COUNTRY IS MAD OVER AVIATION

Daily List of Events-Mail Delivery by Air

The country has gone mad over aviation, and the Illinois State Fair this year Oct. 4-I2, will give a magnificent demonstration of the capabilities of the newest air machines. There will be a fleet of them, and a daily program of events will be given every day, excepting Sunday.

These events will be given in the afternoons of the first two days of the fair, Friday and Saturday, Oct . 4-5, and it the forenoons the balance of the time. The events will open with a parade of the machines, and there will be races in the air, the figure eight, spiral dives, ocean waves, altitude flights in contest, fancy and trick flying, and each day one of the machines will carry a mail pouch from the state fair grounds station to some postoffice within 10 miles of Springfield. Visitors at the fair are at liberty to mail their letters in this pouch, special postcards being sold on the grounds for this purpose, to any address on earth.

In order to prevent possible "frameups! the state board made contracts with two concerns for monoplanes. The monoplane has not yet been seen on the state fair grounds. One of the exhibitors will be the Johnson Brothers of Terre Haute, Ind., in-American machine and the other is a Nieuport. French machine. The first looks like a pigeon of enormous size. and is red in color. The French machine is white, and resembles a huge bat. Both are graceful in outline and sail like birds of the air. They are wonderfully fast. In fact they must maintain a speed of a mile a minute while in the air or they will tall. The Johnson machine, "said the inventor, Louis J. Johnson, who will drive it, "is an original all-American product, designed to eliminate danger to the greatest degree. After many tests we thought wood construction was too delicate, subject to breakdown's and smash-ups, and so we use metal in all parts, except interior construction of the planes. Spruce is used for this feature, on account of the twisting, warping motion of the machine. The main frame carries a motor, gasoline tank, and the operator, and consists of three and one half inch nickel tubes, fastened with steel castings, which serve as water tank and radiator, eliminating the great head resistance. The aluminum tail is 8 inches in diameter in front and 4 inches at the back. 34 feet long. Weight, flying, 1,100; horsepower, 6o."

The Johnson has made several beautiful flights, but this is the first year it has been on exhibition

The Nieuport was purchased Paris by the National Aeroplane Company. It has a spread from tip to tip of 34 feet. It is 32 feet long. Like the Johnson machine the engine and propeller are in front and sucks the aeroplane through the air. The machine weighs with operator, ready to fly, about 850 pounds. The Young Man In Politics Crisp Sporting Chatter

Bright Lights Who Have Become Prominent In the Pothe Fore.

By MERVIN DICKERSON.

VERY four years the presidential campaign discloses new political lights, men who have been practically unheard of outside of their own states. An out cropping of young men is especially in evidence. It is a paradox that the young man in American politics is as old as politics itself. He is at least as old as the time of Alexander Hamilton. Ever since his youthful genius made him a most conspicuous man of his time, so far as age was concerned, young men have been bursting into the political life of our country with a fre quency that is almost chronic.

This year the younger element is well represented. For example, William F. McCombs, chief Wilson boomer, attracted attention when the Democrats nominated the New Jersey governor, the whole country, Republicans and Demcorats alike, showered Mc-Combs with compliments after the nomination. He was later made chair man of the Democratic national committee. He is holding down the posi-tion with a vigor which has made older politicians sit up and take notice.

McCombs was a Princeton graduate and a lawyer before he entered the national political ring. His first efforts in politics bore fruit when Wilson was governor of New Jersey, but it factor in Wilson's success. It took the country by surprise when the curtain was thrown aside after Wilson's nomination and the unassuming person of William F. McCombs was revealed as being the power behind the scenes. McCombs is only thirty-seven years old and in a very short time has become almost a dazzling figure in Amer ican politics.

. Hilles, Leader of Republicans.

At the head of the Republican national committee is Charles D. Hilles, another young man, perhaps not so young in years as in point of service in the national political arena. was much in the public eve as President Taft's secretary, but as head of the national committee his importance is next to that of Mr. Taft himself. He at the psychological moment and slipis forty-five years old.

He was head of the New York Juvenile asylum in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., when Taft ran for president in 1908. but at that time he was known to but few politicians. One of them was Arthur I. Vorys, a Taft campaign manager. Mr. Taft later heard of him and tendered to him the office of assistant secretary of the treasury, to take charge of buildings, land purchases and the like. Then he succeeded Norton as "the assistant president."

Big things are expected from Hilles. His talent for organization and his three years of political experience have made him a man of resources. His campaign in behalf of the candidacy of President Taft up to date has shown his ability to handle the difficult task with which he has been intrusted. So this year we are offered the novel sight of two men, who four years ago were unheard of, leading the campaigns of the two leading political parties. Each is without that training which politicians of the old school always thought necessary.

The launching of a third party has interests; he investigated and he realso thrown into the political limelight formed; he has made a fad of forestry of the nation young men of limited po-litical experience. One of them is Hiram W. Johnson, governor of California, one of Roosevelt's main supporters at the Republican convention. Another is William H. Hotchkiss, New York state superintendent of insurance under Governor Hughes. Both are now leaders in the third party.

Then there's Hadley of the new crop. He wouldn't take the nomination for vice president with Taft. It scarcely needed the Chicago convention to introduce Hadley to the country. He was one of the "seven little governors." He fought hard for Roosevelt at Chicago. He got an ovation that strained things in the Roosevelt camp. The country now knows him as the tall, muscular, thin, straight nosed man who was not afraid to fight the Standard Oil and its subsidiaries as attorney general of his state, who banished race tracks from Missouri, who made a new discovery of the Ozark mountains and the 12,000,000 acres of undeveloped land of his state, who ran for governor four years ago because Taft told him he must do so and who carried the state by 17,000 while Taft carried it by only 600.

Hadley was born in 1872 and was only about thirty-five when he came to New York and aroused the risibles o was not until the latter became the the Standard Oil crowd as he started choice of the Democrats in Baltimore out to give them battle, a veritable that McCombs was recognized as a big David against a Goliath. He won.

Lea, the "Baby Senator."

When Luke Lea, newspaper editor and born political fighter, became United States senator last winter at the age of thirty-two the state of Tennessee could scarcely believe its ears. had studied law at Columbia. He had gone home and got mixed in public affairs. He started a new newspaper in Nashville, and he advocated state prohibition. He got into the Demo cratic convention that nominated Patterson for governor. Indeed, he seized the gavel of the temporary chairman and "made Patterson." He then "destroved Patterson" later when the governor pardoned Carmack's murderer. When the deadlock came for Unit ed States senator Luke Lea was around ped in

A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania also attracted attention at Baltimore by his advocacy of Wilson's nomination and his clear cut arguments on the floor when debatable points were before the meeting. Palmer was born in May, 1872, and left Swarthmore in 1801. He lives in Stroudsburg, Pa., and every biography of him that has been printed mentions that he is a railroad lawyer. It doesn't seem to interfere with his career in the Denio cratic party. He is serving his second term as a congressman. He is a Quaker.

Bass Is a Famous Reformer.

