ENCOURAGING NEWS COMES.

D. S. & M. Will Be 115 Miles in Length. Contract for New Line Has Been Let

J. A. McFall, secretary of the Decatur, Sullivan & Mattoon Traction company received today from Isaac Smith, now in London, England, news to the effect that the work of financing the Springfield and Central Illinois Traction company, of which Decatur, Sullivan and Mattoon Traction company is a part, had been carried through to completion, and that the contracts for the actual construction of the proposed line had been let. Mr. McFall is authority for the statement that the work on construction will begin in the early spring, without the slightest doubt, and that matters will be pushed through as rapidly as possible. Within a reasonable time cars on a second interurban line will be running in and out of Mattoon.

Mr. Smith, who is president of the Springfield and Central Illinois Traction company, has been in England for some time to bring about the financing of the proposed lines, of which he is the head. Since leaving Illinois he had been writing to Mr. McFall, keeping the latter informed of progress he had been making in dealing with a financial syndicate of the English metropolis, but the letter of today, although comparatively short, contained more genuine and pleasant news than any of those received before.

The Springfield and Central Illinois Traction company will comprise an interurban line of about 450 miles when completed. It will comprise five big divisions—the Decatur, Sullivan, and Mattoon division, extending from Decatur to a little town Weir six miles southeast of Martinsville, running through Sullivan and Mattoon, besides a branch extending from Mt. Zion through Mosecaqua and Taylorville to Pawnee, where it will connect with the Springfield division; the St. Louis division, running from St. Louis to Keyesport; the Pinckneyville division, extending from Keyesport to Pinckneyville; the Springfield division, extending from Keyesport to Springfield, and the Terre Haute division, extending from Keyesport to Terre Haute.

The reason that Keyesport figures so prominently in most of the divisions is because the great power plant of the company is to be located in that little village, not far from Hillsboro. Some conception of the magnitude of this plant may be gained when it is announced that its cost will reach approximately $700,000. It will be one of the largest plants of its kind in the country.

Another thing of importance is the statement that this line, when completed, will penetrate seventy six per cent of the coal lands of Illinois and twenty-five per cent of the output, which will mean a business of no little significance.

The proposed line of the Springfield and Central Illinois Traction company is to be approximately 450 miles in length. The line which will pass through Mattoon will be 115 miles long, one of the largest of the entire system. This line will run southeast from Mattoon into virtually virgin territory, a territory the business of which rightfully belongs to Mattoon as the nearest and most easily accessible large city, when the new line is constructed and in operation.

It is also stated that within twelve months after the work begins on the line from $75,000 to $100,000 will be expended in Mattoon and its immediate vicinity, and that a major portion of this vast amount will be expended right here with the merchants of Mattoon.

It is estimated that the system will be completed at a total cost of about $12,000,000.

Already many of the necessary franchises through those villages, towns and cities through which the Decatur, Sullivan and Mattoon line will have to pass have been procured. At the last meeting of the Mattoon city council right was granted the company to use certain streets of the city for a period of fifty years, the action by the council being unanimous. It is said the promoters of the line are receiving the same encouragement all along the line, and that in virtually no instance where a franchise has been asked for has it been denied. Franchises for this line were obtained several years ago, but as they had become void by the lapse of time, due to the fact that the line was not constructed and in operation by a specified time, this work must be done all over again. The obstacles which were met with by the promoters then have been swept away by popular opinion, now the task is much easier. It is given out that when the time comes for the beginning of construction work, that all the necessary franchises will have been procured. —Mattoon Journal.

Parcels Post Business.

Postmaster General Hitchcock announces that $300,000 of the parcels post appropriation had been set aside for the rental of automobiles and other vehicles to assist city delivery post offices in handling the anticipated parcels post business.

Up to the present time the postmaster general has authorized expenditures to the extent of about $180,000 for the purchase of necessary equipment for the establishment of the new system. In this connection more than 30,000 scales have been bought at a cost of $72,000; the printing of the guide and regulations will cost $43,000; 25,000 special mail sacks will be required at a cost of $23,000; more than $16,000 will have to be spent for 10,000,000 tags that are necessary; the 120,000 special zone maps for the various post offices will cost no less than $13,000; 110,000 tape lines will have been purchased for use in the various post offices to measure the size of the parcels, at a cost of little more than $1,000; 195,000 rubber stamps and other miscellaneous necessities will cost approximately $11,000.

