Anarchiete Have Given Trouble Ever Since Execution. Three Years Ago, of Ferrer, Who Was Convicted of inciting Riots.

Madrid. Spain. - The Spanish pre mier, Jose Canalejas, was assassi-nated here.

The slayer was captured by the po-lice. He gave the name of Manuel Pardinas Serrato Martin, and said he was a native of El Grado, in the prov ince of Huesca.

Martin fired four shots at Premier Canalejas as he was entering the ministry of the interior to attend a cabi-net meeting. Two of the shots struck the stateman behind the right ear and he fell dead. The assailant is 28 years old and is believed to be an anarchist.

Confusion followed the crack of the pistol. Policemen ran to the Binis-try of the Interior building from every direction, drawing their revolv-ers or cutlasses. Dozens of civil guards, a kind of military police, poured out of the Minitry of the Inerior, fixing their bayonets or loading rifles as they came.

Among the authorities it was the evident impression that a general out-break was scheduled to follow, and an attempt to clear the square was be gun immediately. The crowd was so great that this was not easy of ac-

Trolley cars clanged furiously for the right of way through the crowd. Scores of loaded mules which are continually passing through the square tied together in tandems of five or six, took fright and oit and kicked murderously. The cafes which line the Puerto emptied out struggling mobs of customers.

The pandemonium continued for many minutes before the police, reenforced by a detachment of cavalry, scattered the crowd and restored temorary order.

fallen Premier's body hurriedly was carried into the Ministry of the Interior and a doctor arrived within as few moments. The Premier had died, however, almost instantly.

It is just three years and a month since Prof. Francisco Ferrer was ex-ecuted at Barcelona for inciting riots. At that time, in an effort to save Ferrer's life after his conviction by courtnartial, anarchists sent threats to King Alfonso that unless Ferrer was spared the king would be killed.

Ferrer was the head of six schools of anarchists in Barcelonia, and was noted throughout the world. He was convicted of inciting the Barcelona riots and of incendiarism and pillage. Protests against Ferrer's execution came from everywhere, but he was shot at Barcenola October 13, 1909. Spain has had trouble with revolution sts and anarchists ever since, and the cabinet frequently has resigned. Each time, however, Canalejas has been prevailed on to retain the premier-

Princeton, N. I.—President elect Wilson has his mind open on the question of whether he shall call an extra session of congress to revise the tariff. He asked the newspaper correspondents to obtain for him a list of the public men and business men who had declared themselves for or against the extra session. Though the governor has tried to follow close ly in the newspapers the various ex-pressions of opinion, he said he was afraid he might have missed some of them in his reading and that he was anxious to get all the opinions before

It is known that Gov. Wilson has a high regard for the opinion of Oscar Underwood, the maojrity leader of the Democrats in the last session, and that in making up his mind he would give careful attention to Mr. Underwood's opinion. Mr. Underwood is reported as favoring an extra session,

"I have no immediate intention of making an announcement," said the president-elect, "but I would like to get the names of those who have given affirmative and those who have given negative opinions in regard to the advisability of calling an extra ing his vacation retreat, in a remote lace, he would go "incog." He will call on the local officials and request that his identity be not officially recognized.

Governor Wilson expects to name along with the other members of his cabinet, an executive for the proposed department of labor.

"I hope there will be a new member of the cabinet for the department of labor," he said. "It will be a very important selection to make. Ever body confidently expects it, and I have been told that all sides in congress favor the new department. The immediate creation of the department is, of course, dependent on the action of the approaching session of con-

The governor said he was turning ver in his mind ideas for his annual message to the New Jersey legisla-ture, which convenes on January 1. He said he would urge especially the adoption of resolutions favoring the amendments proposing an income tax and popular election of United States senators.

85,000 VOTES TO SOCIALISTS

Unofficial Count of Total Vote Gives Wilson 407,470, Roosevelt 391,365, Taft 256,625—Stringer and Williams Are Elected.

Chicago. — The official count of the total vote for president in Illi-nois, competed, shows that Wilson obtained 407,470 votes, Roosevelt 381,-865 and Taft 256,625. Wilson's plural-ity was 16,015, but he lacked 180,261 votes of a majority. The estimated vote for Debs was 85,000 and for Chafin 35,000.

The total vote was about 1,175,000, almost the same as in 1908, when Taft polled 629,929 and Bryan 450,795. Late returns from the various counties in Illinois outside of Cook county give Stringer and Williams, Demo-Lemocratic Governor-Elect of Illinois, sratic candidates for congressmen at targe, a plurality of more than 25,000 votes, which makes their election a certainty.

Democrats lack six of a majority in Democrats lack six or a majority in the forty-eighth Illipois general as-sembly, according to latest returns. SILOS OF CONCRETE AND HOLLOW TILE DESIGNED FOR THE NEW ROUND BARNS

More and more round barns are rod eight feet long inclosed in a gal coing built throughout the state. vanised iron pipe, where it passes farmers who have tried them have across the door. These pipes are two d them superior in convenience and space saving to the conventional rectangular barn. Within the last few months two new siles for round barns have been built at the University of Illinois. A description of them will surely be of value to anyone contemplating the erection of a round barn. The first, a concrete sile, has a capacity of 300 tons. It is 16 feet, is diameter and 58 feet in height. The walls are very heavy because the sile supports the floor of a 70-foot in diameter round barn that is to be built around it. Therefore the first twelve feet of the silo is a foot thick, the next ten feet is eight inches thick and the remainder is six inches thick. Reinforesments in the wall consist of twisted steel rods, varying in size from one-half to one and one-quarter inches. These rods are put in horizontally six mohes apart, the ends being lapped sixtes inches and securely wired togettes. The upright rods are one-half inch in diameter and placed sixteen inches apart, the horizontal rods being wired to these. The reinforcements at the doors consist of a twisted steel the remainder is six inches thick. Re-vanized iron pipe, where it passes across the door. These pipes are two feet spart and serve as a ladder/and also protect the inch rods from rust.

