"Tailled him," said Rutton dully.
"Yes," replied Amber. He was not surprised; he had apprehended the tragedy from the moment that Rutton had fled him.

After a bit Rutton turned to the table and drew an automatic pistol from his pocket, opening the maga-sine. Five cartridges remained in the elip, showing that two had been exploded. "I was not sure," he said thoughtfully, "how many times I had fired." His curiosity satisfied, he reloaded the weapon and returned it to his pocket. "He died like a dog," he said, "whimpering and blaspheming in the face of eternity . . . out there in the cold and the night. . . .

"You'd better take no chances." Suddenly Rutton smote the table with his fist. "By Indur!" he swore setrangely, his voice quavering with Joy; "I had not thought of that!" He Jumped up and began to move excited-ly to and fro. "I am free! None but you and I know of the passing of the Token and the delivery of the mes none can possibly know for days, perhaps weeks. The shadow vanished.

With a single thought Amber sprang upon Rutton, anatched the weapon from his nerveless fingers, and, leaping to the door, let himself out.

The snow had ceased; only the wind raved with untempered force.

Cautiously, and, to be frank, a bit dismayed, Amber made a reconnais-sance, circling the building, but discovered nothing to reward his pains.
Only, before the window, through which he had seen the peering turbaned head, he found the impressions of two feet, rather deep and definite, toes pointing toward the house, as though some one had lingered there, icolving in. The sight of them reas-sured him ridiculously, "At least," he reflected, "disembodied spirits leave no footprints!" He found Rutton precisely as he bad left him, his very attitude an un-uttered question.

"No," Amber, told him, "he'd made a quick getaway. The marks of his feet were plain enough, outside the window, but he was gone, and . . . somehow I wasn't overkeen to folnoved slowly to the door.

"David, a little while ago I promised to ask your aid if ever the time should come when I might be free to do so; I said, 'That hour will never strike.' Yet already it is here: I strike.' Yet already it is here; I need you. Will you help me?" "You know that."

"I know. "I know. . . One moment's patience, David." Rutton glanced at the clock. "Time for my medicine," he said; "that heart trouble I mentioned. . . ."

He drew from a waistcoat pocket a mail silver tube, or phial, and uncorking this, measured out a certain number of drops into a silver spoon. number of drops into a silver spool.

As he swallowed the dose the phial slipped from his fingers and rang upon the hearthstone, spilling its contents in the ashes. A pungent and heady odor flavored the air.

"No matter," said Rutton indifferently. "I shan't need it again for some time." He picked up and restored the phial to his pocket. "Now let me think a bit." He took a quick turn up the room and down again. "A mad dance," he observed thoughtfully: "this thing we call life We meet and whirl asunder—motes in a sunbeam. Tonight Destiny chose to throw us together for a little space; tomorrow we shall be irrevocably parted, for all time."

"Don't say that, Rutton." "It is so written, David." The man's smile was strangely placid. "After this night, we'll never meet. In the morning Doggott will ferry you

Rutton drew a chair close to Amber and sat down, breaking the seals methodically.

"You shall go on a long journey, David," he said slowly—"a long journey, to a far land, where you shall brave perils that I may not warn you against. It will put your friendship to the test."

"I'm ready." The elder man ripped the cover from the packet, exposing the back of what seemed to be a photograph Holding this to the light, its face invisible to Amber, he studied it for several minutes, in silence, a tender light kindling in his eyes to soften the almost ascetic austerity of his expres-sion. "In the end, if you live, you shall win rich reward," he said at length. He placed the photograph

"You must win her first; then sh will come gladly."

"But I've just told you I loved a other woman, Rutton, and besides— "You mean the Miss Farrell ye entioned?

"That will be no obstacle." "What! How in thunder d'you know it won't?" Amber expostulated. A faint suspicion of the truth quick-ened his wits. "Who is this woman you want me to marry?"

"Your daughter!" "My only child, David."