Special Meeting of the Board of Supervisors.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with a request in writing addressed to the undersigned, county clerk of Moultrie county, Illinois, signed by at least one-third of the members of the board of supervisors of said county, I hereby call a special meeting of said board to convene on the 16th day of December, A. D. 1912, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, at the court house in the city of Sullivan, Illinois, for the purpose of receiving officers' reports, passing on reports of committees, auditing claims against the county and for transaction of such business as may come before said meeting. Dated at Sullivan, Ill., this 6th day of December, A. D. 1912. CASH W. GREEN, Adv. County Clerk.

Estate Settled.

W. A. Bence, Mrs. Sarah Sargent, Ora Bence of Windsor, Elmer Bence of Gays, Mesdames Theo. Snyder and Oscar Bence, and other members of the families interested in the estate of James Q. Bence, deceased, were in Sullivan Monday making a final settlement of the property.

The farm of 120 acres was sold at auction, Monday December 2. Theodore Snyder of Allenville bid the farm in at $160. per acre after which was then taken by some of the heirs.

Splendid Entertainment

Sullivan people were given a splendid entertainment, Monday night December 2 by a home talent company under the direction of Miss Marshall. The play was "The Matrimonial Engagement." The play was a good one, and Miss Marshall has the knack of selecting persons suited to the character she wants impersonated, and most of the players performed their parts with an ease and naturalness that would have been a credit to players that had rehearsed before professional critics.

OBITUARIES

HARLIE H. COPLIN.
Harlie Harry Coplin was born near Sullivan, September 15, 1894. He died December 6, 1912 near Leadville, Colorado. Age 18 years, 2 months and 21 days.

Harlie was apparently in good health; at the time of his death he was on a train going to California. His lifeless form was noticed near Leadville, Colorado. It is the supposition that his death was caused by the difficulty in breathing resulting from the high altitude in that latitude.

He was the son of Joshua Coplin and wife who lived northwest of Sullivan, until a few years ago when they moved to Colorado, hoping a change of climate would benefit their children, as several of them have died of consumption.

The parents arrived in Sullivan with the remains Tuesday noon, which were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Frantz. This is the second time that Mr. Frantz's home has received a deceased member of Mr. and Mrs. Coplin's family in the last few months. A little over a year ago the remains of their daughter Sylvia, the wife of Roy Fleming was brought here and taken to the home of Mr. Frantz a life time friend and neighbor of the Coplins.

The funeral discourse was preached at the M. E. Church Wednesday at 10 a. m. by Rev. A. L. Caseley and the remains laid to rest in the family lot in Greenhill cemetery.

MRS. WM. H. YARNELL

Maud Hull was born December 8, 1880. She married Wm. H. Yarnell in February 1898.

Mrs. Yarnell died very unexpectedly Friday morning of last week at her home near Kirksville at the age of 31 years, 11 months and 27 days.

She spent most of her life in Moultrie county. Her parents moved to this vicinity from near Lovington several years ago.

She is survived by her husband, four small children, one a babe less than a year old. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Hull, two sisters and many other relatives and friends to mourn her loss.

The funeral was held in the Oak Grove church near Dunn, Sunday at 2:30 p. m. by Reverend Webb and Johns. It was the largest funeral held in this community for a number of years.

She was a kind and loving wife and mother a good neighbor and a friend to all. The floral offerings were many and beautiful.

The interment was in Dunn cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS.

We take this method of thanking our many friends for the assistance and sympathy extended to us at the time of our sad bereavement caused by the loss of a dear wife, daughter and sister.

W. H. YARNELL,
F. M. HULL and family.

Roy Hicks

As Roy Hicks and Guy Taylor were returning from school Tuesday, they were running at their topmost speed on the walk from the north side school building, when in front of Dr. Williamson's office Roy Hicks ran under a hitch rack in front of his office, raising his head too soon he struck the back of his head on the rack, which caused him to fall violently on the concrete curbing. Dr. Williamson went to the child, carried him into his office and administered to him, later he wrapped him up and took him to his grandfather's, Levi Hicks where he made his home. Dr. Lawson was called after he was taken home. He was up and about the house on Wednesday. He died about 9 o'clock the same night. The verdict of the inquest was concussion of the brain resulting from the injuries.