The concrete mixture consists of one part cement, two parts torpedo sand and three parts crushed limestone. The door is continuous. The sections are made of two-by-eight matched cypress sawed to fit the bevelled cement door jams.

The second sile is called the Grout sile heasure A. P. Grout of Winchester. The concrete mixture consists of silo because A. P. Grout of Winchester originated the idea of using hollow tile. This silo is twelve feet in distile. This silo is twelve feet in dismeter and has a capacity of fifty tons. It is made of hollow tile, which are filled with concrete and reinforced with one strand of No. 6 wire laid in an opening in the tile and embedded in the cement. The foundation consists of a solid slab of concrete fourteen feet in diameter and fourteen inches thick, with no reinforcements. The door openings are twenty-four by thirty. The doors are made of one piece of heavy galvanized iron six inches larger in each direction than the opening, and held in place by means of clamps. The doors are two and one-half feet apart.

SOME POINTS IN CHOOSING COTTON

BY CHARLOTTE M. GIBBS.

Associate in Household Science, University of Illinois.

In the past century a great change has come about in the position of the woman in the home, which has very vitally affected her relation to the textile industries. In the early days in this country nearly every woman produced the clothing for herself and family, also the household linens, from the raising of the sheep or flax to the finished product. Now all is changed; with the introduction of ready-made suits and other garments even the sewing is rapidly going from the home, while the manufacture of cloth is a forgotten art.

In olden times the quality of home-spun and woven material was the best possible to be obtained from the materials and methods known. Woolen cloth was all wool, and linen cloth was not adulterated with starch or half cotton. Honest and durable materials were the rule of the day.

With the introduction of machinery and the factory system came keen competition. Modern discoveries, chemical and otherwise, have increased the possibilities of cotton, lin-en, silk, and wool, so that now it is difficult to recognize the original fiber in some of the materials sold.

Thus, on one hand the field of textile knowledge has grown very much, while on the other hand the knowledge of women concerning textile fabrics has decreased, since they are no long er the makers of cloth, nor do they al ways gain a knowledge of its charac teristics through the making of gar-ments. The result has been that women depend more and more on the word of clerks, who are often as ignorant as themselves, until by painful experience the buyers learn of the things to be avoided.

As the cost of living increases, and demands upon the family purse increase, it is more and more important that the woman of the household should know how to spend the family income most economically. Since from ten to twenty per cent. of this income is spent for clothing and house furnishings, it is imperative that more thought and careful study should be put upon this branch of household economy. The object of household economy. The object of this article is to give some bits of in-formation about textile fibers, their manufacture, and adulteration, which may help in gaining that judgment in buying essential to every woman. Certain adulterations and devices of the modern manufacturer are so skil-fully concealed as to be detected only by the way of shemical tests or the high-power microscope. With these we will not deal, but only with those qualities and adulterations which may be detected without the aid of laboratory equipment. Much, of course, may be learned by experience, but it seems better to save time and money by knowing beforehand what is to be demanded, what guarded against.

Each one of the common materials used for textile fabrics, cotton, linen, wool and silk, has its characteristics, each its definite uses. Certain peculiar-ities in physical or chemical nature make each fiber peculiarly adapted to certain uses, but so long as these gen-eral qualities are maintained the vsriety of materials produced from these fibers may be enormous.

Combinations of fibers in one ma-terial, adulteration with the cheaper fibers or with starches or metallic salts may serve to reduce the cost, and yet the purpose of the material he fulfill the materials may be used inter changeably.

Cotton, our special subject, is chean and very plentiful. It has short, flat fibers with a spiral twist, thus giving elasticity and the possibility of being spun into fine thread. Being in itself very useful and inexpensive and capa ble of replacing to a certain extent any other fiber, it is used in very large quantities the world over, and is manufactured into a great variety of materials. The quality of these materials depends on the strength of the fibers, the fineness or coarseness of material, the weave, the color and design and the adulterations.

Cotton, being cheapest, is not adulterated with any of the other fibers mentioned, when the material is to be sold as cotton cloth, but it can be made to appear heavier by the addition of mixtures called sizing.

. Starches, gums, dextrine, glue, china clay, as well as other ingredients in varying proportions, consti tute this sizing, which may add a large percent to the weight of the cloth The spaces between the threads are filled up and a good finish is given to the cloth, although the wearing quality is not increased. If present in large quantities the cloth is greatly reduced in weight and firmness after the first washing.

Adulterations of this kind can be detected by the feeling, a large quantity imparting a harshness to the material. In very thin fabrics the sizing may often be detected by holding the cloth up to the light, when the starch shows between the threads. Washing or thorough beiling of a sample will show the amount of sizing present.

Another method of adulterating cotton is shown in certain kinds of dotted swiss, in which the dots are merely a heavy paste, printed onto the cloth.

NO SLEEPING-BAG FOR TH

Sir Henry Lucy tells in the Cornhill Magazine a good story that he had from Nansen, the explorer. I amusingly illustrates the hardy health of the Laplanders.