"Then why won't my-my love for Sophia Farrell interfere?" "Because," said Rutton slowly, "my daughter and Sophia Farrell are the same. . . No; listen to me; I'm not raving. Here is my proof—her latest photograph." He put it into Amber's hands.

Dazed, the younger man stared

-but—" he stammered.
"Her mother," said Rutton softly, looking away, "was a Russian noble woman. Sophia is Farrell's daughter by adoption only. Farrell was once my closest friend. When my wife died . . ." He covered his eyes with his hand and remained silent for a few seconds. "When Sophia was left motherless, an infant in arms, Farrell offered to adopt her. Because I be came, about that time, aware of this horror that has poisoned my life—this thing of which you have seen something tonight—I accepted on condition that the truth be never revealed to her. It cost me the friendship of Farrell; he was then but lately married and—and I thought it dangerous to be seen with him too much. I left England, having settled upon my daughter the best part of my fortune, retaining enough for my needs. From that day I never saw her or heard from Farrell. Yet I knew I could trust him. Last summer, when my daugh-ter was presented at court, I was in London; I discovered the name of her photographer and bribed him to sell me this." He indicated the photo-

"And she doesn't know!"

"She must never know." Rutton leaned forward and caught Amber's hand in a compelling grasp. "Remember that. Whatever you do, my name must never pass your lips—with reference to herself, at least. No one must even suspect that you know me -Farrell least of all."

"Sophia knows that now," said Amber. "Quain and I spoke of you one night, but the name made no impression on her. I'm sure of that." "That is good; Farrell has bee rue. Now ... you will go to ndia?" ... Amber promised.

Rutton retained his clutch upon Am ber's hand; and his eyes, their luster dimmed, held Amber's, pitiful, passionste, inexorable in their entreaty. Amber sat down, his soul shaken with the pity of it.

"Ah-h!" sighed Rutton. Relieved, the tension relaxed; he released Amber's hand; his body sank a little in the chair. Becoming conscious of this, he pulled himself together. "Enter India by way of Calcutta," he said in a dull and heavy voice. "There, in the Machua bazar, you will find a goldsmith and money lender called Dhola Bakish. Go to him se cretly, show him the ring—the Token. Presently Amber rose and quietly exchanged dressing gown and slippers for his own shooting jacket and boots—which by now were dry, thanks to Doggott's thoughfulness in placing them near the fire.

The shabby tin clock had droned through 30 minutes since Rutton had through 30 minutes since Rutton had spoken his last word. In that interval, sitting face to face, and for a lit-tle time hand in hand, with the man to whom he had pledged his honor, Amber had thought deeply, carefully weighing ways and means; nor did he move until he believed his plans mature and definite.

But before he could take one But before he could take one step toward redeeming his word to Rutton, he had many cares to dispose of. In the hut, Rutton lay dead of poison; somewhere among the dunes the babu lay in his blood, shot to death—foully murdered, the world would say. Should these things become known, he would be detained indefinitely in Nokomia as a witness—if, indeed, he escaped a graver charge.

It was, then with a mind burdened with black ansiety that he went to arouse Doggott.

"Mr. Rutton is dead, Doggott," he managed to say with some difficulty. Doggott exclaimed beneath his breath. "Dead!" he cried in a tone of daze. In two strides he had left Amber and was kneeling by Rutton's side. The most cursory examination, however, sufficed to resolve his every Pity will be ex-tended to the families of these men. but the event itself cannot but be re garded as one of the most important and significant in the whole course of the recent awakening of the pub-lic conscience. It is a demonstration to the country that only by holding to personal accountability the men re-sponsible for violation of the law can respect and obedience to law be en-forced. The futility of fines as a punishment in such cases has been shown, but it will only require a few such applications of the law as in these Alabama convictions to instill a wholesome regard for law everywhere.—Exchange.

