The section of the C. & B. I. that is being double tracked has the heaviest traffic of the whole line, as over i comes the trains of the southern line of the traffic and St. Louis traffic and from the north the Chicago and Danville branches.

There are over thirty extra crews running out of Villa Grove over the southend

These pass over the track that is being doubled, and are in addition to the regular passenger and freight

When the line is completed it is xpected some of these crews will close out even if the business of the road continues as heavy as it is now, as there has been recently added to the service of the road a number of the mammoth freight engines which have the ability to pull two or three ordinary freight trains, and which are so powerful that it is impossible to put freight trains behind them which are avy enough to stall them. Some very heavy ones have been tried but the only trouble found was that of ulling out draw bars, on the care

So for new of the monster engines have been used on the south end of the track, but a number of them are being used between Villa Grove and Chicago, and as a consequence several of the extra crews on that portion of the line have been laid off or sent to other sections. It is not thought the big engines will be used on this end of the line until it is in good shape, and that will not be before next spring.

Killed at Cadwell.

The body of Pat Quinn, who was killed to Cadwell some time Saturday night or Sunday morning by a passing train on the C & E. I. R. R , wa brought here Sunday.

The coroner's inquest was held last Monday at II a. m. The body was could be obtained.

The body was found early Sunday morning on the track near Cadwell.

The man came from St. Louis on November 27, and was employed with the crew in laying the double track on the C. & E. I. R. R. CHAPTER VIL

A Wild Dash for the Hills.

Old Kirkby; who had been laxily conding a saddle the greater part of the morning, had eaten his dinner, ked his pipe and was now stretch out on the grass in the warm sun sking a nap. Mrs. Maitland was frowsing over a book in the shadow of one of the big pines, when Pete, the liorse wrangler, who had been mandering rather far down the canon unding up the ever straying stock denly came bursting into the camp.
"Great God Almighty!" he cried, tered, menacing, burst forth from the fiying clouds, now obscuring the sun, and rolled over the camp.

"We've got time enough yit," answered Kirkby, coolly calculating their chances. "Best git yer alloker on, you'll need it in a few minutes."

Mrs. Mattland ran to her own tent and soon came out with sou'wester and yellow oliskins completely covering her. Kirkby meantime had decided.

Presently She Opened Her Eyes.

Immediately after he made up a much joined Pete with such of the horses as larger bundle in another tent by, adding, "An" this is mine."

Liking a thought for the morrow, not-he had been able to drive up. Kirkby, taking a thought for the morrow, noted that there were four of them, enough to pull the wagon if they could get back to it.

After the first awful deluge of the cloudburst it moderated alightly, but the hard rain came down steadily, the wind rose as well, and in spite of their clistins they were soon wet and cold. It was impossible to make a fire, there was no place for them to go, nothing to be done. They could only remain where they were and wait. After a half hour of camesure fersman as he almost stumpled over line: "Wake up, old man, an'—" "What the—" began Kirkby flerce-gy, thus rudely aroused from slumber and resentful of the daring and most assual affront to his dignity and stasince all men, and especially the ser ones, held him in great hon-

"Look here," yelled Peter in growby excitement and entirely oblivious to his less-majestle, pointing at a black cloud rolling over the top of the sange. "It'll be a cloudburst sure.
We'll have to git out o' here an' in a burry too. Oh, Mrs. Maitland."
By this time Kirkby was on his feet, the storm had stolen upon him sleeping and unaware. The configuraline of the canon had compassely hid its approach. At best the three in the camp could not have discovered it until it was high in the heavens. Now "I broug! the children's coats the clouds were already approaching the noonday sun. Kirkby was alive to the situation at once. He had the rare ability of men of action of awakening with all his faculties at instant command. He did not have to ruh his eyes and wonder where he was and "He'll sit nothin' worse." mand. He did not have to run his eyes and wonder where he was, and speculate as to what was to be done. The moment that his eyes, following Pete's outstretched arm, discovered the black mass of clouds he ran toward Mrs. Maitland and standing on no ceremony he shoo! her vigorously by the shoulder.