Part of Nansen's equipment for his trip across Greenland consisted of two sleeping-bags made of undresses skins. On the first night of the journey Nansen and his two Norwegian companions got into one of the bags pulled the mouth tight across their needs, and so slept in the mow with only their heads out.

Before retiring to rest, Nansen saw in which he had tied up the Laplanders was empty, and that they were nowhere in sight. He was afraid they had deserted him, and sorambling out of the bag he went in search of them. He found the three men fast asleep behind a hillock of snow that they had scraped together as a protection against the wind.

REAL HUMAN SALAMANDER

Chabert, the Fire King, who was popular favorite in London 80 years po, claimed to be able to swallow nic and other poisons with impunity. Visitors to his entertainment mere requested to come provided with phosphorus, prussic acid, arsenic and exalic acid, which he proceeded to consume before the eyes, taking an antidote afterward which was supto show that he was as impervious to heat as to poison, he would take a raw leg of lamb into an oven heated to 220 degrees and remain inside until the joint was cooked, when it was carved and handed around to the audience. The performance concluded by rt rubbing a red-hot shovel or his bead and face and allowing any one who wished to drop molten seal ing was on his tongue and hands.

CHICKENS AVOID COLD FEET

The fowls on a farmer's place nes Pittsburg, Pa., during a cold snap dopted a thoroughly effective method of keeping warm. In amazement their owner beheld the chickens and roost ers using the sheep as chargers, ridng them about the farmyard and occasionally dismounting to pick up a grain of corn. Then again they would ount and lie close, like a jockey during a race. He discovered that the chickens snuggled up in the eeps' wool to keep warm and dug their toes into their backs to keep them from freezing off. They rode the sheep from one stable to another earching for food.

CHEAPNESS OF GERMAN TOYS

Die Woche, one of the widely circusted German magazines, publishes some figures which explain how it is hat German toys can be sold in Amera so much more cheaply than similar articles made here. For example: Makers of toy guns are paid less than ave cents an hour. Women who paint lead soldiers make about $1.20 a week, and supply their own brushes, colors and light. A carpenter who makes dolls' furniture earns from one to three dollars a week, according to his skill.

THE SATURDAY HERALD ALONG THE GULF STORE

ROM New Orleans we came lefsurely to Mobile, 140 miles east and north, stopping by the way at Pass Christian and Hiloxi, resorts on the guif litteral, popular with the New Orleans people and not unknown to northern tourists, as well, who find the temperate cli-mate more bracing and enjoyable than that of the resorts farther south.

Pass Christian is nearest New Or-Pass Christian is heartest and a cor-leans, and 57 miles distant, says a correspondent of the New York Evening Post. It is a very old town, of which both France and Spain had the founding, and has a resident population to-day of French, Spanish and English origin, it was named—the legend runs —from the old Spanish explorer who first discovered the deep "pass" or channel in front of the main shore.
Its admirers call it the Newport of the south, with this advantage over its northern namesake, that it is equally beautiful and desirable in both winter and summer. The drive of 14 miles over its firm, smooth shell roads, with the blue waters of the gulf on one side, and stately and beautiful residences on the other, is one long to be

From Pass Christian the railroad skirts the gulf shore, at times cross shifts the gulf shore, at times cross-ing wide bays or bayous on trestle work, then dashing into pine forests, through whose leafy vistas one catches the distant gleam of the gulf. Biloxi, 22 miles farther east, set up the claim that it is the oldest city on the coast, and indeed, in Louisians for they that it is the oldest city on the coast, and, indeed, in Louisians territory. Probably Iberville and Bienville did erect there the first fort, but Mobile contends that two full days before they had landed at Dog river, in Mobile bay, and had planted their fliy flag on the site of the first permanent fort, which they called Louis de la Mobilia

However this may be, Biloxi is a picuresque old town, reminding one of the French quarter of New Orleans, and with its handsome residences and shell road along the ten mile beach well repays a visit. Between the two lies Beauvoir, and a short distance from its station is the fine old country seat in ample grounds, to which Jef-ferson Davis retired after his abortive confederacy went to ruin, and in which he lived and died. After his death the Daughters of the Confederacy asked Mrs. Davis to sell it to them for an old veterans' home, to waich she consented, taking up her abode in New York, and the old home now shelters a number of those who fought for the "lost cause" of 1861-5.

lour hours from New Orleans we reach Mobile, at the head of the bay of the same name, and thirty miles from the gulf. A bright, alert, progressive and pleasing city it is, of 52,-000 inhabitants, a city which like most of the gulf ports, sees in the opening of the Panama canal an opportunity for almost boundless commercial expansion, and is pulling her self together to take advantage of it.

Bienville water being so pure that it is used in chemical emulsions and in photography direct from the hydrant. The city is lighted by electricity, has n excellent electric street railway system, good schools, good hotels and Government street, flanked on either side with fine residences in ample grounds, will compare favorably with the residence section of any city in the Union.

Mobile lies low on the bay, so low, in fact, that a strong southwest gale sometimes backs up the guif into the bay and overflows the contiguous streets, but the land rises rapidly in the rear until in the suburbs one finds high pine lands, with fine country seats of merchants, green vegetable g rdens and fruitful farms. Spring Hill, several miles westward and reached by trolley, has several fine old country mansions and estates of the old regime—two, at least, owned by titled foreigners—where the hospitality of the antebellum days is dispensed. Here in wide, well kept grounds, is the Jesuit college, founded 76 years ago.