One of the "seven little governors" who didn't win their states to the Roosevelt cause is Robert P. Bass of New Hampshire, bachelor, farmer and general political disturber ever since Winston Churchill wrote his "Conis Bass already had made New ton." Hampshire progressive. He shook up the dry bones in his commonwealth:

formed; he has made a fad of forestry and raising cattle; he was the firs governor elected in New England un der a direct primary law; he's only thirty-seven, and his friends say he has just begun his work.

In the west two men have attracted political attention who are not young in years, but who are new in politics as national figures. One is Walter S. Houser, who was the manager of La Follette's campaign, and the other is United States Senator Atee Pomerene of Canton, O.

He didn't become a national figure because La Follette failed to reach his full ambition, but Houser became known to all the Republican politicians and won their respect at Chicago. He didn't have the chance that some of the youngsters had. He's mid dle aged, being a little more than fifty-

Atlee Pomerene, Princeton, '84, got into public life in his home, McKinlev's town, Canton, O., by his strong personality. He got to be public prosecutor. Later he was elected lieu-tenant governor, and then there came an election for United States senator, and he walked off with the prize. He was born in 1863, and, although not young, he's a new figure in national public life, and some say he will last.

Some Who Figure In New York. In New York state no young man in public life has attracted so much attention in recent years as has Franklin D Roosevelt, "fifth cousin of Theodore," who brought about the defeat of Wil liam F. Sheehan for United States senator and made himself a name as a Democratic insurgent.

Assemblyman James W. Wadsworth is a young Republican who has recent ly shown remarkable development. At the age of thirty-five he is a prominent candidate for the Republican nomina tion for governor of New York. He was twenty-seven when he was first elected to the assembly and only twenty-nine when he was made the speaker of that body. He held the speakership

Another man, comparatively young who has broken into the limelight as a possible New York Republican guber natorial candidate is Charles S. Whitman, district attorney of New York county. His handling of the serious charges made against the New York in which Police Lieutenant Charles Becker was arrested in connection with the murder of a gambler who was about to bare alleged crookedness among the police, has made him a national figure.

The Progressive movement is largely responsible for the advent of many of these young men. It was the reform element which made Seth Low a gen eration ago mayor of Brooklyn. He was then a brilliant illustration of the young man in politics. The same undercurrent which now animates a good deal of the so called progressive thought has brought out Hunt, Jost and Baker, mayors of Cincinnati, Kansas City and Cleveland respectively. In another form it has brought McCombs and Hilles and Hotchkiss and other men to the front.

Altogether this political season's crop of young men may be characterized as unusually promising and in some rehe defied and defeated the railroad spects well beyond the average.

In pointing to Ty Cobb as the greatest of ball players few stop to think of the assistance he gets from Sam Crawford, who as cleanup man in the Detroit batting order lies back in the shadow while the full glory is reflected on Cobb. Cobb has the speed and accuracy of eye which enable him to get on base often, but without as reliable an old hand as Crawford following him to nick in with a timely hit Tyrus would not score as many runs as he does, nor is it likely that he shine on the bases with such brilliancy working with a less brilliant partner than Crawford.

The re-entry of Chick Gandil of the Washingtons to the American league recalls an incident of his first appearance, with the Chicago White Sox, before he was shunted off to Montreal because they couldn't see him at Comiskey park. Soon after the American league season opened Detroit and Chicago hooked up on the south side grounds in Chicago. Along about the middle of the game Tyrus Raymond Cobb binged one on the nose for a safety. He passed first base like a shot, but didn't go to second, as the ball was fielded in a hurry and a throw made to first to get him. He shot back into the bag feet foremost Gandil did not step off the sack, but kept on it and put the ball on Cobb with amazing swiftness

"Say, you busher, look out there or I'll cut you up!" exclaimed Ty rather angrily.

'I may be a busher, but you'd better not mark me up with those spikes," coolly answered Gandil.

"You haven't been up here very long, have you?" sneered Ty, acting as though the busher didn't know who he

ROYALTY INCOGNITO.

Modern Rulers Have Inferior Titles For Use to Hide Identity,

Every modern king or prince has sev eral inferior titles (the emperor of Aus tria has over seventeen) that are usually of no use to him. It is when he wishes to travel and does not desire to be bothered with state ceremonies on his way that he finds these titles convenient. The Prince of Wales, who recently enjoyed a long stay in Paris under the title of the Earl of Chester, employed the best known of the various incognitos used by successive princes of Wales. His grandfather, the late King Edward, passed at different times when Prince of Wales as the Duke of Cornwall, the Earl of Chester, the Earl of Carrick and Baron Renfrew.

Such widely known incognitos are not meant to hide the identity of their owners. They are simply an indica-tion that the bearer wants to be spared the paying and receiving of ceremoni-ous visits. But at times royalty really wishes to pass unknown. The present queen of Norway when Princess Charles of Denmark used to go for long tours on the continent accompanied solely by her governess. Hotel books knew her not at all. Queen Alexandra, too, is said to have more than once visited Paris under the name of Mrs. Stephens.

The journalistic photographers and pressmen particularly annoyed that unconventional and witty monarch King Alfonso when staying in Paris under the incognito of Marquis Cavadonga. One morning the typed message reached the chief news igencies in Paris: "If the men of the press persist in shadowing the Marquis Cavadonga as though he were a suspected assassin they must not be surprised when a natural consequence follows." The message was marked 'Private" and was kept out of the newspapers, but all journalistic and diplomatic Paris chuckled at the vision of a persistent reporter falling a martyr beneath the blade of a badgered king. The message, however, had the effect intended.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THIS?

Is There Anybody Who Never Held a Penny?—King Edward Never Did.

Without taking into account his fellow monarchs, there are many wealthier men in the world than the king of England, but it is doubtful if any one of them is unfamiliar with even the smallest coin in his national currency. Yet the late King Edward confessed on one occasion that he had never actually held a penny in his

It came about in this way: Some one asked the king his opinion as to the likeness of himself on the copper coin of the realm. The king then replied that he had seen his features on gold and silver, but had never actually handled a penny. One was then produced for his inspection, and he remarked that he thought the likeness was flat-

As a matter of fact, a good likeness of neither King Edward nor of King George is found on a penny. It was otherwise with the bronze coinage of Queen Victoria. The sculptor who executed the statue of Queen Victoria which the people of Nice have erected in memory of her found a late Victorian penny very useful as a model when he was reproducing her tea-tures, and those who have seen i statue, including members of her family, pronounce it to be an excellent likeness.

