Asks Custody of Son.

The case of Carter Rose, of Decatur, vs. his wife Vera May Rose, was heard in circuit court last Saturday afternoon. It was a habeas corpus proceeding brought by Mr. Rose in an attempt to get possession of his five year old son, Floyd Rose, who has been with his mother, Mrs. Vera May Rose, since the separation of the couple almost a year ago. Mrs. Rose and son are making their home with her grandfather, A. C. Spright, with whom she has lived most all her life. Mr. Rose lives in Decatur, where he is engaged in business.

A large number of witnesses were summoned from Windsor, Decatur, Sullivan and Bruce. Only a few were called upon for testimony. All the evidence was in when court adjourned, Saturday afternoon. E. J. Miller was attorney for the complainant and F. M. Harbaugh for the defendant. The attorneys have not made their plea yet. This will be done some time in the future, when Judge Cochran will give his decision.

Donald, son of Walter Jenkins, with 732, votes ranked second and received the baby's toilet set offered by F. W. McPheeters. Agnes, daughter of Homer Wright, third prize, a large doll. George, little son of Mrs. Clara Elliott, won fourth prize, a wagon.

Church For Everybody.

The ministers of the several churches in Sullivan, have decided on February 22nd to be the church day in Sullivan. A special effort will be made to induce all to attend preaching service somewhere. Remember February 22, as "Go to Church" Sunday. A good way to celebrate Washington's birthday.

SUPERVISORS' PROCEEDINGS

Special Meeting of the Board on Dec. 16 and 17, 1913

W. L. Rhodes, president, L. R. Smith, vice president, Van D. Rough-ton, secretary and Charles Patterson, treasurer, officers of Moultrie County Farmers Institute, together with Mrs. F. E. Pifer and Miss Mamie Patterson, representing the domestic science department, appeared before the board and asked for an appropriation for the institute to be held in Sullivan, January 14, 15 and 16, 1914, and also for the appointment of a representative from the several townships of Moultrie county to work in co-operation with the regular officers of the institute. After consideration of said request, the following resolution was offered by Mr. Morrison and seconded by Mr. Sconce, to-wit:

Be it resolved by the board of Supervisors of Moultrie County, Illinois, that the sum of $50.00 be appropriated to the Farmers Institute of Moultrie county, Illinois, for the purpose of assisting the said Farmers Institute to defray the expenses of meeting of Farmers Institute to be held in the city of Sullivan, Illinois, in January 1914, and the county clerk be, and is hereby authorized to issue warrants for $50.00 in favor of the treasurer of said Farmers Institute of Moultrie County Illinois.

Be it further resolved that each member of the Board of Supervisors of Moultrie county, Illinois, be and is hereby empowered to appoint one person who is a resident of his township, a member of the board of directors of the Farmers Institute of Moultrie County, Illinois.

On motion the foregoing resolution was adopted and it was so ordered by the board.

W. A. Steele, J. H. Smith and Geo. A. Daugherty, representing the Chamber of Commerce, appeared before the board and addressed the members relative to the installation of cluster lights around the square, and asked that the board provide for installing a suitable number of said lights along each side of the court house grounds, the county to pay for installing the necessary standards and the city of Sullivan to supply the current for the lights.

On motion the chairman appointed the buildings and grounds committee to act in connection with a committee from the Chamber of Commerce, relative to installing cluster lights around the public square with full power to act.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Elizabeth Krause.

We are authorized to announce Miss Elizabeth Krause a candidate for tax collector on the democratic ticket, March 21. Miss Krause is a young woman of ability. She graduated from the Sullivan high school several years ago. Since that time she has been engaged in clerical work. The past three years she has been book-keeper in O. L. Hancock's commission house. She is a young woman of sterling worth and is qualified and capable of performing the duties of the office she aspires to. If she is nominated and elected she will fill the office to the best of her ability. Miss Krause is a daughter of Lawrence Krause and wife, living in Sullivan.

George R. (Daddy) Brown.

We are authorized to announce George R. (Daddy) Brown a candidate for the nomination for tax collector of Sullivan township, subject to the democratic primary on March 21. Mr. Brown is the father of Mrs. W. P. Davidson, wife of Dr. W. P. Davidson.

Mr. Brown was employed in the Masonic home four years. The past two years he has worked in Bushart's garage.

He fell a couple of years ago and broke a leg which has disabled him for manual labor.

He is qualified and capable of collecting the taxes and if nominated and elected will perform the work to the best of his ability.

Fred D. Sona.

Fred D. Sona authorizes us to announce his candidacy for the nomination for town clerk, subject to the decision of the democratic primary to be held March 21, 1914.

Mr. Sona is an industrious young man, and has been for a number of years employed with his father, Fred Sona sr, in the monumental business on the east side of the square.

Mr. Sona is too well and thoroughly known to the voters of this township to need any comment from us. He possesses a good education, is a neat penman and good business accountant and trustworthy.

He is capable and thoroughly qualified to discharge the duties of the town clerk. If he is nominated and elected he will fill the office to the best of his ability and to the credit of the party electing him.

The New Minister.

The play is a comedy and very funny. The plot of the play is a country church, the New Minister, a bunch of old maids bent on matrimony, making proposals and dates of marriage to the new minister. The Ladies Aid society all busy gossiping and each offering her own suggestions for the good of the church, the comfort and future of the minister. There is no end of satire among and between the aforesaid bunch of women, then appears on the scene an intelligent, modest little school matron; she and the New Minister fall in love a very serious case, and O, my; the Old Maids! You ought to see them.

The music producers of the church are three men, a farmer, doctor and the country squire, that august, learned administrator of justice.

They call upon the minister and dictate subjects for preachments and anti-preachments. He must not touch temperance, their best financier is a brewer, etc. For the rest be present at the Armory, Tuesday evening, February 17. Thirty-five characters in the play. Admission 25c and 35c. Tickets placed on sale at Barber's book store, February 14.

To Obtain Judgment.

Saturday, Clyde Harris petitioned Judge Cochran, that as he had received judgment of $2654.00 and costs of a suit against Allen Williams for assault and battery and Sheriff Lansden had failed in the execution as Williams informed him he had no means to settle, he, Harris, asked that Williams be committed to jail until the judgment be settled, Harris paying his board while in the county jail. The board is paid weekly. The time for which Williams may be confined is six months.

The criminal case for assault to commit murder will be tried in the March term of court.

In Federal Court.

Thomas Frantz, D. C. Frantz, Jas. Bathe, T. F. Harris, Attorneys E. J. Miller and M. A. Mattox et al, went to Danville, last Monday, on legal business in connection with the bankrupt case of Thomas Frantz. It appears that the suit had its origin in Att'y. Whitaker, of Shelbyville, sending Constable T. F. Harris to the home of Mr. Frantz, near Chipps station, to procure some property which he had mortgaged, said property being in bankruptcy. An injunction was issued to prevent the property being moved. The case, Monday, was to try the right of property and asking Harris and Whitaker by what right they moved the property. After the evidence was heard they were ordered to return the property and pay costs. M. A. Mattox has the property advertised for sale.

Club Meetings.

The several ladies' clubs of Sullivan, held their meetings this week as follows:

WOMEN FINED IN RAIL-RIDING CASE

ILLINOIS JUDGE IMPOSES SENTENCE FOR HUMILIATION OF VOLO CRIPPLE'S WIFE.

CONSIDERING JAIL SENTENCE

Defendants Unable to Pay Fine Are Given Three Days to Raise Money—Sex Saved Them From a Heavier Sentence.

Waukegan, Ill.—Five women of Volo, Ill., accused of driving their neighbor, Mrs. John Richardson, out of the village by riding her on a rail, were fined $100 each by Judge Charles Donnelly. None was able to pay her fine. They were given three days each to raise the money, while Judge Donnelly considers the advisability of inflicting a jail sentence.

