Municipal Light Plant.
The election Tuesday, the first under the initiative provision of the commission form of government, since that form has been adopted, brought out the largest woman's vote on record in Springfield.
The proposition submitted was whether the city should combine its water works and lighting plant at the Sangamon river, and enter the commercial field for lighting in competition with Springfield Utilities Co.
It carried by a vote of 5,908 to 5,240.
Of this vote the women contributed 2,965. Most of the women had to be sworn in because there was no registration for the election.
Because of the heavy women's vote,
election clerks ran out of affidavit blanks in many precincts.

election expense bills returned to him

Boys Corn Club.

On the morning of February 4, sixteen boys, representing the second and third prize winners in the Mc-Kinley Boys' Corn Club contest in the Nineteenth congressional district, will leave Decatur and Champaign as the guests of Hon. W. B. McKinley, president of the Illinois Traction System, on a trip to Springfield and St.
Louis.

These boys have been declared by the United States Department of Agriculture to be entitled to second and third place in the corn growing contests in their respective counties, and as a reward Mr. McKinley is giving them an instructive trip to the state capital and the Missouri metropolis. The first prize winners were recently taken on a ten days' trip to Washington D. C., at the expense of and as the guests of Mr. McKinley.

The second and third prize winners will leave Champaign, Ill., on the morning of February 4, aboard Mr.
McKinley's private car "Champaign" which will proceed to Decatur over the Illinois Traction System, where some of the prize winners will be picked up. Arriving at Springfield the boys will be given an automobile ride over the city, and will visit the state capital building, state arsenal, Lincoln's monument, Lincoln's home and other points of interest. It is probable that Governor Dunne will address them when they visit the executive building.

The party will leave Springfield at 10:00 p. m., for St. Louis, arriving there early in the evening. A matinee was visited at the Hippodrome, and dinner will be taken at the Missouri Athletic Club, which will be followed by a theatre party. The following morning will be spent in sightseeing, an automobile trip being planned to the old World's Fair grounds; Eads bridge, Shaw's garden, wholesale and retail districts, Union station and other points of interest.
The return trip will be started over the Illinois Traction System at 1:00
p. m., and the boys will arrive at their homes that evening.

Throughout the trip the boys will be in charge of a representative of Mr. McKinley, and every effort will be made to give them a pleasant and instructive journey. The eight counties represented are those of Champaign, Coles, DeWitt, Douglas, Piatt, Moultrie, Macon and Shelby, and the entire trip will be made via Illinois Traction System.

World's Largest Armory.

The biggest armory building in the world—Chicagoans gasp when you tell them the Coliseum would be lost in its single drill room—being built by the University of Illinois, today stands nearly completed. Its cost is above $250,000, and it will accommodate more than 2,000 cadets in maneuvers.

The structure is unique in other respects than its size. It has no four walls. The roof extends four feet into the ground and rests on concrete and steel bases. The building is a giant half-cylinder. The whole framework consists of forty steel arches, placed ten feet apart, each 100 feet high in the center and spanning 200 feet of ground. This building is 200 feet by 400 feet and has a floor space of 80,000 square feet without an obstructing interior pillar. This is to be supplemented by officers' and equipment rooms at the sides.

That the building has not been planned on too large a scale is shown by the fact that the university squad already consists of 1,700 cadets.

The immense armory has attracted much attention from other universities. The Minnesota and Ohio state universities have sent delegations to inspect it, and others have sent inquiries about its plans. It is reported that the Seventh regiment of New York City will have a larger armory, plans for which have not yet been drawn.

Illinois Federation of Clubs.

The executive committee of the Illinois Federation of Commercial Clubs at its meeting in Springfield, Monday, adopted resolutions favoring a convention to revise the constitution of the state and the enactment of a law permitting counties to collect revenue to build hard roads. Plans were laid for a mass meeting of representatives of every commercial association in the state in February or March.

OBITUARY

JOHN W. SCOTT.
John W. Scott was born in Whitley township, near the present site of Bruce, July 19, 1845. He was the oldest son of Samuel and Sarah Scott, both deceased.

His wife's maiden name was Lavinia
Lewis, a sister to G. N. Lewis, of Sullivan. They were the parents of four children. Harvey, living in Cincinnati; Walter, in Terre Haute; Samuel, near Charleston and Miss Lota Rhue, of Mattoon. The wife and four children, a sister, Miss Sadie Scott, and a brother, T. H. Scott, of Sullivan, survive him.

Mr. Scott and family have lived in Mattoon a number of years. He has been an invalid for over a year; his ailment was asthma and heart trouble.
He took suddenly worse Wednesday and died Friday.

The funeral was preached Sunday at 11 a. m. by Rev. Hubert, of the Mission church. The remains were laid to rest in Dodge Grove cemetery.
The funeral was under the auspices of the carpenters' union.

Keeping Meat in Pickle.

There is no place where meat can be kept better and more safely than in a strong brine in a cool cellar.
The general practice for farmers has been to cure a lot of meat, smoke it all at one time and then try to save it in some way. Leave it where it is salty, i. e. in good pickle. It will not get any more salty. It will absorb only a given quantity, that is all.
From time to time such cured meats as are desired can be freshened by soaking in water, then let drip until thoroughly dry and smoked. In this way meat can be smoked to suit and yet be mellow and free from insects.

What Women Cannot Do.

Some men seem to think women can do everything, at least that is so when it comes to work. But when it comes to voting it's different.
Women can only vote for candidates running for places or offices not created or named by the state constitution. Here is a list of offices that women cannot vote for:

For United States Senator, Congressmen, state officers, state senator and representatives to the Legislature, city judge, county, circuit and supreme judges, circuit clerk, county clerk, states attorney, coroner, superintendent of schools, sheriff,
county treasurer, justice of the peace,
police masstrates and constable.

Birthday Surprise.

A very agreeable surprise was arranged and carried out Monday evening by Mrs. H. M. Butler in honor of the forty-third birthday of her husband, Dr. H. M. Butler.

Mrs Butler invited a number of his gentlemen friends to a six o'clock dinner. When the doctor arrived home the lights were out. After he entered the room and turned on the lights he was very much surprised to find the company assembled.

After the serving of a bountiful dinner, the remainder of the evening was spent in games. The guests presented Mr. Butler an appropriate gift.

Epworth League.

A social meeting of the Epworth League was held in the Methodist church Tuesday evening with about fifty in attendance. The following officers for the ensuing year were elected:

President, Anna McCarthy; first vice-president, Fern Moore; second vice-president, Eva Shields; third vice-president, Merle Myers; fourth vice-president, Mrs. Harry Barber; secretary, Alberta Hughes; treasurer, Zella Moore; organist, Fern Woodruff; assistant organist, Helen David.
After the election of officers and disposal of other business, refreshments were served and those present enjoyed a pleasant social hour.

To Revolutionize Alaska.

Said a pioneer Alaskan the other day: Wouldn't Americans rise up en masse if they were compelled to ride from New York to Chicago behind dog teams, or tramp from Chicago to the Pacific, instead of riding in palatial Pullmans? Wouldn't the country's commerce lag considerably if freight had to be lashed on sleds drawn by dogs, deer, or horses or carried on the backs of brawny men instead of going by steam and trolley? In other words, if the people of the United States had to depend on prairie schooners or dugout canoes there would be a kick that would make the impression from a mule's hoof seem insignificant. Alaskan have been forced to submit to these mediaeval methods for years. That's why we are raising a howl and a hurrah for something better. We have the time and means to uplift downtrodden people the world over, and to give them industrial and economic necessities they do not always appreciate, while our own kith and kin are forced to cling to things belonging to remote ages. Alaska has been denied railroads—why, is a long, sordid story—but the persistence of Alaskan and a comprehensive administration are going to change things.

In short, every Alaskan has a just cause for complaint, says Robert G.
Skerrett in February Technical World Magazine. What farmer would not have a grievance with all means of transportation suddenly cut off between his farm and the market. Can fairly it would take some time to market a crop of wheat in a toy empress wagon following behind old Nero, the family pet, and our own
West of today would surely be a long way from what it is if the early pioneers had been compelled to carry their goods on their backs.

izes us to announce his candidacy for the nomination for highway commissioner, subject to the democratic primary. Mr. Bolin is an energetic, enterprising farmer. He is a man of

In a decision handed down by Associate Justice Van De Vanter, the supreme court holds that the 1,500 acres of unsurveyed land in Polkett county, Ark., popularly known as the "sunk lands," are the property of the United States.

John C. Clark, Jr., 13 years old, at Nachitoches, La., shot and killed his father when the latter threatened the nine members of his family with a pistol, according to testimony at the coroner's inquest. The boy was not arrested.

Former Senator Lyman R. Cessy of Jamestown, N. D., died at his home in Washington of heart disease. He served from 1889 to 1893. He was 77 years old.

President Wilson is seriously considering an invitation to speak before the Union League club of Chicago on Washington's birthday.

Three men were drowned, a boy was reported to have lost his life, many people were driven from their homes, buildings were damaged and steam and electric railway traffic tied up or seriously interrupted in southern California as the result of the rain which deluged that section.

George E. Roberts, director of the mint, has virtually been decided upon by President Wilson as a member of the federal reserve board, which will have charge of the administration of the new currency system.

Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, and the six other union leaders under indictment for conspiracy will return voluntarily to Houghton, Mich., and stand trial with the 31 strikers who were indicted with them.