The traveler will find many excursions by water of interest. Boats ply to Fort Morgan and little towns alo the "eastern shore" of the bay, and to the "Snapper banks" out in its blue waters. Mobile's famous shell road, along the curves of the bay, was par-tially wrecked in the great bus said. They don't have to. They of Septemper 1905, but has been re paired and is now again in sion. There is a good hard country road that leads to the bluffs, where the shell road in its original beauty nay be entered. Four miles below, at South End, it becomes a wild, ron tic forest road, leading down to Dog river, where the French took po sion of the country, and where Mobile's famous Fish and Hunt club has an elegant clubhouse, where the vis with the proper credentials will find as good sport and as free-handed hospitality as can be desired.

it is, however, of Mobile's coming commercial greatness that we wish chiefly to speak in this article.

"Just look at her position for a moment," said one of her business men to the writer. "We are here on Mo-bile river, which is formed bl miles above us by the junction of the Alabama and Tombigbee rivers, both nofor 40 miles, and piercing a country rich in all agricultural products, espe cially cotton, in lumber, naval stores coal, iron, cement and other minera wealth. We have four trunk lines centering in the city, traversing the richest and most productive states of the Union and putting us in touch with ever, section. We have four miles of water front, and can enlarge it show or below indefinitely whenever th need arrives. We have a 20-foot chan nel to the guif, which we are about to make 27 feet, and we are 100 miles mearer Panama, the West Indian, South American and European ports than New Orleans or any other large guli port.

"In 1860 Mobile was the second cot. ton port of the south. We expect to get back there in a few years more. Further, a movement has been quietly going on for the last two years that will make Mobile the greatest coal shipping port of the south inside of two years. I mean the improvement of the Tombigbee and Black Warrior rivers by a series of locks and dams which will enable steamboats and barges drawing six feet of water to run to Mobile from the Mulberry and Locust forks of the Warrior in the richest coal and from measures in the world—a distance of 400 miles. If you wish to learn more of this, call on Mr. William W. Thompson, who can tell you all about this and of another article destined to add not a little to Mo-bile's exports—cement."

We had a very interesting interview with Mr. Thompson, a man of constructive ability, with all the energy and enthusiasm necessary to carry out his plans.

Age of Cement. "We have had the stone age," he began, "the age of gold, of silver, of iron and steel, and now we are coming to the age of cement. Wonderful what is being done just now with this new building material. "Now, 70 miles up the Tombigbee river from Mobile, is St. Stephen's, site of the first capital of Alabama ter-Famous Shell Road.

The city recently has been newly ritory, now wholly deserted, and whole paved and sewered. She has an ample is perhaps the greatest deposit of paved and sewered. She has an ample is perhaps the greatest deposit of cement rock in this country. For three-quarters of a mile along the river bank it rises, a solid cliff from back from the river no one knows how far. A company has been formed to work this bed. It will build at St. product by barges to Mobile, thence stroyed by the encroaching of the to the Panama canal and other mar, sea.

"Beginning at Demopolis on the PIN IN THROAT SEVEN YEARS Tombigbee (from which town there is now good water to Mobile), a chain of seven locks has been constructed on the I lack Warrior, opening may cation to Tuscaloosa. Others have been to and it is expected that within two years there will be all the year round navigation to the Mulberry and Locust forks of the Warrior, 400 miles

"When the improvements on the lower river are completed they will probably be continued up to Birming ham, and it is certain that cost, ite cement and perhaps oil and sair can then be laid down on the docks of Mobile cheaper than in any other city of the south, if not of the Union."

"It is a wonder that women want to do everything men do BON'S.

CHANCE FOR PHILATELISTS

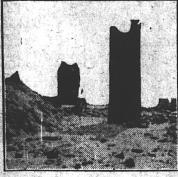

It is announced that the little principality of Lichtenstein, situated be-tween Switzerland and Vororibers, in the Tyrol, is to issue its own stamps. In effect it will do away with, or at least modify the existing convention by which the principality's postal service was in the hands of the Austro-Hungarian authorities. The new stamps will bear the effigy of the reigning prince, Prince John of Lichtenstein.

Lichtenstein, with the exception of San Marino and Monaco, is the smallest independent state in Europe. It is twelve miles in length, and its area is 68.8 square miles. Its population is something like 10,000, and, it is said, contains more men than women. The capital is Vadus, with a population of 1,100. There is a diet of twelve members, elected indirectly. The ruiing prince has a court at Vienna, and the final court of appeal is at lane-bruck. There is no public debt, From the last returns the expenditure for the year showed about $85 less than the receipts. There is a customs with Austria, for which Austria pays $5,000 a year. There is now no pulsory military service within the principality.

IS ATTACKED BY VAMPIRES

From the village of Moresnet on the Belgium-Prussian frontier comes a strange story of human vampires. A schoolmaster who was returning no one evening staggered some time later into the doctor's house with his throat bleeding and in an exhausted condialong in a lonely place at automobile stopped near him and three men sprang out and flung a cloak over him and carried him into the car. He felt his throat cut and lips sucking his blood while the car dashed on into the night. He became unconscious and came to himself in a ditch just over the border. He crawled back to the nearest house, which proved to be the doctor's. The doctor said that the appearance of the wound tended to roborate the story.

Valuable Manuscript Left by Colenel Burnaby Defied the Efforts of Experts.

Burnaby's death that he had left be hind him the manuscript of a novel, for which there was considerable competition among the publishers.