The boy was about 11 years of age and a son of Steen Hicks. His mother died several years ago.

The funeral was preached at the Christian church Friday at 10 a. m. by Rev. Hopper and the interment made in the Green hill cemetery.

Mrs. Robert Moore died in the Masonic Home Saturday night. The remains accompanied by her husband and sister, Mrs. Gertrude Smith of Chicago, were taken to Erie, Pa., for burial.

ACT QUICKLY.

Delay Has Been Dangerous in Sullivan.

Do the right thing at the right time Act quickly in time of danger. Backache is kidney danger. Doan's Kidney Pills act quickly. Plenty of evidence to prove this. Edward Guoker, 619 S. Fourteenth St. Mattoon, Ill., says: "I can still recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and say that my Kidneys began to fail to do their work from that time on, my condition gradually grew worse. The pains seated themselves in the small of my back and at times I could hardly endure the misery. The Kidney secretions were unnatural and the passages were much too frequent. As time passed my condition grew worse. My appetite failed, I lost flesh and had a sallow complexion. The physicians' treatment did not help me and I was a physical wreck. The doctors thought I could live but a short time and I held the same opinion myself. When I learned about Doan's Kidney Pills however, I procured a supply and their use made a marked improvement from the first. I regained my weight and all the pains and other difficulties disappeared. I was so pleased with the benefit I received that I gave a public statement telling of my experience and many people who have seen it, have questioned me about this remedy. I have always told them that Doan's Kidney Pills can be relied upon to bring relief from kidney complaint if taken as directed." (Statement given Mar. 2, 1909.)

On January 25, 1910 Mr. Guoker was interviewed he said: "I would not be without a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills on hand. They are a wonderful kidney medicine and will always have my endorsement."

Public notice is hereby given that the undersigned, executor of the last will and testament of Mary J. Erwin, deceased, in compliance with the said last will and testament, will on Saturday, December 28th, 1912, at the hour of 2 o'clock, p. m. of said day, at the late residence of Mary J. Erwin, deceased, offer for sale at public auction the following described real estate:

Eighty acres, located as follows: The west half (1/2) of the southwest quarter (1/4) of the southwest quarter (1/4) of section thirty-six (36); the south half (1/2) of the northeast quarter (1/4) of the southeast quarter (1/4) of section thirty-five (35); and the southeast quarter (1/4) of the southeast quarter (1/4) of section thirty-five (35), all in township thirteen (13) north, range five (5) east of the third P. M., Moultrie county, Illinois, upon the following terms of sale:

Ten per cent of the purchase price to be paid in cash on the day of sale, the balance of the purchase money to be paid in cash on March 1, 1913. Possession of premises will be given March 1, 1913, and deed will be executed on that date. Abstracts of title for the said real estate may be seen and examined at the office of the Moultrie County Abstract Co., Sullivan, Illinois.

The farm described above lies about one-half mile west of Bruce, six miles north of Windsor and six miles south of Sullivan, Illinois. It is fairly well improved and located near a good grain and stock market.

"Our Personal Guarantee to all Skin Sufferers"

SAM B. HALL

We have been in business in this town for some time, and we are looking to build up trade by always advising our patrons right.

So when we tell you that we have found the eczema remedy and that we stand back of it with the manufacturer's iron clad guarantee, backed by ourselves you can depend upon it that we give our advice not in order to sell a few bottles of medicine to skin sufferers, but because we know how it will help our business if we help our patrons.

We keep in stock and sell all the well known skin remedies. But we will say this: If you are suffering from any kind of skin trouble, eczema, psoriasis, wash or better, we want you to try a full size bottle of D. D. D. Prescription. And, if it does not do the work, this bottle will cost you nothing. You alone to judge.

Again and again we have seen how a few drops of this simple wash applied to the skin takes away the itch, instantly. And the cures all seem to be permanent.

D. D. D. Prescription made by the D. D. D. Laboratories of Chicago, is composed of thymol, glycerine, oil of wintergreen and other healing, soothing, cooling ingredients. And if you are just crazy with itch, you will feel soothed and cooled, the itch absolutely washed away the moment you applied this D. D. D.

We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommending this remedy to a skin sufferer here and there and we want you to try it now on our positive no-pay guarantee.

Prevention of Mildew.

