OBITUARY.

PETER BROWN

Peter Brown was born in Fairfield county, Ohio, March 1, 1829. He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James M. Dolan, Sept. 19, 1912, being 83 years, 6 months, and 18 days of age. He came to Illinois on horseback in 1850. He first settled in Moultrie county near where Kirksville is now located. In 1852 he was married to Miss Amanda Hook. They lived on the Montgomery farm, south west of Sullivan, till 1867, when they moved to the farm in East Nelson township, where they resided until death. Two sons and one daughter were born to them. The older son, George, died in Nebraska a few years ago. The other son Jacob, now lives in South Dakota. The daughter, Mrs. J. M. Dolan, lives on a farm adjoining her father's farm, with whom he spent the last few years of his life. There was also a foster daughter, Mrs. Elzy Waggoner, now deceased. The wife, Amanda Brown, died July 17, 1903. There are 7 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren. The funeral discourse was by Eld. J. W. Mathers last Saturday at 2 p. m. in the French church. Interment was in French cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this method of thanking our neighbors who so faithfully assisted us during the illness, and sympathized with us in our bereavement.
MRS. J. M. DOLAN
AND FAMILY.

FOSTER B. WHITE

Foster, the twelve-year-old son of J. C. White and wife, died Monday. The funeral was preached by Rev. A. L. Caseley at the residence Wednesday and the remains taken to the Keller cemetery near Lovington for burial.

Children Badly Burned.

Last Saturday afternoon while the parents were away from home, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Gilbreath decided to make a fire as it was a chilly afternoon.

They made the fire and set the gallon coal oil can, with about half a pint of oil in it, on the floor next to the stove. When the stove became hot the oil exploded, blowing the spout and bottom from the can and burned about the head and face and Grace about the lower part of the body. Two other children, Gladys, aged 15, and Bernice, aged 8, put out the fire and were not burned at all.

A small neighbor girl that was with them escaped without injuries. Grace suffered so intensely from her burns that she ran to the creek nearby and lay down in the water. She then got out of the water went back to the house changed her clothing and with the other children went to Ellis Harpster's for relief.

The parents and physician were soon with the children but owing to the extent and deepness of Grace's burns it was impossible to alleviate her sufferings and she had to be kept under the influence of morphine. They have the sympathy and assistance of all their neighbors. The girls were both alive Friday noon, and a prospect for their recovery appears favorable.

Editor Took Vacation.

Once in the history of Sullivan to the best of our knowledge and belief, an editor, yes indeed, really, actually and truly, one editor existing in Sullivan, became so prosperous that he decided to take a two weeks' vacation and rest from arduous labor.

So accordingly, a quill pusher, taking scrip in his pocket and a change of shirts, journeyed to far-off Rockton. The description of the trip was so elaborately written that we have had numerous requests to republish the whole thing. We regret very much that we were unable to, as our copy disappeared. We have consoled them by suggesting that the tour may be concluded in the Record-Herald and the lay-over in Bement illustrated in the Sunday edition.

Subscriptions taken at this office for the "Chicago Record-Herald." The report that Seth McCabe and his paramour, Mrs. Layton, had been murdered, in Salt Lake City, Utah, by Cal Layton, the husband of Mrs. Layton has been denied.

State Fair Attractions

The Illinois State Fair will be held Oct. 4-12 inclusive. It will be better and greater than ever. The entries of agricultural products and live stock, poultry and farm implements and vehicles far exceed the limits of the fair ground, and the board of Agriculture for years has been asking the legislature for permission to condemn additional land.

Nearly $100,000 in cash premiums and purses are offered this year, a substantial increase over 1911. Thirty thousand dollars of this is hung up for speed ring purses. In the way of special attractions no State Fair approaches ours in quantity or quality. Aviation meets of three aeroplanes and balloons, mule and pony races daily. A Cuban lady slides down a plane in an auto turning three somersaults every day. A beautiful pony triple team and trick pony every day and the bands are consolidated in a grand concert every forenoon.

The greatest horses in the United will be driven by the most famous skillful driver. The climax will come on Oct. 12, Automobile day, when Disbrow, Endicotts, Nitrent and other famous 'auto speed demons will race for prizes, closing with a grand five-mile race between auto and aeroplanes.

The exhibit of rare game birds and waterfowl, of old implements of husbandry of the state live stock commission, domestic science and boys' state fair school and the greatest animals living—we advise our readers to visit the Illinois State Fair this year.

The DAY of the DOG

BY GEORGE BARR M'CUICHEON
AUTHOR OF "GRAUSTARK"

Copyright, 1904, by DOUGLASS, READ AND CO.

PROLOGUE OF THE STORY.

The junior member of the law firm of Rolfe & Crosby is forced to visit his pretty widow client, Mrs. Delancy, in a small Illinois town. Arriving in the morning, he is compelled to walk to the house. Entering the grounds by way of the stable, he is attacked by a bulldog and takes refuge on a rafter until the appearance of the dog's master, Mr. Austin, brother-in-law of Mrs. Delancy, who demands to know Crosby's business in the barn. He pretends to distrust Crosby. Mrs. Delancy appears and is apprised of the fact that her brother-in-law, Mr. Austin, is intending to rob her of part of her inheritance. She joins Crosby on the rafter and signs the papers. Austin informs them that the dog will be left to watch them all night. Crosby climbs down to battle with the dog and allow Mrs. Delancy to escape.

The Escape.

ABOVE, Mrs. Delancy was moaning and imploring Crosby to come back to her side, even threatening to spring from the beam to the floor before he could reach the bottom of the ladder.

"By George!" he exclaimed, and then climbed up three or four rounds of the ladder, greatly to the annoyance of the dog.

"What is it?" cried Mrs. Delancy, recovering her balance on the beam.

"Let me think for a minute," he answered, deliberately resting his elbow on an upper round.

"It is about time you were doing a little thinking," she said, relief and asperity in her voice. "In another second I should have jumped into that dog's jaws."

"I believe it can be done," he went on, excited enthusiasm growing in his voice. "That's what bulldogs are famous for, isn't it?"

"I don't know what you are talking about, but I do know that whenever they take hold of anything they have to be treated for lockjaw before they will let go. If you don't come up here beside me I'll have a fit, Mr. Crosby."

"That's it; that's what I mean!" he cried eagerly. "If they close those jaws upon anything they won't let go until death them doth part. Gad! I believe I see a way out of this pickle."

"I don't see how that can help us. The dog's jaws are the one and only obstacle, and it is usually the other fellow's death that parts them. Oh," she went on plaintively, "if we could only pull his teeth! Good heavens, Mr. Crosby!" sitting up very abruptly. "You are not thinking of undertaking it, are you?"

"No, but I've got a scheme that will make Swallow ashamed of himself to the end of his days. I can't help laughing over it." He leaned back and laughed heartily. "Hold my coat, please." He removed his coat quickly and passed it up to her.

"I insist on knowing what you intend doing!" she exclaimed.

"Just wait and see me show Mr. Swallow a new trick or two." He had already taken his watch and chain, his fountain pen and other effects from his vest, jamming them into his trousers pockets. Mrs. Delancy in the growing darkness looked on, puzzled and anxious.

"You might tell me," she argued resentfully. "Are you going to try to swim out?"

"Don't fall off that beam, please," he panted. "It might rattle me."

"I can't help being excited. It is the grandest thing I ever heard of. He can't get out of there, can he? Dear me, the sides of that stall are more than eight feet high."

"He can't get out of it if I get him in," gasped Crosby.

Not ten feet away to the left and some four feet above the floor level there was a wide opening into a box stall, the home of Mr. Austin's prize stallion. As the big horse was inside munching his hay, Crosby was reasonably sure that the stall with its tall sides was securely closed and bolted.

Suddenly there was a mighty creak of the ladder, the swish of a heavy body through the air, an interrupted growl, and then a ripping thud. Swallow's chubby body shot squarely through the opening, accompanied by a trusty though somewhat sadly stretched vest, and the deed was done. A cry of delight came from the beam, a shout of pride and relief from the ladder and sounds of a terrific scramble from the stall. First there was a sickening grunt, then a surprised howl, then the banging of horse hoofs and at last a combination of growls and howls that proved Swallow's invasion of a hornet's nest.

"Thunderation!" came in sharp, agonized tones from the ladder.

"What is the matter?" she cried, detecting disaster in the exclamation.

"I am a—blooming idiot!" he groaned. "I forgot to remove a roll of bills from an upper pocket in that vest!"