A device for testing the lung capa-city that can be made at home has been designed by a Delaware man. A long piece of strong wire is bent to form a handle. One end of the wire is then bent at right angles to the andle, to form a shaft, and the other and is run for a short distance par-allel to the shaft and then bent down and terminated in a loop. On the inner end of the shaft a spool with blades in it, to form a wind wheel, is journaled. On the outer end of the coording to Ancient Ritual Husband Began by Placing Band on Thumb, and Next Three Fingers.

According to the ancient ritual in marriage, the husband began the ring business by placing it upon the bride's thumb and putting it successively on the next two fingers, pronouncing for each one a person of the Trinity; with a final amen when the fourth finger was reached, and there the ring. remained.

The Greek church ritual directs that the ring be placed upon the right hand. Puritan influence sought to abolish the ring as a vain and heathen emblem, but the sweet old fashion of giving and taking emblem, "for our sake," yet remains to us.

Betrothal or engagement rings vary in fashion nowadays and always de-pend, or should, on the purse of the donor. Where there are no limitations of this sort his taste, if it be perfect, will lead him to choose a diamond solitaire) and of the best he can afford, a small and pure blue-white stone being altogether preferable to a large stone. Some prefer a ring set with three stones, generally a sapphire set between two diamonds. Others select a ruby or an emerald, which signifies promise of happiness.

Few persons choose pearls for an engagement ring, as pearls for an engagement ring, as pearls are supposed to typify tears. They are also too perishable to become emblems of love, which, in its first glow, at least, love, which, in its first glow, at least, is always understood to be indestructible. Their beauty is very precarious, being dimmed or "aged," as the lapidary expresses it, by contact with impure air, while acid annihilates them completely.

WHY LITTLE STARS TWINKLE

British Scientist Says Phenomena Is Chiefly Effect Produced in Atmosphere on Waves of Light:

Perhaps you remember that in youth some kindly elder soul took you into the darkness of some glorious summer night and pointed out the stars and planets, telling you glibly enough that the unwinking star overhead was a planet, while "that blue one down there which twinkles" was a star, The fact that planets shone only or mainly with reflected light, while the stars "burned," was supposed to explain the twinkling, as against the steadfast radiance. Even this young illusion is dispelled by a British scientist, who

The twinkling of the stars is chiefly an effect produced in our atmos-phere upon the waves of light. It is due to currents and strata of air of different densities intermingling and fleating past each other, through which the light passes to the eye. It is seen much more in cold than in warm weather, and near the horizon more than overhead. The same effect may be seen by looking out of a windo over a hot radiator, or at a candle held on the other side of a hot stove, so that one must look through a body of highly heated air at the candle flame. The flame will be seen to waver and quiver. The yarlous layers of air are at different densities and in motion. Rapid twinkling of the stars is a sign of a change of weather.

Munyon's followers seem to be enormous. Those who believe in his theories

CHILD'S HEAD A MASS OF HUMOR

"I think the Cuticura remedies are best remedies for eczema I have r heard of. My mother had a child who had a rash on its head when it was real young. Doctor called it baby rash. He gave us medicine, but it did no good. In a few days the head was a solid mass, a running sore. It was awful; the child cried continually. We keep him from scratching the sore. His suffering was dreadful. At last we remembered Cuticura Remedies. We got a dollar bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, a box of Cuticura Cintment, and a bar of Cuticura Soap. We gave the Resolvent as directed, washed the head with the Cuticura Scap, and applied the Cuticura Ointment. We had used half before the child's head was clear and free from eczema, and it has never come back again. head was healthy and he had a beau-tiful head of hair. I think the Cuticura Ointment very good for the hair. It makes the hair grow and prevents falling hair." (Signed) Mrs. Francis Lund, Plain City, Utah, Sept. 19, 1910. alve the Boys an Opportunity to Ex tend Their Education-Second

The Second Annual Boys' State Fair School will be held on the State Fair Grounds, Springfield, from Sept. 30— Oct. 6, inclusive. The first Annual Boys' School, held

Oct. 6, inclusive.