Nothing should be stored in a damp condition on account of mildew, which is a vegetable growth, being a kind of fungus, which quickly spreads, and is very difficult to remove. To remove it from flannel ether is best to use. For mildew on cotton material, damp the part, rub soap thickly on, cover with powdered French chalk and put in the sunshine, and keep repeating the process until the spots disappear.

Wiping Out Grease Stains.

For grease stains on fast colors, benzine can be used. For dry paint stains, rub with equal parts of turpentine and alcohol.

Best Exercise.

The best kind of exercise is the kind that makes you forget you are exercising—in other words, play, says a physician. It's a good scheme to have some more or less strenuous game for a hobby—golf or bowling or tennis or archery—anything that appeals to you and affords exercise with interest. But this is not saying that systematic exercise is not a good thing, too.

SYNOPSIS.

Old Mattland, a frank, free and unspiced young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Mattland, falls in love with her. Her persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east to business without a definite answer. She hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms Enid into a raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into a cave where she is rescued by a mountaineer. She has a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks, Mattland and Old Kirby go in search of the girl.

CHAPTER VIII. (Continued.)

Ever as they went they called and called. The broken obstructions of the way made their progress slow. What they would have passed over ordinarily in half a day, they had not traversed by nightfall and they had seen nothing. They camped that night far down the canon and in the morning, with hearts growing heavier every hour, they resumed their search. About noon of the second day they came to an immense log jam where the stream now broadened and made a sudden turn before it plunged over a fall of perhaps two hundred feet into the lake. It was the end of their quest. If they did not find her there, they would never do so. With still hearts and bated breath they climbed over the log jam and scrutinized it. A brownish gray patch concealed beneath the great pines caught their eyes. They made their way to it.

"It's a bar, a big Grizzly," exclaimed Kirby. The huge brute was battered out of all semblance of life, but that it was a Grizzly Bear was clearly evident. Further on the two men caught sight suddenly of a dash of blue. Kirby stepped over to it, lifted it in his hand and silently extended it to Mattland. It was a sweater, a woman's sweater. They recognized it at once. The old man shook his head. Mattland groaned aloud.

"See here," said Kirby, pointing to the ragged and torn garment where "We must come back with dynamite to break up this jam and—"

"Yes," nodded the old man, "we'll do all that, of course, but now, after we search this jam o' logs I guess there's nothin' to do but go back, an' the quicker we get back to the settlement, the quicker we can get back here. I think we can strike across the mountains an' save a day an' a half; there's no need of us goin' back up the canon now, I take it."

"No," answered the other, "the quicker the better, as you say, and we can head off George and the others that way."

They searched the pile eagerly, prying under it, peering into it, upsetting it, so far as they could with their naked hands, but with little result, for they found nothing else. They had to camp another day, and next morning they hurried straight over the mountains, reaching the settlement almost as soon as the others. Mattland with furious energy at once organized a relief party. They hurried back to the logs, tore the jam to pieces, searched it carefully and found nothing. To drag the lake was impossible. It was hundreds of feet deep and while they worked it froze. The weather had changed some days before, heavy snows had already fallen; they had to get out of the mountains without further delay or else be frozen up to die. Then and not till then did Mattland give up hope. He had refrained from writing to Philadelphia, but when he reached a telegraph line some ten days after the cloudburst, he sent a long message east, breaking to his brother the awful tidings.

And in all that they did he and Kirby, two of the shrewdest and most experienced of men, showed with singular exactitude how easy it is for the wisest and most capable of men to make mistakes, to leave the plain trail, to fail to deduce the truth from the facts presented. Yet it is difficult to point to a fault in their reasoning, or to find anything left undone in the search!

Enid had started down the canon; near the end of it they had discovered one of her garments which they could not conceive any reason for her taking off. It was near the battered body of one of the biggest Grizzlies that either man had ever seen, it had evidence of blood stains upon it; still, breakfast when the card of Mr. James Armstrong of Colorado was handed to him.

"This, I suppose," he thought testily, "is one of the receipts of Enid's wanderings into that God-forsaken land. Did you ask the man his business, James?" he said aloud to the footman.

"Yes, sir. He said he wanted to see you on important business, and when I made bold to ask him what business, he said it was none of mine, and for me to take the message to you, sir."

"Impudent," growled Mr. Mattland. "Yes, sir, but he is the kind of a gentleman you don't talk back to, sir."