This is quite true. The manuscript, a bulky parcel, was handed to me with discretionary power either to publish it myself or to use it in connection with the proposed biography. Here a singular and, as it finally, proved, a fatal obstacle presented itself. Familiar for many years with Burnaby's handwriting, I could not after diligent endeavor make out more than a sentence here and there on the crowded page of manuscript.

Burnaby's writing was, possibly with the exception of Dean Stanley's, the worst I ever saw. It looked as if before sitting down to write a letter he had pulled a twig out of the hedge, mixed a little blacking and then gone

He wrote the whole of his "Ride to Khiva" and his "Ride on Horseback Through Asia Minor" with his own hand. But before they reached the printer they were fairly written out by a copyist.

The hapless man used to make out as much as he could, then leave blanks, for filling up which he had to seek the assistance of the author. Sometimes there were more blanks in a page than words.

Despairing of making anything of the manuscript of the novel, it was submitted to a publisher, who turned upon it his most skillful decipherist. Neither head nor tail could be made of the manuscript and the intention of publishing the novel was consequently abandoned.—Sir H. W. Lucey, in Cornhill Magazine.

"It was four years an' nine months mactly, Bob," drawled old Kirkby, to well knew what was coming.
"Yes, I dare say you are right. I was up at Evergreen at the time looking after timber interests, when a mile came wandering into the camp, addle and pack still on his back."
"I knowed that there mule," and

"I knowed that there mule," said Kirkby, "I'd sold it to a feller named Newbold, that had come out yere an' married Louise Rosser, old man Rosser's daughter, an' him dead, an' bein' in' orphan an' this feller bein' a fine ung man from the east, not a bit of tenderfoot nuther, a minin' engi-er he called hisself."

"Well, I happened to be there, too, you remember," continued Maitland, and they made up a party to go and aunt up the man, thinking something might have happened."

"You see," explained Kirkby, "we was all mighty fond of Louise Rosser, the hull camp was actin' like a father to her at the time, so long 's she hadn't nobody else; we was all at the weddin', too, some six months afore. The gal married him on her own book, of course nobody makin' her but somehow she didn't seem mone too happy, although Newbold, who was a perfect gent, treated her white as far as we knowed."

The old man stopped again and re-med his pipe.
"Kirkby, you tell the story," said

"Not me," said Kirkby. "I have en men shot afore for takin' words other men's mouths an' I ain's done that yit."

"That's so," answered Pete, "an' there must have been somethin' powerful soothin' in that axle greece, for here I am safe an' sound to this day."
"It takes an old man," assented Eirkby, "to know when to keep his mouth shet. I learned it at the mustle of a gun."
"I naver knew have."

"I never knew before," laughed Maitland, "how still a man you can be. Well, to resume the story, having nothing to do I went out with the posse the sheriff gathered up—"
"Him not thinkin' there had been any foul play," ejaculated the old man.

"No, certainly not." "Well, what happened, Uncle Bob?"

inquired finid.

"Just you wait," said young Bob, who had heard the story. "This is an awful good story, Cousin Enid."
"I can't wait much longer," returned

"Nor I," continued Maitland.

"Was it Newbold?" asked Enid. "And what had hannened to him?"

"He and his wife had been prospect ing in these very mountains; she had fallen over a cliff and broken herself so terribly that Newbold had to shoot

"What!" exclaimed Bradshaw. "You don't mean that he actually killed

"That's what he done," answered old Kirkby. 'Poor man," murmured Enid.

"But why?" asked Philips.

They were five days away from a settlement, there wasn't a human being within a hundred and fifty miles them, not even an Indian," continued Maitland. "She was so frightfully broken and mangled that he couldn't carry her away."

But why couldn't he leave her and go for help?" asked Bradshaw.

The wolves, the bears, or the vui tures would have got her. These woods and mountains were full of them then and there are some of them

The two little girls crept closer to their big cousin, each easting anxious glances beyond the fire light.

"Oh, you're all right, little gais," said Kirkby reassuringly, "they wouldn't come nigh us while this fire wouldn't come night us while this fire is burnin' an' they 've been pretty well hunted out I guess; 'sides there's men yere who'd like nothin' better's drawin' a bead on a big b'ar."

"And so," continued Mattiand, "when she begged him to shoot her, to put her out of her minery, he did so and then he started back to the estilement.

"Did he die?" "I don't think so." was the answer but really I know nothing further about him. There were some good women in that camp; we put him in their hands and I left shortly afterwards."

"I kin tell the rest," said old Kirkby. "Knowin' more about the moun-tains than most people hereabouts I led the men that didn't go back with Bob an' Newbold to the place w'ere he said his woman fell, an' there we found her, her body leastways."
"But the wolves?" queried the girl.

"Where?" was the instant question. Old Kirkby stretched out his hands.
"Don't ax me," he said, "he'd jest tone. I ain't never seed or heerd of him sence. Poor little Louise Rosser, she did have a hard time."
"Yes," said kind, "but f think the man had a harder time than she. He loved her?"
"It looked like it," answered Kirkby.

As the party broke up, old Kirkby rose slowly to his feet; he looked meaningly toward the young woman upon whom the spell of the tragedy still lingered, he nodded toward the young brook, and then repeated his speaking glance at her. His meaning was patent, although no one else had seen the covert invitation.

"Come Kirkby," said the girl in quick response, "you shall be my escort. I want a drink before I turn in. No, never mind," she said, as Brad-shaw and Philips both volunteered. "not this time."

