when he heard me move he glanced over at me and even smiled a little.

"She wasn't worth it," he said, indicating the book.

"Worth what?"

"Your tears. You were crying over it, weren't you?"

"She was very unhappy," I asserted indifferently. "She was married and she loved some one else."

"Do you really think she did?" he asked. "And even so, was that a reason?"

"The other man cared for her; he may not have been able to help it."

"But he knew that she was married," he said virtuously, and then he caught my eye and he saw the analogy instantly, for he colored hotly and put down the book.

"Most men argue that way," I said. "They argue by the book, and they do as they like."

He blinked up at me from his paper and balanced it across his finger.

"You are perfectly right," he said at last. "I deserve it all. My grievance is at myself. You—your beauty, and the fact that I thought you were unhappy, put me—beside myself. It is not an excuse; it is a weak explanation. I will not forget myself again."

He was as abject as any one could have wished. It was my minute of triumph, but I can not pretend that I was happy. Evidently it had been only a passing impulse. If he had really cared, now that he knew I was free, he would have forgotten things felt again at once. The explanation occurred to me. She had seen me at the time, and she had been to find that she had been married!

"The fault of the situation was really mine," I said magnanimously. "I quite blame myself. Only, you must believe me one thing. You never finished up any amusement." I looked at him sideways. The discovery that Bella and Jim were once married must have been a great shock.

It was a surprise, as I called myself. His voice and his eyes were so steady. He returned my gaze steadily. I was intending to have gone half-way to meet him, as I had, and then to find him intrenched in self-sufficiency again. I got up.

"It is unfortunate that our acquaintance has begun so unfavorably," I remarked, preparing to pass him. "Under other circumstances we might have been friends."

"There is only one solace," he said. "When we do not have friends, we can not lose them."

He opened the door to let me pass out, and as our eyes met, all the coldness died out of his. He held out his hand, but I was hurt. I refused to see it.

"Kit!" he said unsteadily. "I—I'm an obstinate, pig-hearted brute. I am sorry. Can't we be friends, after all?"

"When we do not have friends we can not lose them," I replied with cool malice. And the next instant the door closed behind me.

It was that night that the really serious event of the quarantine occurred.

We were gathered in the library, and everybody was deadly dull. Aunt Selma said she had been reared to a strict observance of the Sabbath, and she refused to go to bed early. The cards and card-tables were put away and every one sat around and quarreled and was generally nasty, except Bella and Jim, who had gone into the den just after dinner and firmly closed the door.

I think it was just after Max proposed to me. Yes, he proposed to me again that night. He said that Jim's illness had decided him; that any of us might take sick and die, shut in that contaminated atmosphere, and that if he did he wanted it all settled. And whether I took him or not he wanted me to remember him kindly if anything happened. I really hated to refuse him—he was in such a deadly earnest. But it was quite unnecessary for him to have blamed his refusal, as he did, on Mr. Harbison. I am sure I had refused him plenty of times before I had ever heard of the man. Yes, it was just after he proposed to me that Flannigan came to the door and called Mr. Harbison out into the hall.

Mr. Harbison went out, muttering something about a storm coming up, and seeing that the tent was secure, Betty Mercer went with him. She had been at his heels all evening, and called him "Tom" on every possible occasion. Indeed, she made no secret of it; she said that she was mad about him, and that she would love to live in South America.

So Betty went with him. She wore a pale yellow dinner gown, with just a sophisticated touch of black here and there, and cut modestly square in the neck. Her shoulders are scrawny. And after they were gone—not her shoulders, Mr. Harbison and she—Aunt Selma announced that the next day was Monday, that she had only a week's supply of clothing with her, and that no policeman who ever swung a mace should wash her undergarments for her.

She paused a moment, but nobody offered to do it. Anne was reading De Maupassant under cover of a table, and the rest pretended not to hear. After a pause, Aunt Selma got up heavily and went upstairs, coming down soon after with a bundle covered with a green shawl, and with a white bairn's stocking trailing from an opening in it. She paused at the library door, surveyed the inmates, caught my unlucky eye, and beckoned to me with a relentless forefinger.

"We can put them to soak tonight," she confided to me, "and tomorrow they will be quite simple to do. There is no lace to speak of"—Dal raised his eyebrows—"and very little flouncing."

Aunt Selma and I went to the laundry.