"We'll have to run for our lives."

no ceremony he shool: her vigorously by the shoulder.

"We'll have to run for our lives, ma'am," he said briefly. "Pete, drive the stock up on the hills, fur as you kin, the hosses pertikler, they'll be more to us an' them burron must take keer of themselves."

Pete needed no urging. He was off like a shot in the direction of the improvised corral. He loosed the horses from their pickets and started them up the steep trail that led down from the hogback to the camp by the water's edge. He also tried to start the burros he had just rounded up in the same direction. Some of them would go and some of them would not. He had his hands full in an instant. Meanwhile Kirkby did not linger by the side of Mrs. Maitland. With incredible agility for so old a man he ran over to the tent where the stores were kept and began picking out such articles of provision as he could easiest carry.

"Come over here, Mrs. Maitland," he cried. "We'll have to carry up on the hill somethin' to keep us from starvin' till we get back to town. We hadn't orter camped in this yere pocket noways, but who'd ever expected anything like this now?"

"What do you fear!" asked the pocket noways, but who'd ever expected anything like this now?"

"What do you fear?" asked the woman, joining him as she spoke and waiting for his directions.

"Looks to me like a cloudburst," was the answer. "Creek's pretty full now, an' if she does break everything below yere 'll go to hell on a run."

It was evidence of his perturbation It was evidence of his perturbation and anxiety that he used such lan-guage, which, however, in the emer-gency did not seem unwarranted even to the refined ear of Mrs. Maitland.
"Is it possible?" she exclaimed.

"Taint only possible, it's sartin. Now, ma'am," he hastily bundled up a lot of miscellaneous provisions in a small piece of canvass, tied it up and handed it to her. "That'll be for you."

"I have to leave the tents and all the things," said Mrs. Maitland.

"You can suy with them," answered Kirkby, dryly, "but if what I think 's goin' to happen comes off, you won't have no need of nothin' no more—"Great God, here she comes."

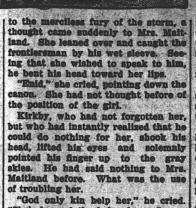

As he spoke there was a sudden, swift downpour of rain, not in drops, but in a torrent. Catching up his own pack and motioning the woman to do but in a torrent. Catching up his own pack and motioning the woman to do likewise with her load, Kirkby caught her by the hand, and half led, half dragged her up the steep trail from the brook to the ridge which bordered the side of the canon. The canon was much wider here than further up and there was much more room and much more space for the water to spread. there was much more room and much more space for the water to spread. Yet, they had to hurry for their lives as it was. They had gone up scarcely a hundred feet when the disgorgement of the heavens took place. The water fell with such force, directness and continuousness that it almost beat them down. It ran over the trail down the side of the mountain in down the side of the mountain in sheets like water falls. It required all the old man's skill and address to keep himself and companion from losing their footing and falling down into the seething tumult below.

The tents went down in an instant

Where there had been a pleasant bit of meadow land was now a muddy, tossing lake of black water. Some of the horses and most of the burros which Pete had been unable to do anything with were engulfed in a mo-ment. The two on the mountain side could see them swimming for dear life as they swept down the canon. Pete himself, with a few of the animals, was already scrambling up to safety Speech was impossible between the neise of the falling rain and the in-cessant peals of thunder, but by per-sistent gesture, old Kirkby urged the terrified, trembling woman up the trail until they finally reached the top of the hog back, where under the poor shelter of the stunted pines they

"God only kin help her," he cried

"She's beyond the help of man."
Ah, indeed, old trapper, whence came the confident assurance of that dogmatic statement? For as it chanced, at that very moment the woman for whose peril your heart was wrung was being lifted out of the torrent by meadow land, trunks of trees torn up by the roots had lodged against them. It was a scene of desolate and miserable confusion and disaster.

"Oh, Robert, don't you think she may be safe?" anked Mrs. Maitland.

"There's just a chance, I think, that she may have suspicioned the storm an' got out of the canon," suggested the old frontiersman.