The old frontiersman and the young girl strolled off together. They stor ped by the brink of the rushing torrent a few yards away. The m that it made drowned the low tones of their voices and kept the others, busy preparing to retire, from hearing what

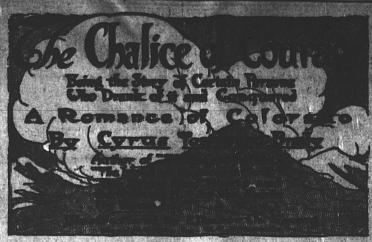

"That ain't quite all the story, Miss Enid," said the old trapper meaningly. 'There was another man."

"What!" exclaimed the girl. "Oh, there wasn't nothin' wrong with Louise Rosser, wich she was Louise Newbold, but there was another man; I suspected it afore, that's why she was sad. W'en we found her body I knowed it."

"I don't understand." "These'll explain," said Kirkby. He drew out from his rough hunting coat a package of soiled letters; they were carefully enclosed in an oil skin and tied with a faded ribbon. "You see, he continued, holding them in his hand yet carefully concealing them from the people at the fire "Wen she fell off the cliff—somehow the mule lost his footin, nobody never knowed how, leastways the mule was dead an' couldn't tell—she struck on a spur or shelf about a hundred feet below the brink; evidently she was carryin' the letters in her dress. "I rather guess them letters'il tell," answered the old man evasively, "an' I like you, and I don't want to see you throwed away."

"What do you mean?" asked the girl curiously, thrilling to the solemnity of the moment, the seriousness, the kind affection of the old frontiersman, the weird scene, the fire light, the tents gleaming shoullike the black wall of weird scene, the fire light, the tents gleaming ghostlike, the black wall of the canon and the tops of the mountain range broadening out beneath the stars in the clear sky, where they twinkled above her head, the strange and tesrible story, and now the letters in her hand, which somehow seemed to be imbued with human feeling. Kirkby patted her on the shoulder. "Read the letters," he said; "they'll tell the story. Good night."

CHAPTER IV.

The Pool and the Water Sprite. Long after the others in the camp had sunk into the profound slumber of weary bodies and good conscience a solitary candle in the small tent ocpled by Enid Mattland alone gave evidence that she was busy over the letters which Kirkby had handed to

It was a very thoughtful girl indeed who confronted the old frontiers-man the next morning. At the first convenient opportunity when they were alone together she handed him the padret of letters.

"Have you read 'em?" he asked. "Yes."

"Yes."
"Wall, you keep 'em," said the old man gravely. "Mebbe you'll want to read 'em agin."
"But I don't understand why you ping them into one of the pockets of her hunting shirt as she spoke.

The packet was not bulky, the letters were not many nor were they of any great length. She could easily carry them on her person and in some strange and unexplicable way she was rather gled to have them. She could not, as she had said, see any personal application to herself in them, and yet in some way she did feel that the solution of the mystery would be here some day. Especially would be hers some day. Especially did she think this on account of the strange but quiet open emphasis of the old hunter.

There was much to do about the camp in the morning. Horses and burros to be looked after, fire wood to be cut, plans for the day arranged, excursions laid out, mountain climbs projected. Later on unwented hands must be taught to cast the fly for the mountain trout which filled the brook and pool, and all the varied duties, details and fascinating possibilities of camp life must be explained to the

The first few days were days of learning and preparation, days of mis-hap and misadventure, of joyous tled, or learning the mysteries of red and line, or becoming hardened and acclimated. The weather proved per-fect; it was late October and the nights were very cold, but there was no rain and the bright sunny days were invigorating and exhibitating to the last degree. They had huge fires and plenty of blankets and the colder it was in the night the better they it was in the night the better they slept.

It was an intensely new experience for the girl from Philadelphia, but she for the girl from Philadelphia, but she showed a marked interest and adapt-ability, and entered with the keenest gest into all the opportunities of the charming days. She was a good sports-woman and she soon learned to throw a fly with the best of them. Old Kirkby took her under his especial pro-tection and as he was one of the best rods in the mountains, she had every advantage. She had always lived in the midst of life. Except in the privacy of her own chamber she had rarely ever been alone before—not twenty feet from a man, she thought whimsteally, but here the charm of solitude at-tracted her, she liked to take her rod and wander off alone. She actually the canon was fed by many affluents from the mountain sides, and in each of them voracious trout appeared. She explored them as she had opportunity sometimes with the others, but more often by herself. She discovered charming and exquisite nooks, little stretches of grass, the size perhaps of a small room, flower decked, ferny bordered, overshadowed by tall giant pine trees, the sunlight filtering through their thin foliage, checkering the verdant carpet beneath. Huge moss covered boulders, wet with the everdashing spray of the roaring brooks, lay in midstream and with other natural stepping stones hardby invited her to cross to either shore. Waterfalls laughed musically in her ears, deep still pools tempted her skill and address.

ears, deep still pools tempted her skill and address.

Sometimes leaving rod and basket by the waterside, she climbed some particularly steep acclivity of the canon wall and stood poised, wind blown, a nymph of the woods, upon some pinnacle of rock rising needle-like at the canon's edge above the sea of verdure which the wind waved to and fro beneath her feet. There in the bright light, with the breeze blowing her golden hair, she looked like some Norse goldess, blue eyed, exsome Norse goddess, hilirated, triumphant.