Our lesson deals with some of the reflections of Jesus at the close of his extensive mission and that of his disciples throughout Galilee. There is a note of disappointment with the re-sults achieved. "Upbraid." There was no bitterness in the reproaches, but more a sense of the sorrow of love. 'Most of his mighty works." very numerous mighty works" (Moulton). The reference is chiefly to the miracles, but we can think of his entire ministry. "Repented not." No impression had been made such as would induce the people to turn from the er-ror of their ways. "Chorazin." There is no other mention of this place in the gospels. This prayer of Jesus is placed by Luke immediately after his report of the return of the seventy (chapter x. 21-24), while Matthew inserts it after the woes on the unrepentant cities. Whatever the occasion, it expresses the mind of Jesus, which was in hearty accord with that of the Father, concerning the method of the divine revelation. "Wise and prudent" in matters pertaining to the world, and so having a measure of self conceit and self complacency. The scribes and Pharisees belonged to this class. "Babes" in wisdom and understanding. like the simple fishermen and taxgatherers who were among his disciples. Jesus is not here placing a premium on ignorance and discounting knowledge. Paul, the scholar, and Peter the unlearned, were acceptable not because of their mental qualifications or disqualifications, but because they were willing to surrender to the will of God. "Seemeth good in thy sight." It is the contrite spirit which is open to conviction that receives the favors of God (Isa. lxvi, 2). "All things are delivered unto me." This verse is an cho of teaching found in the gospel of John. But the claims of Jesus to an exceptional knowledge of the will of God and to a unique relationship to God are more than supported by the haracter of Jesus as made known in Matthew's gospel as well as the others. No product of the American garden recently been in such demand at high prices as the high grade canta-loupe of half a dozen leading varieties. It is also one of the most profitable that can be raised, and from $100 to as high as $500 or more an acre is frequently obtained from one crop of this luscious fruit. In districts like Rocky Ford, Colo., where from 1,000 to 1,200 carloads are shipped every year, one can readily understand what it means to the growers who depend on cantaloupes entirely for their

PAYS COMING AND GOING.

Farmers who are undecided whether they should grow alfalfa or soy beans or any other legume for hav should bear in mind that they get a double value from the hay. We usually speak only of its feeding value and appreciate the richness of hay from legumes when compared with other hay. The effect upon the value of manure is a big item. The manure from animals cannot contain any more plant food than was originally in the feed, and of course it does contain less. A ton of alfalfa hay has twice as much nitrogen in it as a ton of timothy hay, and necessarily the manure is much richer. The man who grows legumes not only stores some nitrogen in the soil from roots and stubbles and gets a hay that brings bigger returns when fed to live stock. but he adds very materially to the value of the manure that is made. The growing of nitrogen gathering plants for hay pays going and coming. — National Stockman and Farmer.

One of the most important of the crop, because the high prices received for the first cantaloupes in the market offer a large reward for the grower who is able to mature his crop in advance of his neighbors.

The accompanying photograph, taken on Long Island, New York, by the agrioultural experiment station, shows the Dives, a French cantaloupe. This is a very fine variety and single specimens have sold as high as $2.50 apiece.

Horse Feed Warning. Where both grain and cob in corn are crushed and fed to the horses, be sure to make oats, bran or oilmeal about one-third of the ration, as the cob portion of the chop is so dry and woody that it is apt to lie heavily on the stomach, causing gastric colic. In fact, it will not do to feed this ration alone to horses in anything but modcrate quantities, especially where they stand in the stalls a majority of the time.-Iowa Homestead.

BURNING CHARCOAL.

Directions For Making Wood Pile That Will Char Successfully,

There are many farmers who use charcoal for various purposes about the farm, and it may be helpful for them to know how to burn it. Here is a plan that one man has followed very successfully:

feet apart; then lay poles or logs crosswise on these, gradually drawing in at the ends and sides until topped out, at the time filling the vacant places with small chunks of wood so the pile will be quite compact when done. Put the large logs in middle of pile and the smaller ones outside. Cover with straw or leaves sufficient to keep the dirt from going through on to the wood. Cover with about six inches of dirt, leaving a hole at one end close to the ground, having plenty of kindling at this opening to start the fire with. When it gets well started close up the hole and punch holes along the sides. but not too many, or it will get too hot. When blue smoke begins to come out close up the holes and punch others. Green logs will char as well as dry, and any kind of wood may be used. Be sure to have plenty of dry wood to start with. The kiln has burned sufficiently when it has quit smoking.-Iowa Homestead.

ROMANCE OF ROYAL WINE.

The auction salesroom has furnished many little romances, and now one has fallen to the lot of the wine trade. A short time ago the attention of a "tast er" attached to a west end firm was called in a London salesroom to a sam ple bottle of a consignment. It could not be described in other terms than a bottle of mud, for it was a dense brown mass of semiliquid character. with a strange, musty fungoid smell according to the London Chronicle.

The catalogue offered no clew as to its character, for it was described as "fifteen dozen of Moselle" (which it most centainly was not), "fifteen years in bottle and then lying in a private cellar at Bath."

The mysterious lot was knocked down to the taster, whose curlosity was aroused, at 10 shillings per dozen, and after consulting with his principals the opinion was formed that it might be some of the royal imperial dry tokay which is the exclusive property of the emperor of Austria, reserved for royal consumption and re garded as one of the most valuable presents that the emperor sends to other royal houses. The consignment was brought up from Bath, and a special sitting of the directors of the firm, the manager and the expert taster was held. In solemn silence a bottle was uncorked, and the wine pale and brilliantly clear-was unanimously pronounced to be the royal tokay, the trade value of which is not less than a guinea and a balf a bottle. No doubt the original owner was some diplomatist to whom the wine had been given as a mark of imperial

PAYS COMING AND COURSE COTTONSEED MEAL AS FEED.

Experiment of North Carolina Prove

It a Substantial Ration For Horses, The increased cost of living for horses is gradually taking the same significance as that of human beings. and the topic largely discussed in boarding and keeping horses is the increasing cost of grain and feed, in addition to stabling of the animals.

Owing to the partial failure of the eorn crop through the south and west during the past year and at the same time the increase in the cotton crop a great many farmers are making inquiry as to the feeding value of cottonseed meal for horses.

The North Carolina experiment sta tion has recently issued a bulletin on this subject, and several of the other stations have done likewise. The general conclusions reached in the North Carolina experiments were to the effect that cottonseed meal may be used in climited quantities in rations for work stock with general satisfaction. though the animals may oftentimes

The amount of meal fed to each antmal should rarely exceed two pounds a day, or at the rate of one-fifth of a pound to a hundred pounds of live weight, and it should not be more than 15 per cent of the total ration and preferably not over 10 or 12 per cent. No ill effects were experienced during the period of feeding at the North Carolina station, and the statement is made that none should occur, provided good judgment is used Lime is also a very important adjunct in the feeding of horses and has agreat deal to do with substance and conformation. The application of lime in feedings is an important subject discussed among breeders. The fastes thoroughbreds and trotting horses and the best saddle horses and Percherons in whatever part of the globe they are reared, are raised on limestone soil.

The reason is not hard to find

Clover, blue grass and other forage crops, on which the horse thrives, grow est on soils rich in limestone.

Silage Good For Sheep.

It is my opinion that silage can be fed to sheep with satisfactory results The use of moldy or frozen silage may cause trouble, but good, clean, bright silage can be used with excellent results either as a succulent food for breeding ewes in winter or as a chear but satisfactory and efficient rough ness for fattening sheep and lambs This opinion is based partially on ob servations of flocks which have been fed and partially on the experiments I have made. The results to date point toward silage as a cheap and valuable feed for sheep—Ellis Rail Assistant Professor of Animal Hus bandry, University of Nebraska.