"A slim chance," answered Maitland gloomily, "God, I wouldn't have had this happen for anything on earth."

"Nor me. I'd a heap ruther it had got me than her," said Kirkby simply.

"I didn't see it coming," continued Mattland; nodding as if Kirkby's statement were to be accepted as a matter of course, as indeed it was. "We were on the other slope of the mountain until it was almost overhead."

"Nuther did L. To tell the truth !

grown to love. "Ef she seed the storm an' realize what it was, an' had sense enough to climb up the canon wall," answered the other, "she won't be no worse off'n we are; ef not

Mrs. Mattland had only to looi down into the seething cauldron to understand the possibility of that "if."
"Oh," she cried, "let us pray for her that she sought the hills."

"Two been a doin' it," said the old man gruffly.

He had a deep vein of plety in him, but, like other rich ores, it had to be mined for in the depths before it was Maitland groaned in anguish.

"I can't stay here inactive," he persisted stubbornly.

"It's a hard thing, but we got to wait till mornin'. Er she got out of the canon and climbed up on the hog back she'll be all right, she'll soon find out she can't make no progress in this mist suid darkness. No, old friend, we're up agin it hard. mediately volunteered to no down the canon at once, knewing little or nothing of its dangers and indifferent to what they did know, but as Kirkby had pointed out, the attempt was clearly impossible. Maitland bitterly repreached himself for having allowed the girl to go alone, and in those self-reproaches old Kirkby foined.

They were too wet and cold to sleep. There was no shelter and it was not until early in the morning they succeeded in kindling a fire. Meanwhile the men talked the situation over very carefully. They were two days' journey from the wagons. It was necessary that the vomen and children should be taken back at once. Kirkby hadn't been able to save much more than enough to eat to get them back to a ranch or settlement, and on very short rations at beet. It was finally decided that George and Pete and Mrs. Maitland, the two girls and the youngster, should go back to the wagon, drive to the nearest settlement, leave the women and then return on horseback with all speed to meet, Maitland and Kirkby, who would meanwhile search the canon.

meet Mattland and Kirkby, who would meanwhile search the canon.

The two men from the east had to go back with the others, although they pleaded gallantly to be allowed man to man and then Robert Maitland, standing in the midst of the group, bowed his head in the sunny morning, for the sky again was clear, and poured out a brief prayer that and poured out a brief prayer that God would prosper them, that they would find the child and that they would all be together again in health and happiness. And without another word, he and Kirkby plunged down to the side of the canon, the others tak-ing up their weary march homeward with sad hearts and in great dismay.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Telegram and a Caller.
"You say," asked Maitland, as they surveyed the canon, "that she went down the stream?"

"She said she was goin' down. I showed her how to cut across the mountains an' avoid the big bend. I've got no reason to suspicion that she didn't go w'ere she said."

"Nevertheless," said Maitiand, "I is barely possible that she may have changed her mind and gone up the

"Yep, the feemale mind does often change unexpected like," returned the other, "but wether she went up or down, the enly place for us to look, I take it, is down, for if she's alive, if she got out of the canon and is above us, nacherly she'd follow it' down yere an' we'd a seed her by this time. If she didn't git out of the canon, why, to remain with the two who were to take up the hunt for Enid. Maitland might have kept them with him, but that meant retaining a larger portion of the scanty supplies that had been saved and he was compelled against his will to refuse their requests. Leaving barely enough to subsist Maitland and Kirkby for three or four days, or until the return of the relief party, the groups separated at daybreak.

"Oh, Robert," pleaded his wife, as he kissed her good bye, "take care of yourself, but find Enid."

"Yes," answered her husband. "I shall, never fear, but I must find the dear rive or discover what has become down stream."

Maitland nodded. He understood.

"We'd better go down, then," continued Kirkby, whose reasoning was fiawless except that he made no allowance for the human-divine interposition that had been Enid Maitland's salvation, "an' if we don't find no trace of her down stream, we kin come back here an' go up."