"Oh, is that all?" she cried in great relief, starting down the ladder.

"All! There was at least $50 in that roll," he said from the floor, not forgetting to assist her gallantly to the bottom.

through the night, down a short embankment and into the gravel highway. "The way looks dark and grew some ahead of us, Mrs. Delancy. As your lawyer, I'd advise you to turn back and find safe lodging with the enemy. It is going to storm, I'm sure."

"That's your advice as a lawyer, Mr. Crosby. Will you give me your advice as a friend?" she said lightly. Although the time had passed when her guiding hand was necessary, he still held the member in his own.

"I couldn't be so selfish," he protested, and without another word they started off down the road toward town. "Do you suppose they are delaying the opera in Chicago until you come?" she asked.

"Poor Graves! He said he'd kill me if I didn't come," said Crosby, laughing.

"How dreadful!"

"But I'm not regretting the opera. Quive does not sing until tomorrow night."

"I adore Quive"

"You can't possibly have an engagement for tomorrow night either," he said reflectively.

"I don't see how I could. I expected to be on a Pullman sleeper."

"I'll come for you at 8:15, then."

"You are very good, Mr. Crosby, but I have another plan."

"I beg your pardon for presuming to"—he began, and a hot flush mounted to his brow.

"You are to come at 7 for dinner," she supplemented delightedly.

"What a nice place the seventh heaven is!" he cried warmly.

"Sh!" she whispered suddenly, and both stopped stock still. "There is a man with a lantern at the lower gate. See? Over yonder."

"What of it? Who's afraid of a lantern?"

A Glance at Current Topics and Events

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 24.—The first annual session of the American road congress will be held here the week of Sept. 30. Arrangements have been perfected by Logan Waller Page, director of the United States office of public roads, who is president of the association. He says that the session will be the most important of its kind ever held and that the exhibition of road building which has been planned will completely outdo any similar exhibition. President Taft is honorary president of the American road congress, and the president and Dr. Woodrow Wilson were asked to address the convention, which will mark the consolidation of the conventions of forty of the principal road associations in the United States.

Indiana's Governorship.
Anderson, Ind., Sept. 22.—The Republican nominee for governor of this state, Winfield T. Durbin, who was state executive of Indiana 1901-5, was a private in the civil war and a colo-seen in New York for several months now, and orders are being filled for many of these vehicles. Each seats eighty-eight persons, and as a distance of seven feet six and one-half inches separates the floor and the ceiling on the lower deck the comfort of giants is assured. The conductor is stationed at a money changing desk in the middle of the car to receive the fares of passengers, who after this necessary detail find seats on the first deck or ascend the stairways leading to the upper deck. The latter is inclosed with glass windows for inclement weather.

The Fashionable Man.
Chicago, Sept. 23.—Mercy! Men can't pad any more! The day of Sandowesque effects is over for all nobby dressers. Men, say the tailors of this city, will dress like Englishmen this fall all over the country, which will probably cause a lot more horses to run away than ever.

Breeding Karakul Sheep.
Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 22.—A sheep farm which will be the first of its kind in this part of the country, which will produce a new hybrid animal by crossing American ewes with Karakul rams brought from central Asia, has been started on the L. M. Crawford ranch in this county.

Electric Treatment in Schoolroom.
New York, Sept. 23.—A class of New York school children termed "defectives" will be kept in an electrically charged room this fall to test the claim that such treatment will develop them mentally and physically. A similar experiment will develop them mentally and physically. A similar experiment was conducted in Stockholm, Sweden, and it was asserted that as a result of it the minds of the children who underwent the test were stimulated and that they grew two inches in two months, while other children grew only one and a quarter inches in the same time. Superintendent Maxwell of New York city agreed to try out the electrification process as applied by Professor Svante Arrhenius when he had held several conferences with Nikola Tesla, who declared that the high frequency currents assist cerebration of the brain cells and contribute in a remarkable degree to the physical and mental well being of the person so treated. Tesla said that after experimenting on himself and his assistants steadily for six years he detected absolutely no ill effects, but, on the contrary, found many beneficial effects of an enduring variety.

Color Line Drawn at Atlanta.
Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 22.—The new method adopted at the Atlanta penitentiary of seating the prisoners at small tables in the dining room instead of seating all the 800 men together at long low benches is one of a number of improvements the warden has made in the prison system in the past few years. It involved the relaying of the dining room floor and the manufacturing of 104 small tables for the purpose. Each table seats eight men, and under the new plan white and colored prisoners are separated. The warden's idea is that the new arrangement will conduce more largely to the individual prisoner's self respect and aid in establishing a new viewpoint as to his obligations. Formerly the men were seated in rows on benches at long, desklake tables, and there was no discrimination as to color.

High Masons' Session in Boston.
Boston, Sept. 23.—Masons all over the world are interested in the supreme council of thirty-third degree Masons, which takes place here Sept. 30 to Oct. 5. Barton Smith of Toledo, O., is sovereign grand commander of the thirty-third degree Masons of the fifteen states north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi rivers and has charge of the arrangements for the meeting. Three delegates will represent each of the twenty-six supreme Masonic councils outside of the United States.

Women's Amateur Golf Championship.
Manchester, Mass., Sept. 22.—The links of the Essex Country club here will be the Mecca of women golfers from all sections of the country Sept. 30, when the women's amateur championship of the United States takes place.

Enlarging New York Aquarium.
New York, Sept. 25.—In the work of enlarging the aquarium an effort will be made to preserve the contour of historic Castle Garden, so that it will be readily distinguishable in the architecture of the bigger structure. The changes have been arranged for by the New York Zoological society, with financial help from the city park department. The aquarium is to be increased from two stories to four stories, and there also will be two large wings two stories high.

Hats For Sailors.
Washington, Sept. 24.—Bluejackets without the flat round cap and the half yard wide rolling collar, the raiment of the American navy sailor since the birth of the republic, may be found aboard the battleships and cruisers in the future.

Double Deck Trolley Cars.
New York, Sept. 24.—The double deck street car, a long time fixture abroad, has come to this city to replace the stepless trolley as fast as possible. The low swing stepless car was a novelty that attracted much attention, but the two story substitute is more remarkable looking to the New Yorker who has not seen the same thing in Europe. The double deck car has been

Cologne, France, Sept. 22.—The famous pontoon bridge at Cologne, which has been one of the attractions of the city for sightseers, is about to give way to a modern steel structure of greatly increased capacity.

The Biggest Office Building.
New York, Sept. 24.—Its thirty-six stories rising 500 feet, the new Equitable building, to stand on the site of the structure destroyed by fire, will, upon its completion in May, 1914, have more floor space than any other office building in the world. The ground for this huge building was purchased by a syndicate of millionaires headed by General T. Coleman du Pont of Wilmington, Del., and the price paid was reported to have been about $12,000,000. The building will cover an entire block bounded by Broadway, Pine, Cedar and Nassau streets. While the structure will be more commodious than any other office building, the Woolworth building, fifty-five stories tall, retains supremacy as New York's loftiest skyscraper. The tower of the Metropolitan building extends in the air a distance of 700 feet 3 inches, the building being fifty stories high. The Singer building, forty-one stories high, rises 612 feet 1 inch.

Distributing Confederate Money.
Washington, Sept. 23.—Secretary Franklin MacVeagh has been busy distributing Confederate currency which was seized by the Federal army in the civil war and which has been stored in the federal treasury among institutions of the country for preservation as historical relics. The larger institutions were first supplied, but every state in the Union will have its proper proportion of the currency.

Surgery May Cure Hunchback People.
Baltimore, Sept. 22.—Physicians of the Johns Hopkins hospital are planning a series of interesting experiments for perfecting a new treatment for Pott's disease, commonly known as hunchback.

If successful the new treatment, which will consist of surgical operations, will eliminate the use of mechanical appliances, such as plaster of paris jackets, braces, etc., and effect cures with the knife, in which the grafting of bone will figure conspicuously. It is believed that a method of treatment which would absolutely eliminate motion of the diseased vertebrae or spinal joints, of which there are nine pairs, and entirely relieve pressure on the affected bodies would promise a rapid cure and prevent deformity.

