CHURCH SERVICES.

CHRISTIAN.

Forenoon—"Stand Fast in the Faith."

Evening—"The Gift of Power." (Baccalaureate Services of the High School.)

At the forenoon service I will deliver what I have to say by way of farewell, which will be but a brief message, as would rather preach the gospel than linger over a parting scene.

I take this means through the papers of thanking the general public for the uniform courtesy experienced at its hands. Professional, business and all other men have extended repeated expressions of appreciation and good will, all of which will always be remembered. Thank you, one and all.

The invitation to all Sunday's services is extended to all.

J. W. KILBORN, Minister.

KIRKSVILLE U. B. CHURCH.

Friends and members of the Kirksville U. B. church are invited to attend the Holy Communion service

Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock.

There will be no night services because of special services at Findlay.

The official board will hold a special meeting Saturday night at 7:30 p. m. At this meeting the church record will be revised.

If there are any who wish to change their relation to the church, a transfer or letter you should be at this meeting and make your desire known. We hope it is unnecessary to make a single change. J. B. Connell D. D. will preach at Findlay Sunday night at 7:45 and will hold the business meeting Monday afternoon at 1:00 o'clock. I hope all the official members from Kirksville will attend this meeting.

B. N. SYPOLY, Pastor.

Senior Class Play.

On Tuesday evening May 21st the Senior class of Sullivan high school will give their class play "For One Night Only" in the Armory Hall at 8:00 o'clock.

"For One Night Only" is a comedy in four acts by Robert M. Baker who has written many plays that have been staged by amateurs with great success.

This is a catchy comedy requiring little scenery and the parts are taken by members of the class who are developing them in good shape.

We cannot mention all the characters but you will be especially interested in Mr. Williamson who takes the part of Spartan Spotts, the theatrical manager and Mr. Campbell, the professor. Other members of the play are equally as good but space forbids mentioning them.

Reserved seats 35c., Gen. Admission 25 cents. Plot will be open at McPhee's drug store Saturday, May 18, at noon.

On Thursday evening May 23 our annual Commencement Exercises will be held in the Armory Hall at 8:00 o'clock.

Mr. C. C. Walsh, of San Angelo, Texas, will deliver the Commencement Address. Admission, 25 cents.

Mothers' Day.

Mothers' Day was observed at the Christian church Sunday morning by a short program between the Bible school and preaching service. Vocal music by Misses Cora Haydon and Ferne Wright, Messrs. Kilborn, Moore and Wright, and solos by Ward Brosom and Miss Ethel Kilborn constituted the special musical part of the entertainment.

Miss Louise Hollister of Evansville, gave a short talk, addressed principally to the children on the subject "Mother."

The sermon by the minister at the regular hour was in accordance with "Mothers' Day."

Livingston

Jane Wilson and Mrs. Nancy Harmon are very sick.

Byron Cheevers has laid out forty-eight town lots in his new addition.

Twins, both boys, were born May 4 to A. E. Brown and wife living southwest of Livingston.

Mrs. Warren Fleming of Sullivan and Miss Louise Hollister of Evansville, Illinois, were in town Monday. The latter is a national organizer for the W. C. T. U. and she was here in the interest of the organization at this place. She was here again Wednesday and lectured in the M. E. church in the evening.

Mrs. Bettie Foster died Sunday at the home of her daughter Mrs. Nate Williams. The funeral service was conducted at the M. E. church Tuesday afternoon and interment in Hewitt cemetery.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM T. PERRY.

William T. Perry was born in Indiana May 16, 1849. He died unexpectedly in Mattoon Saturday, May 11, 1912. He was out at the race track where he was looking after a number of horses.

A severe pain in the stomach is supposed to have gone to his heart and caused his death.

An inquest was held in Mattoon Saturday afternoon.

The remains were brought to Sullivan at 8:00 a. m. Sunday and taken to the residence of C. E. Harsh.

His son Arthur stayed with him and before going to Mattoon they boarded at C. E. Harsh's.

His wife died several years ago.

He is survived by three sons, W. M. Perry living east of Sullivan on R. P. McPhee's farm, John and Arthur and one daughter living at Prairie Hall.

The funeral cortège left Sullivan Monday morning at 9:30 for Todd's Point where Rev. A. L. Caseley of the M. E. church preached the funeral. The interment was made in the Todd's Point cemetery.

Rev. Cory Moved.

Rev. A. T. Cory, of the Presbyterian church, with his family, moved one day this week to Heyworth where he has accepted the pastorate of a church.

Mr. Cory and family have lived in Sullivan several years, and have a large acquaintance here who regret very much to have such good citizens leave.

Rev. Cory is a true Christian gentleman who does not fail to speak and live the truth. He is an eloquent speaker, good Bible student and his heart is in the work of the Master. He worked untiringly for not only the church with which he affiliated here but with an earnest desire to make Christians.

He has done much for the benefit and improvement of the town morally.

The town is indebted to him for the good work he has done.

Heyworth may well extend a hearty welcome to him and his family for wherever they go their influence will be felt.

Hitchcock-Gallup Recital.

A unique series of three recitals are to be presented in Sullivan, by Edward Bering Hitchcock, dramatic reader, and Miner Walden Gallup, pianist, beginning Friday night, May 17. All the recitals will be given in the Christian church, and a large attendance is assured.

The first recital will be "The Lowlands," D'Albert's great opera. This is generally considered the best thing these artists have on their repertoire. It is a gripping and thrilling drama with wonderful music. In the East where Messrs. Hitchcock and Gallup were recently toured with great success, "The Lowlands" was the most popular of their offerings.

These are the same artists who gave so pleasurable a recital of "Madame Butterfly" before the guests of the Twenty Club at its recent annual affair. They made a great impression and immediately negotiations were started by several local organizations to bring them back. The present series is the result.

School Employees.

Last Friday evening the school board met and decided upon two more of the teachers and the janitors. Miss Emma Edmiston was selected for Latin and German in the high school, and Miss Goensel of Missouri, for music and drawing. Ernest Hughes was selected for janitor at the north side school building, to take place of Fred D. Siple, who resigned on account of his age, not being able to do the work any longer.