"Well, you go back and tell him that you have given me his card, and I should like to know what he wishes to see me about, that I am very busy this morning and unless it is a matter of importance—you understand?"

"Yes, sir." "I suppose now I shall have the whole west unloaded upon me; every vagabond friend of Robert's and people who meet Enid," he thought, but his reveries were shortly interrupted by the return of the man.

"If you please, sir," began James hesitatingly, as he re-entered the room, "he says his business is about the young lady, sir."

"Confound his impudence!" exclaimed Mr. Mattland, more and more annoyed at what he was pleased to characterize mentally as western assurance. "Where is he?"

"In the hall, sir."

"Show him into the library and say I shall be down in a moment."

"Very good, sir." It was a decidedly wrathful individual who confronted Stephen Mattland a few moments afterward in the library, for Armstrong was not accustomed to such cavalier treatment, and had Mattland been other than Enid's father he would have given more outward expression to his indignation over the discourtesy in his reception.

"Mr. James Armstrong, I believe," began Mr. Mattland, looking at the card in his hand.

"Yes, sir."

"Er—from Colorado?"

"And proud of it."

"Ah, I dare say. I believe you wished to see me about—"

"Your daughter, sir."

"And in what way are you concerned about her, sir?"

"I wish to make her my wife."

"Great God!" exclaimed the older man in a voice equally divided between horror and astonishment. "How dare you, sir? You amaze me beyond measure with your infernal impudence."

"Excuse me, Mr. Mattland," interposed Armstrong quickly and with great spirit and determination, "but where I come from we don't allow anybody to talk to us in this way. You are Enid's father and a much older man than I, but I can't permit you to—"

"Sir," said astounded Mattland, drawing himself up at this bold flouting, "you may be a very worthy young man, I have no doubt of it, but it is out of the question. My daughter—"

Again a less excited hearer might have noticed the emphasis in the pronoun—

"Why, she is half-way engaged to me now," interrupted the younger man with a certain contemptuous amusement in his voice. "Look here, Mr. Mattland, I've knocked around this world a good deal. I know what's what. I know all about you eastern people and I don't fancy you any more than you fancy us. Miss Enid is quite unspiced yet and that is why I want her. I'm well able to take care of her, too; I don't know what you're got or how you got it, but I can come near laying down dollar for dollar with you, and mine's all clean money—mines, cattle, lumber—and it's all good money. I made it myself. I left her two weeks ago with her promise that she would think very seriously of my suit. After I came back to Denver—I was called east—I made up my mind that I'd come here when I'd finished my business and have it out with you. Now you can treat me like a dog if you want to, but if you expect to keep peace in the family you'd better not, for I tell you plainly, whether you give your consent or not, I mean to win her. All I want is her consent, and I've pretty nearly got that."

Mr. Stephen Mattland was black with anger at this clear, unequivocal, determined statement of the case from Armstrong's point of view.

"I would rather see her dead," he exclaimed with angry stubbornness, "than married to a man like you. How dare you force yourself into my house and insult me in this way? Were I not an old man I would show you, I would give you a taste of your own manner."

The old man's white mustache fairly quivered with what he believed to be righteous indignation. He stepped over to the other and looked hard at him, his eyes blazing, his ruddy cheeks redder than ever. The two men confronted each other unflinchingly for a moment, then Mr. Mattland touched a bell button in the wall by his side. Instantly the footman made his appearance.

"James," said the old man, his voice shaking and his knees trembling with passion, which he did not quite succeed in controlling, despite a desperate effort. "Show this—er—gentleman the door. Good morning, sir; our first and last interview is over."

He bowed with ceremonious politeness as he spoke, becoming more and more composed as he felt himself mastering the situation. And Armstrong, to do him justice, knew a gentleman when he saw him, and secretly admired the older man and began to feel a touch of shame at his own rude way of putting things.

"Beg pardon, sir," said the footman, breaking the awkward silence, "but here is a telegram that has just come, sir."

There was nothing for Armstrong to do or say. Indeed, having expressed himself so unrestrainedly to his rapidly-increasing regret, as the old man took the telegram he turned away in considerable discomfiture, James bowing before him at the door opening into the hall and following him as he slowly passed out. Mr. Stephen Mattland mechanically and with great deliberation and with no premonition of evil tidings, tore open the yellow envelope and glanced at the dispatch.