It is strange what big things develop from little ones. In this case it was a bar of soap. And if Flannigan had used as much soap as he should have instead of washing up the kitchen floor with cold dish water, it would have developed sooner. The two most unexpected events of the whole quarantine occurred that night at the same time, one on the roof and one in the cellar. The cellar one, although curious, was not so serious as the other, so it comes first.

Culture.

Thus there is a climbing scale of culture from the first agreeable sensation which a sparkling gem or a scarlet stain affords the eyes, up through fair outlines and details of the landscape, features of the human face and form, signs and tokens of thought and character in manners, up to the ineffable mysteries of the intellect.

Wherever we begin thither our steps tend; an ascent from the joy of a horse and his trappings, up to the perception of Newton, that the globe on which we ride is only a larger apple falling from a larger tree; up to the perception of Plato, that globe and universe are made and early expressions of an all-disciplined unity.

The first stair on the scale to the temple of the mind—

Beautiful New York City, Who Belong to the Extinct Dynasty of Hawaii.

New York.—Of the few descendants who remain of the royal house of Hawaii there are at least two who are residents of this country. These are Miss Anna Douglass Graham, of New York, and her mother, who is the wife of the famous Dutch painter, Hubert Vos. Mrs. Vos before her first marriage to Mr. Graham was the Princess Kaitiaki. Miss Graham is one of the most beautiful young ladies in the metropolis and was one of the bridesmaids of William Gould at her recent marriage to Lord Decles. It is now reported that she is to become the bride of Jay Gould, the youngest son of George Gould.

The former Queen of Hawaii, Liliuokalani, whose name is rarely mentioned now in the newspapers, is living at Honolulu, where she still keeps a little court. For years she made periodical visits to Washington to press her claims against the government for the value of the old crown lands which formerly were invested in her and which now form the public domain. But Washington would not be convinced that she had any rights in this particular and apparently she has given up the fight and will probably never again leave her island home.

The native Hawaiians are still deeply attached to their former queen. On her birthday all Hawaii flocks to the ex-Queen's home in Washington place and pays court to her in that pretty home in the old, old way, with the aliti, or nobles, wearing the ahueles about their shoulders and the kihis standing solemnly in the corner in token of royal dignity.

Liliuokalani was dethroned in the revolution of 1893, when a provisional government was declared, with Sanford B. Dole at its president. Annexation to the United States was then sought, but upon the refusal of President Cleveland to sanction it the republic of Hawaii was proclaimed an independent state in 1894. In 1898, during the administration of President McKinley Hawaii was annexed to the United States.

HOUSE BUILT IN A TREE TOP

Two Ravenswood, Ill., Boys Construct a Comfortable Domicile in a Big Willow.

Ravenswood, Ill.—A tree house "that's different" is now being built in this Chicago suburb, by two boys, Robert Broadbent and Charlie Brandt. In the first place it takes two big willow trees to hold up this house and it is substantially stayed by a third.

Then there is more pretention about this house than most tree structures, for it has an L, there are to be two rooms, and on top there will be a roof garden. Ever hear of a roof garden on top of a tree house?

The house will be illuminated by electricity and it will be substantially furnished for both summer and winter use. The squirrels as a rule make use of tree houses in Chicago in winter, but Mr. Fluffy Tail, his gray coated wife and his family will have to keep out of this one, for it's going to be occupied even when the wind blows cold, and snows cover the garden overhead to the depth of a foot or more.

Gets $125,000 Pipe Organ.

New York.—A $125,000 pipe organ, the largest and finest chamber organ in the world, has been installed in the $10,000,000 Fifth Avenue residence of Senator W. A. Clark of Montana. It occupies one end of the senator's main picture gallery. The organ was built in Los Angeles and contains 4,800 pipes. Its owner has had engaged as his organist Arthur Scott Brock, who was organist of the giant organ at the Chicago World Fair.

French knots come back for the warm days.

Are Quite Taking Place of Fashionable Beading—How to Make Them.

French knots are quite taking the place of the fashionable beading. The latest thing is to buy a voile or marquisette blouse pattern marked for beading, and to make a French knot instead at each place for a bead. The effect is soft and extremely pleasing.

Most of us know how to make French knots, but instructions to the others may not come amiss. Briefly, they are as follows:

To make a French knot, draw the needle through the upper side of the fabric. Hold it in the right hand and with the left hand take hold of the silk at a point near the fabric and twist it two or three times around the needle. Then put the point of the needle through the fabric again, very close to the point at which you brought it up; draw the twisted silk closely around it and push the needle through. Hold the twist tight against the goods with your left hand while you draw the length of silk through, so as to keep it from uncolling. When the silk has been drawn quite through, it holds the knot.