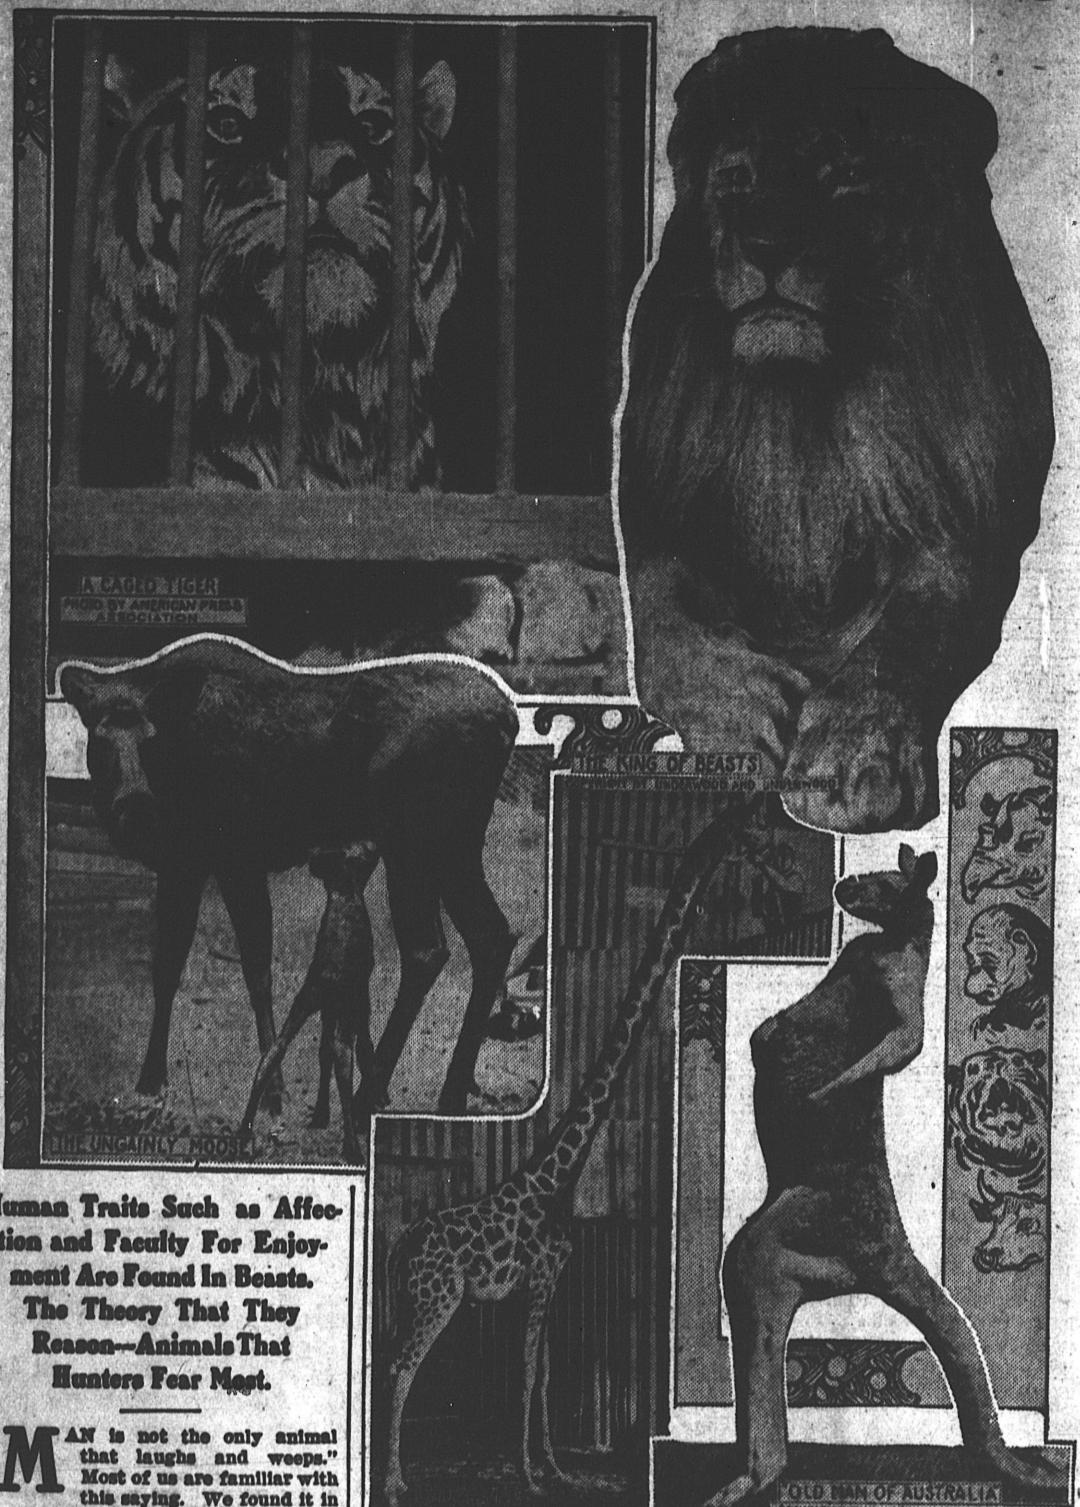

Mr. Siple has been the janitor at the north side building over twelve years. Mr. Rice was selected to take care of the south side school building.

"Made to walk on" is what the manufacturers say of Campbell's Varnish Stains for staining and varnishing Floors, Woodwork and furniture. Well if they will stand being walked upon, they must be made from a varnish that is all right. Why not try a can? For sale by C. A. CORBIN.

THE LAST DAY.

Animal Study at Close Range

Human Traits Such as Affection and Faculty For Enjoyment Are Found in Beasts.
The Theory That They Reason—Animals That Hunters Fear Most.

MAN is not the only animal that laughs and weeps." Most of us are familiar with this saying. We found it in the schoolbooks of primer days. And this is a statement founded on fact. Moreover, these are not the only human characteristics to be found in the animal kingdom. Students of mammals have declared that animals have a language of their own and are capable of reasoning. Regardless of these theories and opinions there is much of interest in a study of various beasts.

There is no room for dispute that animals are like humans in respect to the mother instinct. The ponderous elephant, tireless worker and optimist, coddles her offspring to the spelling point. When night draws near the mother tigress wants her cubs tucked close beside her.

The kangaroo is another tender type of animal nature. She carries her young in a pouch which nature has provided until the offspring fairly topes out from size. It is a curious sight to witness a mother kangaroo hopping around her young to teach the little one the art of using its oddly sized legs. She drops strips of vegetation into the cub's mouth like a parent bird. It is unsafe to take a young kangaroo from its mother until the offspring is well grown.

Animals That Weep.
Do animals weep? Explorers say they do. One has told of seeing horses in the Syrian desert cry from thirst, a mule cry from pain at an injured foot and a camel shed tears in streams. Another asserts that he observed tears in the eyes of a dying elephant.

Wounded apes have died crying, and apes have wept over their young ones slain by hunters. Sea lions are said to cry for the loss of their young, and a giraffe that had been injured by the rifle of a hunter began to cry. Another explorer told of a chimpanzee that had been trained to carry water jugs. It let one fall and break and in its sorrow set a-crying.

Hence there seems to be little doubt that animals do sometimes cry from pain, sorrow or annoyance; but, as a rule, we cannot catch the watchdog in tears or the family cat having a "good cry."

After many years' study Dr. Anton Langfeldt of Zell, near Hammersbach, Germany, published the result of his observations, in the course of which he said that he found beasts really do talk in a rudimentary way.

Rodolphe Radau cited a remarkable book, published in Vienna in 1890 by S. E. Wetzel, entitled "A New Discovery of the Language of Animals, Founded Upon Reason and Experience." The author tries to show that animals make themselves understood by combinations of sounds, which constitute a simple language full of repetitions; that they endeavor to make man understand them and, for their part, understand his language—in brief, that it is possible to study the idioms of different animals and thereby determine the forms and variations of their speech. There is actually in Wetzel's book a primer of animal language filling twenty pages. He attempted to translate into German several dialogues of dogs, cats, chickens and birds, to illustrate his principles, and related a conversation of little abrupt cries made by captive frogs arranging a plan of escape. "As three of the frogs did escape," commented Mr. Radau, "it is inferred that the linguist did not thoroughly make out their conversation." Still, he thought it certain that by carefully watching animals we may eventually comprehend their mysterious speech up to a certain point.

Beasts' Reasoning Powers.

William T. Hornaday, an animal expert and zoological curator, wrote an article several years ago in which he stated that only the man who does not know animals will hold that they do not reason. He said the question "Do animals reason?" was almost as idle as to ask "Do fishes swim?"

"In these days," wrote Mr. Hornaday, "a fox, a deer, bear or a lynx could not live a week if it did not reason. Like men of different kinds, the mind of an animal may contain only a score of distinct and recognizable ideas, or it may be hundred. As long as it remains under the same conditions that surrounded its parents its thoughts will run in the same grooves that theirs did. But remove the parents, change those conditions, and presto, that animal develops new lines of thought and draws an entirely new set of conclusions."

The elephant seems to possess mental capacity. Otherwise how explain his precision in the circus ring, where his part in the show depends upon the ear, memory, eye and words of his trainer?

Big Game Taxes Hunters' Skill.

Perhaps it is an open question whether the hunting of the lion, leopard, buffalo, elephant or rhinoceros is the most dangerous. The rhinoceros is wonderfully fleet, considering its bulk, and its charge means sure destruction to everything in its path unless a really great hunter, steady of hand and nerve, stands in the way.

The bald face bear is a fatal antagonist. Beginning several inches above his eyes, the dark color of his body fades into a dirty gray. Thence down to the point of his nose and on either side it becomes a pure white. Pioneer settlers of Idaho who are acquainted with the bald face, which is not found elsewhere in the United States, never think of attacking him.

Lions are dangerous. It is rarely safe to trust them. They are not so treacherous, however, as the tigers and cougars. The cougar is the American lion.

Monkeys are characteristically affectionate, but their affection is tempered by an erratic disposition that tempts them to bite their best human friends on the slightest provocation.

The leopard's face indicates stealth, deceit and treachery. By practically all animal keepers it is regarded as one of the most dangerous beasts to handle.

A Detective Who Made Good In His First Attempt

By M. FELTON MOORE

I HAD been ill and had lost my position. When I recovered I started out to find another. My plucky wife gave me a kiss and cheered me as well as she could.

I resolved to go from door to door in the business part of the town without reference to the kind of business. I had visited some twenty stores and manufacturing places when I struck the headquarters of the police department. True to my resolution, I went in. The inspector was in a bad humor about something, and I considered it a mere waste of time to apply to him, but I would not go back on my resolution.

"What do you want?" he asked gruffly.

"Anything. Detective work, if you have any."

"Detectives! Blunders rather. I want a good detective right now, and I can't get one. How much experience have you?"

"None."

He sat for a moment thinking, then said: "My detectives are all known to the crooks. I have a mind to try you on a case because you're not known. The —th National bank was robbed last night, and the robbers are trying to get out of town with the swag. If I arrest them they won't have the money on them, so I'm letting them run. Suppose I put you on to one of them. Do you think you could make yourself out stupid enough for him to send the stuff out of town by you?"

"I can do a very hard job of trying," I replied.

He considered awhile, then instructed me to go to a certain cheap hotel and put up as a guest from the country. Bill O'Neill, one who was suspected of the robbery, was there or had been there. I was to gain his confidence in the hope that he would send me out with at least a part of what had been taken from the bank. I fixed myself up in country costume and went to the place designated. A man answering the description of Bill O'Neill was sitting in the office when I went up to register. I paid no attention to him nor he to me. I went into the dining room, ate a good meal and on going out saw O'Neill sitting where I had left him. I bought a five cent cigar and while I was smoking it walked up to O'Neill and asked him if he knew where the next train left for Spottswood, a village twenty miles out. He answered very gruffly that he didn't, but I sat down beside him and began to talk about the price of corn, hay and other country commodities. Presently he called out to the clerk, asking him about the Spottswood train, and received a reply that it would leave in an hour. He then asked what road it was on and on being informed said to me that he was going to a station on the hither side of Spottswood and we would go together—"that is," he added, "if I can see a man before train time." He couldn't see a man before train time and asked me if I would take a parcel to Cottonwood. He would telegraph his partner to be on the lookout when the train stopped to receive it.

Of all fierce brutes the hippopotamus with young are the worst. In water they will crush the strongest boat. They are as quick as a flash notwithstanding their clumsy appearance. On shore they are just as ferocious.

Explained.

When the train stopped at the little southern station the northern tourist sauntered out on the platform, says the Housekeeper. Under a scrub oak stood a lean animal with scraggly bristles. The tourist was interested.

"What do you call that?" he inquired of a lanky native.

"Razorback hawg."

"Well, what is he doing rubbing against that tree?"

"He's stropping himself, mister; just stropping himself."

The Sunday School Lesson

SENIOR BEREAN FOR MAY 19.

Golden Text.—He that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.—Rom. xiii, 8.

Verses 17-20.—A fuller law.

The majority of the hearers of Jesus were not educated, but they were thoughtful and could understand his logic. "Think not." Some of his hearers had doubtless become alarmed that he was undermining the religious foundations. "The law or the prophets?"