The women fined were Mrs. A. J. Raymond, Mrs. Emma Stadfeldt, Mrs. Anne Stadfeldt, Mrs. Alma Walton and Mrs. Chris. Sable. Mrs. Emma Stadfeldt, wife of the village blacksmith, and known as "Captain Emma," was accused of being the leader of the woman's riding party. She wept when the fine was imposed.

Mrs. Richardson is the wife of a crippled village storekeeper. She had been the subject of village gossip, in which the name of her brother-in-law was involved. She was tried by a kitchen court of her neighbors six months ago and apparently was convicted. The women visited her home late one night, according to her story, placed her on a rail and rode her from her home.

In imposing sentence, Judge Donnelly censured the women severely. Their sex alone saved the defendants, he said, from the maximum penalty, $300 fine and six months in jail.

REBELS EXECUTE DIAZ MESSENGER

REPORTED FRANCISCO GUZMAN ASKED REBEL GENERAL TO RENOUNCE CARRANZA.

SHOT IN GEN. VILLA'S YARD

Victim Was Prominent in Promoting Revolt Against President Madero—Italian Consul Under Arrest; U. S. Investigates.

Juarez, Mex.—Francisco I. Guzman, who figured prominently in the revolt against President Madero in the City of Mexico a year ago, was executed in the front yard of a house occupied by Gen. Francisco Villa here. Guzman had just come from Havana, where, it was charged, he had been given a secret mission by Felix Diaz to induce Gen. Villa to renounce Gen. Carranza, and throw the strength of the revolution to Diaz.

As soon as he heard of the proposal Gen. Villa gave Guzman a conference, and, after making sure of the nature of the visit, ordered the messenger shot. Within a few minutes after his arrival Guzman was led out of Villa's room, stood up before an adobe wall and, with his hands tied and eyes blindfold, was shot.

Was Aid to Orozco.

Guzman was formerly a private secretary to Dr. Emilio Vasquez Gomez. He was known as one of the promoters of the Orozco revolution against Madero and later joined with Huerta in the conspiracy against the late president.

The execution of those upon whom the rebels look as political enemies is said to be in line with a recent order from Gen. Carranza that all those who took an active part in the overthrow of Madero must be killed.

YOUTH WAS A LITTLE BITTER

Uncle's Quite Natural Desire Did Not Seem to Him to Be Altogether Responsible.

Howard is quite a spendthrift. His only living relative is an old uncle who is not; and there are other differences between Howard and his uncle, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. However, one day not long ago our young hero more or less diffidently approached his avuncular relative with the intimation that it would be a grateful thing for the old chap to loosen up. "Young man," said the uncle, "you are a spendthrift. If I had money I would not give it to you. But I have no money. You seem to think I have a treasure hidden away somewhere. Get rid of that notion. I have saved up a sum large enough to bury me decently when I die, and that is all. Now, get out!"

CAPTAIN OF MONROE BLAMES NANTUCKET FOR SEA DISASTER

DECLARES CARELESSNESS CAUSED DEATH OF FORTY WHEN SHIPS COLLIDE

MEN DIE TO SPARE WOMEN AS BIG LINER GOES DOWN

Husband Swims Holding Wife's Hair in Teeth, But She Expires When Aid Comes—When Ship Turns on One Side, Passengers Crawl to Upper Side Until Washed Off into Icy Waters—Undue Speed During Heavy Fog Is Blamed for Accident.

Norfolk, Va.—The story of how 40 persons went down to death in the chilly waters of the Atlantic when the liner Nantucket rammed and sank the steamer Monroe was brought to port by the 99 survivors of the sunken ship's company, who were rescued and brought ashore by the Nantucket. It was a story of awful, sudden death—how the stricken Monroe, with her side gored deep by the knife-like steel prow of the Nantucket, filled rapidly, rolled over on her side and in a few minutes turned completely over and plunged to the bottom, carrying with her a portion of passengers and members of the crew.

The revised lists prepared by Capt. Johnson, who survived the sunken vessel, showed: Lost—Passengers, 18; crew, 22; total, 40. Saved—Passengers, 38; crew, 60; total, 99.

Under the thick bank of fog that hid the heavily running sea both ships were making their way slowly and with difficulty in the early morning. The Monroe, with Capt. Johnson on the bridge, and a double lookout peering into the fog ahead, was edging under half speed to the northward, having left Norfolk for New York with a nerve-racking fog-bound voyage in prospect. The Nantucket, heavily laden with freight and with but two passengers aboard, was nosing her way southward, bound from Boston to Norfolk. Urged through the dripping fog the two vessels were slowly drawn toward each other.

Crash Came Without Warning.
The crash came about 1:40 without warning. Out of the gray black fog that shut out even the waves from view the gleam of the Nantucket's searchlight scarcely touched the side of the Monroe before the high steel prow of the southward bound vessel cut into the Monroe's side, with a ripping and crashing of plates that threw the stricken ship aback. The Nantucket with her bow crushed backed out of sight into the fog as Capt. Johnson, seeing his vessel was fatally stricken, shouted an order for the lifeboats.

When the crash came those aboard the Monroe were in bed asleep. Only Capt. Johnson and those of the crew on deck were up and about. But the shivering of the stricken vessel and her listing motion as the water poured through the gash in her side awakened the sleeping passengers and sent them clambering toward the deck. Warned by the officers, they hurriedly adjusted life preservers and rushed to the deck. But the time was too brief. Those rescued agreed that from the time the Monroe was struck until she settled beneath the waves not more than ten minutes elapsed.

Baggage, clothing, valuable, were all forgotten in the flight from the staterooms of the sinking ship. Pajamas, nightgowns and bath robes and blankets comprised the apparel of those who reached the slippery upended deck before the water trapped them below. And most of them wore that garb when they left the limping Nantucket at her deck here.

As the half-clad, excited passengers reached the deck they were hurried toward the lifeboats by the officers and the crew. Three of the lifeboats from one side of the crippled vessel were got away from the side freighted with frightened humanity, mostly women, shivering in the wet and cold in their flimsy night clothing. By the time these were away the Monroe was rolling over on her side and it was impossible to launch the other boats.

Passengers Thrown into Icy Sea.
With a sudden lurch the liner, now fast filling with the water that rushed through her plates, rolled over on her side, throwing up her uninjured side, then submerging cabins and saloons. With a chorus of shrieks, the unfortunates left on the sinking vessel turned and, crawling like rats, made their way over the superstructure, through portholes, windows and companionways, until they rested, just out of reach of the waves, on the upper side of the half-capsized vessel. But even this slippery security was not long available. With a rumbling sound, the big vessel shivered and shook, and then plunged beneath the waves, leaving her human freight afloat on the icy bosom of the ocean. Meantime the Nantucket, herself badly damaged, had stood by, and Capt. Berry had aroused his crew. As the ineffectual rays of the searchlight failed to pierce the blanket of fog, Capt. Berry ordered out his lifeboats, and one by one they slipped away into the fog to search for the Monroe. They found only the struggling sur-

Many of those picked up were utterly exhausted and unable to help themselves. Several had to be hauled over the side of the Nantucket, unable to climb the rope ladder. Thomas R. Harrington kept his wife afloat by almost superhuman efforts, swimming with her hair in his teeth, only to have her die a few minutes after she was hauled aboard the Nantucket. First Lieutenant L. R. Curtis, United States army, kept himself afloat until rescued, but died after reaching the Nantucket.

Wireless Operator E. L. Etheridge of the Monroe said that one boat launched from the Monroe saved 23 lives, and went back for a second load, after transferring her passengers to the Nantucket. Capt. Johnson was in this boat.