It was a hard, desperate journey the two men took. One of them followed the stream at its level, the other tramped along in the mountains high above the high water mark of the day before. If they had needed any evidence of the power of that cloudburst and storm, they found it in the canon. In some places where it was narrow and rocky the pass had been fairly scoured; at other places the whole aspect of it was changed, the place was a welter of uproofed trees, logs jammed together in fantastic shapes; it was as if some wanton besom of destruction had swept the narrow rift.

Springfield.—Contracts, for printing, binding and coal for the coming two years were awarded at a meet-ing of the board of state contract com-missioners. The contracts were award-ed as follows: Second-class printing —Illinois State Journal company, Springfield; fourth-class printing—Illi-nois Printing company, Danville; bind-ing—H. W. Rokker company, Spring-field; coal, mine run—Colvin Coal company, Springfield.

Hit Twelve-Foot Coal Veln. Duquoin.—A 12-foot vein of coal has been reached in the new North mine at Christopher, east of this city, and is one of the thickest yet found in this coal field. The construction of the surface equipment of the mine was begun shortly after coal had been found by the prespectors, so there will found by the prospectors, so there will be little delay in beginning operations. No mules will be used in the mine, all hauling being done by electric motors.

MPEACHED BY HOUSE, HEARING WILL DECIDE WHETHER HE USED OFFICE FOR GAIN.

NINTH CASE IN U. S. HISTORY

One Hundred Witnesses to Be Hear -Thirteen Charges Denke First Case in Senate Since 1905.

Washington, D. C.—For the ninth time in the history of the United States its most plenary power—impeachment proceedings—will be exercised by the senate.

Robert W. Archbald, associate jus tice of the new commerce court, is the defendant. His impeachment trial will begin with a committee of seven representatives acting as prosecutors.

"Misbehavior and misdemeanors" in office are the formal charges against Judge Archbald. The indictment, presented by the house, consists of 13 ar-ticles, a most scathing and bitter ar-raignment of the federal judge.

Use of his office for personal profit is the substance of all of the charges against the defendant. He is charged with attempting to float deals in refuse coal deposits in Pennsylvania, through railroad officials, and also improper receipt of favors from attorneys before his court.

Sweeping denial of wrongdoing was made by Judge Archbald to every one of the 13 charges against him. He contends that no improper motive can be predicated from any of his acts, pri-vate or official, and that he never gained or sought to profit by improper use of his office.

Witnesses Number One Hundred.

It is planned to devote from two to It is planned to devote from two to four hours daily to take testimony of the 100 witnesses who will be called for both the government and the defense. About 70 witnesses were before the house judiciary committee when the impeachment charge was under investigation. At those hearings Judge Archbald, by force of precedents, could not and did not submit any evidence or offer testimony of any evidence or offer testimony of any witnesses. Swayne, federal district judge in Florida, was tried and acquitted in 1905.

Ouster of Archbald will require a vote of two-thirds of the senators, although a majority only of the house was required for his impeachment.

The trial had its inception in a complaint filed last February before Interstate Commerce Commissiones Henry B. Meyer by William P. Boland, president and general manager land, president and general manager of the Marion Coal company of Scran-ton, Pa. Boland told Meyer that he feared Archbald had been or was interested in aiding certain railroads in Boland's litigation with the carriers.

Morit System in Consular and Diplomatic Corps—Department of State's Good Work for Latin-

Washington, Dec. 3.—President Taft submitted to congress today the first of several messages. It was devoted to our foreign relations and in part was as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives.