With the assistance of two reluctant but badly scared porters, a bandit held up four passengers in the rear sleeper of the Michigan Central passenger train near Jackson, Mich. The robbers secured $200 and escaped.

FRAME FOUR BILLS TO CURB "TRUSTS"

MEASURE APPROVED BY WILSON HAS NO ESCAPE LOOP-HOLES.

TO BECOME LAWS VERY SOON

Penalty for Restraint of Commerce, Unfair Business and Interlocking Directorates — Ample Provisions Made for Trade Commission.

Washington, Jan. 23.—The administration's trust bills, embodying the program laid down by the president in his recent message, have been presented to congress.

The bills have received the approval of Mr. Wilson and the Democratic leaders of both houses of congress. With little modification they will be enacted into law. Their purposes are:

1. Definition of unlawful monopoly or restraints of trade.
2. Prohibition of unfair trade practice.
3. Creation of an interstate trade commission.
4. Regulation of corporation directorates and prohibition of interlocking directorates.

Unlawful Monopoly Defined.

Unlawful monopoly is defined as any combination or agreement between corporations, firms, or persons designed for the following purposes:

1. To create or carry out restrictions in trade or to acquire a monopoly in any interstate trade, business, or commerce.
2. To limit or reduce the production or increase the price of merchandise or of any commodity.
3. To prevent competition in manufacturing, making, transporting, selling, or purchasing of merchandise, produce, or any commodity.
4. To make any agreement, enter into any arrangement, or arrive at any understanding by which they, directly or indirectly, undertake to prevent a free and unrestricted competition among themselves or among any purchasers or consumers in the sale, production, or transportation of any product, article, or commodity.

The penalty for violation of the law is fixed at not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for one year or both.

Guilt is made personal through a section that whenever a corporation shall be guilty of the violation of the law the offense shall be deemed to cover the individual directors, officers, and agents of such corporation, as authorizing, ordering, or doing the prohibited acts, and they shall be punished as prescribed above.

Covers Unfair Trade Practices.

The bill forbidding unfair trade practices declares that to discriminate in price, between different purchasers of commodities, with the purpose or intent to injure or destroy a competitor, either of the purchaser or of the seller, shall be deemed an attempt to monopolize interstate commerce.

It is specifically declared that the law is not intended to prevent discrimination in price between purchasers of commodities "on account of difference in the grade, quality, or quantity of the commodity sold, or that makes only due allowance for difference in the cost of transportation."

Further, it is prescribed that nothing contained in the act shall prevent persons from selecting their own customers, "but this provision shall not authorize the owner or operator of any mine engaged in selling its product in interstate or foreign commerce to refuse arbitrarily to sell the same to a responsible person, firm, or corporation, who applies to purchase."

An attempt at monopoly also is declared to exist for any person to make a sale of goods, wares, or merchandise or fix a price charged therefor, or discount from or rebate upon such price, on the condition or understanding that the purchaser thereof shall not deal in the goods, wares, or merchandise of a competitor or competitors of the seller.

Deals With Damage Suits.

A judgment against any defendant in a suit brought under the anti-trust law the bill provides shall constitute as against such defendant conclusive evidence of the same facts and be conclusive as to the same issues of law in favor of any other party in any other proceeding brought under and involving the provisions of the law.

For the benefit of parties injured in their business or property, by any person or corporation found guilty of violating the law the statute of limitations applicable to such cases shall be suspended.

Injunctive relief is accorded against threatened loss or damage by a violation of the act under the same conditions and principles that injunctive relief against threatened conduct which will cause loss or damage is granted by courts of equity.

It is required that a proper bond shall be executed against damages for an injunction improvidently granted, and it must be shown that the danger of irreparable loss or damage is immediate.

Hits Interlocking Directorates.

Concerning directorates, the bill on that subject, which is to become effective two years from date of approval of the act, provides:

"No person engaged as an individual or as a member of a partnership or as a director or other officer of a corporation in the business of selling railroad cars or locomotives, or railroad rails or structural steel, or mining or selling coal, or conducting a bank or trust company, shall act as a director or other officer or employe of any railroad or other public service corporation which conducts an interstate business.

"No person shall at the same time be a director or other officer or employe in two or more federal reserve banks, national banks, or banking associations, or other banks or trust companies which are members of any reserve bank; and a private banker and a person who is a director in any state bank or trust company not operating under the provisions of the recent currency law shall not be eligible to serve as a director in any bank or banking association or trust company operating under the provisions of the law."

Violation of these sections is made punishable by a fine of $100 a day, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

If any two or more corporations have common director or directors, the fact shall be conclusive evidence that there exists a real competition between such corporation and such elimination of competition shall be construed as a restraint of interstate trade and be treated accordingly.

The trade commission bill provides for commission of five members, with the commissioner of corporations as chairman, and transfers all the existing powers of the bureau of corporations to the commission.

The principal and most important duty the commission besides conducting investigations will be to aid the courts when requested in the formation of decrees of dissolution.

With this in view, the bill empowers the court to refer any part of pending litigation to the commission, including the proposed decree, for information and advice.

Much Criticism for Bills.

The trust bills as framed will be the subject of sharp criticism on the part of progressives of all parties who claim they do not go far enough. It will be declared that the definition of monopoly remains inadequate that the prohibition of unfair trade practice does not cover this evil in our economic life that interlocking stock control is not covered and that the powers of the proposed trade commission are insufficient.

It is interesting to note that the proposal to place the burden of proof upon a combination believed to be violating the law has been omitted. No attempt is made to prevent or destroy monopoly based on patents. The greatest difficulty experienced in the effective enforcement of the law has been found to be in the unwillingness of the courts to impose jail penalty. It remains optional under the proposed measures with the courts to fine or imprison.

Trade Board May Disappoint.

In connection with the trade commission President Wilson declared in his message that the country "demands such a commission only as an indispensable instrument of information and publicity as a clearing house for the facts by which both the public mind and the managers of great business undertakings should be guided."

The bill prescribes that the commission acts are to constitute a "public record" but the body is authorized to make public the information "in such form and to such extent as may be necessary" or "by direction of the attorney general."

It is apparent that the public mind cannot be guided unless it has the facts, and then it will get unless the commission or the attorney general deems it politic.

In other words, public hearings will not be held as they are held by the interstate commerce commission.

Settlement of Differences.

The most important feature of the bill is that which legalizes the policy of the administration of terminating an unlawful condition by agreement between the combination attacked and the attorney general.

This feature is comprehended under a section which requires the commission, upon the request of the attorney general or any corporation affected, to investigate whether a combination is violating the law. In case the commission should find the violation to exist it must report to the attorney general a statement of the objectionable acts and transactions and the readjustments necessary for the offending combination to conform to the law.

These conclusions are to be advisory to the attorney general in terminating by agreement with the corporation affected or by suing the said unlawful conduct or condition.

In other words, whatever may be the agreement made by the attorney general with the combination investigated, it will give the reorganized combination legal standing, so long as it conforms to the term of the agreement.

Thus it is proposed to place by law a tremendous power in the hands of the attorney general. This power has been assumed to attorneys general, and particularly so by Mr. McReynolds.

Will Give Courts Advice.

In a statement accompanying the bill made by Congressman Clayton, chairman of the house judiciary committee, it is said that the "principal and most important duty of the commission, besides conducting investigations, will be to aid the courts, when requested, in the formation of decrees of dissolution."

SLAYER OF THREE ESCAPES IN DARK

ILLINOIS FARMER KILLS TWO MEN AND A BOY IN A FAMILY QUARREL

LURED CONSTABLE TO DEATH

After Murdering Wife's Protector, He Shoots Officer and Son—Child Falls Dead From Bullet When It Follows Parent on Porch.

Jacksonville, Ill.—A family quarrel resulted in a triple murder at Woodson, eight miles south of Jacksonville, when John Henry shot and killed Charles Ezard, Constable Everett Crain and the latter's 4-year-old son. Sheriff Rogers and two deputies went to Woodson a short time after the crime, but Henry has not been captured.

Henry and his wife have been estranged and she went to the residence of Charles Ezard, a quarter of a mile from her home. When Henry had finished his work about 7 o'clock he went to the Ezard residence and made an effort to persuade his wife to return home. She refused, and it is said Ezard took Mrs. Henry's part. An argument ensued and Henry drew a revolver and killed with one shot.

Slays Constable and Son.

Henry then mounted a horse and rode to the residence of Constable Crain, a mile away. He called to Crain to come out of the house, saying that he desired to speak to him. When Crain appeared on the porch, followed by his 4-year-old son, Henry fired two shots at them, and both fell, dying soon afterwards.

Crain was shot in the side. Dr. J. H. Spencer of Murrayville was called, but Crain expired before the physician arrived.

Henry is a cousin of Crain by marriage. His motive for the killing of Crain and his little son is a mystery.

Henry is a son of Charles Henry, a prominent farmer of Woodson, and is 35 years of age. Ezard is survived by a daughter, 12 years old, and a son, 14 years old. All are members of prominent families in their locality.

A report was heard here that Henry had committed suicide.

400,000 Settlers a Year

Immigration figures show that the population of Canada increased during 1913, by the addition of 400,000 new settlers from the United States and Europe. Most of these have gone on farms in provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Lord William Percy, an English Nobleman, says: "The possibilities and opportunities offered by the Canadian West are so infinitely greater than those which exist in England, that it seems absurd to think that people should be impeded from coming to the country where they can most easily and certainly improve their position."