Two Life Boats Swamped.
"We picked up Mr. and Mrs. Harrington," said Etheridge, "but the latter died before we reached the Nantucket. We also picked up the body of a man. I believe it was that of Lieut. Curtis. We had two women in our boat. We tried to launch two boats, but one of them was swamped. We could not launch the starboard boats, as the ship careened to that side.

"I sent out an S. O. S. call just before the ship went down. A remained in the radio room until our current was cut off. Then I followed Capt. Johnson into the lifeboat. Neither of us was in the water at any time.

"Capt. Johnson remained in the lifeboat until everybody we could find had been placed on board the Nantucket."

Big Hole Torn in Monroe.

Capt. Johnson tells the following story of the collision in his complaint: "At about 1:29 o'clock, approximately, ship's time, a fog signal of one blast of a whistle from a steamer was heard. It seemed to be about three points on the starboard bow. The engines of the Monroe were immediately stopped, and remained stopped for about a minute, when a bright light was observed about four points on the starboard bow.

"As soon as this light was observed two whistles were blown by the Monroe and her wheel was put hard at starboard. The engines were put full speed ahead. It was impossible, however, to avoid a collision, and the Nantucket, coming on with apparently undiminished speed, struck the Monroe on her starboard side, just forward of the pilot house, the collision taking place in less than a minute after the Nantucket's light was first observed. A large hole was torn in the side of the Monroe below the water line."

Sues Nantucket for $1,000,000.

Declaring the loss of his vessel was due to the carelessness of the commander of the steamer Nantucket, Capt. Johnson of the steamer Monroe filed a libel against the Nantucket, claiming a million dollars damages.

Action was filed in the United States district court and papers were served on officials of the Merchants & Miners' Transportation company, owners of the Nantucket, at Norfolk and Baltimore.

In his complaint, Capt. Johnson alleges that the Monroe was proceeding at half speed or less before the accident and had laid to after hearing fog whistles.

He says the Nantucket came upon him at such speed that a collision was unavoidable, although he had ordered his ship ahead at full speed to avoid the blow.

The claimant says the financial damage cannot be stated with accuracy at this time, but fixes the amount at $1,000,000 "upon information and belief."

The complaint specifically charges that the accident was due "solely to the carelessness, negligence and faulty navigation of those on board and in charge of the steamer Nantucket."

Passengers and Crew Lost.

Revised list of the lost:
Passengers: Mrs. W. L. Bolton, Newark, N. J.; First Lieutenant Le Grand B. Curtis, Second coast artillery, Waterville arsenal, New York (died after rescue); Mrs. D. Golsbon, New York; J. Haskele, Cortlandt, N. Y.; Mrs. Thomas R. Harrington, Bridgeport, Conn. (died on steamer Nantucket); W. H. Ingram, Sumter, S. C.; Mr. Jolleff, Marcaria Theatrical company; Mr. Lewis, Marcaria Theatrical company; J. Okakamata, Japanese; Mrs. C. W. Boole and child of Gray, Sussex county, Virginia; J. F. Ray, New York; J. Gilbert; M. Bolen, New York; C. Rouler, New York; I. Wilson, New York; J. Edward, United States navy; O. Wagner, United States marine.

Crew: Boatswain N. Nelson; quartermaster, Gules; bow lookout, A. Soydin; deck watchman, L. Ward; first wireless operator, Ferdinand J. Kuehn; third assistant engineer, Braxton Haskins, white stewardess, Mrs. Gounrey; colored stewardess, Paty Wallace; second cook, I. White; third cook, Joe Bradroit; head waiter, P. Davis; waiters, J. Delk, J. Martin, A. Praddie, D. Proverbs and W. A. Gardner.

The Monroe met light fogs intermittently after passing out of the area and had stopped frequently while the Nantucket was in the area. The Monroe was equipped with an automatic time whistle and that was blown at intervals of one minute.

CULLOM WAS THE FRIEND AND CRITIC OF ELEVEN PRESIDENTS

The passing of former Senator Cullom of Illinois removes a link that bound the generation of today to the Civil war times—yet up to his retirement from the senate last March he was one of its active members and figured largely in its deliberations. He was chairman of the interstate commerce committee of the senate when it framed the present interstate commerce law; he was chairman of the commission that framed the laws for the Hawaiian islands, and through years of trying international complications he had been chairman of the senate's committee on foreign relations.

He was a personal friend of both Senator Stephen A. Douglas and Lincoln, and that friendship for the martyred president was one of the proudest memories of his long and busy life.

Senator Cullom knew intimately eleven presidents—Lincoln, Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft. His relations with Lincoln were the pride of his life, and the only vanity he had was in his resemblance to the martyred chief executive. Indeed, the way he cut his beard was for the purpose of accentuating this resemblance.

He saw Johnson inaugurated vice-president. On the night before the articles of impeachment were voted upon he called at the White House and begged him to surrender. Johnson was obdurate, however, and plainly showed the Illinois representative he had come on a fool's errand. Thereafter he never had personal interviews with him.

He first met Grant immediately after the beginning of the Civil war, when the general came to Springfield with a company of soldiers which had been organized at Galena. At that time

Shelby M. Cullom.

Cullom was speaker of the state house of representatives. He frequently saw Grant during and after the Civil war and as governor of the state was host to the soldier at the executive mansion.

Mr. Cullom nominated Grant for his second term at Philadelphia, making the briefest nominating speech ever delivered. This is what he said:

"Gentlemen of the Convention: On behalf of the great Republican party of Illinois and that of the Union—in the name of liberty, of loyalty, of justice and of law—in the interest of good government, of peace, and of the equal rights of man, remembering with profound gratitude his glorious achievements in the field and his noble statesmanship as chief magistrate of this great nation—I nominate as president of the United States, for a second term, Ulysses S. Grant."

When Cullom took the oath of office as United States senator Chester A. Arthur was president. He held Arthur in high esteem, regarding him as exceedingly polite and agreeable and particularly concerned about the dignity and etiquette incumbent upon the man filling the high office he occupied. Arthur was anxious to restore harmony within the party, but, not affiliating with either faction, he was opposed by both and his nomination proved impossible.

In the Republican convention of 1884 Cullom nominated Gen. Logan. At the latter's request he withdrew his name and Blaine was made the nominee, Logan being selected for the vice presidency.

Senator Cullom's earlier political life was largely confined to Springfield and its local interests and in the house at Washington. It was not until he was elected governor in 1876 that he got to be well known throughout the state. It was during his incumbency as governor that the present state house was built and it was done without scandal, a somewhat noteworthy performance in the days

Duquoin.—Many farmers of this section are agitating the growing of alfalfa, which proved a profitable venture to those who experimented with it. One farmer made a test on five and one-half acres of land in the heart of the southern Illinois wheat belt and in one year realized nearly $416. At the outset a slight expense was entailed in fertilizing the land, but for several years this has not proved necessary. Farmers in Perry county probably will grow the crop on an extensive scale next summer.

when public contracts were none too carefully carried out. As governor—1876-1883—he stood up against the greenback craze, then a prevalent political disease all through this western country, and vetoed a bill passed by the legislature which sought to make subsidiary coin of every description a legal tender for all public and private debts throughout the state.

Cullom was still serving as governor when he was elected to the United States senate in 1883 to succeed David Davis. The election aroused considerable controversy, as many good lawyers held that under the state constitution a governor was not eligible to the senate during his term of office.

These protests were brushed aside, however, and Senator Cullom took his seat in the senate, leaving Lieut. Gov. Hamilton to finish his term as chief executive of the state. During his early career in the upper house at Washington Cullom was a minor figure in Illinois politics, as John A. Logan, his colleague and leader, held the center of the stage. After Senator Logan's death Senator Cullom became the leader in Illinois and had held the place ever since.

He was re-elected to the senate in 1889, again in 1895, and in 1901 and 1907. His term of service was just thirty-six years.

Senator Cullom died a poor man in worldly goods. He never was a rich man, and, in fact, he never had much more at any time than his salary.