was as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: The foreign relations of the Utifed States actually and potentially affect the state of the Union to a degree not widely realized and hardly surpassed by any other factor in the welfare of the whole nation. The position of the United States in the moral, intellectual, and material relations of the family of nations should be a matter of vital interest to every patriotic citizen. The national properity and power impose upon us duties which we can not shirk if we are to be true to our ideals. The tremendous growth of the export trade of the United States has already made that trade a very real factor in the industrial and commercial prosperity of the country. With the development of our industries the foreign commerce of the United States must rapidly become a still more essential factor in its economic welfare. Whether we have a far-seeing and wise diplomacy and are not recklessly plunged into unnecessary wars, and whether our foreign policies are based upon an intelligent grasp of present-day world conditions and a clear view of the potentialities of the future, or are governed by a temporary and timid expediency or by narrow views befitting an infant nation, are questions in the alternative consideration of which must convince any thoughtful citizen that ternative consideration of which must convince any thoughtful citizen that covince any thoughtful citizen that no department of national polity offers greater opportunity for promoting the interests of the whole people on the one hand, or greater chance on the other of permanent national injury, than that which deals with the foreign relations of the United States.

Jury, than that which deals with the foreign relations of the United States. The fundamental foreign policies of the United States should be raised high above the conflict of partisanship and wholly dissociated from differences as to domestic policy. In its foreign affairs the United States should present to the world a united front. The intellectual, financial and industrial interests of the country and the publicist, the wage carner, the farmer, and citizen of whatever occupation must co-operate in a spirit of high patriotism to promote that national solidarity which is indispensable to national efficiency and to the attainment of national ideals.

The relations of the United States with all foreign powers remain upon a sound basis of peace, harmony and friendship. A greater insistence upon justice to American citizens or interests wherever it may have been denied and a surpasses are the ests wherever it may have been de-nied and a stronger emphasis of the need of mutuality in commercial and other relations have only served to strengthen our friendships with for-eign countries by placing those friend-ships upon a firm foundation of reali-ties as well as expirations. ties as well as aspirations. Reorganization of the State Depart upon, a mass of intricate business vital to American interests in every country in the world.

The department of state was an archaic and inadequate machine lacking most of the attributes of the foreign office of any great modern power. With an appropriation made upon my recommendation by the congress on August 5, 1909, the department of state was completely reorganized. There were created divisions of Latin-American affairs and of far eastern. American affairs and of far eastern, near eastern, and western European affairs. To these divisions were called from the foreign service diplomatic and consular officers possessing experience and knowledge gained by actual service in different parts of the world and thus familiar with political and commercial conditions in the regions concerned. The work was highly specialized. The result is that where previously this government world and thus familiar with political and commercial conditions in the regions concerned. The work was highly specialized. The result is that where previourly this government from time to time would emphasize in its foreign relations one or another policy, now American interests in every quarter of the globe are being more vital in the neighborhood of the Panama canal and the zone of the Caribbean than anywhere else. There, too, the maintenance of that dectrine falls most heavily upon the United States. It is therefore essential that the countries within that sphere shall be removed from the jeopardy involved by heavy foreign debt and chaotic sequences.

cultivated with equal assiduity.

Merit System in Consular and Diplematic Gerge.

Expert inoviedge and professional training must evidently be the essence of this reorganization. Without a trained foreign service there would not be men available for the work in the reorganized department of state. President Cleveland has taken the first step toward introducing the merit system in the foreign service. That had been followed by the application of the merit principle, with excellent results, to the entire consular meanth. Almost nothing, however, had been done in this direction with regard to the diplomatic service. In this age of commercial diplomacy it was evidently of the first importance to train an adequate personnel in that branch of the service. Therefore, on November 26, 1809, by an executive order I placed the diplomatic service up to the grade of secretary of embassy, inclusive, upon exactly the same strict hon-partisan basis of the merit syndem, rigid examination for appointment and promotion only for efficiency, as had been maintained without exception in the consular service.