New districts are being opened up, which will make accessible a great number of homesteads in districts especially adapted to mixed farming and grain raising.

PLAN LECTURES ON PURE FOOD

State Body to Obtain Lecturers to Talk on Sanitation.

EXHIBIT IS ALSO ARRANGED

Illinois Commission Believes That Public Should Be Shown the Difference Between Pure and Unwholesome Food.

Springfield.—Believing that the public should be shown the difference between pure food and that which is unwholesome, and thus be led to demand the kind that is safe and dependable, the Illinois food commission has arranged to put a number of lecturers in the field whose business will be to talk foods and sanitation to the people and to the merchants engaged in the handling of food supplies. There will also be a pure food exhibit.

The state food commission takes this occasion to say that it has no quarrel with the merchants, especially with the ones that are engaged in the handling of wholesome products in a sanitary way. On the contrary it believes that better business conditions are to be promoted by the pure food laws, and to this end it invites the co-operation of the trade.

The exhibit consists of foods, good and bad, properly and improperly handled, charts, banners and pictures illustrative of the food industry, and sanitary devices for food shops and the home, etc. The lecture course will cover the common house fly, the necessity for inspection of food industries, food crusades by women's clubs, municipal sanitation, hygiene of the home, children's diseases, health conservation and any other related subjects within the purview of this commission.

It is proposed by the commissioner to take this work into the various communities of the state on the invitation of some club or organization, to establish some place as headquarters and from there to work into the schools and into the community life in general; to be prepared to make a sanitary survey of the community, address women's clubs and other bodies; to urge the passage of model sanitary ordinances where the need of them is apparent; to look always into the character of the milk supply and by co-operation with local organizations to promote the use of pure foods and better sanitation in that vicinity.

Night lectures with stereopticon and motion pictures will be an entertaining and instructive feature of the work. The management will carry complete equipment along this line including many fine slides and films.

SUFFRAGE LAW IS UPHELD

Another Decision for Woman's Vote Is Given by Illinois Court—County Judge Rules Against Saloons.

Chicago.—The new Illinois woman's suffrage law was upheld in the Thebes election contest case by County Judge W. S. Dewey. Judge Dewey found that 192 legal votes were cast against saloons at the election last November and 199 legal votes for saloons, so he dismissed the petition to contest the election. As the decision of the county court is final in these cases, there can be no appeal. The contestants asked 90 days to file a bill of exception, which was granted. Thebes went "dry" in November, with the help of the women's votes, and a petition was brought to contest the election on the ground that the majority of the "legal" votes was for saloons.

Aurora.—Miss Ann Forsyth, a young woman of wealth and social prominence, magazine writer, was appointed policeman by the Aurora board of police and fire commissioners. Whether Aurora's first policeman will be required to wear a uniform was left entirely with Chief of Police Michels and Miss Forsyth to decide. "A policeman is not supposed to arrest, but to assist young people who are in need. That is my ambition. She has the right to arrest, but I do not believe that I will make many arrests in a year." Miss Forsyth, who was at one time a reporter on the Chicago Chronicle, is a daughter of the late A. A. Forsyth, general superintendent of the Burlington railroad shops. She takes up her duties February 1.

Pontiac.—Ex-Judge Fred G. White of this city, who was indicted by the recent grand jury here on the charge of forgery and uttering forgery after he had sold a note to a Fairbury bank, and to which he is alleged to have forged the name of David S. Myers, head banker of the Modern Woodmen of America, was arrested at Spokane, Wash. Sheriff W. A. Patterson left for there with requisition papers to bring White back to this city. White will fight extradition. White left here on Friday of last week, preceding the returning of the indictment against him. He has been for years one of the leading attorneys of this city, and was also prominent for years in Modern Woodmen circles.

Aledo.—Robert Higgins, in jail here charged with the murder of his wife at North Henderson on the morning of January 5, repudiated his signed confession given to State's Attorney John M. Wilson at Alexis, and denied that his love for his stepdaughter, Julia Flake, had caused him to murder his wife. He declared he did not know that the weapon with which his wife was killed was loaded, and he said Julia Flake had not persuaded him to kill her mother because the young girl loved him. He blames the work of a detective and his "nervous condition" for his story of guilty and of his stepdaughter's complicity.

Decatur.—Mont Schultz, a printer, who disappeared from the banks of the Sangamon river near Decatur, October 6, 1906, and was last fall declared legally dead, is said to have admitted his identity in Sharon, Pa. Bloomington.—Thirty farmers, tenants on the estate of Mrs. Matthew T. Scott of Bloomington, have departed for the University of Illinois to take the agricultural course at the expense of Mrs. Scott.

Springfield.—An attempt to rob the Waverly National bank at Waverly, Morgan county, was made but frustrated by City Marshal Rythell. Five robbers seized Rythell as he was making his rounds and told him they would blow his brains out if he made an outcry. They took him to the Peoria & St. Louis yards and locked him in a freight car. Half an hour later he escaped and aroused citizens. It was found the robbers had tried to enter the bank through a window, but evidently had been frightened away when Rythell gave the alarm.

Illinois Art Commission Named. These members of the Illinois art commission were appointed by Governor Dunne: Lorando Tart, Ralph Clarkson and Frederic Clay Bartlett, all of Chicago, succeed themselves; John D. York, Chicago, succeeds W. C. Zimmerman, and Martin Roche of Chicago succeeds William Holabird.

New Express Rates for State. The Illinois public utilities commission entered an order, effective February 1, putting into operation the interstate commerce commission rates on express shipments within state borders. This order substitutes the direct distance system of computing rates for the old mileage system. The order issued by the commission says that it appears to be the consensus of opinion of shippers that the interstate commerce commission's rates are more equitable and just than the present mileage system.

Glass, formerly a Chillicothe (O.) pastor, for alienation of the woman's affections. Hansen holds Glass responsible for Mrs. Hansen's successful suit for divorce last fall.

Champaign.—Because their chaperons and others did not uphold them in their stand against the tango. University of Illinois sorority girls removed their ban on the new steps. Hereafter they will be danced at all social affairs except those in University building. "We didn't believe in the rule anyway," the girls said. "We just wanted to be nice to the faculty."

Chester.—The body of an unidentified man about thirty-five years old was found in a small shack on a farm two miles south of Chester. Death evidently resulted from natural causes. It is thought he came here a few months ago from St. Louis, but he never revealed his identity. His left eye and the upper part of his left ear were gone. In his clothing was $23.09.

Pana.—Mrs. Lydia Read, ninety years old, the oldest woman resident of Pana, and member of a pioneer family of Illinois, was found dead in her bed by her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Babcock, when she went to call Mrs. Read for the morning meal. Mrs. Read had retired in apparent good health. The coroner's verdict was death from natural causes. Three daughters survive Mrs. Read.

Bloomington.—George B. Edwards, seventy-two years old, and Mrs. Cornelia Moore, seventy, eloped to Geneva and were married. They did not reveal their children or friends. Mrs. Moore was planning her annual winter trip to Daytona, Fla. "I hate to make this trip alone," she remarked to Edwards. "What do you say to going together?" suggested the old man. "I don't mind," responded Mrs. Moore.

Springfield.—After a hearing Governor Dunne honored a requisition for the return of Hillis Hubbard and W. C. Hubbard, father and son, from Harrisburg, to Jackson county, Arkansas, to face trial on an old arson charge. The Hubbards, who, for several years, have been practicing attorneys in Harrisburg, have been under indictment for a number of years. Hillis is charged with arson, in connection with the burning of a dwelling-house, and W. C. Hubbard is under indictment as an accessory before the fact.

Herrin.—Scarlet fever and diphtheria are raging in Herrin and the board of education ordered the North Side ward school closed. There is a likelihood of the other schools being closed and also the picture shows. Many deaths have resulted from fever and measles.

Champaign.—The body of Walter Clement Powell of Chicago, a freshman in the University of Illinois, was taken to Rockford for burial by members of the cadet regiment. He was a son of Mrs. Mae Breasted Pada of Chicago and a nephew of Prof. J. H. Breasted of the University of Chicago.

SUFFRAGE LAW IS UPHELD

Another Decision for Woman's Vote Is Given by Illinois Court—County Judge Rules Against Saloons.

Chicago.—The new Illinois woman's suffrage law was upheld in the Thebes election contest case by County Judge W. S. Dewey. Judge Dewey found that 192 legal votes were cast against saloons at the election last November and 199 legal votes for saloons, so he dismissed the petition to contest the election. As the decision of the county court is final in these cases, there can be no appeal. The contestants asked 90 days to file a bill of exception, which was granted. Thebes went "dry" in November, with the help of the women's votes, and a petition was brought to contest the election on the ground that the majority of the "legal" votes was for saloons.

Aurora.—Miss Ann Forsyth, a young woman of wealth and social prominence, magazine writer, was appointed policeman by the Aurora board of police and fire commissioners. Whether Aurora's first policeman will be required to wear a uniform was left entirely with Chief of Police Michels and Miss Forsyth to decide. "A policeman is not supposed to arrest, but to assist young people who are in need. That is my ambition. She has the right to arrest, but I do not believe that I will make many arrests in a year." Miss Forsyth, who was at one time a reporter on the Chicago Chronicle, is a daughter of the late A. A. Forsyth, general superintendent of the Burlington railroad shops. She takes up her duties February 1.