The first Annual Boys' School, held last year, was an eminent success. The attendance was most gratify £, 122 boys being enrolled from the different counties of the state. With a view of making the school a permanent feature of the State Fair, the Board of Agriculture asked an appropriation from the legislature for a home for the boys' but the bill failed to receive the approval of the committee in charge.

When this became known Gov. Deneen, President Anthony of the State Board and Adj. Gen. Dickson agreed to establish this year on the slope near the great Dome building a model camp to be used by the Loys' School.

It will consist of sleeping tents, floored and furnished with cots, straw mattresses and blankets; four mess tents, one large lecture tent and tents for toilets and lavatory. Adj. Gen. Dickson will personally superintend the erection of the tents, which will be similar to those furnished the militia. Dr. John Dill Robertson, Superintendent of the Department of Education of the State Fair, who is an eminent physician and surgeon, will give his personal attention to sanitary conditions and the health of the boys.

The Boys' School is under the su-

the best means of conserving and using them.

Two boys between fourteen and twenty will be admitted from each county and 18 from Cook, One will represent rural and the other city state in the resources of Illinois and schools. The boys are chosen by the county Superintendent of Schools, and president of the county Farmers' Institute. The School will be in charge of a principal, who will assign the boys to classes and arrange a program of study. The principal for 1911 will be Prof. F. D. Thomson, principal of the Springfield high school, who was principal in 1910. Mr. A. E. Gilpin of Centralia, will be the first assistant.

Each boy is charged $5 for provisions during the week, and is expected to bring a supply of individual towels, comb and brushes. He is not charged admission to the grounds. The $5 is the total expense.

Address information Bureau, Commercial association Springfield, for rooms for State Fair. Bureau will be located in Court House square during Fair week. No charge.

Fruit Store at La Salle la Blown Up a Bomb—Police Seek Pers Who Wrote Note Post-Marked Chicago.

In Salle.—The police are searching for the writer of a note demanding $6,000 from M. Baronia, a truit merchant, the front of whose store was blown out by a bomb. The letter was received by Baronia August 5, bore a Chicago postmark and demanded the money by August 16. The explosion shattered scores of windows in the neighborhood, but the members of Baronia's femilia shearing was the of Baronia's family, sleeping over the store, escaped injury. Another bomb, which was found to contain nitro-glycerin and which was placed under the store, failed to explode.

Douglas.—Illinois has brand new plan to cure the liquor habit. New Douglas gave the experiment to the world and reports most gratifying results. It is called the cemetery cure, but that does not mean for the patient the usual trimmings of drapery and florists' emblems. The trip to the gaveyard is not accompanied with a string of cabs at eight dol lars each. New Douglas does not put the so-called "dead ones" into jail to sleep off their potations. Early each morning the "drunks" are carted to the city cemetery. While the late moon looks down on the strange task some are bound with ropes to upright monuments, while others are laid in graves which have sunk in through years of stormy stress. New Dougles residents solemnly aver that soon after the cemetery cure was put into effect the straight and narrow path became Elgin.—With faltering steps 500 battle scarred, gray haired "boys of '61," survivors who live in northern Illinois, passed in review before Gov ernor Deneen at the parade grounds at Camp Deneen. The impressive scene followed one just as impressive, enacted when the governor, escorted Maj. Joseph Moore and the first bat-talion of the Seventh regiment, rode through the entrance to Camp Densen, in an automobile. The veterans, in regulation blue uniform of the Grand Army of the Republic and white silk gloves, lined both sides of the roadway and greeted the governor with the old time salute, while 17 guns at the camp boomed forth greeting. Gov-ernor Deneen and party bared their heads as they passed through the line of veterans. Governor Denean went at once to his camp quarters for a brief reception by regimental officers and then took his post of review beside the flag pole on the parade grounds.