Trying to Raise Grain Yield. "The average yield of grains in this country is low and in some sections is growing lower," says Dr. B. T. Galoway of the United States department of agriculture. "With the rapid disappearance of available land in the west for grain production the question of increasing yields is becoming more and more vital. The bureau has recognized the importance of extending the grain area into sections where these crops are not now generally grown and where there is promise of their wider utilization. Sequel of an Introduction By a Society Matchmaker

By MAE C. M'COOMBS

RS. HUNNIMAN'S hobby was | matchmaking that Mr. Lupton at least matchmaking. When Mr. Charles Edwin Lupton took his residence in the city of Mrs. Hunniman's home and presented a letter of introduction to her, her first thought was how to present him to society, the second how to present him with a wife. She determined to invite the social leaders to meet him at dinner and to give him for a table companion a lady, also a newcomer, in whose social preferment she took a deep interest.

Mr. Lupton was a man of forty, intellectual, good looking, well to do and of aristocratic mien. He had been abroad for some time, and Mrs. Hunniman knew nothing of his antecedents except that he was vouched for in the highest terms in his letter of introduction. But no one would mistake him for anything else than a gentleman. Miss Overlander, whom Mrs. Hunniman designed for Mr. Lupton's wife, was thirty-two years old and still a beautiful woman. But a friend of Mrs. Hunniman told some one, who told others, that Miss Overlander was not Miss Overlander at'all. When the dinner guests were assem bled in the drawing room Mrs. Hunniman took Mr. Lupton's arm and led him to the lady beside whom he was to sit at table. There was something so distinguished in both Mr. Lupton's and Miss Overlander's person and manner that the hum of conversation ceased, and all eyes were fixed upon the couple. Both bowed low, the man made some casual observation, the woman replied by an assenting nod, the guests resumed their chat, and not long afterward all passed into the dining room.

There is one thing that matchmakers who are real matchmakers never do. They carefully abstain from any word or act that will intimate their intentions to the objects of their designs. Mrs. Hunniman had thus abstained in the present case, though it had been whispered among the dinner guests that she had intentions concerning Mr. Lupton and Miss Overlander, and during the dinner the couple were the recipients of curious glances. The conversation between the two seemed at first a trifle constrained, and Mrs. Hunniman was not especially encouraged as to the matter she had in view. The lady seemed not especially attracted to her dinner companion, who showed a trifle of embarrassment consequent upon her coldness, and when, shortly after the soup, she entered into conver sation with the gentleman sitting on her other side Mr. Lupton turned to the lady on his other side and became animated.

nore his or her dinner companion very long without being considered rude. and Mr. Lupton and Miss Overlander soon found themselves forced to entertain each other or sit in silence. The lady by this time seemed to have made up her mind to make the best of a bad bargain and ventured several remarks to the gentleman, who sat very stiffly eside her restlessly fingering the stem of his wineglass and only replied in a perfunctory manner. was showing a sure sign of entanglement-pique. Then he made some re mark in a tone too low to be heard except by Miss Overlander, whereupoushe haughtily turned her back on him.

This was near the close of the din ner. When the guests were departing Mrs. Hunniman asked Mr. Lupton hov he was pleased with the lady she had assigned him for the evening. His reply was a snort and an angry turning away. As Miss Overlander came down from the ladies' cloakroom she receiv ed the same question with regard to Mr. Lupton. "Delighted," was her reply in a tone calculated to freeze the marrow in the bones of the questioner.

When the last guests were departing Mr. Hunniman, who had gone out to put a lady in her carriage, returned with a blank look on his face and whispered to his wife:

"My dear, what do you think?" "What?"

"Mr. Lupton and Miss Overlander have gone in the same carriage.

"For heaven's sake! What does it mean?

Now, the departure of the newly introduced couple was seen by two men of the party who were starting for their club. Moved by curlosity, they followed in their carriage. Two hours later they returned to the Hunniman mansion and called for the head of the house. He came down from his bed

"Oh, heavens!" exclaimed Mrs. Hun niman from the landing above.

"We saw her leave your house in s carriage with Lupton. We considered it our duty to you to follow them. They drove through the park for an hour and a half, then to a hotel, where they registered as Mr. and Mrs. C. E.

EVER SEE A DINGO?

Wild Dog of Australia a Constant Mon-ace to Sheep.

The dingo or wild dog of Australia is to Australia what the wolf is to eastern Europe and the covote to America. Hunting in packs or alone, be is a constant menace to Australia's chief industry, the breeding of sheep.

Many are the schemes evolved for the wild dog's destruction, but his capture or death is a comparatively rare occurrence when set against his constant depredations. There are dog trappers who spend their whole lives in trying to catch dingos, men who have studied every aspect of their work and who spare no pains and avoid no hardships in a constant warfare with the wile and cunning of the sheep slayer, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Though the dingo is met with fro time to time in almost every part of the Australian bush, his principal habitat is the rough range country in the center and north of New South Wales and the deep, dark scrubs of Qu

The dog trapper's life is of the loneliest kind. For weeks, perhaps months, he camps in the desolate ranges, setting his traps and watching with ready rifle in the moonlit nights for a chance shot at his enemy. In the bush there is a price on the head of every dingo. In some parts a dingo is worth $50 or even $75 to the man who deliv his scalp to the pastoral board or to the squatter.

As a rule, the dingo confines his murderous attacks to sheep and weakling calves, but in the far out Queensland districts, where large packs travel to gether, one hears of them attacking men in lonely camps in the manne of wolves.

The dingo never barks, but his weird howl is a familiar sound in the bush at night and is bloodcurdling in the extreme and trying to the nerves of the new chum (tenderfoot) camped alone in the bush for the first time. Owing to his cunning and swiftness in changing quarters, the dingo holds his own in central Australia and is likely to do so for many a day to come, even though the price upon his head—already rous one should be doubled or

* THE BEST GOLF HOLE.

Finest "Blind" In Existence Is Said to Be at Prestwick, England.

To speak of the best golf hole in the world is very much like referring to the best book-one feels that there must be several. The Pall Mall Gazette, London, gives one his choice of some 50,000, among which are more than a few that are confidently pro-nounced to be the best by various disagreeing golf experts. One such hole, however, has the distinction of being acknowledged generally to be the finest 'blind" hole in existence.

It is the Alps hole at Prestwick, England. There in a famous match one competitor played a great shot out of water, and his opponent capped it with a splendid niblick from the sand. One "best" long hole is the hole of cross at St. Andrews, where two superlative ly fine shots are required to reach the green without encountering "Walkin-shaw's grave." At another place "the player must carry a terrifying bunker and drop the ball on the green so that it will not scuttle into the bunker at the back."

The player who accomplishes this, comments the writer in the Gasette, is apt to vote this hole the best, while he who fails may call it the worst. Here is the philosophy of good and bad holes, books and all else. The best game is that at which we can best win. The sound rules are those which help us. The only honest delegates-But we are getting into politics.

Habits.