"I had $30,000 when I went to Washington first as a congressman in 1865," he said once. "I had made it all practicing law and I thought I was rich. But I spent most of it in Washington and went back to Illinois poor. I never saw that much money again."

Though he spent a lifetime in politics it never brought him wealth, and the question, "Where did you get it?" never was leveled at him in his entire public career of more than half a century. His detractors in other respects always admitted that Shelby Cullom was honest and that he had never sought to make money out of politics. One of the aspects of his career of which the senator was particularly proud was the fact that no charges of crookedness ever had been made against him.

Mr. Cullom was widely known as "the man who looks like Lincoln." The resemblance was indeed striking. His frame was tall and thin, his features were strong, his upper lip was smooth shaven and his jaw fringed with whiskers. The martyred president whom he resembled had been his warm friend during the early days in Springfield when both were practicing law and often gave him advice which contributed much to his political education.

For many years Mr. Cullom treasured a token of this friendship in the form of a small card upon which was written:

HON. SEC. OF INTERIOR:
—Please see and hear my:
friend, S. M. Cullom.
—Feb. 11, 1864.
—A. LINCOLN.

This was given to Cullom by President Lincoln when the former made a trip to Washington to help a friend get the money which the government owed him for supplying a quantity of army beef.

During the latter half of Mr. Cullom's service in the senate his name was often mentioned as a candidate for the presidential nomination, but he never succeeded in winning the high honor which was his greatest ambition. His view of the duties which a president owed to the people was once expressed by him in the following words:

"If I believed that, should the honor of the presidency be conferred upon me, it would so change my character and disposition that the plainest and poorest citizen of the United States could not come to me as one man to another, I would never want to enter the White House."

This utterance is typical of his essential simplicity and straightforwardness, which decades in the seats of the mighty could not spoil.

Senator Cullom first became acquainted with Col. Theodore Roosevelt when the latter was civil service commissioner. Cullom once made the remark that talking to Mr. Roosevelt was like talking through an open window. This remark was published. The next time Cullom called at the White House the president took the senator to a corner and began to whisper to him. Cullom was mystified for a moment, but soon realized the joke.

A Doctor's First Question Is?

"How are Your Bowels?" A Simple Remedy that Guarantees Good Bowel Action.

LIEUT. G. W. VAUGHAN

Trace the origin of the commoner ills of life and almost invariably you will find that constipation was the cause. It is not to be expected that a mass of fermented food can remain in the system beyond its time without vitiating the blood and affecting the nerves and muscles. It congests the entire body.

The results are colds, fevers, piles, headaches, and nervousness, with its accompanying indigestion and sleeplessness. There is only one thing to do, and that is to remove the trouble; and when nature seems unable to do it, outside aid is necessary. You will find the best of all outside aids a remedy that many thousands are now using for this very purpose, called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Many hundreds of letters are received by Dr. Caldwell telling of the good results obtained, and among the enthusiastic letters is one from Lieut. G. W. Vaughan, of 623 W. North St., Decatur, Ill. He is 72 and has had a bad liver and stomach since he came out of the army. He says he tried about everything, but never succeeded in getting permanent relief until he took Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. He is never without a bottle in the house, and he is never without good health.

It has untold advantages over pills, salts and the various coarse cathartics and purgatives, for while these do but temporary good, Syrup Pepsin cures permanently. The effect of its action is to train the stomach and bowel muscles to do their work naturally again, and in a short time all forms of medicine can be dispensed with. It can be bought without inconvenience at any nearby drug store for fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter size being regularly bought by those who already know its value. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

Children Not Naturally Destructive.

Be gentle with the child who smashes his toys. The fault is not his, but yours, who provided him with toys too complicated for his immature little mind to understand. Dottress Maria Montessori, in her lecture at Carnegie hall, said little children were not naturally destructive, as most parents had reason to suppose, but that the instinct to pull the object to pieces was the only natural thing for a child to do with something it did not understand. Most toys given to children are too complicated, Dr. Montessori asserted.

"Instead of expecting children to amuse themselves with toys they do not understand, mothers should assume more responsibility for their children's entertainment," she continued. "The mother who drives her child away from her side when she is working makes a pitiful mistake. It is impossible to estimate the effect upon the child's mind if he were never turned away, if he could always be sure of sympathy and understanding from the person he loves most of all."

ANOTHER COFFEE WRECK.
What's the Use When There's an Easy Way Out?

Along with the coffee habit has grown the prevalent "American Disease"—nervous prostration.

The following letter shows the way out of the trouble:
"Five years ago I was a great coffee drinker and from its use I became so nervous I could scarcely sleep at all nights. My condition grew worse and worse until finally the physician I consulted declared my troubles were due to coffee.

"But being so wedded to the beverage I did not see how I could do without it, especially at breakfast, as that meal seemed incomplete without coffee.

"On a visit, my friends deprived me of coffee to prove that it was harmful. At the end of about eight days I was less nervous, but the craving for coffee was intense, so I went back to the old habit as soon as I got home and the old sleepless nights came near making a wreck of me.

"I heard of Postum and decided to try it. I did not like it at first, because, as I afterwards discovered, it was not made properly. I found, however, that when made after directions on the package, it was delicious.

"It had a soothing effect on my nerves, and none of the bad effects that coffee had, so I bade farewell to coffee and have used only Postum since. The most wonderful account of the benefit to be derived from Postum could not exceed my own experience."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for a copy of "The Road to Wellville."

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds. "There's a Reason" for Postum.

WOMEN FINED IN RAIL-RIDING CASE

ILLINOIS JUDGE IMPOSES SENTENCE FOR HUMILIATION OF VOLO CRIPPLE'S WIFE.

CONSIDERING JAIL SENTENCE

Defendants Unable to Pay Fine Are Given Three Days to Raise Money - Sex Saved Them From a Heavier Sentence.

Waukegan, Ill.—Five women of Volo, Ill., accused of driving their neighbor, Mrs. John Richardson, out of the village by riding her on a rail, were fined $100 each by Judge Charles Donnelly. None was able to pay her fine. They were given three days each to raise the money, while Judge Donnelly considers the advisability of inflicting a jail sentence.

The women fined were Mrs. A. J. Raymond, Mrs. Emma Stadfeldt, Mrs. Anne Stadfeldt, Mrs. Alma Walton and Mrs. Chris. Sable. Mrs. Emma Stadfeldt, wife of the village blacksmith, and known as "Captain Emma," was accused of being the leader of the woman's riding party. She wept when the fine was imposed.

Mrs. Richardson is the wife of a crippled village storekeeper. She had been the subject of village gossip, in which the name of her brother-in-law was involved. She was tried by a kitchen court of her neighbors six months ago and apparently was convicted. The women visited her home late one night, according to her story, placed her on a rail and rode her from her home.

In imposing sentence, Judge Donnelly censured the women severely. Their sex alone saved the defendants, he said, from the maximum penalty, $300 fine and six months in jail.

Denies He Was Offered Post. Chicago.—Charles R. Crane denied he had been offered the ambassadorship to Russia by President Wilson at a recent White House luncheon and said that neither the president nor Secretary Bryan had even discussed the subject with him.

New Cure for Wife Beater. Wilkesbarre, Pa.—The "first cure" is the best for wife beaters, declared Justice Miller, who offers to administer the beatings himself. Miller weighs 150 pounds, but wife beaters can be as "big as a mountain," he says.

Game Old Lady. Chicago.—When Mrs. Minnie Rosenthal, aged 70, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct, she put up such a game fight a charge of resisting seven police officers was added.

REBELS EXECUTE DIAZ MESSENGER

REPORTED FRANCISCO GUZMAN ASKED REBEL GENERAL TO RENOUNCE CARRANZA.