Peace. In the field of work toward the In the field of work toward the ideals of peace this government negotiated, but to my regret was unable to consummate, two arbitration treaties which set the highest mark of the aspiration of nations toward the substitution of arbitration and reason for war in the settlement of international disputes. Through the efforts of American diplomacy several wars have been prevented or ended. I refer to the successful tripartite mediation of the Argentine republic, Brasil, and the United States between Peru and Ecuador; the bringing of the boundary dispute between Panama and Costa Rica to peaceful arbitration; the staying of warlike preparations when Hayti and the Dominican republic were on the verge of hostilities. tions when Hayti and the Dominican republic were on the verge of hostilities; the stopping of a war in Nicaragua; the halting of internecine strife in Honduras. The government of the United States was thanked for its influence toward the restoration of amicable relations between the Argentine republic and Bolivia. The diplomacy of the United States is active in seekof the United States is active in seek of the United States is active in seening to assuage the remaining ill-feeling between this country and the Republic of Colombia. In the recent Civil war in China the United States sucpublic of Colombia. In the recent Civili war in China the United States successfully joined with the other interested powers in urging an early cessation of hostilities. An agreement has been reached between the governments of Chile and Peru whereby the celebrated Tacna-Arica dispute, which has so long embittered international relations on the west coast of South America, has at last been adjusted. Simultaneously came the news that the boundary dispute between Peru and Ecuador had entered upon a stage of amicable settlement. The position of the United States in reference to the Tacna-Arica disputa between Chile and Peru has been one of non-intervention, but one of friendly influence and pacific counsel throughout fluence and pacific counsel throughout the period during which the dispute in question has been the subject of interchange of views between this government and the two governments immediately concerned.

China. In China the policy of encouraging financial investment to enable that country to help itself has had the resuit of giving new life and practical application to the open-door policy. The consistent purpose of the present administration has been to encourage the use of American capital in the development of China by the promodevelopment of China by the promo-tion of those essential reforms to which China is pledged by treaties with the United States and other pow-ers. The hypothecation to foreign bankers in connection with certain in-dustrial enterprises, such as the Huku-Ment.

At the beginning of the present administration the United States, having fully entered upon its position as a world power, with the responsibilities thrust upon it by the results of the Spanish-American war, and already engaged in laying the groundwork of a vast foreign trade upon which it should one day become more and more dependent, found itself without the machinery for giving thorough attention to, and taking effective action upon, a mass of intricate business such enterprises, in order that the United States might have equal rights and an equal voice in all questions pertaining to the disposition of the public revenues concerned. would remove at one stroke the menance of foreign creditors and the menance of revolutionary disorder.

The second advantage to the United States is one affecting chiefly all the southern and gulf ports and the business and industry of the south. The republics of Central America and the Caribbean possess great natural wealth. They need only a measure of stability and the means of financial regeneration to enter upon in era of peace and prosperity, bringing profit and happiness to themselves and at the name time creating conditions sure to lead to a fiourishing interchange of trade with this country. I wish to call your especial attention to the recent occurrences in Nicaragua, for I believe the terrible events recorded there during the revolution of the past summer—the useless loss of life, the devastation of property, the bombardment of defenseless cities, the killing and wounding of women and children, the torturing of non-combatants to exact contributions and the suffering of thousands of himan beings—might have been averted had the department of state, through approval of the loan convention by the senate, been permitted to carry out its now well-developed policy of encouraging the extending of financial aid to weak Central American states with the primary objects of avoiding just such revolutions by assisting those republics to rehabilitate their finances, to establish their currency on a stable basis, to remove the custom houses from the danger of revolutions hy arranging for their secure administration, and to establish reliable banks.

plished in the past year by the American diplomatic officers in Europe, is the investigation of the agricultural credit system in the European countries. Both as a means to afford relief to the consumers of this country through a more thorough development of agricultural resources and as a means of more sufficiently maintaining the agricultural population, the project to establish credit facilities for the farmers is a concern of vital importance to this nation. No evidence of prosperity among well-established of prosperity among well-established farmers should blind us to the fact farmers should blind us to the fact that lack of capital is preventing a development of the nation's agricultural resources and an adequate increase of the land under cultivation; that agricultural production is fast falling behind the increase in population; and that, in fact, although these well-established farmers are maintained in increasing prosperity because of the natural increase in population, we are not developing the industry of agriculture.