It is a good plan to break one's habits occasionally to see that it can still be done. To follow even the best of habits too closely tends to ossify existence. It makes one stiff. It narrows his tastes. The retired farmer who still gets up before daylight every morning so at to get an early start waiting for bedtime would be much better off if during the stress of life he had broken his habit occasionally and slept until 9 o'clock. The city man who lets the street, the flat, the office grind become an intolerable habit loses all his elasticity. It is better to make some blunders and get some knocks experimenting than to oscillate in a groove until freedom ends.—Col-

What the Farm Machinery Experts Will Do at Peoria.

"The farmer who knows his machinery will never be awake nights worrying about a mortgage,"

It's getting to be more and more recognized that the farmer who shows real genius in his work is the man who has the right implements and knows how to use them. Choice is mighty hard when the table at home is loaded with catalogues, all promising every advantage. But it's different when those same machines are in the field, working side by side.

So the farm machinery experts are going to arrange a series of contests at Peoria in connection with the great National Implement and Vehicle Show. Tractors will plow the soil, vieing with each other for speed and economy. Various other contests have been arranged. Thousands of farmers are going to watch these tests and do their buying according-

On the floors of the state fair building, buggies, wagons, plows. harrows, rollers, binders, every kind of gasoline engine, cream separators, churns, all the best makes, all sizes and styles, stand side by side where intelligent men can compare and judge.

MOTHER SAYS SAXO SALVE MADE HER WELL.

"My little girl suffered with eczema on her hands for nearly a year and reading about Saxo Salve one day I bought a tube and found it, helped her. After using two tubes my baby's hands are entirely well." Mrs. E. P. Hook, 224 E. 17th street, Connersville, Ind.

In all forms of eczema, and all other crusted or scaly humors and eruptions, Saxo Salve allays the itching at once, and penetrates the pores of the skin, reaching the very roots of the disease with its germ-destroying, healing power and soon banishes the eruption, leaving the skin smooth and unscarred.

We sell Saxo Salve on a positive guarantee for all sorts of skin affections. If it does not give satisfaction you get your money back. Try it.

PROLOUGE OF THE STORY.

The junior member of the law firm of Rolfe & Crosby is forced to visit his pretty widow client, Mrs. Delancy, in a small Illinois town. Arriving in the morning, he is compelled to walk to the house. Entering the grounds by way of the stable, he is attacked by a buildog and takes refuge on a rafter until the arance of the dog's master, Mr. Austin, brother-in-law of Mrs. Delancy, appearance of the dog a masses.

Who demands Crosby's business in the barn.

Discussing an Inheritance. QUITE agree with you. What is your business with Mrs. De-lancy?"

"We represent her late husid's interests in settling up the estate of his father. Your wife's interests are ag looked after by Morton & Rogers ve. I am here to have Mrs. Debasey go through the form of signing papers authorizing us to bring suit the estate in order to establish certain rights of which you are fully aware. Your wife's brother left his affairs slightly tangled, you remem-

"Well, I can save you a good deal of couble. Mrs. Delancy has decided to let the matter rest as it is and to ac cept the compromise terms offered by the other heirs. She will not care to you, for she has just written to g firm announcing her decision."

"You you don't mean it," exclaimed rocky in dismay. He saw a prodi-ous fee slipping through his fingers. Jud., I must see her about this," he nt on, starting down the ladder only go back again hastily. The growl-deg leaped forward and stood dy to secure him. Austin chuckled be really can't see you, Mr. Crosby bicage, where the takes the Michigan suital for New York tonight. You can ain nothing by seeing her." nothing by seeing her."

is I maist, sir," exploded Crosby

"You may come down when you like," said Austin. "The dog will be here until I return from the depot after driving her over. Come down when you like."

Crosby did not utter the threat that surged to his lips. With the wisdom born of self preservation he tempor ised, reserving deep down in the surging young breast a promise to amply recompense his pride for the blows it was receiving at the hands of the detestable Mr. Austin.

"You'll admit that I'm in a devil of a pickle, Mr. Austin," he said jovially. The dog is not at all friendly."

"He is at least diverting. You won't be lonesome while I'm away. I'll tell Mrs. Delancy that you called," said Austin ironically.

He turned to leave the barn, and the sinister sneer on his face gave Crosby a new and amazing inspiration. Like a flash there rushed into his mind the belief that Austin had a deep laid design in not permitting him to see the lady. With this belief also came the conviction that he was hurrying her off to New York on some pretext simply to forestall any action that might induce her to continue the contemplated suit against the estate. Mrs. Delancy had undoubtedly been urged to drop the matter under pressure of promises, and the Austins were getting her away from the scene of a before she could reconsider or before her solicitors could convince her of the mistake she was making. The thought of this sent the fire of resentment racing through Crosby's brain, and he fairly gasped with the longing to get the botto n of the case. His only hope now lay in sending a telegram to Mr. Rolfe, commanding him to meet Mrs. Delancy when her train reached Chicago and to lay the whole matter

Before Austin could make his exit the voices of women were heard outside the door and an instant later two ladies entered. The farmer attempted to turn them back, but the younger, taller and slighter of the newcomers cried:

"I just couldn't go without another look at the horses, Bob."

Orosby, on the beam, did not fail to shearve the rich, tender tone of the voice, and it would have required almost total darkness to obscure the beauty of her face. Her companion was older and coarser, and he found delight in the belief that she was the better half of the disagreeable Mr. Anstin.

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Delancy!" came a fine masculine voice from nowhere. The ladies started in amaze ment, Mr. Austin ground his teeth, the dog took another tired leap upward. Mr. Crosby took off his hat gallantly and waited patiently for the lady to discover his whereabouts.

"Who is it, Bob?" cried the tall one, and Crosby patted his bump of shrewdness happily. "Who have you in hid-

"I'm not in hiding, Mrs. Delancy. I'm a prisoner, that's all. near the top of the ladder directly in front of you. You know me only through the mails, but my partner, Mr. Rolfe, is known to you personally. M7 name is Crosby."

"How very strange," she cried in "Why don't you come down. Mr. Crosby?".
"I hate to admit it, but I'm afraid.

There's the dog, you know. Have you any influence over him?"
"None whatever. He hates me. Perhaps Mr. Austin can manage him. Oh, isn't it ludicrous?" and she burst into hearty laughter. It was a very musical laugh, but Crosby considered

"But Mr. Austin declines to interfere. I came to see you on private business and am not permitted to it a disagreeable croak.

"We don't know this fellow, Louise and I can't allow you to talk to him," said Austin brusquely. "I found him where he is, and there he stays until the marshal comes out from town. His actions have been very suspicious and must be investigated. I can't take chances on letting a horse thief escape Swallow will watch him until I can

"I implore you, Mrs. Delancy, to give me a moment or two in which to explain," cried Crosby. "He knows I'm not here to steal his horses, and he knows I intend to punch his head the minute I get the chance." Mrs. Austin's little shrick of dismay and her husband's flerce glare did not check the flow of language from the beam. "I am Crosby, of Rolfe & Crosby, your counsel. I have the papers here for you to sign and"

"Louise, I insist that you come away from here. This fellow is a fraud"-

"He's refreshing, at any rate," said Mrs. Delancy gayly. "There can be no harm in hearing what he has to say, Bob."

"You are very kind, and I won't detain you long."