SHOT IN GEN. VILLA'S YARD

Victim Was Prominent in Promoting Revolt Against President Madero - Italian Consul Under Arrest; U. S. Investigates.

Juarez, Mex.—Francisco I. Guzman, who figured prominently in the revolt against President Madero in the City of Mexico a year ago, was executed in the front yard of a house occupied by Gen. Francisco Villa here. Guzman had just come from Havana, where, it was charged, he had been given a secret mission by Felix Diaz to induce Gen. Villa to renounce Gen. Carranza, and throw the strength of the revolution to Diaz.

As soon as he heard of the proposal Gen. Villa gave Guzman a conference, and, after making sure of the nature of the visit, ordered the messenger shot. Within a few minutes after his arrival Guzman was led out of Villa's room, stood up before an adobe wall and, with his hands tied and eyes blindfolded, was shot.

Was Aid to Orozco.

Guzman was formerly a private secretary to Dr. Emilio Vasquez Gomez. He was known as one of the promoters of the Orozco revolution against Madero and later joined with Huerta in the conspiracy against the late president.

The execution of those upon whom the rebels look as political enemies is said to be in line with a recent order from Gen. Carranza that all those who took an active part in the overthrow of Madero must be killed.

Italian Consul Under Arrest. San Antonio, Tex.—Protests against the arrest by Mexican federals at Piedras Negras, Mexico, of Dr. Louis Paparelli, Italian consul for the state of Chihuahua, have been forwarded to the Italian embassy at Washington and to Rome.

Hearty Welcome.

Mrs. Clay telephoned to a friend that she would come down and spend the day. "Well, here I am!" she exclaimed cheerily, as the little daughter of the hostess opened the door. "Yes," replied the child; "I'm glad to see you; and I know mother will be glad, too, for this morning when you phoned that she was thankful she was going to have the visit over with."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Blame Located.

A crabbed old misogynist said to Ethel Barrymore at a dinner in Bar Harbor: "Woman! Feminism! Suffrage! Bah! Why, there isn't a woman alive who wouldn't rather be beautiful than intelligent."

The Sequence.

"Just as we were wondering where the money for a feed was to come from, Billy Smith, who always has his pockets full, blew in—" "Well, what happened?" "A blow-out."

Stinging.

"Er—ah, beg your pardon, miss, but haven't you lost something?" began the would-be flirt. "No, I haven't. But there goes a lady with a dog chain. It's probably her you're looking for."

What He Did.

The Reason.

"Cat shows are generally a success." "No wonder. A cat show ought to come up to the scratch."

YOUTH WAS A LITTLE BITTER

Uncle's Quite Natural Desire Did Not Seem to Him to Be Altogether Reasonable.

Howard is quite a spendthrift. His only living relative is an old uncle who is not; and there are other differences between Howard and his uncle, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. However, one day not long ago our young hero more or less diffidently approached his avuncular relative with the intimation that it would be a graceful thing for the old chap to loosen up. "Young man," said the uncle, "you are a spendthrift. If I had money I would not give it to you. But I have no money. You seem to think I have a treasure hidden away somewhere. Get rid of that notion. I have saved up a sum large enough to bury me decently when I die, and that is all. Now, get out!"

A friend of Howard asked him a little later in the day why he looked so thoughtful. "I was just wondering," he said, "where that old fellow got the idea that he ought to be buried decently."

Easy Then to Be Generous.

The trouble with some would-be generous men is that they always leave their money at home in their other clothes.

And Jam.

"How does your little boy take his emulsion?" "With compulsion."

Their Kind.

"Have these aircraft any kind of wheels?" "Certainly, they have—fly wheels."

Sprains, Bruises Stiff Muscles

Are quickly relieved by Sloan's Liniment. Lay it on—no rubbing. Try it. Ankle Sprain and Dislocated Hip. "I sprained my ankle and dislocated my hip by falling out of a third story window. Went on crutches for four months. Then I started to use your Liniment, according to directions. I must say it is helping me wonderfully. We will never be without Sloan's Liniment anymore."—Chas. Johnson, Lawrence, Kansas.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

Kills Pain

Splendid for Sprains. "I fell and sprained my arm a week ago and was in terrible pain. I could not use my hand or arm until I applied your Liniment. I shall never get out a bottle of Sloan's Liniment."—Mrs. E. K. Springer, Elizabeth, N. J. Fine for Stiffness. "Sloan's Liniment has done more good than anything I have ever tried for stiff joints. I got my hand hurt so badly that I had to stop work right in the busiest time of the year. I thought at first that I would have to have my hand taken off, but I got a bottle of Sloan's Liniment and cured my hand."—Wm. Wheeler, Morris, Ala.

dations therein made concurred in, and it was ordered by the board that said Cash W. Green, county clerk, pay over to the treasurer of Moultrie county, the sum of four hundred forty-five and twenty two one-hundredths ($445.22) Dollars, the same being the balance of fees now in his hands as such clerk, for the half year ending November 30, 1913, as shown by his report and settlement for said half year.

Cash W. Green, county clerk presented to the board special report of his actions in accordance with a resolution adopted by the board at its meeting held on the 10th day of September 1913, and asked the approval of his actions on the part of the board. Said report is as follows, to-wit,

State of Illinois, Moultrie County, Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Board of Supervisors:

At a meeting of the board of supervisors held on the 10th day of September, 1913, your honorable body adopted a resolution the effect of which was that all burial expenses of Warren M. Fleming, late sheriff of Moultrie county, Illinois, should be borne by the county of Moultrie and directing that the county clerk issue orders for said expenses. Pursuant to said resolution, I beg to report that as county clerk I have issued county warrant, No. 758a, payable to Frank F. Fleming, administrator of the estate of Warren M. Fleming, deceased, in the sum of $361.13 in payment of bills for the burial expenses of said Warren M. Fleming, deceased. The total amount of all bills paid by the said Frank F. Fleming, administrator as aforesaid, amounted to the sum of $421.13, which said bills are as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Amount. Includes Decatur Coffin Co., O. A. Corbin, Rev. Chas. S. Boyd, Leon Wilcox, Dan Evans, John Brown, C. W. Warren, F. A. Warren, Max Learner, W. E. Scarborough.

At the time of his death Mr. Fleming was a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge, No. 742, at Arthur and the lodge paid $60.00 as a funeral benefit and this amount was deducted from the total of the aforesaid bills, leaving the sum of $361.13 to be paid by the County of Moultrie. Receipts for the several items of expense are herewith presented and made a part of this report.

All of which is respectfully submitted. CASH W. GREEN, County Clerk.

Moved by Mr. Sconce, seconded by Mr. Ray, that report be adopted and that action of said Cash W. Green, county clerk, in issuing warrant as above reported be approved and confirmed. Which motion was carried.

Poet's Lot a Hard One.

The lives of poets in this callous world have ever been characterized by misery and now a New York man is charged with a modern and most ingenious cruelty to an unfortunate band. He advertised for poems, offering to set them to music, and charging the author $21. But most poets would prefer to be "published" before being set to music.—Springfield Republican.

MACON, GA., CHILD

Made Strong and Well by Vinol.

When we tell you that Vinol is the best remedy in our whole stock for making weak, puny, ailing children strong, robust and rosy we are only telling you what has been proved by hundreds of mothers.

J. L. Fickling, Macon, Ga., says: "My child was very thin and delicate, no appetite, nervous, and did not sleep well. Doctors did not help her. Vinol was recommended and the change after a fair trial was wonderful. She sleeps soundly all night, has a splendid appetite and has gained in weight. I wish every mother knew what Vinol will do for delicate children."

What Vinol did for this little girl it will do for every weak and ailing child because sickly children need the strengthening cod liver elements and the tonic iron that Vinol contains—that is why Vinol builds them up quickly and gives them a fine, healthy color. It is pleasant to take and we guarantee that the results will satisfy you—money back if they do not.