Fashion and Care of the Home

Linen and Lace Robespierre

It seems scarcely credible that the bloodthirsty Robespierre of the French revolution should be such a dandy that he left his mark on the fashions of his time. Yet such seems to have been the case. The peculiar turned over collars with dependent frills which this monster affected were not only adopted by his contemporaries, but have been revived and are being exploited by fashion's votaries. The Robespierre collar is distinctly picturesque. The one illustrated here is a wide turned over affair of fine linen, open in front, but caught together by a bar pin. From it depends a jabot in reverlike points. These are of plaited linen edged with valenciennes lace.

THE COOKING SCHOOL.

Veal Pie.—Two pounds of veal cut from knuckle, three tablespoons of bacon fat or drippings, one-half cupful peas if convenient, four tablespoons flour, three cups well seasoned stock, crust. Cut veal in small pieces, roll in flour and fry till well browned in fat. Cover with stock, add a slice of carrot and one onion and simmer till tender, then add peas and thicken. When boiling pour into baking dish, set crust in place and bake about twenty-five minutes in moderate oven.

Covering a chicken with cheesecloth will prevent it from getting scorched or drying too much while roasting. When the fowl is ready for the oven sew it in a piece of cheesecloth and baste it through this covering, only removing the cloth at the time the chicken is ready to be served, when you will find it has the requisite golden brown color.

In cooking tomatoes a good rule for seasoning is to add to a quart can a level teaspoonful each of salt and sugar and a tablespoonful of butter. A little onion is liked by some, and so are bread crumbs.

In fixing potatoes for salad cook them with the skins on. There is less danger of them being soggy.

MATERIALS AND COLORS FOR AUTUMN WEAR.

In silks there are a number of novelties, pompadour prints, ribbed weaves and embroidered crapes taking the lead. In wool fabrics broadcloths, sponge weaves and velours are favored, and the pile fabrics, like velvet, velveteen and pushes, are also seen to some extent. The colors which will be most worn are taupe, muskmelon, chartreuse, grasshopper green, iris, turquoise, flame, emerald, amber and king's blue.

Marking Linen.

When using marking ink for linen first make your initials on the linen with an ordinary lead pencil and then trace with your ink over the pencil marks. The pencil will prevent the ink from spreading and giving the linen a blotted appearance.

Keeping Sandwiches Fresh.

After making sandwiches place them in an earthenware vessel or crock and cover tightly. Set the vessel in a pan of cold water and sandwiches will keep moist for hours.

HOW TO CLEAN THINGS.

When cleaning an especially prominent piece of white enameled woodwork try milk and ammonia—two teaspoonfuls of the latter to a quart of milk. This mixture will not turn the enamel yellow, as some kinds of soap are very likely to do.

To whiten piano keys, make a paste of equal parts of fuller's earth and pipeclay, moisten with alcohol and ammonia, spread the paste carefully on the keys and let it dry. Then leave for a short time and wash off with cool water. Use no soap.

A simple and excellent way to remove dirty marks from a raincoat is to cut a raw potato in slices and rub it well on the marks. It will also remove mud stains from dress skirts, children's coats and men's trousers.

Rub the finger marks on doors with a piece of clean flannel dipped in kerosene oil; afterward wipe with a cloth wrung out of hot water, to take the smell away. This is better than using soap and water, as it does not destroy the paint.

AVOID CONFIDENCES.

Save your words about your personal affairs, your business affairs and the happenings in your own family circle.

People are not in the least interested in hearing all the details of your daily life.

All breaches are made more serious by talk.

A secret once told is a secret no longer.

Save your confidences. If you can close your lips and play stoic long enough the trouble of the moment will pass by. Then how thankful you will be that you have not taken the world into your confidence.—Chicago Tribune.

How to Make Coffee Ice Cream.

Coffee ice cream calls for a cupful of granulated sugar, the yolks of six eggs, two cupfuls of boiling milk, two cupfuls of cream and a heaping tablespoonful of mocha coffee. Mix the egg yolks with the sugar and gradually add the milk, stirring it well to mix it smooth. Let the mixture cook on the fire for a moment or two, but not long enough to let it curdle. Add the coffee and remove from the stove. Let it stand on a table closely covered for half an hour, so that the flavor of the coffee will have a chance to permeate the custard. Add the cream and place it where it will soon become cold; then freeze it.

Making Your Shoes Waterproof.

To render boots and shoes waterproof in damp weather rub a little mutton suet round the edges of the soles. Beeswax is just as efficacious.

A Triumphant Proposal of Marriage Under Difficulties

By ROY E. THOMAS

WHEN the Spanish-American war was over I found myself at Montauk Point in the hospital. I was pretty sick, but not sick enough to prevent my noticing things, and there was one thing I noticed mighty quick. It was my nurse. She was a beauty sure enough, with a superb figure and graceful carriage. She wore immense coils of chestnut hair piled up on her head cannonball-like and flared great lustrous eyes. Fancy a fellow who had been for months in a benighted country, never a woman in sight, suddenly cared for by such a creature. When I saw her coming toward my cot she seemed like a Venus rising from the sea with all her clothes on and a limp ruffle in her cap or apron. She came straight up to me, looked down on me with her fawn orbs and took hold of my wrist. The first contact of her soft fingers sent my pulse up to 110. She seemed disturbed at that and, turning away, looked about as though for assistance. I didn't propose to have her call any one, so I said:

"Don't worry about my pulse. It's normal—that is, it frequently sky-rockets about this time of day, and when a lovely creature takes my wrist between her seraphic"—

But before I could get any further she ragned a thermometer into my mouth and I had to lie quiet, though I never once took my eyes off her, and if that thermometer had registered my admiration it would have stood at 2,000 degrees. I'd been sick before and knew that a few minutes was quite sufficient for the test, but she kept the thing there for a quarter of an hour. Then she took it out, swung her long lashes down toward it and was making the record when I opened fire again.

"You're the first woman I've seen since I got on that infernal troopship to go to Cuba, and a more heavenly sight"—

What did she do but jam the thermometer into my mouth again, turn her pencil upside down and rub out the record she had made. This time she left me with the little glass tube sticking out of my mouth like a pipe-stem and went away. She didn't come back for nearly half an hour, and when she examined the thing again I saw by her looks that she was up to something.

"It's only a sight of so much beauty," I started in, but she paid no attention to me, and I saw her write down 184 degrees. She went away again and came back with a lump of ice, which she clapped on the top of my head. She knew as well as I did I hadn't any fever and didn't need any ice. If I had she would have simply reported my case to a surgeon. She did it to cool my admiration. But it would have taken 100,000 quicksilver to do that, and as she walked coolly away I followed her with longing eyes.

As soon as she was gone I removed the ice, chucked it under the cot and lay thinking that I wasn't in it for impressing her and I'd better keep quiet. When she appeared again I contented myself for awhile looking my admiration, but she had to go and take hold of my wrist, and that threw me into another fever, with a consequent delirium, which burst out into speech.

"I'm worse this morning," I broke out, "and the reason I'm worse is because you've been away so long. If you think I can stand it to"— "Put out your tongue?" she cried. I put it out just far enough so I could mumble what I had to say, but she ordered me to put it out farther and farther till I couldn't say a word.

"Keep it there," she said quietly and began scribbling something on her record paper, while I lay with three inches of red, furry tongue curled out. I threw a lot of feeling into my eyes, but somehow I didn't feel that there was anything effective about this sort of pleading, for no man can make love in such a way, and after awhile I pulled in the member and commenced to wag it again.

"I will proclaim my admiration," I was beginning, "at the cannon's mouth," when she jammed her thermometer between my teeth. I tried to hold it so that I could go on, but she forced it under my tongue, and I was obliged to keep quiet. Either way I was baffled. I couldn't propose to her with my tongue sticking out or with the thermometer under it. I made a virtue of necessity and remained temporarily shut off.

The next time she came she brought a surgeon with her and said to him:

"Doctor, here's a man who has been made loony by exposure. He sees absurd visions and talks idiotically. What shall I do with him?"

"We've got permission," replied the surgeon, "to send such cases to the—Lusane asylum. I'll make out the papers and send them in." And he hurried on to some other of his multifarious duties.

She looked at me as if to say, "Now you stop your twaddle or go into an insane asylum."

"See here," says I, "if you think that a strait jacket has any terrors for a man who has been facing Mausers, Gatling guns and delirious with love for the most seraphic creature the sun ever shone on you're mighty mistaken. You'll never shut off my fire with your thermometers or your strait jackets. I've loved you ever since you unlimbered those eyes of yours and brought 'em to bear on me, and I'll never go out of the fight till you've promised to be my wife."

The last shot knocked her out. She struck her colors. I'm a married man today and the father of four children.