"I've a mind to kick you out of this barn," cried Austin angrily.

"I don't believe you're tall enough, my good fellow." Mr. Crosby was more than amiable. He was positively genial. Mrs. Delancy's pretty face wa the picture of eager, excited mirth, and he saw that she was determined to see the comedy to the end.

"Louise, exclaimed Mrs. Austin, speaking for the first time, "you are not fool enough to credit this fellow's story, I'm sure. Come to the house at once. I will not stay here." Mrs. Austin's voice was hard and biting, and Crosby also caught the quick glance that passed between husband and wife. "I am sure Mrs. Delancy will not be be so unkind as to leave me after I've had so much trouble in getting an audience. Here is my card, Mrs. Delancy." Crosby tossed a card from his perch, but Swallow gobbled it up instantly. Mrs. Delancy gave a little cry of disappointment, and Crosby promptly apologized for the dog's greediness. "Mr. Austin knows I'm Crosby," he concluded.

"I know nothing of the sort, sir, and forbid Mrs. Delancy holding further conversation with you. This is an outrageous imposition. Louise. You must train." said Austin, biting his lip im-

"That reminds me, I also take the 4 o'clock train for Chicago, Mrs. Delancey. If you prefer, we can talk over our affairs on the train instead of here. I'll confess this isn't a very dignified manner in which to hold a consulta-

"Will you be kind enough to state the nature of your business, Mr. Crosby?" said the young woman, ignoring

"Then you believe I'm Crosby?" cried that gentleman triumphantly. "Louise!" cried Mrs. Austin in de spair. "In spite of your present occupation I believe you are Crosby," said Mrs. Delancey merrily.

"But, good gracious, I can't talk business with you from this confounded beam," he cried lugubriously.

"Mr. Austin will call the dog away," she said confidently, turning to the man in the door. Austin's sallow face lighted with a sudden malicious grin. and there was positive joy in his voice

"You may be satisfied, but I am not.

If you desire to transact business with this impertinent stranger, Mrs. Delancy, you'll have to do so under existing conditions. I do not approve of him or his methods, and my dog doesn't either. You can trust a dog for knowing a man for what he is. Mrs. Austin and I are going to the house You may remain, of course. I have no right to command you to follow. When you are ready to drive to the station please come to the house. I'll be ready. Your Mr. Crosby may leave when he likes-if he can. Come, Elizabeth." With this defiant thrust Mr. Austin stalked from the barn, followed by his wife, Mrs., Delancy started to follow, but checked herself immediately, a flush of anger mounting to her After a long pause she spoke.

"I don't understand how you came to e where you are, Mr. Crosby," she said slowly. "He related his ences rapidly and laughed with her simply because she had a way with

"You'll pardon me for laughing." she giggled.

"With all my heart," he replied gal lantly. "It must be very funny. How-ever, this is not business. You are in a hurry to get away from here, and— I'm not, it seems. Briefly. Mrs. Delancy. I have the papers you are to sign before we begin your action against the Fairwater estate. You know what they are through

"Well, I'm sorry, Mr. Crosby, to say to you that I have decided to abandon the matter. A satisfactory compromise is under way."

"So I've been told. But are you sure you understand yourself?"

"Perfectly, thank you." "This is a very unsatisfactory place from which to argue my case, Mrs. Delancy. Can't you dispose of the dog?"

"Only God disposes." "Well, do you mind telling me what the compromise provides?" She stared at him for a moment haughtily, but his smile won the point for him. She told him everything and then looked very much displeased when he swore dis tinctly.

"Pardon me, but you are getting very much the worst of it in this deal It is the most contemptible scheme to rob that I ever heard of. By this arrangement you are to get farming lands and building lots in rural towns worth in all about $100,000, I'd say. Don't you know that you are entitled to nearly half a million?" "Oh, dear, no! By right my share is less than $75,000!" she cried triumph antly.

"Who told you so?" he demanded. and she saw a very heavy frown on his erstwhile merry face.

"Why-why, Mr. Austin and another brother-in-law, Mr. Gray, both of whom are very kind to me in the mat

"Mrs. Delancy, you are being robbed by these fellows. Can't you see that these brothers-in-law and their wives will profit immensely if they succeed in keeping the wool over your eyes long enough? Let me show you some figures." He excitedly drew a packet of papers from his pocket and in five minutes' time had her gasping with the knowledge that she was legally entitled to more than half a million dollars.

"Are you sure?" she cried, unable to believe her ears.
"Absolutely. Here is the inventory and here are the figures to corroborate everything I say."

"But they had figures, too!" she cried in perplexity.

"Certainly. Figures are wonderful things. I only ask you to defer this plan to compromise until we are able to thoroughly convince you that I am not misrepresenting the facts to you."

"Oh, if I could only believe you!" "I'd toss the documents down to you if I were not afraid they'd join my card. That is a terribly ravenous beast. Surely you can coax him out of the barn," he added eagerly.

"I can try, but persuasion is difficult with a bulldog, you know," she said doubtfully. "It is much easier to persuade a man," she smiled.

"I trust you won't try to persuade me to come down," he said in alarm. "Mr. Austin is a brute to treat you in this manner," she cried indignantly "I wouldn't treat a dog as he is treating me."

"Oh. I am sure you couldn't." she cried in perfect sincerity. "Swallow doesn't like me, but I'll try to get him away. You can't stay up there all night."

"By Jove!" he exclaimed sharply. "What is it?" she asked quickly.

"I had forgotten an engagement in Chicago for tonight. Box party at the comic opera," he said, looking nervous ly at his watch.

"It would be too bad if you missed it," she said sweetly. "You'd be much more comfortable in a box." "You are consoling at least. Are you going to coax him off?" "In behalf of the box party, I'll try. Come, Swallow. There's a nice doggie!"

Crosby watched the proceedings with deepest interest and concern and not a little admiration. But not only did Swallow refuse to abdicate, but he seemed to take decided exceptions to the feminine method of appeal. He evidently did not like to be called "dog-

For heaven's sake. don't go near him! He'll kill you!" She had taken two or three steps to ward the dog, her hand extended pleadingly, only to be met by an ominous growl, a fine display of teeth and a bristling back. As if paralyzed, she halted at the foot of the ladder, ter ror suddenly taking possession of her. "Can you get the pitchfork?" "I am afraid to move," she moaned "He is horrible—horrible!"

"I'll come down, Mrs. Delancy, and hang the consequences." Crosby cried and was suiting the action to the word when she cried out in remonstrance.

"Don't come down-don't! He'll kill von. I forbid you to come down, Mr Crosby. Look at him! Oh. he's coming toward me! Don't come down! she shrieked. "I'll come up!"

Grasping her skirts with one hand she started frantically up the ladder, her terrified eyes looking into the face of the man above. There was a vicious snarl from the dog, a savage lunge, and then something closed over her arm like a vise. She felt herself being jerked upward, and a second later she was on the beam beside the flushed young man whose strong hand and not the dog's jaws had reached her first. He was obliged to support her for a few minutes with one of his emphatic arms, so near was she to fainting.