John Dehart, an infant at the time his father enlisted in the Civil war, was given the wrong medicine by mistake, which caused him to be a helpless invalid. By a special enactment he was granted a pension of $18 per month. As he could not be cared for well anywhere, it was decided to take him to the county farm, and his pension applied to hiring a nurse to care for him. A member of the home, Thomas Sturman, was appointed care taker of him at $18 per month, until Sturman became too feeble to longer take care of Mr. Dehart. Mr. Sturman deposited his wages in the First National bank. At the time of his death he had $230 in the bank. Mr. Womack after the death of Mr. Sturman, paid the funeral expenses, purchased a tomb, etc. and paid Jack Sturman $53 without going into court or having an administrator appointed. A petition was made to have an administrator appointed, Charles Monroe received the appointment. Mr. Womack had given James Baker a watch and razor that belonged to John Dehart, deceased. The attorneys employed on the case were E. J. Miller and M. A. Mattox for Womack and Baker, Mattox for Womack and Rufus Huff for Jack Sturman. Charles Monroe is his own legal adviser. The administrator has $31 in his custody and $35 was found in the First National bank. The case was heard before Judge Hudson, Thursday. Mr. Womack accounted for the money being in his possession. The administrator now has the estate for settlement. This is the first time in the history of Moultrie county that litigation started over the settlement of a pauper estate. Combination Electric Stove. The smallest and most compact cooking outfit is a combination electric set which consists of an electric stove, a chafing dish, a tea samovar, a coffee percolator, and a nursery outfit. The six-inch electric stove serves for all the devices which are made especially to fit it. This stove is connected to the ordinary electric light socket by a long cord. When the electricity is snapped on the stove gets hot. This heat is caused by a "resistance grid" concealed within the base of the stove. The passage of electric current through this grid produces the heat. With this combination stove an entire meal, and a large one at that, can be cooked right on the dining room table. The coffee pot, tea pot, cooker, stove, etc., all rolled into one. This device can be operated from the lamp socket and consumes no more current than an ordinary incandescent lamp. Fire Marshal's Report. The annual report just issued from the state fire marshal's office states that there were 8432 fires in 1913, as compared with 9092 in 1912. Of this number 3207 were in Chicago and the others in the state at large. The total fire loss for 1913 was the enormous sum of $13,666,438. Of this amount $5,140,353 was suffered in Chicago. The total loss shows an increase of $2,000,000 over the losses in 1912. Four hundred nineteen fires were caused by lightning, causing a damage of $1,000,000. Fires of incendiary origin caused losses of $400,000. There were 348 deaths resulting from fires during the year.

SYNOPSIS.

Francois Beaupre, a peasant babe of three years, after an amusing incident in which Marshal Ney figures, is made a Chevalier of France by the Emperor Napoleon, in the home of the Emperor's parson in the village of Viqueux, France, where the emperor had briefly stopped to hold a council of war. Napoleon prophesied that the boy might one day be a marshal of France under another Bonaparte. At the age of ten Francois meets a stranger who is astonished when the boy tells him of his ambition. Francois visits General Bonaparte, Casparus Goutraud, who with Alize, his seven-year-old daughter, lives at the Chateau. A soldier of the Empire under Napoleon he fires the boy's imagination with stories of his campaigns. The general offers Francois a home at the Chateau. The boy refuses to leave his parents, but in the end becomes a copyist for the general and learns of the friendship between the general and Marquis Zappi, who campaigned with the general under Napoleon. Marquis Zappi and his son, Pietro, arrive at the Chateau. The general agrees to care for the Marquis's son while the former goes to America. The Marquis before leaving for America asks Francois to be a friend of his son. The boy solemnly promises. Francois goes to the Chateau to live. Marquis Zappi dies leaving Pietro as a ward of the general. Alize, Pietro and Francois meet a strange boy who proves to be Prince Louis Bonaparte. Francois saves his life. The general discovers Francois loves Alize and extracts a promise from him that he will not interfere between the girl and Pietro. Francois goes to Italy as secretary to Pietro.

CHAPTER XII.

The Mother of a Prince.

The walls of the palace at Ancona dropped to the sea; against them the waves danced. Out on the blue water lay a fleet of fishing-boats, and the wind flapped torn sails, and the sunlight glanced on battered hulls and flittered decks. The woman who sat by an open window of the palace pushed the black trailing of her gown from her, as if the somberness hurt her eyes; she laid her head against the window-frame and stared at the breeze-tossed waves and the fishing fleet.

"It may be our only hope of escape—those wretched boats," she said, half aloud, and her blue eyes were full of sadness, almost of hopelessness.

A sound caught her ear, and she lifted her head quickly. The door into the next room was partly open and some one moved there, that was all she turned, the lines of her figure falling again into a melancholy pose.

"The doctor takes a long time," she spoke, and gazed out once more to the water.

There had been a spirited young girl years before who had romped in the gardens of Malmaison, who had led the laughter which echoed through those avenues of lime and plantain, whose sweetness and vivacity had drawn the figure of Napoleon himself into the vortex of gladness which was her atmosphere. Always brightness seemed to follow her through the enchantment of the place; always she seemed to move in gaiety. Today, on a March morning of 1830, this was she—Hortense.

The daughter of France she had been, the queen of Holland, and now for years an exile. Here, ill, a fugitive, in her nephew's palace at Ancona, with the Austrians at the gate of the city, she waited in anxiety almost more intense than she could bear the word of the doctor as to her son. Five days before, at Forli, her older boy had died, and her sore heart stirred with a sickening throb as she thought of this other—Louis—now her only child, lying in the room beyond in a high fever, ill with the disease with which his brother had fallen. A woman's soul might well be overcrowded with such sorrow and such fear, but there was more. Her two boys had thrown in their lot shortly before with the Italian revolutionists, and had fought, and had distinguished themselves. And now that the revolution of the Romagna was a failure, that the Austrian army was advancing victoriously, now that death had taken the older to safety, the younger—Louis—the invalid lad in the room beyond, was in imminent danger. He was excepted from the general amnesty; the natural ways of escape were closed, for the authorities of Tuscany and of Switzerland had let her know that the Prince would not be permitted in those territories. From Rome two of her son's uncles, Cardinal Pesch and King Jerome, had sent word that if he were taken by the Austrians he was lost. And at the moment when Hortense had decided to carry her boy off to Turkey by way of Corfu, an Austrian fleet appeared in the Adriatic.

In such a critical state were the affairs of the black-gowned woman who gazed from the palace windows to the sea. The doctor was with her son. The boy's condition seemed to her no better, but worse than the day before; she waited an official verdict. The door opened and she looked up as a tall man came in.

"Doctor," she stammered and stopped—she feared to ask.

"Your majesty," the old man said gravely, "I grieve to be the bearer of bad news."

"He is worse, Doctor?" The words came with a gasp; she felt that she could not face more trouble.

"Yes, your Majesty, the fever has increased since yesterday. With his youth and strength we may hope—if he is carefully nursed—but to move him would be madness."

Queen Hortense struck her hands together. "What can I do? What can I do?" she demanded, and the doctor stood gravely regarding her, helpless, with all his devotion to the house of Bonaparte, to suggest a way out. "If he says he will be taken—they will be sure to take him. If he goes he will die on the way," she cried in an agony of indecision. "Doctor, tell me, think for me—how can I save him?"

And the doctor still stood silent, suffering with the impotent desire to help her. "If—if only the Austrians might think that the Prince were gone," he stammered, and hated himself for the futility of the words. But the Queen stood with a hand half lifted, arrested. Her blue eyes were alive with the crossing and weaving of swift ideas, and then with a catch of her breath she laughed at him like a pleased child. "Doctor, you are a very clever man," she said. "Together we are going to save the Prince."