Neither the visitor nor the footman had got out of sight or hearing when they heard the old man groan and fall back helplessly into a chair. Both men turned and ran back to the door; for there was that in the exclamation which gave rise to instant apprehension. Stephen Mattland now, as white as death, sat collapsed in the chair gasping for breath, his hand on his heart; the telegram lay open on the floor. Armstrong recognized the seriousness of the situation, and in three steps was by the other's side.

"What is it?" he asked eagerly, his hatred and resentment vanishing at the sight of the old man's ghastly, stricken countenance.

"Enid!" gasped her father. "I said I would rather see her—dead, but—it is not true—"

James Armstrong was a man of prompt decision, without a moment's hesitation he picked up the telegram; it was full of explicity, thus it read:

"We were encamped last week in the mountains. Enid went down the canon for a day's fishing alone. A sudden cloudburst filled the canon, washed away the camp. Enid undoubtedly got caught in the torrent and was drowned. We have found some of her clothing, but not her body. Have searched every foot of the canon. Think body has got into the lake, now frozen, snow falling, mountains impassable; will search for her in the spring when the winter breaks. I am following this telegram in person by the first train. Would rather have died a thousand deaths than had this happen. God help us."

"ROBERT MATTLAND."

Armstrong read it, stared at it a moment, frowning heavily, passed it over to the footman and turned to the stricken father.

"Old man, I loved her," he said, simply. "I love her still; I believe that she loves me. They haven't found her body, clothes mean nothing. I'll find her, I'll search the mountains until I do. Don't give way; something tells me that she's alive, and I'll find her."

"If you do," said the broken old man, crushed by the swift and awful response to his thoughtless exclamation, "and she loves you, you shall have her for your wife."

"It doesn't need that to make me find her," answered Armstrong grimly, "she is a woman, lost in the mountains in the winter, alone. They shouldn't have given up the search. I'll find her as there is a God above me whether she's for me or not."

A good deal of a man, this James Armstrong of Colorado, in spite of many things in his past of which he thought so little that he lacked the grace to be ashamed of them. Stephen Mattland looked at him with a certain respect and a growing hope, as he stood there in the library, stern, resolute, strong.

Perhaps—

CHAPTER IX.

"Over the Hills and Far Away." Recognition—or some other more potent instantaneous force—brought the woman to a sitting position. The man drew back to give her freedom of action, as she lifted herself on her hands. It was moments before complete consciousness of her situation came to her. The surprise was yet too great. She saw things dimly through a whirl of driving rain, of a rushing mighty wind, of a seething sea of water, but presently it was all plain to her again. She had caught no fair view of the man who had shot the bear as he splashed through the creek and tramped across the rocks and trees down the canon, at least she had not seen him full face, but she recognized him immediately. The thought tinged with color for a moment her pallid cheek.

"I fell into the torrent," she said feebly, putting her hand to her head and striving by speech to put aside that awful remembrance.

"You didn't fall in," was the answer, "it was a cloudburst, you were caught in it."

"I didn't know."

"Of course not, how should you?"

"And how came I here?"

had not weakened. Now his coming desire was to get this woman whom fortune—er—er—had thrown upon his hands to his home without delay. There was nothing he could do for her out there in the rain. Every drop of whiskey was gone, they were just two half-drowned, shivering bits of humanity cast up on that rocky shore, and one was a helpless woman.

"Do you know where your camp is?" he asked at last.

He did not wish to take her to her own camp, he had a strange instinct of possession in her. In some way he felt he had obtained a right to deal

"What is it?" He Asked Eagerly.

"I was lucky enough to pull you out."

"Did you jump into the flood for me?"

The man nodded.

"That's twice you have saved my life this day," said the girl, forcing herself, womanlike, to the topic that she hated.

"It's nothing," deprecated the other.

"It may be nothing to you, but it is a great deal to me," was the answer. "And now what is to be done?"

"We must get out of here at once," said the man. "You need shelter, food, a fire. Can you walk?"

"I don't know."

"Let me help you." He rose to his feet, reached down to her, took her hands in the strong grasp of his own and raised her lightly to her feet in an effortless way which showed his great strength. She did not more than put the weight of her body slightly on her left foot when a spasm of pain shot through her, she swayed and would have fallen had he not caught her. He sat her gently on the rock.

"My foot," she said piteously. "I don't know what's the matter with it."