This was a current expression for the Old Testament Scriptures. His mission was not "to destroy," to make invalid, any part of these sacred writings, "but to fulfill" by bringing out its spiritual meaning and applying it to all the conditions of life. "Verily." This is the Greek word amen, frequently used by Jesus to introduce a solemn and important truth. "One jot or one title." * * * This was a proverb which meant that not even the slightest details would be overlooked. * * * "Least commandments." Differing from the greatest commands, not in kind, but in degree only, they must be observed; otherwise the spirit of the law will be violated, even though it may be possible to get around the letter of it. "Least in the kingdom." The influence exerted by those who make light of the authority of law or who compromise with its obligations will be very limited.

"Scribes and Pharisees." The scribes were the trained theologians of Israel; the Pharisees were the religious world of Israel" (Burrill). They represented the best religious element in the Jewish nation. "Righteousness" was regarded by them as consisting of obedience to precepts and loyalty to a system of ritual. "The kingdom of heaven," the society of consecrated spirits who have a passion for the inward holiness set forth in the Beatitudes.

Verses 21, 22.—A deeper obedience.

The accepted conception of righteousness was perverted and mistaken. It was this misinterpretation of the truth that Jesus undertook to set aside. * * *

"Ye have heard." His hearers had listened to the exposition of the law in their synagogues. "But I say unto you." Over against what had been taught them Jesus declared his under-

THE QUEST FOR FINE FURS.

Trappers Go to Remotest Regions to Supply Demand For Pelts.

The hardiest of all the hardy explorers who penetrated the forests of North America in the early days of their settlement, says the New York Sun, were the trappers. To meet the demand of Europe for furs these pioneers made their way deep into the unknown regions of the country, establishing here and there little trading posts remote from settlements, and these trading posts formed the vanguards of civilization. Albany and St. Louis, among other settlements which were later to become flourishing modern cities, were developed from trading posts established for the benefit of the trappers.

The use of beaver skins in New Amsterdam in place of gold or silver money was so prevalent that the beaver skin became part of the arms of New York, along with the windmill and the flour barrels. The French Canadian voyageurs were as daring in their search for skins as the Spaniards were in the search for gold in Mexican and South American raids. The foundation of the Hudson Bay company in 1670, with the control of all the country from the bay to the Pacific and from the great lakes to the Arctic ocean, deprived the Canadian trapper of his independence as a fur trader, but the search went on without interruption, and the skins were sold in London as fast as they could be collected and continues down to the present day.

It would seem that, taking into consideration the thousands of fur bearing animals slaughtered every year to satisfy the demand of my lady, the supply would by this time have become slender. If the styles did not change every now and then it probably would have been. In fact, some species have been very nearly exterminated. But when one kind of fur goes out of style the animals wearing that variety have a chance to recruit their thinned ranks, so that by the time their turn comes round again they have multiplied and become numerous once more. But in the case of the Alaskan seal the animals were killed off so rapidly that the extermination of this species is predicted. Only bachelor seals are now killed, the mated ones being protected by law.

OH, YET WE TRUST!

Oh, yet we trust that somehow good Will be the final goal of ill.
To pangs of nature, sins of will,
Defects of doubt and taints of blood;

That nothing walks with aimless feet;
That not one life shall be destroyed
Or cast as rubbish to the void
When God hath made the pile complete;

That not a worm is cloven in vain;
That not a moth with vain desire
Is shrivelled in a fruitless fire
Or but subserves another's gain!

Behold, we know not anything!
I can but trust that good shall fall
At last—far off—at last to all
And every winter change to spring.

So runs my dream, but what am I?
An infant crying in the night,
An infant crying for the light,
And with no language but a cry.

—Alfred Tennyson.

RAYS OF LIGHTHOUSES.

Ships Twenty-one Miles Out Guided by New Beacon.

The captains and pilots high up on the bridges of the giant ocean liners and others approaching New York watching with their night glasses for the beacon lights that guide them into the harbor now pick up a new one shedding its powerful and kindly rays across the lower bay and for twenty-one miles out at sea in a southeasterly direction. The light is on a hill at Richmond, N. Y.

This new beacon, notice of which has been sent to shipmasters here and abroad through the regular government "notice to mariners," is known as the Ambrose channel outer range Staten Island rear light station. The light, which is to be "fixed white," has what are known as a range lens and a 300,000 candle power incandescent oil vapor bullseye light. It is shown from a light color octagonal brick tower on a gray limestone base. The light is 231 feet above sea level, and it stands on a plateau about two and one-half miles inshore and five and one-eighth miles from the west bank lighthouse.

When these two lights are in range of a pilot entering the harbor he knows that his vessel is heading directly for the entrance to Ambrose channel, and it holds good for the four miles from the entrance to the first turn in the channel. There is a light colored brick two story keeper's dwelling with a red tile roof about seventeen yards southeast of the tower. This house is occupied by the keeper and his assistant. The keepers have five rooms each.

The Navesink electric light, which flashes every five seconds, is the only one that can be seen farther at sea than this new beacon. Its range is twenty-two miles, says the New York Tribune. The Chapel Hill beacon rear light is visible twenty-one miles, the same distance as the new light. The west bank light is visible only fourteen miles.

Not a Monopolist.

A certain young man who prided himself on a brusqueness that he mistook for wit met an eminent but touchy sculptor at a studio supper.

"So you're the chap," he said on being introduced, "that makes mud heads."

"Not all of them," the sculptor replied quietly.—Youth's Companion.

GROWING SPROUTS

Little Known Vegetable, but One Worth Cultivating.

IN CLASS OF CAULIFLOWER.

Not Difficult to Raise and Troubled Little by Insects—Part Eaten is Tiny Cabbage Bud, Size of Walnuts, Sprouting From Axis of Leaf.

Brussels sprouts are a cabbage species which is very little known, though there is no reason why it should not be in every kitchen garden and market garden, as it is a vegetable outranked only by cauliflower. The parts eaten are the tiny cabbage buds which grow out of the axis of the leaf after the latter has fallen off. They are prepared like cauliflower, and many epicureans consider them even superior to that vegetable.

The plants are grown in the hotbed, transplanted in spring the same as SOMETHING WORTH WHILE.

To own land, to live in it and to plant seeds against the harvest is the commonest delight of the race and the most satisfying of human vocations. Land is a patent of nobility, and success in life is measured by ability to buy it. It is the pride of the rich and the passion of the poor.

Profit comes from planting and enjoyment from constant effort. If man does not sow of the good seeds nature will sow of the bad. The one brings the vast fields of corn whose banners wave on the breeze of morn or the green seas of alfalfa with roots like the sources of the human race. Nature brings the jungle, restores the weed and seeds the crabgrass which spreads and holds like original sin.

Planting is better than medicine, the harvest than a sanitarium and the sower raises the average of human life as well.—KANSAS FARMER.

FEEDING FOR YOUNG CHICKS.

Method Recommended by Expert For Use From Hatching to Maturity.

The following method of feeding young chickens from hatching time to maturity is recommended by the poultry department of the New York State College of Agriculture:

Mixture No. 1.—Eight pounds rolled oats, eight pounds breadcrumbs or cracker waste, two pounds sifted beef scrap (best grade), one pound bone meal.

Mixture No. 2.—Three pounds wheat (cracked), two pounds cracked corn (fine), one pound pinhead oatmeal.

Mixture No. 3.—Three pounds wheat bran, three pounds corn meal, three pounds wheat middlings, three pounds beef scrap (best grade), one pound bone meal.

Mixture No. 4.—Three pounds wheat (whole), two pounds cracked corn, one pound hulled oats.

Mixture No. 5.—Three pounds wheat, three pounds cracked corn.

The Method.

One to Five Days.—Mixture No. 1, moistened with sour skimmed milk, fed five times a day. Mixture No. 2 in shallow tray containing a little of No. 3 (dry) always before chicks. Shredded green food and fine grit and charcoal scattered over food.

Five Days to Two Weeks.—No. 2 in light litter twice a day. No. 3 moistened with sour skimmed milk, fed three times a day. No. 3 (dry) always available.

Two to Four Weeks.—As above except that the moist mash is given twice a day.

Four to Six Weeks (or until chicks are on range).—Reduce meals of moist mash to one a day; mixture No. 4 in little twice a day; dry mash always available.

Six Weeks to Maturity.—No. 3 and No. 5 hopper fed. One meal a day of moist mash if it is desired to hasten development.

Provide fine grit, charcoal, shell and bone from the start.

Give grass range or plenty of green food.

Have fresh, clean water always available.

Feed only sweet, wholesome foods.

Avoid damp and soiled litter.

Disinfect brooders frequently.

Test all beef scrap before feeding.

Keep chickens active by allowing them to become hungry once daily.

Feed moist mash sparingly.

Keep dry mash always before the chicks.

Cough Remedy For Hogs.

If you have eight or ten head of hogs dig about three or four pounds of poke root. Build a fire in the yard, put the root in the wash boiler and cook until tender and very strong in solution. After it is cool give a half pint to each hog in slop or milk. Do this twice a day for a week, then stop for a week and repeat. This has never failed a Kansas Farmer writer in two years of use. The cough will cease in three or four days. The hogs don't mind drinking it in slop, and they will acquire a ravenous appetite.

Don't Cut Your Clover Close.

Sweet clover must not be cut close to the ground like alfalfa or it will be killed. Its habits of growth are different. In alfalfa the new growth starts from the crown, while in sweet clover it starts from the stem. Hence it is necessary that sweet clover shall not be cut closer than about four inches above the ground. In ordinary seasons it yields about the same as alfalfa and may be cut three times on an average.

Rising at the Sound

Of the Morning Gun

By EDWARD H. STANLEY

SINGULAR that I should be an officer, that I should be marching in the place of a second lieutenant in the rear of the company; that I should be in Santiago de Cuba. I have no remembrance of having been graduated. Yesterday we were marching to and from the mess hall. Yesterday I got bogged in that problem of analytical geometry. Besides, how did I get here? I don't remember coming—no railway ride, no troopship, no debarkation.

"I say, you, there, Bob Truman, how did we of the second class get into this war?"