The vivacity of the schoolgirl of Madame de Campan flashed for a moment into her manner, warmed to sudden life by the joy of hope. The doctor waited, enchanted, bewildered, to hear his cleverness explained, but Hortense did always the unexpected thing. She shook her finger at him.

"I'm not going to tell you," she said. "At least not till I have to—not till tomorrow at all events. But all today, as you visit your patients you may think that you are saving the Prince from his enemies—and tomorrow you may know how. Goodby, Doctor," and puzzled and pleased, the physician was gone.

"Send Fritz to me," the Queen ordered, and a moment later the young man who was for years the confidential servant of Hortense, who knew more of the history of her middle years, perhaps, than any other, stood before her. "Fritz, when does a packet sail for Corfu?" she demanded.

Fritz Rickenbach considered it his business to know everything. "Tonight," your Majesty," he answered unhesitatingly.

"You will see that the luggage of Prince Louis is on board, and that a carriage is ready to take him there," she ordered.

"But yes, your Majesty," Fritz still stood regarding her seriously. "It is a great happiness to me, your Majesty, that his Highness is well enough to travel."

Fritz knew perfectly that there was a complication somewhere, and he wanted to know what it was. His curiosity was patent, but his deep interest in the affairs of his people could not be an impertinence, and the Queen smiled at him.

"You shall know about it, Fritz," she said. "The Austrians are coming. The Prince can not be moved. If they take him, it means death. They must believe that he is gone, and it is for you and me to make them believe it, Fritz. You must get a passport signed by all of the authorities—that is easy today; you must engage his place in the packet for tonight; you must tell the servants—tell every one—that the Prince goes to Corfu, and you must see that the proper luggage is on board. It will be known that I stay, but they will not molest an ill woman. Do you understand the plan, Fritz?"

"But yes, your Majesty," Fritz answered with his face alight.

And so the packet sailed for Corfu, and all day before the sailing the servants of Hortense moved busily between the palace and the boat, carrying luggage and making arrangements. And only one or two knew the secret that Prince Louis Bonaparte had not sailed in the packet but lay tossing with fever in a little room beyond his mother's, carried there for greater privacy by Fritz and the doctor.

Two days later, as the Queen sat quietly by her boy's bedside, she heard that the vanguard of the Austrians had entered the city, and almost at once Fritz came to tell her that the palace in which she was staying had been chosen for the residence of the general commanding. The probability of this had not entered her mind; it seemed the last straw. The Austrian officer demanded the Queen's own chamber for his chief, but when the steward's wife told him the name of the lady who was in the rooms which had not been given up, he bowed deeply and said not a word. It was another of that brotherhood scattered over Europe—the friends of Hortense; it was an officer who had protected her years before at Dijon.

So for a week they lived side by side with their enemies and only a few feet lay between the Prince and capture, for his room was next that of the Austrian general, with but a double door between. It was a life of momentary anxiety, for the Queen feared each time the invalid spoke that they might recognize a man's voice; when he coughed she turned white. But at the end of the week Louis was at last well enough to go. He was to leave Ancona disguised as one of his mother's lackeys, the young Marquis Zappi was to put on another liver, and over the frontier they were both to change and be the sons of Hortense traveling on the Englishman's passport.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Rush.

The day before the escape, as the Prince, weak and ill yet, lay in bed, word was brought that a messenger of the marquis wished to see the Queen.

"Let me see him too, my mother," the silent, grave young man begged. "It may be that I can help you. I wish to help."

In a moment Fritz introduced a slight alert person whose delicate face was made remarkable by a pair of eyes large and brilliant and full of visionary shadows, yet alive with fire. One saw first those uncommon eyes and then the man. If they had not been entirely concerned with his message they might have remarked that he trembled as he looked at the Prince's face; that his voice shook as he answered the Queen's question.

"I have the unhappiness, your Majesty, to bring you bad news," he said, speaking to her, but still gazing eagerly at the Prince. "The Marquis Zappi, my employer, is ill. He was taken suddenly last night, and today is much worse, and there is no chance that he can travel with your Majesty tomorrow."

The Queen threw out her hands with a gesture of hopelessness. "What can we do?" she exclaimed. "Am I to plan and have always an unconquerable obstacle? Can I not save my boy? I might have known that everything seemed too bright this morning, too good to be true. Yet it is not possible that after all they should"—she looked at her son; her courage came springing back. "They shall not take you," and her eyes flashed defiance at a world of enemies, and she went over and threw her arm about his neck. "Louis, don't let yourself be excited, dearest. They shall not take you. I can save you."

It was as if she put a spur to her brain; there was a moment's silence and the two lads watched her brows drawing together under the concentration of her brain.

"Of course," she said suddenly, and laughed—a spontaneous laughter which seemed to flood her with youthfulness. She turned her blue glance swiftly on the newcomer, the slender boy with the luminous eyes. "You are in the employ of the Marquis Zappi, monsieur?"

"But yes, your Majesty. I am the secretary of Monsieur le Marquis." She paused a second, seemed to take stock of the young man, of his looks, his bearing, his accent.

"You are French. Have you a sympathy with the family of my son, with the Bonapartes?"

It was as if a door had been opened into a furnace, so the eyes blazed. "Your majesty, I would give my life for his highness," he said quietly. The impassive face of the young prince turned toward the speaker, and the half-shut heavy glance, which had the Napoleonic gift of holding a picture, rested on him attentively. Louis Bonaparte seemed to remember something.

"What is your name, monsieur?" he asked, and it might have been noticed that his head lifted a little from the pillow as he waited for the answer.

"Francois Beaupre, sire." The young man seemed to be out of breath. "Sire!" Louis Napoleon repeated. And then, "I have seen you before. Where was it? Not in Rome—not in Switzerland—ah!" His hand flew out, and with that Francois was on his knee by the bedside, and had kissed the outstretched thin fingers, and the prince's other hand was on his shoulder fraternally.

"The old chateau of Viqueux—my playfellow, Francois. I told you then I was going to remember, didn't I?" Louis Napoleon demanded, laughing boyishly. "Mother, he saved my life from the falling wall. Do you remember the story of my runaway trip?" And Hortense, smiling, delighted to see her sad-faced boy so pleased and exhilarated, did remember, and was gracious and grateful to the young Frenchman. "It is a good omen to have you come to us today," she said with all the dazzling charm which she knew how to throw into a sentence. And then, eager with the headlong zest of a hunter for the game, she caught the thread which wove into the pattern of her scheming. "You would risk something to save him, would you not? You will take the place of the marquis and travel with us, tomorrow, and help me carry away the prince to safety?"

The dark young face was pale. "Your majesty, it is a happiness I had not dared to hope for yet."

"Yet?" the prince demanded laconically. He saved words always, this lad, but he always said his thought.

The other boy's face turned to him, and he answered very simply, "But yes, your highness. I have known always that I should have a part in your highness' fate."

In the gray dawn of the next morning there was a slight stir through the palace, and out between the lines of drowsy Austrian sentinels passed a procession of whose true character they were far from aware, else history had changed. The guard watched the departure; the sick lady—Hortense—late queen of Holland, as they all knew more or less clearly, drove away slowly in her traveling calèche, and on the box was a young man in the livery of a groom whom no one of the half-awake soldiers knew for Prince Louis Napoleon; in the middle of the second carriage sat another youth of two or three years younger who was, the queen's servants had been told, the Marquis Zappi. Their passports were examined and they went through the gates of the city without awakening the least suspicion.

Not once in all their dramatic series of escapes and disguises were Hortense and her sons betrayed, but they had to fear the indiscretion of their friends more than the malignity of their enemies, and this part of Italy was full of friends high and low.

At length it was time for Prince Louis and the sham marquis to drop their liveries and travel as the sons of the English woman for whom their passport was made out. The clothes which Beaupre was to wear had belonged to the young man dead at Forli—Louis Bonaparte's brother—and as he presented himself dressed in them, he saw the painful flush which crept upon the prince's face.