Her high boots were tightly laced, of course, but he could see that her left foot had been badly mauled or sprained; already the slender ankle was swelling visibly. He examined it swiftly a moment. It might be a sprain, it might be the result of some violent thrust against the rocks, some whirling tree trunks might have caught and crushed her foot, but there was no good in speculating as to causes, the present patent fact was that she could not walk; all the rest was at that moment unimportant. This unfortunate accident made him the more anxious to get her to a place of shelter without delay. It would be necessary to take off her boot and give the wounded member proper treatment. For the present the tight shoe acted as a bandage, which was well.

When the man had withdrawn himself from the world, he had inwardly resolved that no human being should ever invade his domain or share his solitude, and during his long sojourn in the wilderness his determination with her as he would, he had saved her life twice, once by chance, the other as the result of deliberate and heroic endeavor, and yet his honor and his manhood obliged him to offer to take her to her own people if he could. Hence the question, the answer to which he waited so eagerly.

"It's down the canon. I am one of Mr. Robert Mattland's party."

The man nodded, he didn't know Robert Mattland from Adam, and he cared nothing about him.

"How far down?" he asked.

"I don't know, how far is it from here to where you—where—where—"

"About a mile," he replied, quickly fully understanding her reason for faltering.

"Then I think I must have come at least five miles from the camp this morning."

"It will be four miles away, then," said the man.

The girl nodded.

"I couldn't carry you that far," he murmured half to himself; "I question if there is any camp left there anyway. Where was it, down by the water's edge?"

"Yes."

"Every vestige will have been swept away by that, look at it," he pointed over to the lake.

"What must we do?" she asked instantly, depending upon his greater strength, his larger experience, his masculine force.

"I shall have to take you to my camp."

"Is it far?"

"About a mile or a mile and a half from here."

"I can't walk that far."

"No, I suppose not. You wouldn't be willing to stay here while I went down and hunted for your camp?"

The girl clutched at him.

"I couldn't be left here for a moment alone," she said in sudden fever of alarm. "I never was afraid before, but now—"

"All right," he said, gently, "attending her as he would a child. 'We'll go up to my camp and then I will try to find your people and—'"

"But I tell you I can't walk."

"You don't have to walk," said the man.

evidences of discoloration still remained, "looks like there'd bin blood on it."

"Great God!" cried Mattland, "not that bear; I'd rather anything than that."

"Whatever it is, she's gone," said the old man with solemn finality.

"Her body may be in those logs there—"

"Or in the lake," answered Kirby, gloomily, "but were ever she is we can't sit to her now."

they had found no body, but they were as profoundly sure that the mangled remains of the poor girl lay within the depths of that mountain lake as if they had actually seen her there. The logic was all flawless.

A MESSAGE
To Feeble Old People.
As one grows old the waste of the system becomes more rapid than repair, the organs act more slowly and less effectually than in youth, the circulation is poor, the blood thin and digestion weak.
Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, is the ideal strengthener and body-builder for old folks, for it contains the very elements needed to rebuild wasting tissues and replace weakness with strength. Vinol also fortifies the system against colds and thus prevents pneumonia.
A grandniece of Alexander Hamilton, over eighty years of age, once remarked: "Vinol is a godsend to old people. Thanks to Vinol, I have a hearty appetite, sleep soundly, feel active and well. It is the finest tonic and strength-creator I have ever used."
If Vinol fails to build up the feeble old people, and create strength, we will return your money.

INDIGESTION and DYSPESIA
Cured by the Use of Lesh's Peps-Aid, P-A-D Tablets
Mr. J. T. BURNS.—"New Man after using two tubes."
East Orange, N. J., Feb. 12, 1912.
Lesh Medical Co., Goshen, Ind.
Gentlemen:—For a number of years I could not eat breakfast on account of nausea, and also suffered from indigestion and dyspepsia. My business is that of installing engines in different parts of the U. S. for the Buckeye Engine Co. of Salem, O., and my ailment made my work a very hard task. While installing an engine for the Goshen Rubber Co., at Goshen, Ind., I heard of the LESH MEDICAL CO.'S REMEDY, PEPS-AID. After using two tubes I could eat three good meals a day without any distress afterwards and have been like a new man ever since.
Respectfully yours, J. T. BURNS.
LESH'S PEPS-AID—(P-A-D Tablets) positively relieves all forms of stomach trouble, including Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Gastritis, etc.