Religious Work

Churches are taking steps, through their official agencies, to establish training schools for laymen. The laymen, on their own account, are also making similar moves. The Southern Presbyterian assembly named a committee to draw up courses of study and encourage synods to plan classes. Their aim is to make the schools continuous throughout the year.

The purpose of these schools is to make more effective the larger interest now held by laymen, with a few paid trained men acting as leaders, but the governing idea is that those who are trained in these schools shall be lawyers, bank clerks, professional and other business men, who give their spare time or some part of it without salaries. These schools, as far as they have gone, give instruction along all lines, as missions, Bible study, boys' work, social service and evangelism, and thus, it is held, will do much to batter down the narrowness which usually obtains when one line of work only is fostered.

Episcopal, Presbyterian, Lutheran and Congregational bodies are leading thus far in this lay instruction. Some of these bodies are employing a method recommended by the new school at Nashville, where it is contemplated to train salaried lay readers for work throughout the south. More are, however, advocating the endowment of chairs in these subjects named, as many as possible in each, and then sending teachers from city to city, a month or three months at a place, as the need may be, to instruct local teachers and workers. The belief prevails that the churches are on the eve of a tremendous development of strength through the utilization after training in these schools, of volunteer and unofficial lay help. The schools are to be for both women and men, but many of them have men chiefly in view.

New Education Department.

The Episcopal church has perfected its general board of religious education by the election of the Rev. William E. Gardner, who has been for two years secretary of a mission art department which includes New England as general secretary. New York is the headquarters of the new board.

The step is one, it is declared, that the Episcopal church has been working on for ten years, and consists in putting Sunday school work upon a broad basis, with a comprehensive name, and organizing it on the same plan as is the general board of missions of the same church.

The new board's departments correspond to those of the mission board, and eventually, it is expected, the departments will have secretaries, as do the missionary departments.

The board disclaims effort to perfect religious education on lines of public schools, the officials stating that the basis for such education as it seeks to give is the Christian home, not the public school. The board will stimulate to higher education, provide for teacher training and endeavor to put system into the whole profession of teaching the gospel to children.

To Found a Baptist College.

Baptists of the United States will join those of England in the founding of a college to train Baptist ministers of southeastern Europe, where Baptist work is said to be growing apace. The location will be Budapest. The college in St. Petersburg, to be located in a good residence section not far from government institutions, is under construction. American Baptists gave $75,000 toward purchase of site and erection of building, and the Rev. Robert S. MacArthur, president of the Baptist World alliance, will go to Russia early next year to dedicate the college. While on the same trip Mr. MacArthur will finish plans for the Budapest college and reside at a European convention of the alliance to be held in Stockholm.

World Unity of All Creeds.

The movement to unify all creeds of the Christian church is becoming a definite one. The movement is called the world conference on faith and order, and it had its inception in the United States at the last general conference of the Episcopal church. The date of the world conference at which the subject will receive attention is a matter which will not be settled for a year, or maybe longer. The meeting place may be in America. Such a movement necessarily is a long time in getting under way, and it may be years before the conference actually takes place.

Hand Bad Enough.

A boy was asked by his mother to go to the country with her, but the boy refused.

All the coaxing and pleading were of no avail.

When his father came home that evening he was told by his wife that Johnny (the boy) refused to go to the country.

"Did you ask him why he didn't want to go?" said the father.

"No," said the mother. "I didn't think of that. I will go up to Johnny and ask him."

Then the mother went up to Johnny and said, "Johnny, why don't you want to go to the country?"

"Well," answered Johnny, "they have thrashing machines out there, and it's bad enough here when you do it by hand."—Montreal Star.

"VALE OF THE WHITE HORSE."

Famous Valley in England Named For Queer Rock Formation.

Between Abington and Uppington, in England, there is a famous valley, known as the "vale of the White Horse." It is so called because of a huge figure of a horse at full gallop which is crudely fashioned on the side of a precipitous hill of chalk by removing the surrounding turf. The figure is almost 374 feet in length, and when the sun is shining upon it can be seen plainly for almost twelve miles. By whom or how long ago it was cut is not known, different persons ascribing it variously to the Saxons, Danes and Druids.

Many attribute it to King Alfred and say that it is a symbol of victory erected by him after the battle of Ashdown, at which he defeated the Danes.

In course of time the trench which outlines the figure of the horse fills naturally and grows over. When this happens the people of the neighborhood have a custom of meeting for the purpose of cleaning it out, and this they make the occasion for a great festival, at which the men compete in manly sports for prizes.

What Ada Learned at School.

"What have you learned at school, Ada?" asked Uncle Billy.

Ada was a very little girl, and she didn't see Uncle Billy very often, but she liked him because he liked her and was good to her, so she was anxious to have him see that she was getting along well in her studies.

"A besy deer jeechye jakie men, oh peccrest, you've double yolk swizey," she said, with her eyes sparkling. But Uncle Billy was puzzled.

"What in the world are you talking about?" he said. "They never taught you that in school."

But mamma laughed. "I think they did," said she, "but the trouble is that Ada is a little excited and she is talking too fast."

Boy Scouts Cleaning Up a City

Boy scouts in New York recently turned their attention to a form of scouting different from that which appeals to the average boy. They have been cleaning up streets in certain sections of the city. A score of the industrious chaps in khaki uniforms would descend on a block, and within a few minutes every bit of paper and refuse was collected and put in the proper receptacles. The lads worked with a vim, and the result of their labors was soon apparent.

MINIATURE REPUBLICS.

Many Little Nations Tucked Away in the Mountains.

Klein-Alp is a diminutive republic tucked away between Switzerland and France. Only in summer is the republic inhabited and then by miners and cow girls. There is one hotel, closed during the winter. Another little republic is in Tyrol, between Austria and Italy, and in long gone years was under the jurisdiction of first a king and then an emperor. But in the adjustment of frontier lines the state of Val di Ventino was in some way overlooked and it promptly organized itself into a lilliputian republic. It has now about 2,000 inhabitants, living in six villages. Neither Val di Ventino nor Klein-Alp has any taxes. There are no officials or compulsory military services. The only industry of Val di Ventino aside from the farming of small fields is charcoal burning.—Chicago News.

Zoology—A Game.

Let one of the party leave the room. The rest decide upon the name of some animal for him to guess. When he returns the players question him in turn, as if he were the animal chosen. For instance, the animal selected is a tiger. The questions may be: "Do you scratch?" "Are your claws sharp?" "Do you spring upon your prey?" "Is your fur handsomely marked?" He thinks they have named a cat and says, "Yes. Am I a cat?" When told no they still question him till he guesses correctly. The person who betrays the animal by his question is the next to leave the room and guess.

Birthday Dinner

Saturday, September 21, being Mrs. Ira Wood's birthday, about 50 of her friends and neighbors came with well filled baskets and soon had a table filled with everything good to eat. There were 19 fine large cakes and no two alike. Mr. and Mrs. Wood have eight children living; all were there. Wm. and C. E. Wood of Lovington, J. R. Wood, of Arthur, and Mrs. Wm. Lehman of Cadwell, the rest of the children living in town. A daughter, Mrs. Anna Gordon, baked the birthday cake, which was a large white cake engraved on top, "Mother's Birthday, Sept. 21st, 1912." Mrs. Wood received many useful presents. The evening was spent in music and a social time. They all left, wishing her many more happy birthdays. A GUEST.

Flat Chest.

The occupation of a bookkeeper tends to bring the head and shoulders forward and cramp the chest. Try to sit more erect and learn to stand tall, and stretch the body to its full height. Many defects of the figure are due to bad postures, but by exercise many defects can be corrected.

After two or three applications I found great relief and before I had used one tube I was completely well. If it will benefit others who suffer from eczema you may publish my letter, as I believe Saxo Salve will do just what you claim it will."—A. Pritchett, Shelbyville, Ill.

Heroes of the Gridiron

Noted Pigskin Chasers Who Have Been Acclaimed by Enthusiastic Multitudes and Whose Spectacular Work or Steady Plugging Has Helped to Make Football History.

By ODGERS T. GURNEE.

We will fight with a vim That is dead sure to win For old Nassau.

THE singers in the stands stop with a snappy roar like the growl of a coast defense gun. Out on the field twenty-two men in moleskins are fighting for their alma mater. Eyes on the ball crouched to spring, they represent the highest type of American youth, each man a tower of strength and skill.