Pontiac.—Ex-Judge Fred G. White of this city, who was indicted by the recent grand jury here on the charge of forgery and uttering forgery after he had sold a note to a Fairbury bank, and to which he is alleged to have forged the name of David S. Myers, head banker of the Modern Woodmen of America, was arrested at Spokane, Wash. Sheriff W. A. Patterson left for there with requisition papers to bring White back to this city. White will fight extradition. White left here on Friday of last week, preceding the returning of the indictment against him. He has been for years one of the leading attorneys of this city, and was also prominent for years in Modern Woodmen circles.

Aledo.—Robert Higgins, in jail here charged with the murder of his wife at North Henderson on the morning of January 5, repudiated his signed confession given to State's Attorney John M. Wilson at Alexis, and denied that his love for his stepdaughter, Julia Flake, had caused him to murder his wife. He declared he did not know that the weapon with which his wife was killed was loaded, and he said Julia Flake had not persuaded him to kill her mother because the young girl loved him. He blames the work of a detective and his "nervous condition" for his story of guilty and of his stepdaughter's complicity.

Decatur.—Mont Schultz, a printer, who disappeared from the banks of the Sangamon river near Decatur, October 6, 1906, and was last fall declared legally dead, is said to have admitted his identity in Sharon, Pa. Schultz carried $7,000 insurance in three fraternal orders and his so-called widow had entered suit for that amount.

Beardstown.—The construction of the South Beardstown drainage district levee, which includes about twelve miles of earthworks from one end to the other, is well along in the course of construction under the supervision of Contractor Oswley. About two miles of muck ditch, six feet in depth, has been dug.

Jacksonville.—By an order of the city health warden, all children in public schools and students in colleges here will be compelled to undergo physical examination by physicians each week. The order is said to have been issued on account of the prevalence of contagious diseases in this community.

Crayville.—In a fight Albert Spruell was shot twice by Roy Upton, but not seriously injured. Walter Crawley, a bystander, also was shot. The trouble between Spruell and Upton is said to have originated over a woman. Upton gave himself up after the shooting and was locked up in the city jail.

Bloomington.—Thirty farmers, tenants on the estate of Mrs. Matthew T. Scott of Bloomington, have departed for the University of Illinois to take the agricultural course at the expense of Mrs. Scott.

Springfield.—An attempt to rob the Waverly National bank at Waverly, Morgan county, was made but frustrated by City Marshal Rythell. Five robbers seized Rythell as he was making his rounds and told him they would blow his brains out if he made an outcry. They took him to the Peoria & St. Louis yards and locked him in a freight car. Half an hour later he escaped and aroused citizens. It was found the robbers had tried to enter the bank through a window, but evidently had been frightened away when Rythell gave the alarm.

WILSON MAY LIFT EMBARGO ON ARMS

SENATORS SILENT AFTER CONFERENCE, BUT NEW MEXICO MOVE IS EXPECTED.

TO HASTEN FALL OF HUERTA

American Manufacturers Ready to Rush Munitions Across Border—Believes Adamson Bill Would Violate British Treaty.

Washington.—Lifting of the embargo on arms for the constitutionalists as the best possible solution of the Mexican trouble, was proposed by President Wilson to the senate committee on foreign relations.

As a result, the president may, within an extremely short time, issue a proclamation or an order to collectors of customs along the border to admit guns and ammunition to all factions in Mexico. He believes that this will bring quick termination to the tottering regime of President Huerta.

Benefit All to Rebels. In this suggestion the president received the support of most of the members of the committee. It was for this, chiefly, that the president called the conference.

Theoretically, lifting the embargo would be as favorable to the Huerta government as it is to the constitutionalists, but actually the control by the rebels of every port of entry on the American border indicates the determination of President Wilson to force the overthrow of Huerta by Carranza and Villa. The constitutionalists have all along informed the state department that admission of arms would bring a speedy solution of the Mexican situation.

The constitutionalists have contracts with American manufacturers to supply them with arms and ammunition as soon as the embargo is lifted. When the president acts upon the suggestion which he made known to members of the foreign relations committee, shipments will immediately be made to the Mexican border.

During the conference the president made it plain that he believed the ground taken by this government, in exempting American ships engaged in coastwise trade from the payment of tolls for use of the Panama canal, was in violation of the treaty with Great Britain.

Three Drown in Floods. Los Angeles, Cal.—Three men were drowned, a boy was reported to have lost his life, many people were driven from their homes, buildings were damaged and steam and electric railway traffic tied up or seriously interrupted in southern California as the result of the rain which deluged this section for 24 hours.

Three Killed by Avalanche. Storrs, Utah.—With a roar that could be heard for miles, an avalanche, sweeping down the mountain side here, instantly snuffed out three lives and seriously injured three other persons. Four houses were ground to splinters. Every tree in the path of the icy mass was snapped off at the roots.

Impure Butter Kills Baby. South Bend, Ind.—One child is dead and 20 other persons are in serious condition as the result of eating impure butter. An analysis by the board of health disclosed that the butter contained bacteria of dysentery. A small quantity fed to a chicken caused its death in 24 hours.

Former Senator L. R. Casey Dead. Washington, D. C.—Former Senator Lyman R. Casey of Jamestown, N. D., died at his home here of heart disease. He served from 1889 to 1893. He was 77 years old.

Kansas Woman for Congress. Goodland, Kan.—Mrs. Eva M. Murphy of Goodland announced her candidacy for congress from the Sixth Kansas district, as a Progressive.

Lindsey's Bride Some Chicken. Denver.—"Some chicken, judge. Some chicken!" This greeting hurled at Mrs. Ben B. Lindsey by 400 "newsies" when she arrived with her husband, the juvenile judge, delighted her more than any other welcome.

Four Dead in Wreck. Jackson, Mich.—Four persons are dead and a dozen injured, as a result of a head-on collision between a passenger train and a freight train on the Michigan Central railroad, three miles north of here.

Widow Leaps 12 Stories. New York.—Mrs. Josephine Bremer Amend, 40 years old, widow of Robert F. Amend, jumped from a twelfth-story window of the fashionable West Side apartment house and was instantly killed.

Floods in California. San Francisco.—A rain and windstorm which swept the Pacific coast from southern California to the British Columbia border caused much damage to shipping, though no serious mishaps at sea have been reported.

Doubtful. "Now they say that alcohol causes deafness." "Maybe so. I never knew anybody to fall to hear an invitation to drink."

Within the Law. A real negro "mammy" of the old type came up the walk through the old-fashioned garden to the side porch. She had a basket of "fresh eggs" on her arm and was offering them for sale.

"Are you sure they are perfectly fresh, auntie?" asked the lady who came out of the house.

"Yes'm, they sho is all right, Miss Bess. Ain't nary disorderly egg amongst 'em."—New York Evening Post.

So Economical. "I want you to see my lovely new shopping bag," said a certain woman to a caller the other afternoon. "My husband gave it to me for my birthday, and it's simply grand. And it's so economical! You see, you open this, and there are two compartments, and you open the compartments on this side and there is a little pocket in that, and you open the little pocket and there is a cute little pocketbook for your change, with one side partitioned off for street car tickets." "I see," said the caller. "But why do you call it economical?" "Why, it takes so long to open all the things and get to your street car tickets that by the time you do whatever is with you has paid your fare."

Future John D. Apropos of compulsory school attendance, Superintendent Maxwell said in New York: "A certain Yakubicka, a Bohemian urchin, rose suddenly the other afternoon in the midst of the lesson, piled his books in an orderly heap and proceeded to clump out of the room."

"Yakubicka, where are you going?" the astonished teacher asked.

"Teacher," Yakubicka answered, gravely, "exactly fourteen years ago, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, I was born. So I am now entitled to quit school."

"From the doorway he waved his hand at his fellow students. "So long, fellows," he said. "I'm off to learn pants-making!"

Afraid of Lawyers. An old colored man, charged with stealing chickens, was arraigned in court and was incriminating himself when the judge said: "You ought to have a lawyer. Where is your lawyer?"

"Ah ain't got no lawyer, judge," said the old man.

"Very well, then," said his honor. "I'll assign a lawyer to defend you."

"Oh, no, suh; no, suh! Please don't do dat!" the darky begged.

"Why not?" asked the judge. "It won't cost you anything. Why don't you want a lawyer?"

"Well, judge, Ah'll tell you, suh," said the old man, waving his tattered old hat confidentially. "Hit's jes dis way—Ah wan' tuh enjoy dem chickens mahse'f!"

FRIENDLY TIP. Restored Hope and Confidence.

After several years of indigestion and its attendant evil influence on the mind, it is not very surprising that one finally loses faith in things generally.

A N. Y. woman writes an interesting letter. She says: "Three years ago I suffered from an attack of peritonitis which left me in a most miserable condition. For over two years I suffered from nervousness, weak heart, shortness of breath, could not sleep, etc.

"My appetite was ravenous but I felt starved all the time. I had plenty of food but it did not nourish me because of intestinal indigestion. Medical treatment did not seem to help. I got discouraged, stopped medicine and did not care much whether I lived or died."

"One day a friend asked me why I didn't try Grape-Nuts food, stop drinking coffee and use Postum. I had lost faith in everything, but to please my friend I began to use both and soon became very fond of them."

"It wasn't long before I got some strength, felt a decided change in my system, hope sprang up in my heart and slowly but surely I got better. I could sleep very well, the constant craving for food ceased and I have better health now than before the attack of peritonitis."