She was a perfectly formed woman on the ancient noble lines of Milo rather than the degenerate softness of Medici. She grew stronger of limb and fuller of breath, quicker and steadier of eye and hand, cooler of nerve, in these demanding, compelling adventures among the rocks in this mountain air. She was not a tall woman, indeed slightly under rather learning and preparation, days of mis-hap and misadventure, of joyous med herself with the fearlessness of a laughter over blunders in getting set-young chamois, that she looked railer

Uncle Robert was delighted with her; his contribution to her western outfit was a small Winchester. She displayed astonishing aptitude under his instructions and soon became wonderfully proficient with that deadly weapon and with a revolver also. There was little danger to be apprehended in the daytime among the mountains, the more experienced men thought, still it was wise for the girl always to have a weapon in readiness, so in her journeyings, either the Winchester was slung from her shoulder or carried in her hand, or eise the Cott dangled at her hip. At first she took both, but finally it was with refuctance that she could be persuaded to take either. Nothing had ever happened. Save for a few birds now and then she flad seemed the only tenant of the wilderness of her choice.

One night after a camping experience of nearly two weaks in the mountains.

One night after a camping experience of nearly two weeks in the moun ence of nearly two weeks in the mountains and just before the time for breaking up and going back to civilisation, she announced that early the next morning she was going down the canon for a day's fishing excursion.

None of the party had ever followed the little river very far, but it was known that some ten miles below the stream merged in a lovely gemilke lake in a sort of crater in the mountains. From thence by a series mountains. From thence by a series of water falls it descended through of water falls it descended through the foothills to the distant plains beyond. The others had arranged to climb one especially dangerous and ambition provoking peak which towered above them and which had never before been surmounted so far as they knew. Enid enjoyed mountain climbing, She liked the uplift in festing that came from going higher and higher till some dreat was gained, but on this occasion they urged her to accompany them in vain.

on this occasion they urged her to accompany them in vain.

When the fixity of her decision was established she had a number of offers to accompany her, but declined them all, bidding the others go their way. Mrs. Maitland, who was not feeling very well, old Kirkby, who had climbed too many mountains to feel much interest in that game, and Pete the horse wrangler, who had to look after the stock, remained in camp; the others with the exception of Enid started at daybreak for their long ascent. She waited until the sun was cent. She waited until the sun was about an hour high and then bade good-bye to the three and began the descent of the canon. Traveling light, for she was going far—farther, indeed, than she knew—she left her Winches ter at home, but carried the revolves with the fishing tackle and substantia

Now the river—a river by courtesy only—and the canon turned sharply back on themselves just beyond the pitched. Past the tents that had been their home for this joyous period the river ran due east for a tew hundred feet, after which it curved sharply, doubled back and flowed westward for several miles before it gradually swung around to the east on its proper course again.

It had been Enid's purpose to cut across the hills and strike the river where it turned eastward once more avoiding the long detour back. In fact, she had declared her intention of doing that to Kirkby and he had given her careful directions so that she should not get lost in the moun-

But she had plenty of time and no excuse or reason for saving it, she never tired of the charm of the canon; therefore, instead of plunging directly over the spur of the range, she fol-lowed the familiar trail and after she had passed westward far beyond the limits of the camp to the turning, she decided, in accordance with that utterly irresponsible thing, a woman's will, that she would not go down the canon that day after all, but that she would cross, back over the range and strike the river a few miles above the camp and go up the canon.

She had been up in that direction a few times, but only for a short distance, as the ascent above the camp was very sharp, in fact for a little more than a mile the brook was only a succession of water fall; the best fishing was below the camp and the finest woods were deeper in the canon. She suddenly concluded that she would like to see what was up in that mexplored section of the country and would like to see what was up in this unexplored section of the country and so, with scarcely a momentary heaf tation, she abandoned her former plan and began the ascent of the range.

Had that election been made with any suspicion, with any foreknowledge, had it come as the result of careful reasoning or far-speing of probabilities, it might have been inderstantable, but an impulse, a whim the vagrant dies of an idle hour, the careless chance of a moment, and behold! a life is changed. On one side were youth and innocence, freedom and happiness, a happy day, a good rest by the cheerful fire at night; on the other, peril of life, struggle, love, jealousy, self sacrifice, devotion, suffering, knowledge—acarcely five herseli when she stood apple in hand with ignorance and pleasure around has and enlightenment and sorrow before her, had greater choice to make.

for no power apparently could enable because we are only human beings not sufficiently alight with the spark divine. We wait for the end because we must, but thank God we know it not until it comes.

Nothing of this appeared to the girl that bright sunny morning. Fate hid in those mountains under the guise of fancy. Lighthearted, carefree, fitted with buoyant joy over every fact of life, she left the flowing water and scaled the cliff beyond which in the wilderness she was to find after all, the world the world.

The ascent was longer and more difficult and dangerous than she had imagined when she first confronted it, perhaps it was typical and foretold her progress. More than once she had to stop and carefully examine the face of the canon wall for a practicable trail; more than once she had to ex-ercise extremest care in her climb, but she was a bold and fearless moun-taineer by this time and at last surmounting every difficulty she stood panting slightly, a little tired, but triumphant upon the summit.

The ground was rocky and breken, the timber line was close above her and she judged that she must be several miles from the camp. The canon was very crocked, she could see only a few hundred yards of it in any direction. She scanned her circumscribed limited horizon eagerly for the smoke from the great fire that they always kept burning in the camp, but not a sign of it was visible. She was evidently a thousand feet above the river whence she had come. Her standing ground was a rocky ridge which fell away more gently on the other side for perhaps two hundred feet toward the same brook. She could see through vistas in the trees the uptossed peaks of the main range, bare, chaotic, snow crowned, lonely, majestic, terrible.

mountains are calm, still—dead!