"Graduated a year ahead."

"But what did we come on?"

"Lightning express to Tampa, then over the water in a balloon."

"Singular."

There was a rattling ahead, withdrawing my attention from what had happened to what was happening. One captain faced about and gave an order to march from column into line. We struggled through tangled bushes, Mauser bullet spitting here and there like raindrops pelting the leaves. But twilight was coming, and then it was dark. The firing ahead ceased.

It seemed I was worn out; that I had been with the army from the first and had been over every inch of the road from the coast to our present position before Santiago.

"Will they yield tomorrow, do you think?" asked a pale faced boy, staggering up to me, "and let us get out of this dreadful country?"

"Don't know. I'm suffocating with the heat."

Then it was dawn. The full moon was in the sky far to the west, large and round and pale. When I first looked at it I thought it a great white bird. I wondered if it were not a bird. No, that's the moon, sure enough. No, it isn't; it's a big bombshell. It is sailing right for me. As it comes it is turning black. That shows it's a shell surely. It comes on and on, passing directly over our heads and goes down slowly to the rear without bursting.

There is that Gatling gun again.

Hear that frightful shriek! Some woman leaving the starving city. She must be Spanish, and some brutal Cuban—

That's fainter, more plaintive. Oh, heavens, it's a baby's cry! What an awful thing is war that even a babe must go down under it! A moan—the mother's doubtless—then stillness, a stillness more awful than the sounds.

We are marching through these infernal tangles again, but suddenly emerge on an eminence. There is Santiago below and there are the Spanish flag and the outlying works. There is death in those redoubts on those long chicks.

"Look out!"

"What is it?"

"A mine! A mine! Run for your lives!"

"Boom!"

There is a terrible explosion. I am in my bed in barracks at West Point. The morning gun has just been fired. I am lying on my left side, and my heart is throbbing like a drum. Bob Truman, my roommate, is rubbing his eyes with his fists trying to wake him self up.

"I say, Bob, what a queer dream I've had."

"H'm;"

"Dreamed we were graduated a year ahead and in the Santiago campaign."

"That campaign's an old story now. I should want something fresher."

"The Spaniards exploded a mine and blew us all up. It was the morning gun. It awakened me."

"That's a trick of dreams. Some incident occupying a second will produce a dream running through a month. It proves conclusively that there's no such thing as time."

"Well, if that's war I don't want any of it. I've a mind to resign as soon as I graduate. I expect the real thing is no fun."

Nevertheless I am in the army today.

M'KINLEY FORGOT DIGNITY.

Once When He Heard Band Play Dixie He Lost Habitual Reserve.

Leopold Bracny, an Italian sculptor, once spent six weeks at the White House engaged in modeling a bust of President McKinley. Engaged in similar work he has been in close association with many famous men both in this country and in Europe, but he declares he never met a more kindly man than President McKinley and at the same time a more dignified man.

"Only once," said the sculptor recently, "during my long stay at the White House did I see the late president in an attitude that was not dignified, but it was only for an instant. We were in a room in the White House which opened on to a balcony. The president was to address a delegation of southern men and was waiting near the door leading to the balcony for the delegation to draw up in front. Besides the president there were in the room two army officers, Mrs. McKinley and myself.

"Presently we heard the band that was leading the delegation. Mr. McKinley threw back his shoulders, stood erect, and placed his hand upon his breast between the buttons of his frock coat and was ready to step out at a signal to be given him by one of the army officers when all was ready.

"The band drew closer, and then the air it was playing could be distinguished. It was 'Dixie.' When the president heard the music he listened intently a moment, and then, waving his arms in time to the music, he began to prance around the room, humming the air as he went.

"'Well, well, well, William!' exclaimed Mrs. McKinley in a semimimorous, semi-shocked tone. At once Mr. McKinley stopped, assumed the stately, dignified position that was his habit and then, getting the signal, stepped out on the balcony with his hand thrust into the breast of his coat."—New York Herald.

TO THE NIGHTINGALE.

O nightingale, that on yon bloomy spray Warblest at eve, when all the woods are still, Thou with fresh hope the lover's heart dost fill, While the jolly hours lead on propitious May. Thy liquid notes, that close the eve of day, First heard before the shallow cuckoo's bill, Portend success in love. Oh, if Jove's will Have linked that amorous power to thy soft lay, Now timely sing, ere the rude bird of hate Foretell my hopeless doom in some grove night; As thou from year to year hast sung too late For my relief, yet hadst no reason why. Whether the Muse or Love call thee his mate, Both them I serve, and of their train am I.

John Milton.

JAMES WATT AND THE KETTLE

Facts About How He Perfected the Steam Engine.

You have probably heard the story of the little boy named James Watt, who held a spoon to the spout of a kettle and so got the idea that he could use the force of steam to make an engine. While this may be a good story, it is not much more authentic than the one about George Washington and the cherry tree.

James Watt was thirty-three years old when he invented the steam engine that made him famous, and instead of being a little boy when he got the idea he was twenty-seven years old when he first saw a steam engine, having been set to work to repair one which had been invented by a man named Newcomen and which was used to pump the water out of coal mines.

Watt saw that this engine wasted a great deal of steam, and it is said that he remarked to a companion that it worked as loose as a spoon hanging in front of a kettle spout, which is probably the foundation for the boy story.

After studying over the problem for six years he built a pumping engine that was better than Newcomen's and went into partnership with a man named Boulton to build engines. Their engines were so much better than the old style that they got a great many orders for them, and Watt became famous, while few persons have ever heard of Newcomen.—New York Sun.

An Anatomical Novel.

She struck him on the spur of the moment and then, after stabbing him in the interval, threw herself on his generosity.

He overlooked her violence and, drawn toward her by her wiles, kissed her on her protestations of repentance.

She threw cold water on his project and damped his ardor.

Feeling for her weakness, he jumped at her proposal.

She wiped her tear stained face on his pathetic entreaty.

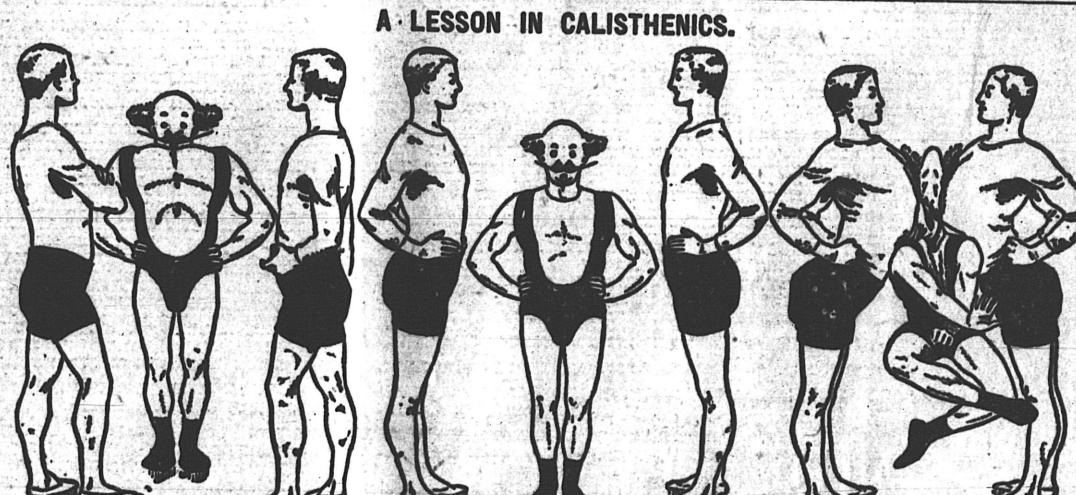

Brooding on his remark, she trampled on his generosity.

Like a drowning man, he clutched at her explanation and, grasping her meaning, kissed her on the spot.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

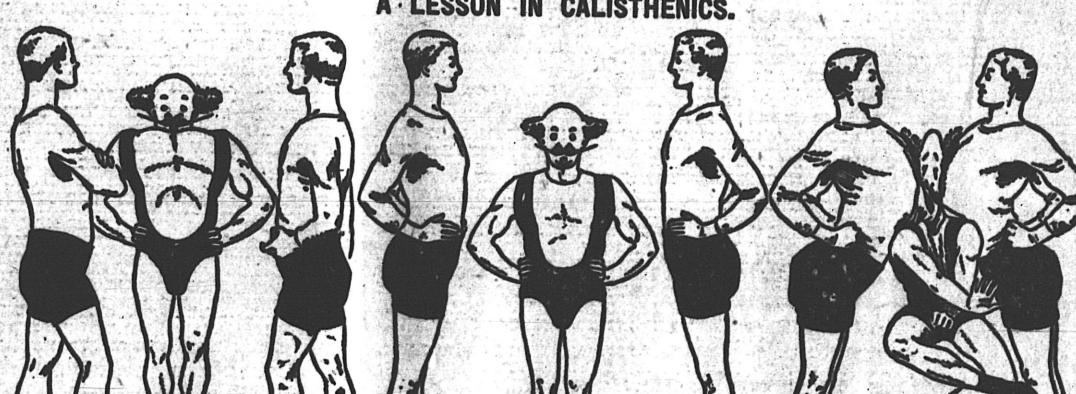

Wisdom Teeth.

There has been a tendency to question the purposes and value of wisdom teeth. In many instances these molars do not root themselves in the human jaw when they come. But if a leading authority on the subject of teeth can be believed the time is approaching when we will be bothered by them no more.

Did you ever take a jaunt up through the alleys of this beautiful little village? You can tell more about the inhabitants of a town by a trip through the back alleys than many persons imagine. Some of the back yards are neat as pins while others would put an old brush fence hog lot to shame. We are glad to say that the latter are few and far between. Back yards reflect the character of the owners. Sometimes the front yard will be bubbling over with flower beds and posies and the back yard will be chiefly slop barrels, scrap iron and brick bats. You can guess what kind of people live there. Sometimes both front and back yards correspond and are wrecks alike. You can easily place the owners. Some times both front and back show the utmost care and attention and it is hard to tell which is the cleaner. You have no trouble in classifying the people who live here. If either the front or back yard must be neglected, friends, let it be the front one. Don't try to present a Queen Anne front with a Mary Ann back. An ill kept back yard is dangerous and a menace to good health.