Shelbyville. - William O'Rourke, a politician and coal dealer of the Thirty-second ward in Chicago, was brought to Shelbyville to face a charge of retaining $6,000 alleged to be due the Century Coal company of Tower Hill for coal sold by him, and for which he is said to have made no accounting. It is charged O'Rourke disposed of between $8,000 and $9,000 worth of coal for the Century Coal company, which is owned and con-trolled by capitalists of this city. O'Rourke's commission amounted to $2,000, which he is said to have kept with the balance due the company.

Lawndale is a small town and has no fire protection, so that the elevator burned very rapidly and with such intense heat that the Alton depot, section house, and a dwelling caught fire, but were saved by a bucket brigade. The origin of the fire is believed to be from the smoke stack of the elevator. It was a new building, and the loss, between $12,000 and $15,000, is well covered by Peoria.—The fruit and grain trade has swamped river shipping in the Il-linois valley for the first time in many years. Packet lines between Peoria and St. Louis and Peoria and La Salle report more business than their boats can handle. The apple and grain trade is unusually heavy at the lower end of the river, while there is a heavy grain movement from the up-per river. The railroads are taking the surplus from the river steamers.

Decatur. - Whether a team horses can pull a two-bushel sach of sand by means of a rope a quarter of a mile long is the question on which $2,000 has been wagered by Everett Ponting and Thomas Kiser ners living in Stonington township, Christian county. The unique wager has raised many arguments and more placed on the result of the attempt, which will be made near Ponting's farm.

Cement Talk No. 3

Concrete is the hardened rock-like product made by using some brand of Portland cement with sand, gravel or broken stone and water. The cement is the material which binds the sand, gravel or broken stone to gether; this binding action is produced by water. The terms "Cement" and "Concrete" thus have different meanings, although they are frequently used interchangeably. While cement is only one of the materials in concrete, is is perhaps the most important. To omy one of the materials in concrete, it is perhaps the most important. Naughty, but Nice.
Edith, who is eight years old, was invited to a children's party. Her blonde hair was perfectly straight, but becomingly arranged, and she started off in high feather.

But on her return she was rather stlent, and, on being questioned as to her experience, said: "I had a nice time, but it would have been nicer if my hair was kinky. All the other girls' hair was kinky, and I shan't go to another party un less my hair is fixed in kinks."

So the next week, when another in-vitation came for the little girl, her hair was curied and fluffed out in the most approved style.

Then her mother led her to a mirror, and said: "There, Edith, what do think of it?' Edith regarded herself soberly for a moment, and then, turning slow-ly around, she said: "It's vain, but I like it."

While man is in this mun there are many things which owing to the limitations of this life he shall never know. It is not for him to know the time and the seasons, but know the time and the seasons, but if he be wise, he may understand the signs of the times. Yet we are appressly told that far away above even the imaginations of the human mind in its ghostic flight in the one great indestructible truth that a man may—nay, that a man must—know God If man would cease his molelike fer seting after the mystarious.

If a man does not know God, he has missed the one great, im-portant thing; he has not yet found the key by which he may enter the holy place of his own life.

How he came here, why he can here, why, he goes from here are whither he goes—these things it whither he goes—these things he knows not.

The work of God speaks in no uncertain tones on this subject. It tells us that knowledge of God is dependent upon a spiritual awakening and a revelation from God himself. We are told that there was a time when Samuel "did not know the Lord, for the word of the Lord was not yet revealed to him." We are further told that there came a time when Samuel did know the Lord, and all is rael knew that Samuel knew the Lord. And the knowledge of God so impressed itself on the lay mind that the servant of Saul testified of him: "Now, there is a man of God in this city." A man who knew God; who walked with God; who made himself felt in the national and individual life of Israel.

felt in the national and individual of Israel.