The ball is snapped back, the crouching lines rise and shoot forward, an ever-changing formation sweeps back and around the end. Suddenly the opposing halfback dives forward, clawing and crawling into the midst of the maelstrom, the interference stumbles, weavers and falls with a thundering crash.

Left alone, the runner swings far out, and with left arm ready to ward off tacklers he throws his knees up in a swinging stride and sets out for the goal. The opposing quarter, quick to see the play from his vantage point behind the line, comes dashing in, leaves the ground like a shot and, eluding the weakening, stiff arm, wraps his long arms around the runner's knees and brings him to the ground. A whistle, sharp and clear, rings out across the field, and a little man in civilian clothes comes up on the run. Slowly the players pile off, the quarter starts his signals and the next play is on.

Grit the Thing That Counts. So the game goes. Slash, bang up and down, the true American sport. It takes grit to play it, and grit is the thing that counts.

And now in the cycle of sport the football season is with us again. Once more the thump of the leather and the shrill cry of the quarter will bring back old memories.

Football, like every other great sport, has its heroes. Some of them spare, prosaic business men now but immortal, nevertheless, in the eyes of the undergraduates.

Most conspicuous in this theoretical hall of fame is the name of Coy. The great Yale fullback and All American choice in 1908 and 1909 represents all that is perfection in speed, power, gameness and field generalship. He had the most remarkable combination of qualities that have ever been concentrated in one player in the history of the sport.

Coy, of course, heads Yale's list, followed by Gordon Brown, the captain and guard of the famous team of 1900. He was also All American choice for the position in 1907-08-09. Kilpatrick, the spectacular All American end of 1910 and 1911, and Hinkey, the end who played such a wonderful game in 1891, 1892, 1893 and 1894, were a crackerjack pair and together make the most wonderful flankers the game has ever known. Tom Shevlin also was a splendid end and was chosen for the All American teams in 1904 and 1905.

Tackles Who Have Won Laurels. Among the tackles who stood out above their fellows were Murphy (1895-99), Stillman (1899-1900) and Bigelow (1906-07).

Brown, of course, was the greatest guard of all time, but Heflinger of the All American elevens of 1879 and 1890 was not far behind him. These two are without a doubt the greatest pair of guards that ever played. Others who became famous are Andrus (1900), Gill (1880) and Hickok (1893-94). The best center was Ottott of the famous Gordon Brown eleven of 1900. But Holt (1901-02) was also a star at the position.

Tad Jones made a brilliant record at quarter and left his mark when he graduated. He was an All American choice in 1907. De Stalles (1897), Flinke (1896 and 1900) and Howe (1910-11) were others who starred.

At halfback McClung of 1890 and 1891 All American fame was the leader, while Chadwick (1900-1902) was also a wonderful halfback man.

At fullback the invincible Coy takes the lead, and Butterworth of the 1893 and 1894 All American teams is second. So much for Yale, redolent with the lore of the gridiron.

Harvard Wonders. In the Harvard legion it is hard to make a choice, although Newell, the phenomenal tackle of the 1890, 1891, 1892 and 1893 teams, probably was their greatest player.

Pressing him closely for the honors are Daly, the wonderful quarterback of the 1898-99 All-American teams; Campbell, the All-American end in 1899, 1900 and 1901, and Wendell, the slashing halfback of 1910-11. Of the ends Cabot (1895-96) and Hallowell (1898-1900) left memories of great deeds behind them. Newell is head and shoulders above all other tackles. Fish (1908-09) and Waters (1894) were also remarkable players.

Next come the guards. Burr (1905-06) and Fisher (1910) both deserve a niche in the Cambridge Hall of Fame. At center Lewis (1892-93) was the best and Nourse of 1908 fame is a close second. With the exception of Daly, Dean (1890) was the only noted quarter.

Among the back field men Brewer (1892, 1893 and 1895), Diblee (1897-98) and Kernan of the 1901 team, all starred at halfback, while the only fullback who played a really spectacular game was Graydon of the All-American teams of 1901-02.

Heroes of Princeton. In the Princeton football firmament the name of John DeWitt shines brightest. His work at tackle in 1902-03 stamped him as one of the greatest players of all time. He was also a wonderful kicker. Cochran (1897), Davis (1901) and Henry (1903) all starred as ends. At tackle Hart of 1910-11 was second only to the great DeWitt and Cowan (1889), Lea (1893-94-95), and Hildebrand (1898-99) followed him closely.

Of the guards Wheeler of the 1892-93-94 All-American teams takes the lead and Riggs of 1891-95 was also a star at the position. George of the 1889 All-American team and Galley, the choice of 1896, were the only centers of note who represented the Tigers. King of the 1892-93 All-American team was a back field star who was equally effective at halfback or quarter. Poe of 1889 was famous for his ability to run back kicks. Kelly of 1890-97 was a splendid halfback, as were Harlan of 1907, Tibbot of 1908 and Pendleton of 1910-11.

At fullback "Snake" Ames (1889), Homans (1890-91) and McCormick (1905-07) make a trio that is hard to beat. The former was a crackerjack all around back field man, while the other two typify perfection in the old style line plugging play.

The next niche is reserved for the warriors from staid old Pennsylvania, where there is not much choice for a leader. Brooke (1894-95) the great back field man; Gilbert (1894-95-96), the wonderful end who was an All American choice for three years in succession; Hare (1897-98-99-1900), one of the greatest guards that ever played; Torrey (1905), the center, and Hollenbach of 1908, who made such a name for himself as an all round back field man, are all worthy of the coveted position.

At the ends Scarlet (1908) is the only really great player from Pennsylvania. Outland, the 1897-98 choice for All America tackle, and Draper of the 1907 team were also stars.

Next to Hare, Wharton of 1895 and 1896 was the only record breaking guard. Overfield at center played a great game and was All American choice of 1898 and 1899. Cozens of 1910 also made the All American team and became a football immortal. Le Roy Mercer of the 1910 and 1911 teams probably is the most versatile back that ever carried the red and blue to victory.

An Idol of Columbia. It was decreed several years ago that football should be abolished at Columbia university, and while the game is no longer played there the student body still have their heroes and enthroned in every undergraduate heart is the name and memory of Weekes. This wonderful halfback was the All American choice in 1901 and is the best halfback that the east has ever produced.

Michigan's coterie of stars is small but select. First comes Heston. He is the best halfback that the west has ever seen and is considered by many the peer of halfbacks of all time. Shultz, the center of 1907, was a world beater, as was Benbrook, the All American guard of 1906-10.

Chicago's strong point appears to have been at quarter. Walter Eckersall was the greatest field general, kicker and defensive player that ever graced the position. Steffen of 1908 also was a remarkable player.

At Dartmouth Glaze and Schildmiller, the ends, and Tobin, the guard of 1908, always will be remembered.

Minnesota has McGovern (1910) and Capron (1911), the two wonderful quarterbacks. Annapolis has Dalton, the 1910-11 halfback, who kicked his team to victory on many occasions, and West Point looks back at the great record made by Bunker in 1901 and 1902 with ill concealed pride.

There are countless others. Every state university and "prep" school has its idols, set apart from everyday routine of books and lessons—the men who have made football history.

Some of them have passed out, a few have failed to make good on the rough lined gridiron of life, but the great majority have succeeded, some against great odds, by playing the game for all there was in it and being everlastingly on the square.

The Man Who Went to Prison In Order to Win a Helpmeet

By GRACE OGLETHORPE

WHAT is this report, Meriam, about you and Mr. Abercrombie?"

"It is that we are to be married, and it is true."

"And yet people say that after a man passes forty he will invariably choose a woman from fifteen to twenty years younger than himself."

"There are cases where men past forty marry women they have loved in their youth."

"And yours is such a romance?"

"It is more than a romance—it is a remarkable case."

"Do tell me. I am dying to hear it."

"I must go back twenty-four years. I was then eighteen. Father at that time was speculating in cotton and had made a great deal of money. He was very ambitious for me and told me that, whether or no I married wealth, I must marry a polished man. Father had little opportunity to become refined in his youth, and people always covet what they have been denied. One day when I was out horseback riding my pony ran away with me. A farmer's boy came galloping after me and, catching my rein, saved me from going over a high bank into the river."

"An intimacy sprang up between myself and the youth, whose name was Alken. I was a shrewd little minx and never said anything at home about the runaway or the farmer's boy."