Every wife ought to know her husband's income, and that knowledge should be the guide of her domestic expenses. Better is a dinner of herbs than a stalled ox with hatred therein. Where a wife makes up her mind to do her duty in this respect she will brighten her little home and make it a place of perpetual sunshine.

There is no way of improving a place as much as by encouraging good merchants, and good schools and good people to settle among you, and this cannot be done unless you spend your money at home.

Although it is a terrible misfortune to lose a home by fire, it is not nearly so bad as losing the happiness of home by the dissipation, unfaithfulness or disgrace of one of the members of the family.

Don't croak. Leave that to frogs and stagnant pools. A few croakers though are necessary in every community to measure the rate of progress at which live men are advancing.

There isn't any hope for a man when he reaches the point where he is not ashamed to have his mother know his meanness.

There are always a good many people who keep the balance of the community busy wondering how they live so well.

Startling Silo Sensation! New Saginaw Feature

Anchoring the base of stave silos as the giant roots anchor for centuries the great oak—the final step in making complete the stave silo.

Eventually all silo users will recognize the fact that the stave silo keeps silage perfectly; and to overcome the last objection, the fear of the stave silo blowing down, and to make an even better and stronger silo, we have been eagerly searching for new ideas. Many years ago we developed the Saginaw All-Steel Door Frame, adding convenience, solidity and great strength to the entire structure.

The same enterprise, together with keen foresight, developed in 1911, the

Saginaw Inner Anchoring Hoop one of the great successes in modern silo construction.

And now—1912—with all wondering what possibly could be added to the Saginaw Silo, our engineering department has created and proved through exhaustive simple in design and construction, and like all great inventions, "it's a wonder it wasn't thought of before." This invention will be known to the world as

Every farmer in this community is invited to come and see the Spalding Machine go down into the soil 12 to 16 inches deep or more, and make a thoroughly pulverized seed bed all in one operation.

THERE IS NO OTHER MACHINE ON EARTH LIKE THE SPALDING. It is not a sub-soil plow. It is far more than a disk plow. The Spalding pulverizes the ground as deep as it goes, 12 to 16 inches or more, and makes a fine seed-bed in one operation.

IT MAKES UNNECESSARY a large amount of harrowing, disking, dragging, etc. It completely turns under weeds and cornstalks.

THE DEEP POROUS SEED BED PREPARED BY THE SPALDING HOLDS THE MOISTURE OF FALL, WINTER AND SPRING, THROUGH THE DROUGHT OF SUMMER.

Call at our store and get the Spalding books and pamphlets on Deep Tilling—the live subject among progressive farmers today.

For President of the United States,
CHAMP CLARK
OF MISSOURI

For Coroner Moultrie County
Dr. W. E. Scarborough
The Democratic Nominee
He deserves re-election, and is subject to the voters of the county.

Did you ever take a jaunt up through the alleys of this beautiful little village? You can tell more about the inhabitants of a town by a trip through the back alleys than many persons imagine. Some of the back yards are neat as pins while others would put an old brush fence hog lot to shame. We are glad to say that the latter are few and far between. Back yards reflect the character of the owners. Sometimes the front yard will be bubbling over with flower beds and posies and the back yard will be chiefly stop barrels, scrap iron and brick bats. You can guess what kind of people live there. Sometimes both front and back yards correspond and are wrecks alike. You can easily place the owners. Sometimes both front and back show the utmost care and attention and it is hard to tell which is the cleaner. You have no trouble in classifying the people who live here. If either the front or back yard must be neglected, friends, let it be the front one. Don't try to present a Queen Anne front with a Mary Ann back. An ill kept back yard is dangerous and a menace to good health.

Every wife ought to know her husband's income, and that knowledge should be the guide of her domestic expenses. Better is a dinner of herbs than a stalled ox with hatred therein. Where a wife makes up her mind to do her duty in this respect she will brighten her little home and make it a place of perpetual sunshine.

There is no way of improving a place as much as by encouraging good merchants, and good schools and good people to settle among you, and this cannot be done unless you spend your money at home.

Although it is a terrible misfortune to lose a home by fire, it is not nearly so bad as losing the happiness of home by the dissipation, unfaithfulness or disgrace of one of the members of the family.

Don't croak. Leave that to frogs and stagnant pools. A few croakers though are necessary in every community to measure the rate of progress at which live men are advancing.

There isn't any hope for a man when he reaches the point where he is not ashamed to have his mother know his meanness.

There are always a good many people who keep the balance of the community busy wondering how they live so well.

Feel languid, weak, run-down? Headache? Stomach "off"? Just a plain case of lax liver. Burdock Blood Bitters tones liver and stomach, promotes digestion, purifies the blood.

Startling Silo Sensation! New Saginaw Feature

Anchoring the base of stave silos as the giant roots anchor for centuries the great oak—the final step in making complete the stave silo.

Eventually all silo users will recognize the fact that the stave silo keeps silage perfectly; and to overcome the last objection, the fear of the stave silo blowing down, and to make an even better and stronger silo, we have been eagerly searching for new ideas. Many years ago we developed the Saginaw All-Steel Door Frame, adding convenience, solidity and great strength to the entire structure.

The same enterprise, together with keen foresight, developed in 1911, the

Saginaw Inner Anchoring Hoop one of the great successes in modern silo construction.

And now—1912—with all wondering what possibly could be added to the Saginaw Silo, our engineering department has created and proved through exhaustive tests, a device wonderfully effective and remarkably simple in design and construction, and like all great inventions, "It's a wonder it wasn't thought of before." This invention will be known to the world as

The Saginaw Base Anchor

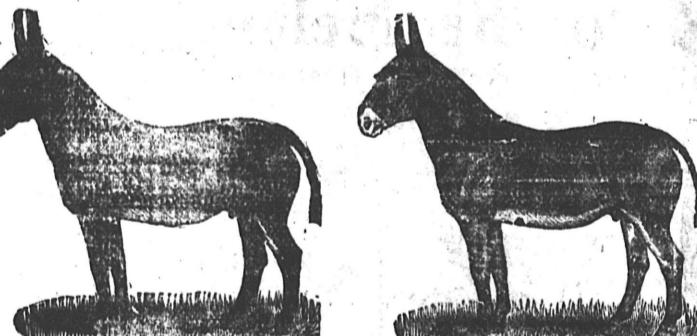

Like all important Silo improvements you get the Base Anchor only in the Saginaw. We will be glad to tell you more about this wonderful improvement.

We have a new book showing dozens of interesting views of our four large plants. This new Book, entitled "The Building of a Silo", also contains very recent and complete information on silage. We have a copy for you. Write for it—or better, come in and get your Book and we'll talk it over.

Every farmer in this community is invited to come and see the Spalding Machine go down into the soil 12 to 16 inches deep or more, and make a thoroughly pulverized seed bed all in one operation.

THERE IS NO OTHER MACHINE ON EARTH LIKE THE SPALDING. It is not a sub-soil plow. It is far more than a disk plow. The Spalding pulverizes the ground as deep as it goes, 12 to 16 inches or more, and makes a fine seed-bed in one operation.

IT MAKES UNNECESSARY a large amount of harrowing, disking, dragging, etc. It completely turns under weeds and cornstalks.

THE DEEP POROUS SEED BED PREPARED BY THE SPALDING HOLDS THE MOISTURE OF FALL, WINTER AND SPRING, THROUGH THE DROUGHT OF SUMMER.

Call at our store and get the Spalding books and pamphlets on Deep Tilling—the live subject among progressive farmers today.

He'd Have to Pay.

A story was told the other day in Washington, apropos of a very artificial and self-conducted boom:

"Blank, you know, was to visit his state last week. Well, a friend said to him, just before he set off:

"I suppose they will give you a magnificent ovation, Mr. Blank?"

"Blank frowned, twisted his mustache, and answered in a nervous absentminded way:

"Well, I don't know. My bank account has sunk terribly low of late."

Blind Inference.

Doctor—"Thomas, did Mrs. Popjoy get the medicine I ordered yesterday?" Thomas—"I b'lieve so, sir, I see all the blinds down this morning."

Too Busy for Serious Things.

Mankind is always happier for having been happy; so that if you make them happy now, you make them happy twenty years hence, by the memory of it.—Sidney Smith.

The War In the Air

BY H. G. WELLS

[Copyright, 1907, 1908, by the Macmillan Company.]

PROLOGUE OF THE STORY.

Germany, hating the Monroe doctrine and ambitious for world's supremacy, secretly builds a vast fleet of airships and plans to surprise the United States by means of a sudden attack. Her airship fleet consists of great dirigibles of the Von Zeppelin type and small aeroplanes called Drachenflieger.

Prince Karl Albert commands the German airships. Germany and England have both been endeavoring to buy an extraordinary flying machine invented by Alfred Butteridge, who arrives at a British seaside resort in a runaway balloon, accompanied by a lady in whom he is interested.

Bert Smallways, a motorcycle dealer in hard luck, who is in love with Miss Edna Bunthorne, and his partner, Grubb, are impersonating a pair of "desert dervishes" at the seashore. Bert catches hold of the basket of the balloon and falls into it just as Butteridge and the lady fall out.