"My husband and I are still using Grape-Nuts and Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

IS CANDIDATE FOR U.S. SENATOR

James C. McShane, Prominent Chicago Lawyer, Announces Candidacy.

HE IS NOT A FACTION MAN

A Progressive Democrat Who is in Accord With the Present National Administration.

Chicago.—James C. McShane today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. The following biographical sketch of Mr. McShane is interesting: Mr. McShane was born in Litchfield, Ill., December 12, 1862, of Irish parentage, but was reared in Mattoon, Ill., where his father was employed as a mechanic in the railroad shops.

James C. McShane.

party faction. He was a candidate for City Attorney of Chicago in 1893. He is a close student of public affairs and has traveled in practically every country in Europe, studying social conditions. He is a man of striking appearance, being 6 feet 3 inches in height; he has a strong personality, and is an unusually forceful and eloquent speaker.

He is a member of the Chicago Bar association and was one of its Board of Managers; also a member of the Iroquois club, Irish Fellowship club and South Shore Country club.

He is heartily in accord with the National Democratic platform of 1912, and with the policies of the present National administration. He does not intend to open his campaign until after the spring election and will issue his platform at that time.

In announcing his candidacy, Mr. McShane said: "I have no single remedy to offer for all the ills with which society is afflicted. True progress, in my opinion, lies in gradual improvement all along the line. Some important changes are necessary in order to correct abuses that have grown up, such as the formation and activities of the trusts, etc. Other changes are required by a higher and more just conception than formerly prevailed in respect to the rights, duties and obligations of capital and labor.

HOW TO SELECT CORN EARS

Difficult to Distinguish Between Breeds of Same Color—Each Variety Has Characteristic Shape.

The first point in judging a sample of corn is to determine its true color. There are breeds of corn, like breeds of cattle which have peculiar colors or forms which distinguish them. It is difficult to distinguish between breeds of corn of the same color, but this may be learned by experience in handling corn of various breeds. In pure corn of any breed there are certain marks which may be easily recognized.

Take the shape of the ear, for example. The ideal ear is cylindrical, not too crooked or too tapering. It is as difficult to find an ear of corn perfect in shape as it is to find cows, horses and sheep with perfect forms. The shape of ears of the different varieties of corn differ as widely as the shape and form of the different pure breeds of cattle. Each class and variety has a characteristic shape peculiar to itself. The most desirable shaped ear is cylindrical from butt to tip. Where ears are inclined to taper, it will be noticed that two or four rows, as a rule, are dropped near the middle of the ear. In judging the corn ear, take into consideration the soil and climatic conditions in which the corn is grown. The shape of a desirable ear for southern or central Illinois would differ in many respects from the most desirable ears for northern Wisconsin. The shorter growing season in the north demands a shallower kernel and a smaller ear to enable the corn to mature.

The ear at the left is too short and thick, although good in other respects, the second is a desirable ear, the third has an enlarged butt and irregular rows, while the fourth, at the right, is too slender.

DISEASE MAY BE PREVENTED

Fatal Malady of Canker Sore Mouth Causes Extensive Loss of Little Pigs Every Year.

The loss of little pigs from this disease annually is extensive, but largely might be prevented by proper care. The cause of the disease is infection of slight scratches of the nose, mouth and gums by what is called bacillus necrophorus. This germ is present normally in the intestines of hogs and may be found wherever voidings have been dropped. The disease, therefore, is most likely to attack pigs kept in insanitary yards and buildings, and the contagion lurks there from year to year.

To prevent the disease, sows and pigs should be provided with clean buildings and yards. Be sure to have the bedding fresh and dry. Pens should be cleaned out often and kept free from filth. Disinfectants and hand plaster should be used in the pens daily. At birth the sharp teeth of each pig should be carefully nipped off with sharp pinchers, but more harm than good may follow if the gums are cut or bruised during the operation. Treat the cankers by scraping each ulcer thoroughly and rubbing it lightly with a lunar caustic pencil. Afterward wash the affected parts twice daily with a five per cent. solution of permanganate of potash.

After one year all boars should have their tusks removed at least twice a year. Use strong nippers or sharp blacksmith's plinchers.

"Breaking" by Kindness.

A long time before the colt gets through sucking it should be petted and handled so it won't be a stranger to its master later, when the time comes to break it to driving. The value of many a promising horse is reduced materially because this job of handling is put off until the colt gets set in its ways, and not only becomes set, but has the strength to have its own way sometimes.

Should Try a Separator.

It will not cost you a cent to try a cream separator for two weeks or even longer. Any dealer will be glad to let you have one on trial, for once used they will sell themselves.

The MARSHAL

By MARY RAYMOND SHIPMAN ANDREWS
ILLUSTRATIONS BY ELLSWORTH YOUNG

COPYRIGHT 1912 BY BOBBS MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Francois Beaupre, a peasant babe of three years, after an amusing incident in which Marshal Ney figures, is made a Chevalier of France by the Emperor Napoleon, in the home of the lad's parents in the village of Viqueux, France, where the emperor had briefly stopped to hold a council of war. Napoleon prophesied that the boy might one day be a marshal of France under another Bonaparte. At the age of ten Francois meets a stranger who is astonished when the boy tells him of his ambition. Francois visits General Baron Gaspard Gourgaud, who with Alixe, his seven-year-old daughter, lives at the Chateau. A soldier of the Empire under Napoleon fires the boy's imagination with stories of his campaigns. The general offers Francois a home at the Chateau. The boy refuse to leave his parents, but in the end becomes a copyist for the general and learns of the friendship between the general and Marquis Zappi, who campaigned with the general under Napoleon. Marquis Zappi and his son, Pietro, arrive at the Chateau. The general agrees to care for the Marquis's son while the former goes to America. The Marquis before leaving for America asks Francois to be a friend to his son. The boy solemnly promises.

CHAPTER IX.

The Castle Children.

There was a farm in the Valley Delesmontes—five miles it was from Viqueux—which was a dependence of the seigneur; for centuries the same family had held it, and it was considered the richest holding for a peasant in that part of the world. Just now the family all at once came to an end. It was necessary to find new tenants, and the general offered the place to Le Francois and La Claire. Even in their best days they had not been so prosperous as this would make them. But what about Francois? The general gazed at them from deep eyes.

"There's always a screw somewhere in every good thing. This time it's the boy."

"There was a silence. Claire trembled."

"It will go hard with the lad to give us up," she brought out softly.

"He won't give you up; I should not respect him if he gave you up," the general thundered, and the two peasants breathed more freely. This great good fortune was not, after all, the price of their son.

By degrees the three came to an understanding. A tutor was to be engaged for the three children; Francois was to live at the castle as if—it should be explained to him—he were going away to school, and every Friday he was to walk to the Ferme du Val—the Valley Farm—and stay with his people until Sunday afternoon.

This new order of things was well settled before six months had passed after the going of the Marquis Zappi. And then in three or four months more something happened.

Francois was alone with the general when the letter came. His eyes were on his seigneur's face as he read the letter and the boy saw the blood rush through the weather-hardened skin in a brown-red flood, and then fade out, leaving it gray. The boy had never seen the general look so. With that, the big arms were thrown out on the table and the big grizzled head fell into them.

Then he lifted his head and told the boy how the friend whom he had parted lately, after so many years of separation, had gone away not to come back in this life, and how Pietro was fatherless. Francois, holding tightly with both fists to the general's hand, listened wide-eyed, struck to the heart.

"But he had a brave life, my seigneur—it is the best thing that there is. My mother said so. My mother told me that we shall smile later, when we are with the good God, to think that we ever feared death on this earth. For she says one spends a long time with the good God later, and all one's dear friends come, and it is pleasant and it is for a long, long time, while here it is, after all, quite short. Is not that true, my seigneur? My mother said it."

Big little Pietro had to be told what had happened and how the general was now to be a father to him as best he might, and Alixe and Francois would be his sister and brother. He took the blow dumbly and went about his studies next morning, but for many days he could not play, and only Francois could make him speak. He was handsome—extraordinarily handsome—and a lovely good child, but slow in initiative where Francois was ready, shy where Francois was frank. Between the two, of such contrasting types, was an unshaken bond from the first, and at this age it seemed to be the little peasant who had everything to give. Smaller physically, weaker in muscle than the big-boned son of North Italy, he yet took quite naturally an attitude of protection and guidance, and Pietro accepted it without hesitation.

Two years slid past noiselessly, un-noticed, and it was vacation time; it was August of the year 1824. The old chateau of Viqueux—the ruin—lay back behind the corn fields and smiled in hot sunlight.

A tall, lad of fourteen, another boy, slighter, quicker, darker, and a little girl of eleven in a short white dress, wandered through the ruins, talking earnestly now, silent now, filling the grim place with easy laughter again.

Alixe and Francois and Pietro were growing up; the general already grumbled words about kittens turning into cats, as he looked at them.

"Just behind the great stone there," Alixe formulated, "was the dog's bedroom. Of course, a great monsieur like the dog had his own bedroom—yes, and office, too—and maybe his dining-room."

And the joke was enough on that lazy day of vacation to set peals of laughter ringing through the ruins. Alixe stopped laughing suddenly.