increase of Foreign Trade.
In my last annual message I said that the fiscal year ended June 30, 1911, was noteworthy as marking the highest record of exports of American fiscal year 1912 shows that this rate of advance has been maintained, the total domestic exports having a valuation approximately of $2,200,000,000, as compared with a fraction over $2,000,000,000,000 the previous year. It is also significant that manufactured and partly manufactured articles con-tinue to be the chief commodities form-ing the volume of our augmented exports, the demands of our own people for consumption requiring that an increasing proportion of our abundant agricultural products be kept at home In the fiscal year 1911 the exports of articles in the various stages of man-ufacture, not including foodstuffs partly or wholly manufactured, amounted approximately to $907,500,000. In the fiscal year 1912 the total was nearly $1,022,000,000, a gain of $114,000,000. Advantage of Maximum and Minimum Tariff Provision.

The importance which our manufac-tures have assumed in the commerce of the world in competition with the Protecting and promoting our reign trade. It is natural that impetitive countries should view the some concern this steady panelon of our commerce. If in ame instances the measure taken by some to meet it are not entirely equible, a remedy should be found. In a me measures I have described the gotiations of the department of ate with foreign governments for the ijustment of the maximum and minimum tariff as provided in section 2 the tariff law of 1909. The advantages secured by the adjustment of it trade relations under this law we continued during the last year, ad some additional cases of discrimitory treatment of which we had ason to complain have been revoved. The department of state has the first time in the history of its country obtained substantial instruved nation treatment from it the countries of the world. There e. however, other instances which, the apparently not constituting united discrimination in the sense of stion 2, are nevertheless exceptions the complete equity of tariff treatment for American products that the spartment of state consistently has aight to obtain for American compores abroad.

department of state consistently has cought to obtain for American commerce abroad.

These developments confirm the opinion conveyed to you in my annual message of, 1911, that while the marimum and minimum provision of the tariff law of 1909 has been fully justified by the success achieved in removing previously existing undue discriminations against American products, yet experience has shown that this feature of the law should be amended in such way as to prevent a fully effective means of meeting the varying degrees of discriminatory treatment of American commerce in foreign countries still encountered, as well as to protect against injurious treatment on the part of foreign governments, through either legislative of administrative measures, the financial interests abroad of American citizens whose enterprises enlarge the market for American commodities.

I can not too strongly recommend to congress the passage of some such enabling measure as the bill which was recommended by the secretary of state in his letter of December 13.

1911. The object of the proposed legislation is, in brief, to enable the executive to apply, as the case may require, to any or all commodities whether or not on the free list from a country which discriminates against the United States, a graduated scale of duties up to the maximum of 25 per cent. ad valorem provided in the pregent law.

The message told what the government has done in connection with the Balkan war and in placing the government of Liberia in position to pay its debts. The new condition of affairs in China was set forth, and then our relations with Central and South American governments were set forth in more detail. It concluded as follows:

as follows: Congress should fully realize the conditions which obtain in the world as we find ourselves at the threshold as we find ourselves at the threshold of our middle age as a nation. We have emerged full grown as a peer in the great concourse of nations. We have passed through various forma-tive periods. We have been self-centered in the struggle to develop our domestic resources and deal with our domestic questions. The nation is now too mature to continue in its foreign relations those temporary expedients natural to a people to whom domestic affairs are the sole concern. In the past our diplomacy has often consisted, in normal times, in a mere assertion of the right to international existence. We are now in a larger existence. We are now in a larger relation with broader rights of our own and obligations to others than ourselves. A number of great guid-ing principles were laid down early in the history of this government. The recent task of our diplomacy has been to adjust those principles to the conditions of today, to develop their corollaries, to find practical applications of the old principles expanded to meet new situations. Thus are being evolved bases upon which can rest the superstructure of policies which must grow with the destined progress of this nation. The successful con-duct of our foreign relations demands a broad and a modern view. We can not meet new questions nor build for the future if we confine ourselves to outworn dogmas of the past and to the perspective appropriate at our emergence from colonial times and conditions. The opening of the Panama canal will mark a new era in our international life and create new and world-wide conditions which, with their vast correlations and conse-quences, will obtain for hundreds of years to come. We must not wait for events to overtake us unawares. With continuity of purpose we must deal with the problems of our external re-lations by a diplomacy modern, resourceful, magnanimous, and fittingly expressive of the high ideals of a WH. H. TAFT.