The balloon carries Bert across the North sea. He finds drawings of Butteridge's airship in some of Butteridge's clothing and hides the plans in his chest protector. His balloon drifts over Germany's immense aeronautic park. German soldiers shoot holes in it and capture Bert. They think he is Butteridge. Soldiers carry him to the cabin of the Vaterland, flagship of the air fleet. Lieutenant Kurt guards him. The vast fleet starts across the ocean to attack New York. It smashes the Brooklyn bridge, the postoffice and the city hall, and the city surrenders. The people start an insurrection and attack the airships, destroying the Wetterhorn. The Germans retaliate by smashing the whole city, killing thousands. America's war aeroplanes appear and disable the Vaterland. She drifts helpless over Labrador. Prince Karl Albert learns by wireless that the whole world is at war. The Graf Zeppelin rescues him, and he finds awaiting him at Niagara Falls the Asiatic air fleet. Bert is left on Goat Island and sees the Asiatics destroy the German airships and capture and burn Niagara city. Bert finds himself a prisoner on Green Island. Bert meets Prince Karl, tries to repair an Asiatic aeroplane and quarrels with the prince, who tries to shoot him. They hunt each other, and Bert kills the prince with an oxygen bullet. Bert then rises from Goat Island in the Asiatic aeroplane and after perilous flight falls into trees and meets armed Americans. He gives the Butteridge plans to the president of the United States, then rejoins his Edna in England. A bully insists upon marrying her.

Bert and the Bully.

BUT Edna was not married, and when presently Bert could get talk from her she explained the task before him. That patch of lonely country had fallen under the power of a band of bullies, led by a chief called Bill Gore, who had begun life as a butcher boy and developed into a prizefighter and a professional "sport." He saw Edna tending her pigs and her at once fallen a-wooing with great urgency among the troughs of slush. Edna had made a gallant resistance, but he was still vigorously about and extraordinarily impatient. He might, she said, come at any time, and she looked Bert in the eyes. They were back already in the barbaric stage when a man must fight for his love.

And here one deplores the conflicts of truth with the chivalrous tradition. One would like to tell of Bert sallying forth to challenge his rival, of a ring formed and a spirited encounter and Bert by some miracle of pluck and love and good fortune winning. But indeed nothing of the sort occurred. Instead he reloaded his revolver very carefully and then sat in the best room of the cottage thinking.

Then suddenly Edna's aunt, with a thrill in her voice, announced the appearance of that individual. He was coming with two others of his gang through the garden gate. Bert got up, put the woman aside and looked out. They presented remarkable figures. They wore a sort of uniform of red gelling jackets and white sweaters, football singlet and stockings and boots, and each had let his fancy play about his headress. Bill had a woman's hat full of cock's feathers, and all had wild, slouching cowboy brims.

Bert sighed and stood up, deeply thoughtful, and Edna watched him marvelling. The women stood quite still. He left the window and went out into the passage rather slowly and with the careworn expression of a man who gives his mind to a complex and uncertain business. "Edna," he called, and when she came he opened the front door.

He asked very simply and pointing to the foremost of the three, "That 'im—sure?" and, being told that it was, shot his rival instantly and very accurately through the chest. He then shot Bill's best man much less tidily in the head and then shot at and winged the third man as he fled. The third gentleman yelped and continued running with a comical end-on twist.

Then Bert stood still meditating, with the pistol in his hand, and quite regardless of the women behind him.

So far things had gone well. It became evident to him that if he did not go into politics at once he would be hanged as an assassin, and accordingly, and without a word to the women, he went down to the village public house he had passed an hour before on his way to Edna, entered it from the rear and confronted the little band of ambiguous roughs who were drinking in the taproom and discussing matrimony and Bill's affec-

"That 'im—sure?"

mation in a facetious but envious manner with a casually held but carefully reloaded revolver and an invitation to join what he called, I regret to say, a "vigilance committee," under his direction. "It's wanted about 'ere, and some of us are gettin' it up." He presented himself as one having friends outside, though, indeed, he had no friends at all in the world but Edna and her aunt and two female cousins.

"Bill's dead," said Bert. "I jest shot 'im. We don't need reckon with 'im. 'E's shot, and a red 'aired chap with a squint, 'e's shot. We've settled up all that. There ain't going to be no more Bill ever. 'E'd got wrong ideas about marriage and things. It's 'is sort of chap we're after."

That carried the meeting.

Bert was perfunctorily buried, and Bert's vigilance committee (for so it continued to be called) reigned in his stead.

That is the end of this story so far as Bert Smallways is concerned. We leave him with his Edna to become squatters among the clay and oak thickets of the Weald, far away from the stream of events. From that time forth life became a succession of peasant encounters, an affair of pigs and hens and small needs and little economies and children, until Clapham and Bun Hill and all the life of the scientific age became to Bert no more than the fading memory of a dream. He never knew how the war in the air went on nor whether it still went on. There were rumors of airships going and coming and of happenings Londonward. Once or twice their shadows fell on him as he worked, but whence they came or whether they went he could not tell. Even his desire to tell died out for want of food. At times came robbers and thieves; at times came diseases among the beasts and shortness of food; once the country was worried by a pack of boarhounds he helped to kill. He went through many inconsecutive, irrelevant adventures. He survived them all.

Accident and death came near them both ever and again and passed them by, and they loved and suffered and were happy, and she bore him many children—eleven children—one after the other, of whom only four succumbed to the necessary hardships of their simple life. They lived and did well as well was understood in those days. They went the way of all flesh year by year.

THE EPILOGUE.

It happened that one bright summer's morning exactly thirty years after the launching of the first German air fleet an old man took a small boy to look for a missing hen through the ruins of Bun Hill and out toward the splintered pinnacles of the Crystal palace. He was Tom Smallways, who formerly kept the little greengrocer's shop under the straddle of the monorail viaduct in High street of Bun Hill. But now there were no greengrocer's shops, and Tom was living in one of the derelict villas hard by that unoccupied building site that had been and was still the scene of his daily horticulture.

"So you've really got to Bun Hill at last, Teddy," said old Tom, beginning to talk and slackening his pace so soon as they were out of range of old Jessica. "You're the last of Bert's boys for me to see. The traveler people brought you along all right, eh?"

"They was all right," said Teddy. "Add on the way near Leatherhead we saw a man riding on a bicycle."

"My word!" said Tom. "There ain't many of those about nowadays. I remember a time, Teddy, when there was bicycles no end, before the war in the air and the famine and the purple death."

"Well, this 're purple death—it jes' wiped people out, Teddy. You couldn't bury 'em. And it took the dogs and cats, too, and the rats and 'orses. At last every 'ouse and garden was full of dead bodies. London way you couldn't go for the smell of them, and we'd move out of the 'igh street into that villa we got. And all the water run short that way. The drains and underground tunnels took it. Gor knows where the purple death come from; some say one thing and some another. Some said it come from eatin' rats and some from eatin' nothin'. Some say the Asiatics brought it from some 'igh place, Tibet, I think, where it never did nobody much 'arm. All I know is it come after the famine. And the famine come after the penic, and the penic come after the war."

"But why did they start the war?" asked Teddy.

"They couldn't stop theirselves. 'Aving them airships made 'em."

"And 'ow did the war end?"

"Lord knows if it's ended, boy," said old Tom. "Lord knows if it's ended. There's been travelers through 'ere—there was a chap only two summers ago—say it's goin' on still. They say there's bands of people up north who keep on with it and people in Germany and China and 'Merica and places."

"It ought to 'ave ended," said the little boy.

"It didn't ought to 'ave begun," said old Tom. "But people was proud. People was la-di-da-ish and uppish and proud. Too much meat and drink they ad. Give in—not them! And after a bit nobody arst 'em to give in. You can say what you like, it didn't ought ever to 'ave begun."

He said it simply—somebody somewhere ought to have stopped something, but who or how or why was all beyond his ken.

TWO investigate and report upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life and investigate the questions of infant mortality, the birth rate, physical degeneracy, orphanage, juvenile courts, desertion, dangerous occupations, accidents and diseases of children, employment and legislation affecting children in the several states and territories—these are the objects of the federal children's bureau, an idea which has been adopted in the United States after five years of systematic effort on the part of its sponsors, the national child labor committee.

In 1911 the bill passed the senate, but it died in the house. This year the effort to have it introduced early enough to avoid repetition of that fate succeeded. The bill came to a vote in the senate and passed by 54 to 20 on the last day of January. It went through the house of representatives early last month.

Milwaukee's Socialists.

The change in the government of Milwaukee, Wis., is of more than local interest. On April 9 last Dr. G. A. Bading stepped into office as mayor, succeeding Emil Seidel, Socialist. A combination of Democrats, Republicans and good government voters elected Dr. Bading, and they made the issue one of "Americanism or socialism?" The fusion ticket won by about 12,000 majority. Eighty thousand votes were cast, while the total municipal vote in the campaign in which the Seidel forces triumphed was 60,000. As mayor Seidel had a big majority representing his party in the city council.

Seidel has predicted that the Socialists will "come back" next fall in Milwaukee and that they'll be stronger than ever.

Bottled Light and Heat.

Bottled light and heat for use everywhere, in any climate, at a minimum cost is now possible through a discovery of a method of liquefying natural gas by Dr. Walker A. Snelling, a United States government chemist. The discovery paves the way for the commercial use of millions of cubic feet of natural gas which goes to waste in the petroleum fields of the country.

Dr. Snelling liquefied several hundred feet of the gas, stored it in a thick glass bottle and lighted his office in Pittsburgh with it for several months.

Another Big Battleship.

With the launching of the battleship Texas at Newport News May 19 the United States gets a valuable addition to its navy. The navy department received many petitions from Texas women protesting against the use of wine in connection with the launching ceremonies. Miss Clara Lyon, daughter of Cecil Lyon, Republican national committeeman from Texas, was selected as sponsor.

Dedicating a Pest's Cabin.

Included in the program for the formal dedication of the Joaquin Miller cabin in Rock Creek park, Washington, May 19 is its transfer to the District of Columbia commissioners. The president of the United States, speaker of the house of congress and western senators and representatives were invited to pay honor to the "poet of the Sierras."