"Who is that?" she demanded. Her eyes were lifted to the hill rising behind the green mound, and the glance of the others followed hers. A young man, a boy, was coming lightly down the slope, and something in his figure and movement made it impossible even at a distance that it should be any one of the village. He saw them, and came forward, and his cap was off quickly as he glanced at Alixe. But with a keen look at the three, it was Francois to whom he spoke.

"Is this France?" he asked.

"But yes, Monsieur," Francois answered wondering—and in a moment he wondered more. The strange boy, his cap flung from him, dropped on his knees and kissed the grass that grew over the Roman governor's foundations. With that he was standing again, looking at them unashamed from his quiet gray eyes.

"It is the first time I have touched the soil of France since I was seven years old," he stated, not as if to excuse his act, but as if explaining something historical. And was silent. The strange boy talked very little; they could not recollect that he asked questions, after his first startling question; yet here was Alixe, the very spirited and proud little Alixe, anxious to make him understand everything of their own affairs.

"I am Alixe," she began—and stopped short, seized with shyness. Was it courtesy to explain to the young monsieur about her distinguished father? She found herself suddenly in an agony of confusion. Then the stranger made a low bow and spoke in the gentlest friendly tones.

"It is enough. It is a charming name, Mademoiselle Alixe. I believe I shall now think it the most charming name in France."

"She has more of a name than that, however, Monsieur," and Francois stepped across the grass and stood by the little girl, her knight, unconscious of the part he played. "It is a very grand name, the other one. For our seigneur, the father of Alixe, is Monsieur the Baron Gaspard Gourgaud, a general of Napoleon himself; was indeed with the Emperor at St. Helena."

Francois had no false modesty, no self-consciousness; he felt that he had placed Alixe's standing now in the best light possible. The strange boy felt it, too, it seemed, for he started as Francois spoke of Napoleon; his reserved face brightened and his cap was off and sweeping low as he bowed again to Alixe more deeply. Francois was delighted. It was in him to enjoy dramatic effect, as it is in most Frenchmen. He faced about to Pietro.

"This one, Monsieur," he went on, much taken with himself as master of assurance of an aristocrat. He smiled his brilliant, exquisite smile into the older boy's face.

"Me—I am a peasant," he said cheerfully. "I have no house."

"He is a peasant—yes. But he is our brother, Pietro's and mine, and no prince is better than Francois—not one."

"Or half so good," Pietro put in with his slow tones.

"You are likely right," the stranger agreed laconically.

And then without questions asked, in rapid, eager sentences, the three had told him how it was; how Francois, refusing to leave the cottage, was yet the son of the castle. With that they were talking about the village of Viqueux, and its antiquity, and then of the old chateau; and one told the legend of the treasure and of the guardian dog.

"Just over the wall there is the opening where he appeared to old Pierre Tremblay," Francois pointed out.

"I think I should like to climb the wall," the stranger said.

And he did. The others watching anxiously, he crawled out on the uncertain pile ten feet in air. A big stone crashed behind him; he crawled on. Then there was a hoarse rumble of loosened masonry, and down came the great blocks close to his hands—he was slipping! And, above, the wall swayed. Then, in the instant of time before the catastrophe, Francois had sprung like a cat into the center of danger and pushed the other boy, violently reeling, across the grass out of harm's way.

Alixe screamed once sharply. Francois lay motionless on his face and the great stones rained around him. It was all over in a moment; in a moment more a shout of joy rose from Pietro, for Francois lifted his head and began crawling difficultly, with Pietro's help, out of the debris.

"I have to thank you for my life, Monsieur the peasant," the stranger said, and held out his hand. "More-over, it is seldom that a prophecy is so quickly fulfilled. You said a few minutes ago that you should one day do a thing worth while for a Bonaparte. You have done it. You have saved my life."

Francois' hand crept to his cap and he pulled it off and stood bareheaded.

"Monsieur, who are you?" he brought out.

The strange boy's vanishing smile brightened his face a second. "I am Louis Bonaparte," he said quietly.

The little court of three stood about the young Prince, silent. And in a moment, in a few sentences, he had told them how, the day before, he had been seized with a hunger for the air of France, which he had not breathed since, as a boy of seven, his mother had escaped with him from Paris during the Hundred Days. He told them how the desire to stand on French soil had possessed him, till at last he had run away from his tutor and had found the path from his exiled home, the castle of Arenberg, in the canton of Thurgovie, in Switzerland, over the mountains into the Jura valley.

"It is imprudent," he finished the tale calmly. "The government would turn on all its big engines in an uproar to catch one schoolboy, if it was known. But I had to do it." He threw back his head and filled his lungs with a great breath. "The air of France," he whispered in an ecstasy.

For two hours more they told stories and played games through the soft old ruins of the savage old stronghold, as light-heartedly, as carelessly as if there were no wars or intrigues or politics or plots which had been and were to be close to the lives of all of them. Till, as the red round sun went down behind the mountain of the Rose, Francois' quick eye caught sight of a figure swinging rapidly down the mountain road where the Prince had come.

"But look, Louis," he called from behind the rock where he was preparing, as a robber baron, to swoop down on Prince Louis conveying Alixe as an escaped nun to Pietro's monastery in another corner.

And the boy Prince, suddenly grave, shaded his eye with his hand and gazed up the mountain. Then his hand fell and he sighed. "The adventure is over," he said. "I must go back to the Prince business. It is Monsieur Lebas."

Monsieur Lebas, the tutor, arrived shortly in anything but a playful humor. The boy's mother, Queen Hortense, was in Rome, and he was responsible; he had been frightened to the verge of madness by the prince's escapade.

The playmates were separated swiftly. Monsieur Lebas refused with something like horror the eager suggestion that he and his charge should spend the night at the chateau. The Prince must be gotten off French ground without a moment's delay.

CHAPTER X.

The Promise.

"Mon Dieu!" said the general. It was six years later. At the new chateau not a blade of grass seemed changed. The general stood in the midst of close-cropped millions of blades of grass as he stopped short on the sloping lawn which led down to the white stone steps which led to the sunken garden. Alixe, in her riding habit, with a feather in her hat, and gauntleted gloves on her hands, was so lovely as to be startling. She looked at the ground, half shy, half laughing, and beat the grass with her riding-whip. Francois was leaning toward her and talking, and the general, coming slowly down the lawn, felt a flood of pride rise in him as he looked at this successful picture of a boy which he had done so much to fashion. The two had been riding together, and Francois appeared, as most men do, at his best in riding clothes. With that, as the general marched slowly down the velvet slope, unseen by them, regarding them his girl and his boy, this happy sister and brother—with that the brother lifted his sister's hand, and bending over it, kissed it slowly, in a manner unmistakably unbrotherly.

"Mon Dieu!" gasped the general, and turned on his heel and marched back to his library.

All that afternoon he stayed shut up in the library. At dinner he was taciturn.

The next morning the general sent for Francois to come to him in the library. A letter had been brought a short time before and was lying open on the table by his hand.

"Francois," began the general in his deep abrupt tones, "I am in trouble. Will you help me?"

"Yes, my Seigneur," said Francois quickly.

The general glared at him, frowning. "We shall see," he said again, and then—suddenly as a shot from a cannon—"Does Alixe love you, Francois?"

"I—I think not, my Seigneur," he answered in a low voice.

"I am hurting you," the deep voice said—and only one or two people in the world had heard that voice so full of tenderness. "I am hurting my son. But listen, Francois. It was the dearest wish of Pietro's father—it has been my dearest wish for years—that Alixe and Pietro should one day be married. It is that which would be the crown of a friendship forged in the fires of battle-fields, tempered in the freezing starry snow fields of Russia, finished—I hope never finished for all eternity."

Francois' hand bent, his eyes on the general's hand which held his, answered very quietly, "I see," he said. "You would not take her from Pietro, who, I am sure, loves her?"

Francois looked up sharply, but the general did not notice. He spoke slowly. "I promised Pietro's father—the boy seemed to be out of breath—to be Pietro's friend—always," he said.

The general smiled then and let the fingers go, and turned to the letter on the table before him. "Good!" he said. "You are always what I wish, Francois," and it was quite evident that the load was off his mind.

CHAPTER XI.

With All My Soul.

The general swung around to the lad. "Francois, this letter is about you." He tapped the rustling paper. "Pietro wants you to come to him as his secretary."

Francois' large eyes lifted to the general's face, inquiring, startled, childlike. "Pietro!" he said slowly. "I had not thought of that."

"Yet you knew that Pietro was heart and soul in the plots of the Italian patriots?"

"Yes."

"But you had not thought of going to help him fight?"

"No, my seigneur. I had thought only of the fight for which I must be ready here."

"This Italian business will be good practice," said the general, as a man of today might speak of a tennis tournament. "And you and Pietro will be enchanted to be together again."

Francois smiled, and something in the smile wrung the general's heart. "Francois, you are not going to be unhappy about little Alixe?"

Quickly Francois threw back, as if he had not heard the question: "My Seigneur, I will go to Pietro; it will be the best thing possible—action and training, and good old Pietro for a comrade. My Seigneur, may I go tomorrow?"

"Yes," agreed the general doubtfully. "But you will be careful not to upset her, Francois?"

"I will be careful."

"And—and you will do what you can to help Pietro, will you not, my son?"

A quick contraction twisted Francois' sensitive mouth and was gone, but this time the general saw. "You may trust me, my Seigneur," the boy said, and moved to the door; but the general called to him as his hand touched the latch.

"Francois!"