The girl stood as it were on the roof of the world, a solitary human being, so far as she knew, in the eye of God above her. Ah, but the eyes divine look long and see far; things beyond the human ken are all revealed. None of the party had ever come this far from the camp in this direction she knew. And she was gied to be the first, as she fatuously believed, to observe that majestic solitance.

ALL CHILDREN IN SCHOOL OF PRAYER

plo—"Gefting the most from pray Psalms 34:1-22.

A mystery, a reality—such is pray-er. The wise men write learned books, endeavoring to explain prayer's processes and power on psychological grounds, but we turn from these unsatisfied. By a sense beyond explan ation we know that prayer is not mere ly some higher science, some subli-mated law, some psychological reac-tion. Prayer is best understood in simplest terms. We grasp its reality most clearly when our minds are most childlike. Prayer is just asking Go for what we need, and expecting him to answer our prayers according to his greater wisdom. The Jesus prescrip-tion for prayer is sufficient: "Ask, and ye shall receive."

The warrant for human prayer is found in the character of God.

They get most from prayer who put most into prayer, of time, interest, faith and knowledge.

Affection understands what is mys terious to science. Loving trust finds none of the difficulties in prayer which stagger the learned critics. To the devoted heart it is perfectly clear that the great God who loves his own, prizes their confidence and delights to prizes their connuence and delights to fulfill their requests. Because God is God, and cares for his children with a love passing that of an earthly parent, he fulfills to them all of the offices of a father.

"Blind unbelief is sure to err, And scan his work in vain; God is his own interpreter, And he will make it plain.

Judge not the Lord by feeble sense But trust him for his grace: Behind a frowning providence, He hides a smiling face."

Ordinarily, they get the most from prayer who are most in prayer.

The platform of prevailing prayer is labeled, "Thy will be done." A sense of God's sovereignty, and of his right to decide what is best, and of the wisdom of all of his decisions, must underlie all approach to the throne of grace. The Gethsemane garden cry, "Not my will, but think, he done," is fundamental to the entire Christian idea of prayer. Stubborn self-will can command no favors from heaven. The platform of prevailing prayer is

In the school of prayer the great life lessons are learned. There it is that a sense of relations and propor-tions is acquired, so that life is not distorted, with the nonessentials first and the essentials last. It is a profound education for any soul to grasp the truth that God is on the throne of the universe. Then all lesser truths and facts fall into proper relationship. A sense of humility and teachableness follows naturally. One is brought into spiritual fellowship with all the family of God's praying children as he kneels before the throne; prayer is a real school of brotherhood. The elusive peace which the world so vainly pursues becomes the possession of the one who enters often into the prayer closet. Strength, wisdom, content-ment, power, all await the pupil in the school of prayer.

And glory crowns the mercy seat."

Poise of soul is acquired in the school of prayer.

Every growing life needs periods of detachment. "Come ye apart," is the master's word to all his disciples. Freedom from dependence upon and entanglement with the world is won by him who goes apart to pray. In this experience of isolation and meditation he realizes himself, as well as God. George Herbert's injunction is wise:

Le Query, a young farmer, living near Gays, has a buggy in the repair suop today, as the result of a runaway accident in which he figured Sonday evening. Query, with two Mattoon young women, was driving west of the city on Sunday evening. and when they met the automobile, the horse became unmanageable and dashed into a feuce. No one was buit, but the vehicle was considerably wrecked.

Miss Edith Kern, and Miss Fern Hawkins entertained at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harve Hawkins, near Gays on Friday evening in honor of Miss Mirlam and Miss Susie Alexander of Gays, who ere to leave in a few days for Kinmundy to make their home, During the early part of the evening, games of various sorts were indulged in by the young people, after which music was furnished by different members of the party. About ten o'clock, refreshments were served by Mrs Hawkins and Mrs. Ed Amen.

W L. Bowen, a resident of Charleston, but formerly of Windsor, died in the hospital for the insane at Kankakee, Tuesday of last week. Many of the citizens of this city will remember him as being confined in the asylum at Anna, Illinois, at the time of B. G. Peadro's death. He escaped from the institution; arrived at his home in Windsor and persistently insisted that he had seen Mr. Peadro used violently. Finally the remains of the deceased were taken from the grave and examined. Dr. F. M. Beals was the medical examiner. Many remember his report.

PRESCRIPTION

For a Long Life.

This is the prescription for a long life given by an old gentleman in Connecticut, who is ninety-nine years old and still well and cheerful, "Live temperately, be slow to anger, don't worry, take plenty of exercise in the fresh air, and, above all, keep cheerful."

Should the system get run downdigestive organs weak—the blood thin and sluggish, take Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the medicine -body-building properties of cods' livers, with the useless grease elimi-nated and tonic iron added. We re-nated and tonic iron added. We regard Vinol as one of the greatest body-builders and strength-creators in the world for aged people.

Mrs. Mary Ivey, of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only knew the good Vinol does old people, you would be unable to supply the demand; it is the finest tonic and strength-creator I ever used."

I ever used."

We wish every feeble old person in this vicinity would try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction.

P.S. If you have any skin trouble try Saxo Salve. We guarantee it. 8. B.HALL, Druggist, Sullivan, Ill. iting old friends in Lovington,