Fifth of Peanut Crop Lost.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson says that the peanut crop is threatened. Caterpillars, explained the "father of the cabinet" at Washington, are doing $3,000,000 a year damage to a $15,000,000 peanut yield. The blight is killing the chestnuts, black walnuts are almost extinct, hickory nuts are growing scarcer, and now comes the Indian meal moth, intent on eating up the peanuts before they reach the market.

The secretary recommended steam heating the peanuts in the warehouses to kill the caterpillars.

Honest Advertising.

Sermons by advertising men in sixteen pulpits of Dallas, Tex., is part of the program for their convention in that city May 19-27, with "the truthfulness, the soundness and the morality of honest advertising" as the keynote. George W. Coleman, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, says: "We have started the movement to eliminate the faker and elevate the profession by believable and dependable advertising. There is a tremendous asset for us in this movement. We have seen the frauds ourselves, and, without outside pressure being forced upon us, we have set about correcting them. With advertising placed on a scientific basis the day is certainly coming when a man can invest his money in a given amount of advertising with the assurance that he will get back his capital and even a dividend, the same as he can in real estate and other securities."

English Cricketers Anxious.

The English cricket world is on the tiptoe of expectation as to the worth of the Australian eleven which is to take part in the triangular tests this summer. The Australians are all-around players, averaging under thirty years of age, all new to international fame. Eight members of the team are first class bowlers and at least ten especially strong at bat.

Governor Marshall's One Hope.

With a number of delegates pledged to him Governor Marshall of Indiana is waiting for something to drop.

"I'm not chasing the nomination," he said. "Indiana Democrats say they want me, and I believe they mean it, but I have no headquarters, no campaign managers and no campaign money."

"How can you get the nomination, then?" he was asked.

"The only chance I have would be through a deadlock in the convention with attention turning to Indiana," was his answer.

Old Frigate For Panama Fair.

The Panama-Pacific exposition officers have received advices from the navy department that the old frigate Independence will be sent to San Francisco and anchored off Harbor View during the exposition in 1915 instead of being sold for junk, as was originally intended. The Independence was built in 1814 and is now at the Mare Island (Cal.) navy yard.

On May 15, 1862, General B. F. Butler issued the famous order No. 28 to the women of New Orleans, which read, "Hereafter when any female shall by mere gesture or movement insult or show contempt for any officers or soldiers of the United States she shall be regarded and held liable to be treated as a woman of the town plying her vocation."

On May 16, 1862, Isaac Newton was appointed by President Lincoln first commissioner of agriculture under a new law establishing that bureau. Slaves living in the free District of Columbia were returned to bondage to masters outside under the fugitive slave law.

On May 20, 1862, a treaty between the United States and Great Britain for the suppression of the slave trade was ratified in London. President Lincoln signed the homestead act.

Protects Ships From Fog Perils.

According to Guglielmo Marconi, the day of terror on account of fogs at sea is about over. He has announced that within a very short time a new type of wireless equipment which he has invented will safeguard vessels thus imperiled. He calls his device a wireless compass and declares it has been tested and found to be a complete success.

Mexico's Soldier of Fortune.

Francisco I. Madero, Jr., who on Nov. 6 last took the oath of office as president of Mexico after having been hunted a year before by former President Diaz's soldiers as chief of the insurgents, has had a picturesque career. The man who was placed at the head of the republic's political affairs, amid scenes of the wildest excitement, is really not of the aggressive type generally attributed to any kind of insurgent. Rather is he a man of gentle manner, and, while courageous, he is cautious. He is an ingratiating speaker and a fluent writer. The immense wealth of the Madero family has given him additional prestige. In politics the United States is his model. He is only thirty-nine years of age.

This young Mexican statesman has never yet, so it is said, decided an important issue without seeking the opinion and heeding the counsel of his wife, a clever, winsome woman.

THE ROTHSCHILD FAMILY.

Numerous Descendants of the Original Founder, Baron Gustave.

What chiefly struck one at the funeral of the late Baron Gustave de Rothschild was the great multiplicity of relatives descended from his father, the first Baron James, the shrewdest and most funny humorous member of the Paris branch of the Rothschilds, that he founded, says London Truth.

Among these descendants were a son, grandsons and great and great-grandsons—Rothschilds, Lamberis, Ephrussis, Sterns, Saks, Bubbys. They represented not only the finance of Paris, Brussels, Genoa, Milan, Odessa, Bombay and Calcutta. Among the numerous multimillionaires descended from the first Baron James there was one who devoted himself to medical science, dramatic literature and the collecting of autographs of great writers—Baron Henri, only son of the second Baron James.

Fashion and Care of the Home

Black Serge Stitched With White

A charming spring suit of fine black serge stitched with white is shown here. It has one of the short loose fitting coats now so popular. The deep shawl collar is inset with delft blue and adorned with many rows of stitching. The coat fastens at the left with a single large button.

The lines of stitching on the skirt are put on diagonally, a double row of stitching running down the center of the front and of the back of the skirt.

CARE OF WINDOW-SHADES.

Dry Cleaning Recommended For Plain White—Spots and Creases.

There is seldom any necessity for washing even the light and pure white window shades in suds. The best plan, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch, is a dry cleaning that does not require the shade to be removed from the roller. When soiled spots and creases appear, simply lay the blind flat on the table and go over the entire surface with breadcrumbs from partially dry bread. There should be just enough moisture in the bread (day old bread being about right and not too dry) to erase the soiled spots as the rubber eraser removes pencil marks. Rub carefully and thoroughly in the same manner as the eraser is used and the shade will look quite fresh and clean with less than half the work required in laundering.

For dark shades and those that seldom show spots or stains it will still be necessary to give special attention to see that cracks do not appear from having them blown and twisted in high winds. When worn places appear at the bottom of the shade which is in frequent use and has constant exposure the quickest way to renovate and give a new lease of life is to "turn" the shade. This is accomplished by removing the shade from the roller, placing the hem at the top, where the portion of the shade that is seldom unrolled is still bright and fresh. Then remove the stick in the bottom hem, place it in the hem and tack the original bottom of the shade to the roller. The old hem should remain to provide a double layer and additional strength where the old portion of the shade is tacked to the roller.

IN THE SEWING ROOM.

In mending plaids or checked materials several shades of silk threaded into one needle give good results. These must harmonize with the chief tone of the material.

The plain sleeve is set into the deep armhole the same as the sleeve in a man's shirt. There usually is a line on the top of the sleeve showing the sewing line. This should be traced on the material. Turn the edge of the armholes one-quarter or half an inch and, laying both blouse and sleeve out on a table, pin the armhole edge to the traced line along the top of the sleeve. It is pinned so that the folded edge of the blouse laps over the sleeve edge. Sleeve and blouse should come out evenly at the end. Then the sleeve seam and underarm seam of blouse are sewed together in a continuous seam.

When Is a Woman at Her Best?

It Depends on the Age of the Judge

—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

FOR YOUR COOKBOOK.

Veal Loaf.—Mince three cupfuls of cooked veal very fine and mix it with a cupful of breadcrumbs, a quarter of a cupful of minced bacon, season with salt, pepper and a tablespoonful of lemon juice, mix it with a beaten egg and a little water and pack in a loaf shaped tin. Insert thin strips of bacon in the top and bake until the loaf is nicely browned. It will need no basting, as the bacon 'drippings' will serve the purpose.

Baked Ham (Virginia Style).—Wash well and soak all night. Wipe dry and cover underside with a thick paste of hot water and flour. Lay it upside down in the dripping pan with enough warm water and vinegar to keep it from burning. There should be a tablespoonful of vinegar to each quart of warm water. Fit a cover closely over the pan to keep in the steam and bake twenty-five minutes to the pound. When the ham is done take off the crust and peel away the skin. Have ready the beaten yolk of an egg and plenty of fine crumbs. Wash the hot ham with the yolk and strew thickly with crumbs. The oozing fat will be absorbed by the crumbs and season them. Set aside until cold; then put cloves in the top, a frill of fringed paper about the knuckle and garnish with red beets and parsley.

Celery Deviled.—Boil the celery until tender, drain and allow to get cold. Prepare this mixture with a teaspoonful of made mustard, a tablespoonful of salad oil, the same each of flour and milk, a pinch of salt and a dust of cayenne pepper. Mix thoroughly, beating well with a fork, and add a small egg which has been whisked into a cream. Dip the pieces of celery in this and fry in deep fat a few at a time till they are a rich brown. Drain on kitchen paper. Serve piled high and very hot.

A FEW ODDS AND ENDS.

Ginger cookies are much improved by mixing them up with coffee rather than to use water. A tablespoonful of sugar added to the water in which beets and turnips are cooked is a great improvement. Cranberries and apples cooked together require less sugar and are very palatable. A round piece of tin three inches in diameter, bent in the center, making half of it upright, is a good pot scraper.

Wall Soiled by the Couch Sitter.

To protect the wall paper over the couch from spots caused by heads resting against the paper, tack a piece of pretty Japanese matting to the wall behind the couch—that is, at the head of the couch as well as the side in order to give a good effect. The matting should extend to the base board. At the upper edge tack a narrow gilt picture molding.

Use For Celery Stalks.

Celery is not as much used as an ordinary vegetable as it deserves to be. Yet it is a most desirable one for general use, especially as the stalks, which are too coarse for eating raw, come in admirably for cooking. The simplest form is to boil the stalks and serve with white sauce poured over them.

Relieving a Distress Call of the Heart

By MABEL A. FOWLER

I N the rooms of the relief and aid committee to distribute funds contributed to help the worthy poor of a big city Edward Tucker, a committeeman, sat writing.

"Can you tell me how to secure aid?" Tucker looked up into the kindly, patient face of an old woman who wore a faded, threadbare dress that many years before must have been costly.

"Have you been burned out, madam?" he asked.

"Well, no, not exactly, but we are somewhat straitened in our circumstances. My husband was a banker. He died many years ago and left us without anything to live on,"—confidentially—"I wasn't brought up right. My father had been rich. I couldn't take hold for myself."