"Finally I made up my mind that I could not live without George Alken and proposed to elope with him. He consented, but very unwillingly. He loved me, but had too much sense to consider such a course either honorable or likely to result in our happiness. I called him timid, and this brought him over to my plan."

"My room was on the third story. I procured a rope ladder, on which I intended to descend after the family were all asleep, and hid it in my closet. Alken was to be at the foot of the ladder to receive me. But when it came to descending the swaying thing my courage failed me, and I called on him to come up and help me. He sprang up the ladder, and just as we were about to go down together we heard footsteps coming up the walk. George Alken climbed into the window and drew up the ladder."

"Some one came on up to the house and stopped beneath my window. I peeped through the slats and recognized father. He had gone out without my knowing it. He called up to the coachman and stationed him under the window, then came into the house."

"I am ruined!" I cried, clinging to my lover. "Father must have seen you enter the window."

"George Alken remained perfectly cool. Presently he said in a steady, low voice:

"Give me your watch."

"I took it from my belt and handed it to him."

"Go to bed," he said, "and pretend to be asleep."

"He opened the door softly and stole out. In a few minutes I had taken on my clothes and was in bed. I heard a commotion downstairs, and presently father came to my door, awakened me, as he supposed, and told me that a thief had been caught in the house with my watch on him."

"Then I saw it all. George had sacrificed himself to save me from disgrace with my own family. I was in agony. I begged father not to prosecute the thief, but he had already called the police, and in another hour George was in jail. He was tried, put in no defense and, being the son of a reputable farmer, got off with a light sentence."

"I disguised myself, went to the jail, saw him and proposed to confess the whole affair. He said my reputation would be lost and that would be worse than a term in the penitentiary for him. I should have had the strength to confess without his consent, but I hadn't. I who had got him into the scrape was too mean spirited to get him out."

"He served eighteen months. When he came out of prison he did not try to see me, but managed to get a note to me undiscovered in which he said that my father would never consent to my marriage with an ex-convict and it would be a sin for an ex-convict to permit me to make the sacrifice. That was the last I heard of him."

"I married, father failed, my husband became an invalid, and I, always anxious to show some courage to contrast with the weakness of my youth, studied stenography and accepted a position. The afternoon of my entrance on my duties I was called into the office of the head of the firm to take his dictation of the day's letters. He looked at me curiously and then asked me some questions about myself."

"Six months after this my husband died. I had been getting remittances from time to time from an unknown friend whose identity I could not possibly discover. After my husband's death these remittances were doubled. I wondered if George had prospered, found me out and helped me without making himself known."

"A year after my husband's death the head of the firm for which I worked told me that he was my unknown friend. Surprised, I asked him what reason he had for serving me. He asked me if I remembered George Alken. I started, turned pale and said yes. Then he told me that he, Edward Abercrombie, was the lover of my youth."

"We are to be married in October."

"IRON PILLAR" OF DELHI.

Solid Piece of Wrought Iron Marvel of Fifth Century Skill.
The famous "Iron Pillar" of Delhi, which stands in the inner courtyard of the "Qutb" mosque, about nine miles south of the modern city, has always excited the interest of metallurgists and engineers as well as historians. It was probably made about 413 A. D. and moved to its present site in 1032. As it is between twenty-three and twenty-four feet high, sixteen inches in diameter at the base and twelve at the top, and probably weighs over six tons, its manufacture at so early a period as the fifth century partakes somewhat of the marvelous.

It was rendered even more of a manufacturing wonder when the discovery was made some years ago that it was a solid piece of welded wrought iron. The curious yellowish tinge of the upper part had led to the belief that it consisted of brass or bronze. The welding together of such a mass of metal in those primitive days, centuries before the era of modern forges and drop hammers, must have been a mighty troublesome job for King Candara's iron workers.

Some years ago, says the New York Post, Sir Alexander Cunningham had a rough analysis of the metal in the pillar made, which finally proved it to be wrought iron. Sir Robert Haddfield, a past president of the British Iron and Steel Institute, recently obtained new samples of the column and subjected them to a careful and very thorough analysis, "the first thorough analysis," he believes. The result was as follows: "Carbon, 0.08; silicon, 0.048; sulphur, 0.006; phosphorus, 0.114; iron, 99.72; total, 99.996."

Plainly a really excellent type of wrought iron, says Sir Robert, and much to be wondered at when the date of its manufacture is borne in mind. The small quantity of sulphur indicates the use of an unusually pure fuel, probably charcoal. The absence of manganese, an element usually present in wrought iron, is also of interest. The specific gravity of the metal was found to be 7.81.

BLESSINGS.
Oh, well for him that finds a friend
Or makes a friend wherever he come
And loves the world from end to end
And wanders on from home to home
Oh, happy he and fit to live
On whom a happy home has power
To make him trust his life and give His fealty to the halcyon hour.
—Tennyson.

THE MANLY MAN.
In Advising the Youth Be Careful What You Say.
If one were advising a youth one would say then: Be very careful of your life, because it is the foundation of the life of your great-grandchildren, who may live in a much more beautiful world than yours, a world demanding, let us hope, greater courage, higher morality, nobler self sacrifice than this. Be careful what you think, because your thoughts make your character, and if you hate a narrow, cruel, small hearted character you must be continually inviting great, noble and wide reaching thoughts into your mind.
And be careful of your character and the habits founded by your thoughts, because they make your body, and there is no use multiplying more and more ugly bodies if you can help it.
But whatever else, O youth, your chance to think, try to avoid the terrible pitfall of thinking that to be like the majority is to be clever or good or great. Remember always that it is not the average man whose being praises the Creator and giver of life; it was the glorious company of apostles and there were only twelve of them in all (Judea) and the goodly fellowship of the prophets (think how comparatively few there were) and the noble army of martyrs (there never will be very many of these, because a few thousand will finally regenerate the world) who praise life.—Harper's Weekly.

Ancient Peruvian Art.
The ruins of Machu Picchu, a city probably built by the Megalithic race, who preceded the Incas, were discovered by Hiram Bingham on his 1911 expedition to Peru. The ruins are on an almost inaccessible ridge, 2,000 feet above the Urubamba river. They are of great beauty and magnificence and include palaces, baths, temples and about 150 houses. The huge blocks of white granite, some of them twelve feet long, were so carefully cut that they match perfectly. Though no mortar or cement was used to hold the stones together, the walls have withstood the elements for at least 2,000 years.—Argonaut.

Fifteen Years in Ignorance.
A man once was talking about hard luck, and his friend was listening with a sour expression. "Why, you don't know what hard luck is," said the friend, as quoted in Everybody's Magazine. "I have always had it. When I was a kid there was such a bunch of kids in the family that there had to be three tables at mealtimes, and I always got the third one."
"What's hard about that?" snapped the other.
"Why," said his friend, "it was fifteen years before I ever knew a chicken had anything but a neck."

SENIOR BEREAN LESSON.

Golden Text.—The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.—John vi, 63.

Revised Version.—The words that I have spoken unto you are spirit and are life.—John vi, 63.

"The supreme good." It will be worth while to read again the brief articles after the lesson in Palestine. They set forth some of the striking features in the many sided character of Jesus. We can well understand why the Master continues to be captivating. People never seem to tire of hearing about him. It is the old story of Jesus and his love, but every time we listen to it we feel the freshness of the dawn, as though the dew of heaven were resting on our souls.

And yet, strange to say, there were some who were opposed to him and who took no delight in him in the days of his flesh. How much had jealousy to do with the opposition of the scribes and Pharisees? When they knew that he was doing good what were their objections? (Lesson I.) Many who followed Jesus showed a superficial interest in his teaching. They did not give thought to what he said because they were unwilling to surrender to him. How did he classify his audiences? (Lesson II.) * * * What three principles of the kingdom are set forth in Lesson III? * * * How should we deal with those who have disappointed our expectations? Will we be justified in giving them up as hopeless? (Lesson IV.) There are some earnest souls who have been found in every age. * * * How does the pearl merchant illustrate earnestness? What are the marks of a true scholar? Mention a pressing need of the church. (Lesson V.)

"The treatment of opposition." A large part of our Lord's public ministry was given to the instruction of his disciples. This was necessary, as they were to carry on the work which he inaugurated, and they must know his purpose and his methods. What happened as Jesus and his disciples were crossing the lake? The cure of the demoniac made a great impression on the people of Gadara. This was clearly a work of kindness; it was also a public benefaction. Why then were the people anxious to get rid of Jesus? (Lesson VI.) He never forced himself on any one, and he never failed any one. * * * What notable interview took place at Capernaum? What happened as Jesus was going to the ruler's house? How did he demonstrate his great power? (Lesson VII.) There is no place like home. Jesus returned to his native Nazareth, and on the Sabbath day he addressed the people in the synagogue where as a youth he had taken part in the religious exercises.