"Yes, my Seigneur." He faced about, steady and grave, and stood holding the door.

"Francois, my son—I have not hurt you—very much? You do not love Alixe—deeply? Do you love her, Francois?"

There was a shock of stillness in the old dim library. Through the window—where the children's shouts had come in ten years before to the marquis and the general—one heard now in the quiet the sudden staccato of a late cricket. The general, breathing anxiously, looked at Francois, Francois standing like a statue. The general repeated his question softly, breathlessly. "Do you love her, Francois?"

With that the great eyes blazed and the whole face of the boy lighted as if a fire had flamed inside a lantern. He threw back his head.

"With all my soul," he said. "And forever."

A rushing mountain stream—white-velled in the falling, black-brown in the foam-flecked pools—tumbled, splashed, brawled down the mountain; the mountain hung over, shadowy; banks of fern held the rampant brook in chains of green. Alixe and Francois, riding slowly in the coolness of the road below, looked up and saw it all, familiar, beautiful, full of old associations.

"One misses Pietro," Francois said. "He always wanted to ride past the 'Trou du Gouverneur.'"

A Roman legend had given this name to the deep pool of the brook by the road; it was said that the cruel old governor had used it, two thousand years back, for drowning refractory peasants. Alixe gazed steadily at the dark murmuring water.

"Yes, one misses him. Is life like that, do you suppose, Francois? One grows up with people, and they get to be as much a part of living as the air, or one's hands—and then, suddenly, one is told that they are going away. And that ends it. One must do without air, without hands. What a world, Francois!"

"We are not meant to like it too much, I believe, Alixe," said Francois sunnily. "It is just en passant, this world, when you stop to consider. This is school, this life, I gather. My mother says it is not very important if one has a good seat in the school-room or a bad; if one sits near one's playmates or is sent to another corner, so long as one is a good child and works heartily at one's lessons. It is only for a day—and then we go home, where all that is made right. Not a bad idea of my mother's, is it, Alixe?"

"Your mother is a wonderful woman."

Alixe turned sharply.

an, Alixe answered thoughtfully. "She lives like that. She never let things trouble her, not even when your father lost everything. Did she, Francois?"

"No," said Francois. "She is one of the few people who know what the real things are and live in them. It is hard to do that. I can not. I care so bitterly for what I want. 'It is'—Francois hesitated—"it is very hard for me to give up—what I want." He stumbled over the words; his voice shook so that Alixe shifted in the saddle and looked at him inquiringly.

"Alixe—dear—then—Francois stopped. "You need not be afraid that I shall have more than Pietro," he began uncertainly. "For it is not going to be so. He will have what—what I would give my life for." Then he hurried on. "I see how it is," he said gently, "and you are right to care so loyally for Pietro. It is worth it."

Alixe turned sharply.

Alixe answered thoughtfully. "She lives like that. She never let things trouble her, not even when your father lost everything. Did she, Francois?"

"No," said Francois. "She is one of the few people who know what the real things are and live in them. It is hard to do that. I can not. I care so bitterly for what I want. 'It is'—Francois hesitated—"it is very hard for me to give up—what I want." He stumbled over the words; his voice shook so that Alixe shifted in the saddle and looked at him inquiringly.

Then he hurried on. "I see how it is," he said gently, "and you are right to care so loyally for Pietro. It is worth it."

And you must never care less. Alixe—never forget him because he has gone away. He will come back. The boy spoke with effort, slowly, but Alixe was too much occupied with her own tumultuous thoughts to notice. "He will surely come back and—be long to you more than ever. He will come back distinguished and covered with honors, perhaps, and then—and then—Alixe, do you see the chestnut tree at the corner that turns to the chateau? It is a good bit of soft road—we will race to that tree—shall we? And then I will tell you something."

The horses raced merrily; Alixe sat close to the saddle with the light swinging seat, the delicate hand on the bridle, which were part of her perfect horsemanship, and over and over as he watched her ride Francois said to himself:

"I will give my happiness for the Seigneur's—I said it, and I will. I will be a friend to Pietro always—I said it, and I will."

Over and over the horses' flying feet pounded out that self-command, and at length the music of the multiplying hoof beats grew slower, and with tightening rein they drew in and stopped under the big chestnut. Alixe was laughing, exhilarated, lovely.

"Wasn't it a good race? Didn't they go deliciously?" she threw at him. And then, "We will go around by the Delesmontes Road; it is only three miles farther, and it is early in the afternoon; there is nothing to do."

Francois spoke slowly. "I am afraid—I must not, Alixe. I am going to the farm tonight."

"To the farm!" Alixe looked at him in surprise. "But you were not to go over till tomorrow. My father and I will ride over with you. Have you forgotten?"

"No," said Francois. "I have not forgotten—no, indeed. But I am going away tomorrow, Alixe."

"Going away?" Alixe turned sharply, and her deep blue glance searched his eyes. "What do you mean, Francois?" And then, imperiously: "Don't tease me, Francois! I don't like it." Francois steeled, hardened his face very carefully, and answered: "I am not teasing you, Alixe. I did not tell you before because—"he stopped, for his voice was going wrong—"because I thought we would have our ride just as usual today. I only knew about it myself this morning, I am going to Pietro."

"Going—to Pietro!" Alixe was gasping painfully. "Francois—it is a joke—tell me it is a poor joke. Quick!" she ordered. "I won't have you play with me, torture me!"

"It is not a joke." The boy's eyes were held by a superhuman effort on the buckle of the bridle-rein lying on his knee. "There was a letter from Pietro this morning. The seigneur wishes me to go. I wish to go. I go tomorrow."

"Going tomorrow!" The girl's voice was a wail. "You—taken away from me!" Then in a flash: "I hate Pietro! He is cruel—he thinks only of himself. He wants you—but I want you, too. How can I live without you, Francois?" Then softly, hurriedly, while the world reeled about the boy, sitting statue-like in his saddle: "It is just as I said. You are as much a part of my life as the air I breathe—and you and my father and Pietro say quite calmly, 'The air is to be taken away—you must do without it.' I can not. I will choke!" She pulled at her collar suddenly, as if the choking were a physical present fact.

No slightest motion, no shade of inflection missed Francois; still he sat motionless, his eyes on the little brass buckle, his lips set in a line, without a word, without a look toward her. And suddenly Alixe, with another quick blue glance from under her long lashes—Alixe, hurt, reckless, desperate, had struck her horse a sharp blow—and she was in the road before him, galloping away.

He let her go. He sat quiet a long time. As she turned in, still galloping, at the high stone gateway of the chateau, his eyes came back again to the little shining buckle. It seemed the only thing tangible in a dream-universe of rapture and agony. Over and over he heard the words she had said—words which must mean—what? Had they meant it? Had he possibly been mistaken? No—the utter happiness which came with the memory of the soft hurried voice must mean the truth—she cared for him, and then over and over and over he said, half aloud, through his set teeth:

"I said that I would give my happiness for my seigneur's; I said that I would be a friend to Pietro; I will."

ceremonies, "is Monsieur the Marquis Zappi of Italy. His father also fought for the great captain."

The quiet strange boy interrupted swiftly. "I know," he said. "Of the Italian corps under Prince Eugene; also on the staff of Lannes. I know the name well," and he had Pietro's hand in a firm grasp and was looking into the lad's embarrassed face with his dreamy keen eyes.

The children, surprised, were yet too young to wonder that a boy scarcely older than themselves should have the army of Napoleon at his fingers' ends; he gave them no time to think about it.

"One sees, without names, that you are of the noblesse," he said simply, embracing the three in his sleepy glance. He turned to Francois. "And you, Monsieur the spokesman? You are also of a great Bonapartist house?"

Francois stood straight and slim; his well-knit young body in his military dress was carried with all the

VELOCIPEDE FOR THE SNOW

Ingenious Vehicle, Invented by Pennsylvania, Allows Boy to Coast Down Incline or Pedal Up.

Most ingenious is the snow velocipede that has been patented by a Pennsylvania man. On it a boy can "coast" down snow-covered inclines, or he can pedal up them. In its general appearance this vehicle resembles the ordinary velocipede but the front and rear forks are mounted on runners, instead of on wheels. To be sure, there is a driving wheel, but that is journaled and vertically movable in the front forks. The vertical movement of this wheel is controlled by a lever in the handle. When the velocipede is used to coast down a hill the wheel is raised above the bottom of the runners. On level ground, or going up an incline, the wheel is lowered until it can get a purchase on the ground or snow and pedaled like the wheel of an ordinary velocipede.

MEN WHO MAKE THEIR NESTS

Bushmen of Australia Gather Twigs and Grass and Build Themselves Very Comfortable Homes.

It seems funny enough to read of men who actually make nests like the birds. Yet such men actually exist, both in Africa and Australia. The bushmen of the latter country, who are among the lowest orders of men, do not know enough to build even the simplest huts, so they gather grass and twigs, exactly as a bird would do, and carry them to a thicket in the jungle and make for themselves comfortable nest homes. Here whole families curl up together like so many little puppies and sleep very snugly. As the bushes grow up around the nest they often come together overhead and form a kind of natural shelter, but further than this the bushman has no protection from the rain. There are hundreds of these nests in the "bush," as it is called in Australia, but the bushman, although very ignorant, never fails to find his own home again, nor mistakes some other nest for it. And if he is taken away blindfolded for miles and allowed to go he will start straight for home as unerringly as a cat that has been carried from her old home in a bag. Indeed, the bushman possesses this homing instinct to a remarkable degree, and in this respect they are far ahead of civilized man with all his intellect and reasoning power.