"What was your husband's name?"

"Plumber—Ralph B. Plumber of Plumber & Chubb, bankers."

Mr. Tucker started.

"You knew him?"

"Yes. That is many years ago. He was a great deal older than I and rich. I was a poor boy then. Give me your address, Mrs. Plumber."

She gave him an address which Tucker noted, and the old lady withdrew. Tucker took a checkbook from his desk and wrote a check. Then stepping to a man who sat at another desk he said:

"Exchange check for that, please, payable to Mrs. Ralph B. Plumber."

The check was duly made out, and Tucker went to his room to prepare for dinner, which he usually took at his club. As he entered he sighed. No one was ever in the room but himself and a servant. It was a dreary place, though it was handsomely furnished. Tucker sat down and brooded for awhile, as he had brooded many a time before, on the fact that with all his means for the procurement of a home he had no home. Why was he not married? There were a dozen women among the wealthy people with whom he moved who had angled for him. Perhaps it was because they angled that he did not care to marry them. Presently he arose languidly and made his toilet. He dined alone at his club and after dinner set out to find Mrs. Plumber.

He was admitted by a girl of twenty-two or twenty-three years of age, bearing the same impress of refinement as her mother. She resembled her father, especially as Tucker had known him when he was perhaps ten years older than the daughter was now.

"Your mother called this morning at the relief and aid committee's room, and I have called to examine the case," said Tucker in a kindly tone. He was introduced into the living room, where Mrs. Plumber received him with astonishment, and he sat down on a chair with holes in the seat almost large enough to let him through. He asked Mrs. Plumber about her resources; then, apparently satisfied that it was a proper case for the committee to relieve, took out its check for $500. Mrs. Plumber, to whom he handed it, was too dazed at receiving a check at all to notice the amount and turned it over to her daughter. Margaret Plumber glanced at it and handed it back to Tucker, with the remark that there must be some mistake. It was some time before he could convince the two of the extreme liberality of the committee in their case.

Tucker called often, every time bringing a check signed by the cashier of the relief and aid society till the abode of the Plumbers was painted and furnished and their wardrobes renewed.

He took Margaret Plumber out to amusements and to drive and spent many an evening with her at her home. One evening he brought a check from the relief and aid society which Margaret declined. "There is no further occasion," she said, "for this assistance. I have been studying shorthand and typewriting and have finished my studies and secured a situation. Now I wish, Mr. Tucker, that you would give me some hint as to how I may show you my appreciation of your kindly interest which has resulted in these checks."

"There is but one way, and that would be asking too much."

"Name it, and I promise you it shall be done."

"If not repugnant to you."

"Nothing I can do for you would be repugnant to me."

"You will not think me selfish?"

"I am sure you could never be selfish. Come, tell me what is this return?"

"Marry me."

The girl looked at him as though she did not understand.

"Marry you?"

"No; never mind. I'm too old—and prosaic. I've not been brought up in the refined way you have. I had to scratch when very young. And, now I'm on my shortcomings, I may as well confess that the relief and aid money you have received did not come from the committee at all. It is merely a return of money loaned me by your father when I was sixteen years old and a clerk in his bank. He advanced me $500 to start with in business. I returned the amount, but think of the money it enabled me to make! I consider you and your mother entitled to half my fortune. No; for me to aspire to the hand of Mr. Plumber's daughter is absurd."

For the moment he was again the office boy, Margaret Plumber the banker's daughter. Margaret continued to stare at him as he proceeded; then the whole meaning of it all seemed to break upon her, and she threw herself into his arms.

On Written Authority.

"How did you get this speech of Bumpton's?" asked the editor.

"Took some of it down while he was speaking, and some I copied from his manuscript," replied the reporter.

"But this reference to loud applause—how did you get that? Was there any applause?"

"No, sir; I took that from the manuscript."—Exchange.

Religious Work

In England religious bodies, and especially charities that are supported by Christian people, use display advertising space in daily and weekly newspapers to a far greater extent than do the same organizations in this country. A large proportion of charitable funds are raised through paid advertisements in the periodicals.

Church Attendance Campaign.

All churches of New Rochelle, the ancient Huguenot city at the New York end of Long Island sound, and of its suburbs, partly rural and partly within New York city, joined at the beginning of Lent in an appeal to 5,000 men residents in the district to attend public religious worship.

Accompanying the printed appeal personal canvassers were made by men presenting the same message. The campaign was maintained during the weeks of Lent and concluded on Easter Sunday. The increase at Sunday schools was 40 per cent in some instances, and in the churches there was a steady rise, ranging from 15 to 30 per cent.

Church and Modern Problems.

The place of the church in this modern battle and march should be that of moral leadership and inspiration, says the New York Observer. It cannot take upon itself the scientific and sociological discussion and solution of these problems, though it cannot wholly avoid such discussion. Deed always runs back into doctrine and doctrine forward into deed, so that the two cannot be wholly separated. Yet the church should not entangle itself in the snarl of social theory and debate, but keep to its own field of moral and spiritual regeneration. It is primarily seeking to produce that good human nature which is the soil out of which all good things must grow. Yet it must let its voice be heard in the interest of human welfare at every point, and especially must it show such a spirit of social service and sacrifice as will be a healing and regenerating influence among men. It dare not compromise with any injustice or wrong, however it may be entrenched in wealth and power, and must stand for that human righteousness which is the reflection and fulfillment of the divine.

JOY OF THE WORLD.

What is it makes the old world fair?

'Tis not alone the skies of blue,
The fragrance of the summer air,
The clover blossoms wet with dew.
All these might be and still the heart
Might find no joy that is worth while,
No soothng balm to ease the smart
If we could see no loved one smile.

The splash of rain upon the pane,
The roses blooming by the wall,
Would to the world come back in vain
If shining brighter far than all
There were no smiles of loved ones true
Awaiting us at close of day.
If these we missed how grim the view!
How rough would be our dreary way!

'Tis not alone the sun on high
Nor summer breezes blowing sweet,
A perfect stretch of cloudless sky,
With clover blossoms for our feet,
That makes the world a beauty spot
And every care it brings worth while.
Their charms would quickly be forgot
If all alone we trudged each mile.

STATISTICS ON LONGEVITY.

Two Authorities' Theories of Amazing Possibilities Remain Unrealized.

According to Buffon, the life of man "can" last six times as long as it takes him to become fully developed; according to Bacon and Hufnand, eight times as long. Now, since man is not considered in the anatomical sense completely mature before the twenty-fifth year of age, his life, according to the last named two authorities, "could" last 200 years. But, as a matter of fact, outside the Bible, there is no record whatever of such long lives. Among the extraordinary cases of longevity on record and well attested is that of the Englishman, Thomas Parr, who lived happily at Shropshire to the age of 152. The celebrated Harvey, who dissected him after death, found his body in excellent condition and stated that had it not been for his intemperance he might have lived much longer. A census taken under Emperor Vespasian showed in the relatively small territory of Italy alone eighty persons over 100 years old, and among these two who had reached the age of 140. The census of the United States for 1900 shows 3,981 centenarians and that for 1910 3,504 (males, 1,271; females, 2,333). These figures have only a dubious value, not merely because the vanity of some old people causes them to claim their age much higher than it really is, but for the fact that the majority of these centenarians are ignorant persons (2,553 negroes, 111 Indians and 8 Mongolians), whose statements as to their age cannot be relied upon.—Christian Herald Almanac.

Rewarded at Last.

Throw away nothing that is useful or likely to be useful. A Pennsylvania housewife saved all the string that came around bundles from the stores, etc. At the end of twenty-five years she sold the collection for 40 cents.—Chicago Tribune.

The Children's Part of the Paper

Entertainment by Playground Children

In every section of the United States we find playgrounds for children maintained either by private or public funds.

The growth of these recreation centers has been so rapid within the last ten years that in the larger cities, such as Chicago, New York and Boston, a half dozen or more playgrounds have been established, which in nice weather are usually filled with young folks.

Their innocent entertainments under the supervision of competent instructors always collects a large audience of the children's grown friends.

The illustration is of playground girls in a large city producing amusement while dressed as Indian maidens.

CAN YOU REALLY

"The average boy and girl when entering college do not understand the English language," declared President Frederick W. cannot impart his ideas to other people or understand other people's ideas.

"Dr. Eliot, you remember, once said that Harvard had only the adjectives 'rotten' and 'bully.' I have known students to come from lecture and say: 'Why, I didn't understand it. I don't know what the professor was talking about.' They did not know because they were actually ignorant of the English language."—Boston Herald.

HOW OLD PEOPLE

May Prolong Their Lives

At an advanced age waste is more rapid than repair. The organs act more slowly and less effectively than in youth. The circulation is poor, the blood thin and watery, the appetite poor and digestion weak.

We want to say to every aged person in this vicinity that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (without oil) will prolong life. It creates an appetite, aids digestion and makes good blood. In this natural manner Vinol retards waste and replaces weakness with strength, giving new life to the worn system.

If people in this vicinity only realized how Vinol invigorates old people we would not be able to supply the demand.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

Impetueux 79722

We wish to call the attention of breeders to the imported Percheron stallion we have recently purchased. He is a dark steel gray of great style and conformation coming four years old, weight 208 pounds. He is a very easy keeper resembling Belgian in this respect, being very big of middle and close coupled. His bone is very clean and flinty and his action is perfect, as it is seldom you see a horse his equal in this respect. Impetueux is a colt of much style and finish having the same characteristics in this respect as his noted ancestors the Brilliants. We would like to speak of his blood lines, but will try to do this later.

Impetueux 79722 will make the season of 1912 at the home place of J. B. Wiley, six miles east of Sullivan, and four miles northeast of Allenville.

Our terms are very reasonable. Call at the farm and see the horse. If you haven't time, call phone 780, on Sullivan line.