Why was the passage that he read so appropriate for the occasion? On what grounds did the people take exception to his remarks? He saw that there was no use of his reasoning with those who were bent on opposition, and so he left them with sadness. (Lesson VIII.) The end of the Baptist was tragic, but it was in keeping with the stormy career of this prophet of the wilderness. Jesus did not bear his testimony to truth any less forcefully, but his way was different. John was a radical reformer, and he said what he meant without mincing words. What was the cause of his imprisonment? Explain the circumstances which led to his death. What bearing does this incident have on temperance? What is the business of the church? (Lesson IX.)

"Continuance in well doing." The instruction that was given by Jesus to his disciples was now to bear fruit. He saw that the opposition to him would increase, and so he determined to work while it is called day, before the sun sets. How did he prepare them for the immediate work? What was their program of evangelization? What is the force of the words "for my sake" as used by Jesus? While the twelve were sent out in companies of two each, Jesus continued to labor by himself. (Lesson X.) The results of his efforts in Galilee were more or less disappointing. The people were so satisfied with their limited round of activities that they gave no heed to the eager appeals of Jesus on behalf of the higher life. How did he find satisfaction in spite of this failure to make a good impression? What was his offer of rest? What are the penalties of indifference? (Lesson XI.) * * * What great deed was wrought? What special lesson is worth remembering from the incident that immediately followed the miracle? (Lesson XII.)

The Weekly Farm Budget

CUTTING OF ROOTS

Frequently Is the Cause of Great Loss to the Farmer.

EXPENSIVE OLD TIME WAYS.

Deep Plowing Results in Severe Plant's Connection With Soil and in Waste of Moisture—One Southern Farmer's Experience.

The loss to farmers from deep cultivation after the crops have made growth enough to fill the soil with roots is known to be great by all who have studied the subject. The cutting of roots and the waste of moisture by deep plowing on lands where shallow cultivation would save

ORCHARDING BRIEFLY TOLD.

Professor F. C. Sears of Massachusetts Agricultural college summarizes the science of modern orchard culture as follows: "Put out as much as ten acres of orchard. Choose varieties with great care, getting prolific and well known ones. Practice clean cultivation, except where the land is too steep, and there use the "sod culture" method. Fertilize liberally. Spray thoroughly. Practice thinning when the trees set heavily. Handle the fruit with the greatest care, grade it with the greatest accuracy and pack it with the greatest skill and honesty."

EFFECT OF GREEN MANURING.

"Souring" of Soil May Be Prevented by Proper Method of Plowing.

In a bulletin on cotton culture the North Carolina experiment station tells us something about the alleged "souring" of the soil by the plowing under of green manures, which is of great interest to all farmers, north and south.

If cowpeas, for instance, be plowed down in a mass at the bottom of the furrow slice, says this bulletin, the decaying mass will cut off the moisture in the lower soil from that above the plowed down crop and produce the effects called in such cases "souring." But if the green crop plowed down be cut up well with a disk harrow and then "plowed in" rather than "plowed down" by furrows set on edge, so that the green manure is mixed into the soil rather than buried under it, no bad effects will be produced.

If this is true in the warm climate of North Carolina it would be a very reliable index in the cooler states, for farmers have been more troubled by this alleged "souring" in the south than in the north.

The matter is important. If we can, by carefully preparing the crop for plowing in and by proper plowing, turn in our green manures at any stage of their growth without damage to the soil it is a good thing to know. The statement is made in the North Carolina bulletin with the greatest positiveness, and it would seem a perfectly safe piece of advice to follow.—Farm and Fireside.

Potato Scab.

For two years experiments were conducted in Germany with potato scab, which is threatening the potato industry. Corrosive sublimate solution of 0.05 per cent and bordeaux mixture of 2 per cent, both applied to the seed potatoes for one and a half hours, gave excellent and about equal results in the prevention of scab, as was also the case with bordeaux mixture of 2 per cent applied to two lots for three and fourteen hours respectively, and with two lots treated with sulphur mixed with the soil, one lot having been also thoroughly rubbed with sulphur before planting.—American Cultivator.

Toad Is Bee's Enemy.

A subscriber of Home and Farm wants to know if the toad is destructive to the honeybee. It surely is, John Burroughs says. "We have no lizards that destroy the bee, but our tree toad, ambushed among the apple and cherry blossoms, snaps them up wholesale."

Advice on Sorghum.

Sorghum is a most excellent forage crop for cows, hogs, horses and mules. Every farmer who has a few acres of very rich land should plant sorghum. But it is hard on land, and sorghum should be followed by a legume if possible.

Ministerial Teachings.

He—My dear Miss Gladys, I have been converted, but I find there are some things I must do. The minister has told me, for instance, that where I have done wrong I must make restitution.

She (sympathizingly)—Sometimes that cannot always be done, for ministers ask hard things.

He (doubtfully)—Now, Miss Gladys, the other day I stole a kiss from you, and, according to the minister, I must give it back.

She (promptly)—Well, I suppose you ought to do what the minister tells you.—Baltimore American.

The Sudden Stop.

First Hobo—Do you believe in de sayin' dat a barkin' dog never bites? Second Hobo—I did until I tried one wunst. He stopped barkin' all of a suddint.

Second Wind.

"Well, well!" said the man who had wandered back to his old village. "So the Eagle House is still the Eagle House. No change after twenty years." "There have been few changes," responded the oldest inhabitant. "Since you've been gone the hotel has been respectively the Grand Central, the Grand Union, the Grand Junction, the Great Northern, the Great Southern, the Imperial, the Regal, the Empire, the Regent and the Mansion House. She's just started around the circuit for the second time."—Boston Post.

PROTECT YOUR FIELDS.

Disking Pays in Conservation of Moisture and Improved Condition of Soil.

Immense amounts of moisture are lost from the soil by evaporation from stubble fields immediately after harvest. This is one of the largest factors contributing to unfavorable autumn soil conditions, so frequently disastrous to fall seeding. Even when the soil contains a considerable reserve supply of moisture at harvest time the evaporation from the compacted surface unprotected by the growing crop is extremely rapid unless preventive measures are taken at once. Unquestionably the most desirable practice is to plow the stubble field just as closely behind the binder as possible. Immediate plowing is usually impossible because of the delay in thrashing or stacking the grain, and in this case disking is next best.

It is little trouble to disk a field upon which the grain shocks are still standing. A thorough disking, or, better still, double disking, at this time will pay in the conservation of moisture, in the improved condition of the soil and in the destruction of weeds. Even should fall plowing not be intended the disk will put the field in much better condition for whatever use is made of the land the next season. Where fall grazing for sheep or hogs is needed, rape, cowpeas or similar crops can easily be sown at this time, covered with the disk, and seasonal rains later will enable a thrifty green growth. Unplowed stubble fields might better produce a fall crop of good green feed for sheep or hogs than a second growth of sunflowers and other noxious weeds so commonly seen. If the land is to be reseeded to small grain the earlier and the deeper it is plowed and the more thoroughly it is harrowed and compacted the better will be the results.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Advantage of the Silo.

The silo is the very best remedy for short pasturages. If one can begin the pasture season with six or eight feet of silage in the bin he has little to worry about.

A TALK WITH WELLINGTON.

"I hope to God," said Lord Wellington one day, "that I have fought my last battle." It is a bad thing to be always fighting. While in the thick of it I am too much occupied to feel anything; but it is wretched just after. It is quite impossible to think of glory. Both mind and feelings are exhausted. I am wretched even at the moment of victory, and I always say that, next to a battle lost, the greatest misery is a battle gained. The expression of his face, which was lit up by an intensity of feeling, gave those simple words an eloquence which went straight to the listener's heart. I was that listener. "It is experience," he said another time, "that gives me the advantage over every other officer. Nothing new can happen to me, and I always feel confident that I shall succeed. The troops feel the same confidence in me. For that reason I firmly believe that if anything had happened to me at Waterloo the battle was lost. I told Lord Uxbridge so. . . . Soon after a ball hit him. It must have passed over me or my horse! But the finger of God was upon me!"—Diary of Francis Lady Shelley.