The key which David handed young Solomon was the key of I wine knowledge. "And then. So mon, my son know thou the God thy father, and serve him with perfect heart and a willing mind Jeremiah told the men of his differ worldly wisdom mesh and in that worldly wisdom mesh that worldly wisdom. perfect heart and a willing mind Jeremian told the men" of his day that worldly wisdom, might and riches never would bring a man to glory; that if any man would glory. "Let him glory in that he knoweth the Lord." God's controversy with larae! through his prophets was concerning their lack of knowledge. Isaid! goes so far in his rebuke as to accuse them of the denset mandity and calls upon the heavens to hear and the earth to give ear. He is astonished that the ox knows his owner, and the ass the place for his fodder, but God's people do not know. The deprayity of that day was not on account of the lack of religious observance. The smoke from the morning and evening sacrifice went up as regularly as the days came and went.

It was a time of decent, decorous esthetic, eye pleasing, ear tickling service; but it had no core; there was no heart in it. It was all external—it was something which the Lord could not get away with: it was abomination to him, and we have no reason to think that God has changed his mind in this year of grace. They offered incense; God wanted clean hearts and pure lives, and these come from knowing God. The apostle Paul denounced the church at Corinth for this very thing, and a strange denunciation it is to come in his matchless argument for the resurrection.

Awake to righteousness and sin not, for some have not the knowledge of God. I speak this to your shame." Is it any less disgraceful in any Christian community, in any Christian land, not to know God? We trow not! But the great reason given by the matchless Son of God ought to set all men seeking for God. It is given not to the disciples, though heard by them. It is spoken in the holy place of prayer. Any man, be he a sin-cere man, is most sincere, is at his best, is approaching his zenith, when in his closet, after shutting the door, he prays to his Father. This is no he prays to his Father. This is no fitting place for cant, dilettantism or sham. It is the one real moment of his life, and the Son of God tells his Father that: "It is life eternal to know the true God, and Jesus Christ, he had sent." whom he had sent."

Friends, what an opportunity! To grow in the knowledge of the Father and the Son; this is worth while. To know God experimentally—his pur-poses in creation and in redeeming poses in creation and in redeeming grace—this is life eternal. "And Jesus Christ." The knowledge is yet one, for there is no saving knowledge apart from him, just as there was without him nothing made that was made. All men know him, but all men do not know him. What does this knowledge mean?

all men do not know him. What does this knowledge mean?

If we set before ourselves the high resolve that, God helping us, we shall know him better, the old hymn, Nearser, My God, to Thee, will have a fuller, grander meaning, and when the King himself returns to reign in highteousness and execute judgment on the earth, we shall see him face to like and the party we are known.

To my mind, one of the most hopeful signs for the promotion of social welfare and the development of architectural and artistic taste is found in the present-day drift from city to suburban or country life, and in the widespread desire of the people to own instead of renting the places they live in. The word "home" is really a misnomer unless it carries with it the sense of proprietorship. For a man To my mind, one of the most hope misnomer unless it carries with it the sense of proprietorship. For a man who is wide-awake to the welfare, not only of himself, but of those who are nearest and dearest to him and dependent upon him, there can be no eatisfying sense of security or peace of mind unless his resources are kept perpetually ahead of his expenditures. Anyone, if he has the will and determination to do it, has it within his power to reach this delectable state; and the surest, easiest, safest way is to invest in a home. It has always been easy to do if one went about it been easy to do if one went about it the right way, but is easier today than it ever was before.

Recent investigation, however has somewhat detracted from Jeremy Twitcher's fame as the inventor of sandwiches. Without doubt he reintroduced and christened the sandwich, but the Romans—those specialists in gastronomy—are credited with its invention, sandwiches, under the name of offula, being a favorite food in Roman days.

Possibly, indeed, the sandwich was introduced into Britain by Roman conquerors, together with the sandil Therefore, during many centuries the sandwich lay dormant, to be resurrected and renamed by the fertile brain of Jeremy Twitohes.