Representative De Forest also intro-duced a resolution for a constitutional amendment to limit the tenure of the presidential office to one term of six years, and another repealing the newsyears, and another repealing the news-paper publicity section of the last post-

The senate and house settled down to work for the high-pressure session that will end the sixty-second con-

Speaker Champ Clark, wielding his Speaker Champ Clark, wielding his emblem of order with ever-increasing force, succeeded in breaking two valuable gavels before he had brought the enthusiastic house through an hour and ten minutes of business. congress comes together after a po-litical upheaval of far-reaching extent, which will soon transfer all the execu-tive and legislative branches of the federal government to Democratic control.

- Familiar Faces Are Seen

The old faces and figures are again in evidence, although some of them, ilke ex-Speaker Cannon, will soon pass off the congressional stage, while others, like Speaker Clark and Chairman Underwood, have had their tenures renewed and strengthened.

As a whole, however, the dominant note as both branches of congress assemble is that new conditions, new policies and new men have been unhered in as a result of the recent election and that about the only function of the present short sension, lasting until March 4, is to pass annual supply bills and wind up what remains of the old regime.

In the senate the presiding officer's chair will be filled temporarily by Senators Bacon of Georgia and Gallinger of New Hampshire, alternating.

The Republican control of the senate, with about 50 votes, as against the present Democratic strength of about 42, will continue until March 4, although this control is conditioned largely by the presence of two elements, regular and progressive, in the Republican total of 50.

In the house, Speaker Clark and the various chairmen of the two upreceding sessions continue to direct affairs, with a total Democratic wire of 250, giving a Democratic majority of about 33.

The roll call in the house was by states, and as the roll proceeded the members cheered and applauded the mames of the more prominent members.

Former Speaker Cannon was given a rising greeting when his name was reached. Democrats and Republicans who had joined in the applause for Speaker Clark when he entered the chamber at noon, jumped to their feet and joined in the cheering.

Four governors-elect, who will go from the house of representatives to their respective state capitais, also were vigorously cheered as the roll call proceeded. They were: Representative Sulzer, New York; Cox, Ohio; Robinson, Arkansas, and Hanna, North Dakota.

No business was transacted by the senate, but a number of bills and resolutions were introduced in the house.

Crowded galleries looked down on the animated scenes on the floor as Speaker Clark in the house and Senator Ohlo; and Sulting and Sulting of Texas, long a Democratic leader in debate, came with the voluntary announcement of his retirement. Representatives Cox of Ohlo and Sulting and Su

The outline of the winter's work

The outline of the winter's work seemed inextricably mixed, as sen-ators and congressmen met in friendly conferences, with the prospect of When the prayer was concluded a tariff revision in the special session burst of applause greeted Representathat is to assemble under President Wilson next spring.

The reassembling of the house drew together a host of men, long prominently identified with Republican atfairs in that body, to whom the elections had brought political disaster. Among them were: Nicholas Long-worth of Ohio, John Dalzell of Pennsylvania, Ebelezer J. Hill of Connecticut and John A. Needham of California, all members of the powerful ways and means committee and leaders in advocation and defense of Republican tariffs.

HOW CHRONIC COUGHS

Are Being Cured by Vinol.

Did you ever cough for a month? Then just think how distressing it must be to have a cough hang on for

Mrs. Maria Primrose, of 87 New Street, Drooklyn, N. Y., says: "I had a very heavy cold which settled into a chronic cough, which kept me awake nights for fully three months, and felt tired all the time because my rest was broken so much. The effect of taking your cod liver and iron rem-cdy, Vinol, is that my cough is gone. I can now get a good night's rest, and I feel much stronger in every way."

It is the combined action of th mock bull elements, cods' livers, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron which makes Vinol so efficient in curing chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis—at the same time building up the weakened, run-down system.