How Cupid Played a Part In the Hunt For a Culprit

By OWEN KINGSTON

IT was I who after the assassination of the Grand Duke Sergius was sent to catch Vera Treperhoff, a young girl whom the police knew to have concocted the murder. I will omit how I tracked her to the border and take up the story after she had passed it. She made directly for Austria and thence for Venice. This indicated that she would go to America rather than England and that she would probably sail from one of the two principal Italian ports—Genoa and Naples. Genoa being the shorter distance, I took the train for that city, hoping to head her off before she left.

The reason for my being chosen for this work was that I had seen the girl quite often during her trial on a charge of having been implicated in another political crime. Having boarded the train at Venice soon after its departure, thinking there might be one chance in a dozen that Vera Treperhoff would be aboard, I walked through the side aisle, looking into every compartment. In the middle compartment of the third car I noticed a youth with the light hair and eyes of the north and in a twinkling spotted my quarry. Not wishing to be known, I passed on.

I concluded not to make any attempt at arrest till the girl left the train. This would necessitate my watching the departures at every station and the risk that she might elude me. But I knew the stops and kept my eye on her as soon as we slowed up until we were again well on the way. My intention was to have her arrested at Genoa or wherever she alighted since I could better fulfill the legal conditions at a definite point. Besides, I did not believe she knew her danger.

The last time I saw Vera Treperhoff was in leaving Alessandria. The compartment in which she sat had been emptied except by herself. I kept my eye on her till the train had reached a pace of some forty miles an hour. There would be no further stop till we arrived at Genoa, and I felt confident that I should take the girl back to Moscow and gain the commendation of the government, also a handsome reward.

Just before reaching Genoa I took my hand baggage to the compartment where Vera Treperhoff sat, with the intention of remaining there till the train pulled up at the station. She was not in the compartment. She was not in the car. I went through the train from front to rear, opening every closet, but nothing could I find of the girl I wanted. I scrutinized every passenger, man and woman, boy and girl, but Vera was not among them. Shortly before we slowed up for Genoa I made up my mind that she had, after all, recognized me and preferred death by jumping from the train to the horrors of Siberia.

At Genoa I engaged a special locomotive to go over the route to find the body or any trace of the culprit. I investigated every kilometer of the track between the terminus and Alessandria, but found nothing to give me the slightest clue. I was informed that the rate of travel over the section where I had missed the girl was fifty miles an hour. No one could have jumped from the train and retained sufficient life to crawl away. I offered a reward of 10,000 rubles to any one in the vicinity who would give me any information whatever leading to a clue. The offer brought many reports of a girl limping through the country, but all proved to have been made up.

Never in all my official experience have I been so utterly incapable of forming a theory as to any escape from my clutches. Familiar with every device that could have been adopted, I went over them carefully and eliminated all of them. That a young girl not over twenty years old could have left a train going at a rate of fifty miles an hour seemed incredible. To assume that she could have passed from it later in disguise would be an insult to my professional skill.

I feared to return to Russia and tell the truth lest I should be accused of conniving at Vera Treperhoff's escape, and if I lied I would be detected. I chose the alternative of going to America to make a new home. I sailed from Genoa, and, going on deck one morning, there in a steamer chair in excellent health was Vera Treperhoff. Approaching her, I informed her that she had nothing to fear from me and asked her how she had left the train. This was her reply:

"I recognized you the moment I saw you and knew your errand. Between Alessandria and Genoa is a Y in the railroad connecting it with the road to Piacenza. I knew from my time table that there was no further stop till Genoa and you would arrest me there. While on this Y a train going in the same direction and nearly at the same speed occupied the next track. In a twinkling I was out through the window on the footboard and stepped to the footboard of the other train. Passing over it till I came to a vacant compartment, I climbed in. The train I was on soon stopped. I alighted and took a later one to Genoa."

This may all seem very strange, but there is one thing stranger still. Vera Treperhoff converted me to the revolutionary cause, and within a few weeks of our landing the girl whom I had so nearly taken to Russia to endure the tortures of Siberia became my wife. I never awake in the morning and look at her and our little ones sleeping peacefully without a groan at what might have been.

THE TERRIBLE JUGGERNAUT.

Death Dealing Machine of India Is Now Forbidden.

Persons whose tender childish years were nurtured upon tales of the unforgettable car of Juggernaut, beneath the wheels of which pious Hindus flung themselves to be mangled into immortality, will hardly read without a pang of regret the following report from the ancient city of Puri, 300 miles south of Calcutta, where Juggernaut has had his shrine since 1186 or earlier.

"At one place by the walls," says the Christian Herald, "is a great figure of Juggernaut carved in relief and standing eighteen feet high. An almost horrible object it is, glossy black except for its apikite face, which is brilliant red. Devout pilgrims place fruit or rice before it, press their foreheads to its feet and pass on, confident that they have appeased this god on their long journey to the Hindu's paradise.

"Outside the walls of the temple lie remnants of this year's great car wheels, eight feet in diameter and a foot thick, mounted on axles twenty-two feet long and fourteen inches in diameter. One picture the car as carved from costly wood, black with age, ornamented with gold and set with precious stones.

"In fact, a new car is built every year, in which the god journeys the two miles for a fortnight's rest at his garden or country house. Vast numbers of pilgrims grasp the ropes and the car moves slowly forward to the cheers of thousands of spectators. But the heavy wheels cut deep into the sand and it slows down and stops. Interest lags, the priest now accepting a mere touching of the ropes as sufficient service, and hired coolies complete the journey, two weeks being sometimes necessary to traverse the two miles and an even greater time to return. The British government now prevents the sacrifice of life under the car, which probably accounts for the decline of the festival."

JUDGE NOT.

In men whom men condemn as ill I find so much of goodness still, In men whom men pronounce divine I find so much of sin and blot, I hesitate to draw a line Between the two, where God has not. —Joaquin Miller.

THE HUMAN GROCERY.

Among Other Things, Our Bodies Contain Eighty-three Dozen Eggs.

A London physician, a thorough materialist, says that, while the composition of the human body is interesting, it is at the same time humiliating when one must take into consideration the fact that it represents only a number of commonplace commodities that are to be found at the grocer's store.

"Babi" says this very practical practitioner: "You are really only a few dozen eggs, a pound or two of candles and several gallons of water. A man weighing 160 pounds is, among other things, only about eighty-three dozen fresh eggs. Almost every part of man has its equivalent in the everyday household supplies that come from the grocery, such as sugar, salt, eggs, candles, soap, match heads and starch. In his body there is sufficient protein and other substances of which eggs are composed to furnish forth a market stand.

"The fat in the human body would make several pounds of candles of rather superior quality. Every tramp carries soap enough in his body to wash himself clean if he cared to do so and could get the soap-making material together."

SCIENCE TO IMITATE NATURE.

Firefly, For Example, Produces Light Without Expense.

The view has been advanced in more than one quarter that during the next two or three centuries invention probably will be in the direction of imitating the wonderful economy and the simple, direct methods of nature.

An instance in point is the electric eel. Its electric organ is in no sense a storage battery, but a contrivance by which electric energy is liberated at the moment when it is required, says Harper's Weekly. At rest the organ shows so small an electric force that a good galvanometer is needed to detect it, but a sudden nervous impulse from the eel's spinal cord raises a potential of many volts with very little heat and so small an expenditure of matter as to defy the most expert chemist to weigh it. Fireflies, glow-worms and many deep sea fishes produce light without heat at a cost which would make a match an extravagant outlay.

Tobacco Testers.

There is a class of officials whose activity is little known to the outer world. These men are the official tobacco testers, and they pass judgment on every kind of tobacco manufactured in France. They consist of a chairman and five assistants, and from morning till evening they have nothing to do but smoke cigars, cigarettes and pipes in order to arrive at an estimate of the different kinds of tobacco submitted to them. The pleasantest part of the day's work comes when it falls to their lot to test the high priced Havana cigars sold by the state.—Tit-Bits.

Famous Pearls in History.

We read of pearls—oyster pearls, as they were called—in Chinese records dating back nearly 3,000 years, and Persian history and Persian poetry abound in mention of the pearl as a symbol of purity, and this association of ideas has persisted until the present day. But it is a curious fact that though we have read so much about famous pearls which have played great parts in history, there is hardly an authentic instance of any pearl being still in existence which has any antiquity of its own or made history of any importance. This is partly due to the fact that valuable pearls were nearly always stolen in the brave days of yore, and their unlawful owners had good reason for concealing their historical identity.