Greenbacks.

The term greenbacks as applied to money is said to have been first used by the Hon. S. P. Chase, secretary of the treasury, to the legal tender notes first issued by the United States government in 1862, during the Civil war, in allusion to the color of ink used in printing their reverse sides. This ink was first produced by a Canadian and is very difficult to counterfeit or to photograph.

SOME ODD GYROSCOPIC TOYS

Professor Gray of the Royal Society Has Invented and Exhibited Several Acrobatic Dolls.

Some extraordinary toys based on the old gyroscopic tops have been recently invented by Professor Gray of the Royal Society, and exhibited by him at the Royal Institution. One toy is a doll figure hanging by its hands from two wires strung along together, a gyroscope whirling inside the doll figure. As the wires are slightly fogged the figure begins to move along the wires, hand-over-hand like an acrobat. By a curious property of the gyroscope, when the hidden wheel begins to run down the little figure begins to hurry, as if it intended to use every effort to complete its journey before losing its power.

Another toy consists of three doll acrobats on trapezes, a gyroscope being concealed in each doll. When the gyroscopes are properly started the three acrobats perform balancing feats, each doll in its turn doing a stunt in regular order, but no two doing the same stunt at the same time.

A doll bicycle rider on a tight rope is another toy. From the handle bars of the bicycle wires are run to the proper connections with the hidden gyroscope, so that if the little figure starts to fall to the left the handle bars are turned, and the front wheel pointed to the left enough to keep the balance, exactly as a human rider does.

From his models the scientist showed how it is possible to place a gyroscope in a motor car to prevent the car from overturning on a curve, says the Dundee Advertiser. With such a device a car rounding a curve at high speed would tilt to the inside as if it were running on a banked track, and theoretically it would be impossible for the car to overturn.

BOY SCOUTS AND THE GANGS

Splendid Tribute Paid to Organization That is Not Four Years Old by Kansas City Judge.

A Kansas City juvenile judge makes this statement: "If every boy in the city would join the Boy Scouts the gangs would disappear, the juvenile court soon would be a stranger to the youth, and we would rear a generation of men that would not require much police protection. I have never had a Boy Scout in my court, and there are 1,200 of them in Kansas City." This splendid tribute to an organization scarcely four years old is a well-merited one, says the Denver Weekly Post. Boys are small bundles of corked up enthusiasm. This enthusiasm must have a vent. If there be no other outlet—the gang is the result. The Boy Scout organization teaches outdoor life, self-reliance, a love of nature and a desire to help rather than hinder those in need. The first aid to the injured is one of the first accomplishments. There is nothing military about the organization and yet the boys are taught a wholesome discipline and a respect for the rights of others.

Mistletoe.

According to an ancient Celtic legend, the mistletoe was formerly a forest tree; but having yielded its wood for the Saviour's cross it was condemned ever afterward to exist merely as a parasite.

The mistletoe was connected with many mystical Druidic rites and was highly esteemed for its magical qualities. So high was it in favor that the Druids styled it "all heal," and considered it an antidote for disease and infection of all sorts. Traces of this favor may be observed in certain old English customs, such as kissing under the mistletoe.

HIS FIRST YEAR AT FARMING IN SASKATCHEWAN

Win Premiums and Prizes in Competition With the World.

There are thousands of young men filling positions in stores and offices, and in professional occupations throughout the United States who in their earlier life, worked on the farm. The allurements of city life were attractive, until they faced the stern reality. These people would have done better had they remained on the farm. Many of them, convinced of this, are now getting "back to the land," and in the experience, no better place offers nor better opportunity afforded, than that existing in Western Canada. Many of them have taken advantage of it, and there are to be found today, hundreds of such, farming in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. The conditions that surround farming operations, today are so much superior to those in existence during their early farming days, that there is an attraction about it. Improved machinery, level and open plains, no rocks to shun, no trees to cut down, but wide stretches with mile-long furrows, elevators to handle the grain, railways to carry it to market, and bring almost to their doors the things necessary to operate. Splendid grazing areas, excellent opportunities for raising cattle. These things are all so different from what they once were that there is reason to speak of the attractions. R. H. Crossman of Kindersley, Saskatchewan, the man who won such splendid prizes at the International Dry Farming Congress held at Tulsa, Oklahoma, last fall, grew the prize grains during his first year farming. Up to 1913 he was an engineer and the only knowledge he had of farming was that obtained when he was a boy. That was very useful; in fact it was valuable to him. He had not forgotten it. Thousands with a little experience as he had can do well by taking up one of the 160-acre grants offered by the Canadian government.—Advertisement.

In the care of baby's skin and hair, Cuticura Soap is the mother's favorite. Not only is it unrivaled in purity and refreshing fragrance, but its gentle emollient properties are usually sufficient to allay minor irritations, remove redness, roughness and chafing, soothe sensitive conditions, and promote skin and hair health generally. Assisted by Cuticura Ointment, it is most valuable in the treatment of eczemas, rashes and itching, burning infantile eruptions. Cuticura Soap wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of ordinary soap and making its use most economical.

She is a stout lady, and when she slipped on the top step and bumped herself all the way to the sidewalk she fell so hard that she cracked the ice on every step. Effective—Firm of Isolation, Though It Did Not Get Approval of Dog's Owner.

Here's one of Walter Kelly's dog stories. Walter doesn't vouch for it, but it comes from a friend of his, so it's probably all right, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It seems that Kelly left town on a business trip some time ago, and left his blue-ribbon dogs in the care of a man who was supposed to know all about dogs. In about a week this man wrote that one of the dogs had developed symptoms that indicated mange, and asked for instructions. Kelly wired as follows:

"Isolate dog at once. Take no chances of mange spreading."

Sufficient instructions, and within the ten-word limit. When the owner got back home he asked the guardian if the dog had really developed mange. The man looked surprised and answered:

"Why, no—I isolated him right away like you said. But don't worry; it didn't hurt him none. I done it with chloroform an' he never knowed what happened."

English Exclusiveness.

The Englishman, as everyone knows, is inclined to be individual and independent, if not exclusive. He is happy with his family in his country mansion, where a high hedge insures seclusion, and permits only the chimneys of his house to be seen from the road. He does not crave excitement and conviviality. He prefers the quiet and peace of the semi-rural suburb to the whirl of the city. He does not like to be within too easy access of the maelstrom. The automobile and the train and trolley cars are quite speedy enough. With his family about him, and the city and its business cares at a safe distance, the Englishman is happy.—Suburban Life.

A gentleman who frequently visited Ireland generally stopped and dined at the same hotel in Cork.

"Strangers are particularly requested not to give any money to the waiters as attendance is charged for in the bill."

The waiter who had attended on him at dinner, seeing him reading this notice, said:

Waste of Powder. A man who had never been duck hunting shot at a duck in the air. The duck fell dead to the ground.

"Well, you got him!" exclaimed the amateur's friend.

"Yes," replied the amateur, "but I might as well have saved my ammunition—the fall would have killed him."

Advantage of Education. "If a man is naturally bad, do you think that education would make him better?"

"Maybe not; but it would help to keep him out of jail."

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, the heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is which contains no dangerous narcotics or alcohol. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers, the run-down, anemic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing. In liquid or tablet form of most drug stores or send 50 cents for stamps for trial box to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

STOPPED TRAFFIC FOR PUSSY.

Business on New York Thoroughfare Interrupted While Mother Cat Crosses the Street.

It was a busy day in Fulton street. Lines of trucks were bucking each other east and west, when out from a produce store came a cat, and dangleling from her mouth was a kitten, with which she essayed to cross the street. Each time she started she had to turn back because of a truck, and her efforts soon attracted a crowd of idlers.

Down from the corner came a policeman. He soon saw what was the matter, and while there was nothing in the traffic regulations to cover the point, it took the bluecoat only a moment to decide what to do.

Going into the street he raised his hands in the way that truckmen have learned means "Stop." They stopped. The cat, seeing her opportunity, took a firm hold on the nape of her prodigy, and then, holding it high to keep its curved tail out of the mud, she slowly and deliberately picked her way across and disappeared in a cellar.

The law protects people that go on foot by reserving a foot path alongside the highways. Parties riding or driving on this path are liable to a fine. Some of the school districts in the county have not only made a complaint against violators of the act and collected fines, but in order that the school children would have a good road to school, furnished lumber to make crossings over streams so they would not need to wade to bridges; these same people laid lumber across the bad places in the path. The path can be, and should be, set apart, protected and cared for as well as roads for automobiles and other vehicles.

And Grow Quality Crops
Plant strong, healthy seed and you will get strong, healthy, bountiful crops.
Plant weakling seed and you will get weaker, weakling crops—You know that.
Let us tell you why Buckbee Full-of-Life Seed yields better quality and greater quantity.
It's pedigreed. You can't grow pedigreed seed in one season. It takes time and care. We have been working for these results for 35 years. Buckbee Seed is grown under soil and climatic conditions best adapted to each variety. It's an interesting story—told, with other valuable information, in our new 1907 Seed and Plant Guide. Seed sold on orders from this book is pedigreed—selected seed grown from selected seed, for generations back.
From good seed only can good seed be grown.
Don't run risks—the best is cheapest. If your seed is poor you may not know it until it is too late to mend matters.