HOT WEATHER HINTS

A WORD ABOUT THE NEEDED HOUSE GARMENTS.

Simple Styles in Dainty Materials That the Home Dressmaker Can Put Together—Illustration Shows a Pretty Idea.

This is a tale of the attractive and comfortable house garments needed for hot weather and which a woman of any sewing gift can run up in a few hours. I shall tell only of the simplest styles—styles which can be bought ready made at a pinch if you can't sew—tell only of the dainty materials which can be had from 12 1/2 cents up to 30.

What sort of negligees does the average woman need—she who is neither rich nor poor, but who is still young, or else very young and so coquettish and pretty in her instincts as she should be? First of all a comfortable kimono for her bedroom, for the resting hours which are to build up her good looks or keep them in good trim, next, some little gown or other which is so discreet in style that it might easily be worn for the reception of some accidental guest, be he her young man, the mayor of the town or the new minister, and after that one or two—the more the merrier—dainty little sacques of the sort that go with petticoats or dress skirts as the occasion may need.

The kimono is handy, needful, altogether a thing of the greatest desirability, but with summer so near, when the stern rules of dress are so much relaxed, modish woman needs more

MATERIALS THAT ARE USED

Combinations Are Much Seen in Costumes Turned Out for This Season's Wear.

Combinations of materials are much seen. In tailored suits, tunic skirts show the petticoat or underskirt, the jacket and the tunic of one material. The second material is employed for the collar, cuff and revers facing.

Deep collar and revers facings of black velvet are used on light tailored suits, and two colors of one material in contrasting tones are united in a simple suit.

The always popular combination of blue serge and black satin is again used. In a blue serge suit a tunic of blue serge passes around the figure and over a sash drapery of black satin which forms the back panel.

than the single garment, which is distinctly for use in my lady's chamber and is improper elsewhere. She requires a belted daintiness, something that can be worn over a little lancing corset, that can see and be seen, and that is so cool and good to look at that it seems a real pleasure to be a woman and know the summer-time.

In the illustration shown the style of the sleeves and the smart shaping of the peplum, as well as the chance to use a very good embroidery, offer very dashing possibilities for a little dinner sacque or a belted waist that would go with a skirt in the same material.

As pictured, the charming coquette is of white dotted muslin with square yoke, sleeve frills and peplum of embroidery, and a little lace beading threaded with soft louisiane ribbon.

If made in a single material from three to four yards would be needed. And now let me specialise a little with materials—really cheap things that are not often used. Take a look at the fancy curtain muslins and madras cottons for the same purpose in the shops and see how many really dazzling effects can be had for gowns with these coarse but effective materials. If you find some brilliant and not too clumsy 15-cent weave for the little get-up you want to be very fetching, look for the coarse ten-cent lace that would go with it. Then peep at the silkoines for 12 1/2 cents a yard—also curtain stuff—and get some dark color with huge poppies or roses for the bedroom kimono.

With a little wisdom, much patience and a modicum of taste, the prettiest house garment for summer may be produced for a song.

IMITATION OF THE BOLERO

Novel Idea That Gives Effective Touch to Almost Any Kind of Bodice.

Because the bolero is so much in fashion among the exclusives, the boleros are now made with a wide tuck in them, but above the edge of the high waist band of the skirt. This tuck may be piped or faced with another material if desired. The effect is much like that of a short bolero jacket just reaching the top of the princess skirt. Sometimes the tuck is made of the material of the skirt if the bodice is of another fabric. Again it is made of the same stuff that trims the skirt.

For instance, a one-piece serge suit that has folds of black silk on the skirt has a two-inch tuck of black silk on the bodice just above the waist line. There is a wide sailor collar of Venetian lace bound with black silk and a chemisette of white net; it is easy to see just how this gown gives the appearance of a short jacket with a net bodice and a separate skirt.

FOR THE WARM DAYS

A simple summer dress of tussah with revers of flowered linen.

Sling Sleeves.

The popular and fashionable top hat made of satin or crepe de chine has the wide sling sleeves, which was a style in medieval days. It is not large as its ancestors and it has a wide cuff, which shows the color and reverse side of the satin. Nearly these coats are made of reversible cloth, the colors of which are in direct but harmonious contrast.