A Glance at Current Topics and Eve

Boston, Sept. 9.—The American Game Protective and Propagation association is founding a farm for the breeding of wild ducks, quail, ruffed grouse, pheasants and other birds. The association has leased 6,000 acres about forty miles southeast of this city. The land ac-quired has already been in use as a game preserve, and there are many quall and grouse on it.

"At one time," says a bulletin issued by the association, "the ponds in this section afforded some of the best duck and grouse shooting in New England. They lie directly in the line of flight of these migrants, which, since restrictions have been placed on shooting them, have been alighting there in increased numbers on their northward and southward journeys. Many wild fowl breed there, and the association plans to increase the number by affording them unusual advantages in the way of food. The breeding of wild ducks will be the initial work in propagation.

"It is quite likely that the association will procure an expert gamekeeper from Scotland to take charge of rearing uplands birds. The foreign gamekeepers in this country have been gen erally very successful. Undoubtedly they will teach their profession to Americans and will thus start a line of gamekeepers in this country."

Graft In New York. New York, Sept. 10 .- Charles S. Fighting the Hookworm. Lexington, Ky., Sept. 9.—The eyes of the medical fraternity in Kentucky have been centered on Knox county for the past two months, where the initial step in ridding Kentucky of the hookworm malady started with the opening of ten free dispensaries for examina-tion and treatment. The dispensaries are under the supervision of Dr. J. N. McCormick, president of the Kentucky health board, and Dr. J. S. Lock, one of the state sanitary inspectors.

Five hundred cases were reported on the second day. The campaign to free Knox county of the parasite has been pushed vigorously. Schoolhouses all over the county were the meeting places, and the workers went into the mining towns. This county was the first selected for the work because of the co-operation of the county officials, who hore part of the expense. The Rockefeller sanitary fount of commission and the state board of [37 B] health worked with them.

The woman of a certain age finds it difficult in these days of odd fashions to select something for evening wear that will be both modish and dignified. A glance at the gown illustrated here may help to solve the problem. This handsome dress of charmeuse satin for an elderly matron owes much of its charm to the graceful disposition of the lace flounces on the sleeves and the novelty of the deep draped collar of satin and fringe.

NEW STYLES IN HATS.

Shaded Plumes Are Gaining In Favor

It is stated that the hats are to be larger than ever. How could they be? As a matter of fact, it is not the case. Hats are much more moderate in size than two years ago and more moderate than those worn last year. There is, unfortunately, no diminution of the display of ospreys.

beauty of many of the most beautiful hats worn at a recent great dress show was due to the lovely, delicately tinted, long fronded, soft, light, formy looking ostrich plumes. Some were French gray, tipped at the edges with wedgwood blue. Many were amber hued, shaded to apricot at the tips. Others were green, shaded to gold or sulphur color tipped with rose. They were most decorative, very rich and extremely becoming. Beads of amber, of lapis lazuli, of coral and of inde were seen on some of the hats. These had a heavy look, which should be absent from successful millinery. Many of the chapeaux were high in the crown, and most of them had upstanding plumes. In size, however, they were much more moderate than they have been.

PLAITED SKIRTS IN VOGUE.

They Are the Most Prominent of the Season's Novelties.

Grays, tans and slate greens pre dominate in the fine, closely woven serges, English tweeds, Scotch mixtures, ratines and rough surfaced boucle yarns which are the fashionable fabrics. The tailored suits for autumn service are being made up by both custom tailors and large manufacturers in these goods.

The plaited skirt is the most prominent of the autumn season's novelties. Many little taffeta dresses show these plaited skirts too. The skirts are formed of two deep plaited flouncesmachine plaiting of a sort of crapy nature. These flounces are broken in the front only by a narrow straight panel just at one side of the center. The panel is trimmed with taffeta covered buttons.

Separate skirts of white damask are shown too. They are beautifully cut and finished, opening down the front with a line of embroidered scallops and made just a trifle high in the waist, with the scalloping for top finish so that a belt is not needed, though one may be worn.

 WHEN COOKING CEREALS.

Every housewife dreads cleaning a kettle in which catmeal or hominy has been cooked. She will no doubt welcome this information. First grease the pan generously with lard and fill it with col water, then add the cereal. Lard prevents the cereal from adhering to the bottom and sides The cereal forms a thin scale which may easily be removed.

Nowhere Does Refinement Show Out Better Than There. Nowhere does refinement depict itself more than at the dinner table. Though the fare may be simple, the appointments should be fresh and the ATHER," said little Clarence dainty.

If the table is in good condition linen doilies and centerpieces are much used for luncheon and breakfast.

These should be all white, according to the present fashion. For dinner the fine damask tablecloth never goes out of style. Elaborate lace trimmed affairs are of ten used for luncheon. A cotton flannel silence cloth should always be used. Silk and satin decorations have had their day. They are seldom seen now and jar one's good taste, because we instinctively feel that all table ornaments should be of washable materials since they are liable to become soiled. Only so much silverware should be used as can be kept bright and shin-

China or glass should be substituted for the rest. Nothing looks more des late than a tarnished silver tea set or butter dish.

Saltcellars with spoons rather than salt sprinklers are used in private The latter are very appropriate in hotels and restaurants, where they reassure the consumer as to the pristine condition of the salt.

Everything should be cleared away between meals. To see a table set at all hours of the day and night looks too much like a boarding house.

It is not thought good form to put a whole pile of plates before the master or mistress of the house.

Plates should be warmed for a hot meal or fish course.

and the second state A lady driven up to her country residence in an automobile alighted and hurried into the house. In the hall she was accosted by a tall, intellectual looking man, but with something weak n his expression.

"Why, dear, what has kept you? Dinner has been ready half an hour." "Well, well! Must I always be on the minute?" And instead of waiting for the usual kiss she hurried upstairs to lay aside her wraps.

"Something wrong again," he muttered. "We who defy the social code must pay the penalty. But she has always recovered from these moments of remorse. Doubtless she will do so

The recovery in this case did not come. Instead a gloom settled over the woman that he could not dispel, though he made every effort. He tried to win her from her melancholy by caresses. She repulsed him. He took her to the opera, to theaters, every where, anywhere, that he could place her in an atmosphere of excitement She seemed for awhile to be lending herself willingly to the plan, but there was no change in her, and at last she declined to pursue it further. One thing alone she followed of her own choice. Every day an automobile wheeled to the door, and she entered it and sped away for a drive that was never short and often very long.

He was comforted that what could not be produced by other amusements was effected by this. Doubtless the breakneck speed, with an element of danger in it, served to overcome remorse. But he feared that one of the many accidents constantly occurring would happen to her.

"Sweetheart," he said one day after her return from a ride, "do you drive very fast?"

"As fast as the machine can be driven."

"Are you not afraid?" Automobile accidents do not "No.

maim; they give us oblivion."

He sighed and started to take her in his arms, but she turned away.

The next day when she went to ride he told her that he would go with her. He wished to observe if the chauffeur was careful or reckless. She passively consented. He was satisfied with what he saw. There was no carelessness, no reckless speed, but she sat beside him unmoved by any word he spoke to her and apparently uninterest-This will neatly close the ripped ed in her surroundings. She was like seam and will wear for a long time.

Coming to a broad road stretching straight ahead for several miles, he ordered the chauffeur to increase the speed again and again till the machine was flying like the wind. Still the woman beside him sat like a statue. He felt for her hand, expecting that, moved by the awful speed at which they were running, she would involuntarily clutch his. It lay limp in his palm.

That was the last ride he ever took with her. The next afternoon when he came home he was told that she had gone, as usual, in the automobile When dinner was announced she had not returned. He waited half an hour, then dined alone. His life was becoming intolerable. Despairing of re-establishing his former relations, he wished that something would occur to break the connection. After dinner he lighted a cigar, but soon threw it away. Noticing an evening paper on a table beside him, he took it up. On the first page there were headlines in large print announcing an automobile accident. Two persons, a man and a wo-man, were killed.

Strange that he experienced a welcome relief.

He did not read what followed. He had long lived in dread of something terrible—he knew not what—and did not doubt that this horror was what he had feared, or if he doubted he did not dare read on, fearing a confirmation of what he believed. Conscience makes cowards of us all, and this man, who had robbed a husband of his wife and a child of his mother, shrank from the dreadful end of what he had done. He sat motionless, his face covered with his hands. A servant lighted the lights, but he did not hear. An hour passed, during which no sound aroused him, till at last he heard an automobile stop before the house. Starting up, he hurried to the door. A chauffeur, one he had never seen, met him there.
"I was told, sir, to bring this machine here."

The few words told a new story. She was not dead. She had left him.

An auto stopped at the door of the house where the brief dialogue which opened the story took place Clarence La Mont, his eyes big with expectancy, went to the door. He saw his father hand out a lady. She raised a veil. With a wild cry the boy sprang into the arms of his mother.

Whoever heard of a man disguising himself as a chauffeur and running away with his own wife?

Court Dress Must Be Exact.

The mistakes that are made at court in England in the matter of dress and decoration are amusing. The regula-tions of the lord chamberlain's department for the dress of those who attend courts are so strict that an expert tailor is posted as the agent of the department at the entrance to the rooms in which the functions are held. and it is his duty to scrutinize the clothes of each man attending the court and to draw attention to any irregularity.

Dr. Torrey's subject was "The Five Incontrovertible Facts Proving That the Bible Is the Word of God."

HOW WE USE OUR LIVES.

The Man of Seventy Has Spent Twenty-three Years in Bed.

"The days of our lives are threecore years and ten," sings the psalmist, and the man or woman who attains that age spends years of his life in doing what are regarded as common daily actions, says London An-

The average person of seventy has spent no fewer than twenty-three years of his life in bed, assuming that his nightly sleep has been eight hours throughout life. Most people spend about fifteen minutes a day over the care of their teeth. The septuagena-rians have thus spent almost a year in this way. How long have they spent at table? Allow half an hour for each meal and the answer is six years. They eat on an average one loaf of bread a day. In all their life three miles of loaves have been consumed, supposing that the latter are put end to end. Includ-ing tea, coffee and milk, 300 barrels of liquid have been accounted for.

The office man of seventy has put in five years in walking to the station and to his office. A woman of seventy, even simple in her dress, has taken seven years in clothing herself.

A man and a woman who have reached the allotted span of life will have used 600 pairs of boots between them, 400 dresses and 500 hats.

A Bright Future

Joseph W. Gates was talking at the New York theater about the superfluity of show girls in Manhattan.

"Every opening," he said, "has a dozen show girls clamoring to fill it. I got thirty or forty girls positions in department stores last week. The surplusage of show girls is due to the fact that so many artists' models have turned to theatricals.

"The models say there is no work for them. Art is in a bad way. The rich collectors buy nothing but old masters from abroad."

Mr. Gates smiled.

"But it would be nearer the truth." he went on, "to say that lots of artists are failures. Even the successes, you know, are only half a quarter succes es-like the young surgeon.

A PLACE FOR THE GIRLS AND BOYS

HARMLESS GAME FOR BOYS.

The Tilting Contest Is an Exciting Pastime,
A harmless but exciting game for boys is the tilting contest, which has become very popular with the boy scouts. By the rules of the contest two boys stand on overturned boxes or tubs, and, armed with five foot staffs or rods, the ends of which have been protected by cushions or buffers, each contestant tries to push his opponent off his perch. It is permissible to put one foot upon the ground, in order to maintain balance, but not for long. There are strict rules about "fouls" or striking at an opponent in the face or, in fact, striking him anywhere. Three fouls disqualify a player and give the contest to his opponent. The contest is divided off into "rounds," or short periods, governed by the man who acts as umpire or referee. In several recent scout meetings the tilting contests have been waged between the best players of the various patrols, and the enthusiasm always reached a high point of excitement on the part of the adherents of the two contestants. What Is the Answer?

Years Ago Ebbs.

Three Republican Congressman, and Possibly Four, Are Returned from Old Pine Tree State by the Election.

Republican gains throughout Maine show that William T. Haines has been elected over the present Democratic governor, Frederick W. Plaisted, and that three, and possibly four, Republican congressmen have been elected, as against two at the last election.

Republican Congressmen Gain. In the First district Congressman Asher C. Hinds ran considerably ahead of the ticket and probably has won over his Democratic opponent, Michael T. O'Brien. In the Second Congressman McGillicuddy and his Republican opponent, William B. Skelton, ran neck and neck, the latter leading slightly, with about half the district to be heard from.

Democratic Congressman Samuel W. Gould apparently has been defeated in the Third district at the hands of Forrest Goodwin, and in the Fourth district Republican Congressman Frank E. Guernsey is more than holding his own with Charles Mullen, the present mayor of Bangor.

The vote, with twenty-eight towns missing, was: Haines, Rep., 70,072; Plaisted, Dem., 66,515. Two years ago the vote for governor was: Fernald. Rep., 64,672; Plaisted, Dem., 73,425. The missing towns two years ago cast 751 votes for the Republican candidate and 846 for the Democratic can

The New Legislature The new legislature will stand on a joint ballot 94 Republicans and 78 Democrats, with ten districts yet to report. The state senate will be made up of 22 Republicans and 8 Democrats, with one district missing. The house will be composed of 72 Republicans and 70 Democrats, with nine districts missing.

This majority will be sufficient to elect former Congressman Edwin C. Burleigh of Augusta as United States senator to succeed Obadiah Gardner. who was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator William P. Erye, Republican.

There is no longer any doubt but what Hinds, Guernsey and McGillicuddy have been re-elected to congress, though with reduced pluralities. Forrest Goodwin is the other Republican congressman elected.

Progressives Keep Hands Off. A feature that made possible the election of Haines is the fact that the Progressives, who are admittedly strong in this state, did not oppose him, instead there being a solid Re-publican force against the Democrats. Nor did the Progressives come into the state prior to election day in the fight for the national ticket. agreed with the Republican state committee to stay out of the state until after the election and it is highly probable that their absence from the state carried considerable strength to Another feature of the battle was the fact that the Republicans who deflected to Plaisted two years ago did not stay under his banner this year.