"Your highness, I am sorry," he stammered. "It is grief to me." And then he threw himself impulsively on his knees by the side of Louis' chair. "My prince, I wear them with reverence," he said, and then, hesitating, he added: "Perhaps I would seem less unworthy if your highness knew that, mere secretary as I am, I am yet more. I am noble. It is not simple Francois Beaupre whom you honor, but a man created chevalier by the sword of the emperor."

The dull eyes of the prince shot a glance between drooping lids. "What is it you mean, monsieur?" he demanded. But at the moment the queen entered the room, and the lads sprang to their feet. Her eyes caught the picture of the young Frenchman in his new dress at once; they opened wide and then filled with tears.

"Louis, Louis!" she cried, and laid her hand on his arm. "He looks like him; he looks like Napoleon!"

A deferential knock sounded at the door. Francois sprang to it, and the landlord stood in the opening, bowing elaborately—a soldiery old man with thick grizzled hair.

"A thousand pardons for disturbing miladi and the messieurs," and miladi smiled forgiveness. "Might an old soldier of the emperor dare to say that one could not help knowing the emperor's kinsmen?" He bowed low again to both boys alike, and again Hortense smiled at him. It was comforting to know that the two seemed brothers to the world in general, and she was so used to recognition and loyalty now that they appeared to belong together. "Might an old soldier of the emperor dare to show miladi—her majesty—and the highnesses, the sword which the emperor himself had touched, the sword which he, Jean Gredin, an old cuirassier of the guard, had carried in four battles? There was a little story of the sword, a story also of the wonderful goodness of the emperor, which miladi—her majesty—permitting, he would like to tell to her, as also to the highnesses."

And, her majesty permitting, and the boys pleased and interested, the old cavalryman brought the sword and drew it from its sheath and gave it to each of them to handle, and called on them to remark how it was as keen and bright as it had ever been at Ulm or Austerlitz. He cleared his throat, strongly, for the tale.

"Miladi—her majesty—permitting," he began, "it was on a day two days after the great battle of Austerlitz. The country, as her majesty and the highnesses will remember, was in a most dangerous condition. Desperate bands— Why was it the landlord stopped?"

The party, caught by the fervor of his manner, stared at him, annoyed as the tale of the emperor, promising so well, halted at its beginning. The man stood as if drawn to his tiptoes, every muscle tense, his head turned toward the doorway, listening. And suddenly they were aware of a stir, a growing noise; there were galloping horses; there was a jingle of harness, and voices coming nearer. With a step backward the landlord flashed a glance from under bushy brows down the corridor, through the open door at the end, which gave on the court of the inn.

"Mon dieu!" He faced the three, standing startled. He spoke fast and low. "Madame, it is a squad of Austrian soldiers; they are upon us. What can we do?" He hesitated only a second. "Bleu-bleu—my horse—saddled under the tree yonder—if one of the princes—if the prince—!" He glanced uncertainly from one lad to the other.

But the game was out of his hands. Quicker hands than his had caught the play. Francois Beaupre, the sber of the old cavalryman gleaming in his grasp, sprang to the doorway.

"It is monsieur there who is the prince," he explained rapidly to the landlord. "Hide him, take care of him—I will draw them away. When they are gone, see that the prince and the queen escape. That is for you; you are responsible."

There was the rush of a flying figure down the hallway, and out Francois flashed across a broken line of a dozen dismounted riders, straight toward the landlord's horse held by a groom under the trees. There was a shock of startled silence as the impetuous apparition, saber gleaming at wrist, shot across the court. Then there was a hubbub of voices, and a mass of uniformed figures fell toward him as he threw himself on the horse. A soldier caught at the bridle. The naked sword twinkled and the man was under Bleu-bleu's feet. For a second there was a vortex of men and a frantic horse, and riding the storm a buoyant figure of fury, flashing a blade, with infinite swiftness, this way and that. Then horse and lad shot out from the living canvas, streaked the background of trees a second and were gone, and the Austrian troopers scrambled into their saddles to follow.

Through sun-spotted, breeze-tossed woods tore the chase; across a road and over a low fence, and still Francois led, but the heavy horses gained. It was a hopeless hunt, for the landlord's mount was no match for the big cavalry horses, yet the rider's light weight and clever horsemanship counted, and it was fully four miles from the inn when Bleu-bleu stumbled and fell at a ditch, and Francois pitched over his head. His lead was short by now, and they were on him in a moment, in a mass; he was seized by a dozen burly Austrians.

The leader took a sharp look at him as he stood panting, staring defiantly.

"What is this?" the Austrian demanded sternly, and wheeled to a trooper in a bunch. "Friedrich, thou knowest the cub of the Bonapartes. Is this lad he?"

And Friedrich lunged forward, gasping, for he had run his horse hard, and shook his head. "No, my captain. I have never seen this one."

The boy looked from one to another of the threatening group, smiling, composed in spite of his quick breathing. The captain took a step close to him and shook his fist in his face.

"You have fooled us, you young

There Was a Hubbub of Voices.

game-cock, have you? But wait. Do you know what we will do to you, you bantam of a Frenchman? Do you know how we will treat you for this, we Austrians?"

Color deepened in his cheeks, and Francois drew up his figure magnificently.

"You may do what you like, Messieurs," he said gaily. "It is for your part is done. The prince is safe."

CHAPTER XIV.

After Five Years.

The window of the cell was small, but it was low enough so that a man standing could see from it the vast sky and the sea-line six miles away, and, by leaning close to the bars, the hill that sloped down into wooded country; beyond that the sand of the shore. The jailer stood close by the little window in the stormy sunset for a better light as he dropped the medicine.

"One—two," he counted the drops carefully up to five, and then glanced at the prisoner on his cot in the corner, who tossed, and talked rapidly, disjunctedly. "It is high time that the doctor saw him," the jailer spoke, half aloud. "If the governor had been here this would not have been allowed to run on. I am glad the governor is coming back."

With that the prisoner threw off the cover from his shoulders and sat up suddenly, with wild bright eyes staring at the jailer.

"Pietro!" he called in astonishment. "Why, my dear old Pietro!" and flung out his hands eagerly toward the man, and would have sprung from the bed to him.

But the jailer was at his side and held him down, yet gently. "Be quiet, signor," he said respectfully. "It is only old Battista; you will see if you look. Only Battista, who has taken care of you these five years."

The brilliant dark eyes stared at him hungrily; then with a sigh the light went out of them and the head fell on the pillow.

"Ah, Battista," he said, "my good Battista." A smile full of a subtle charm made the worn face bright. He spoke slowly. "I thought it was my friend—my best friend," he explained gently.

"Will the signor take the doctor's medicine?" Battista asked then, not much noticing the words, for the sick man was clearly light-headed, yet with a certain pleasant throb of memory which always moved within him at the name of Pietro. It happened that the name stood for some one dear to the jailer also. The signor took the medicine at once, like a good child.

"Will it make me better, do you think, Battista?" he asked earnestly.

"But yes, signor; the doctor is clever."

"I want to be better; I must get well, for I have work to do as soon as I come out of prison."

"Surely, signor. That will be soon now, I think, for it is five years; they will let you go soon; I believe," Battista lied kindly.

"You are good to me, Battista," the boy said, "and just now you gave me a great pleasure. It warms me yet to think of it, for you see, I thought you were Pietro—my dear Pietro—the Marquis Zappi."

Battista, breathless, stared, stammered. "Whom—whom did you say, signor?"

But the prisoner had flashed into reason. The color went out of his face as the tide ebbs. "Battista, did I say a name? Battista—you will not betray me—you will not repeat that name? I would never have said it but that I was not quite steady. I must have been out of my head; I have never spoken his name before in this place. Oh, if I should bring danger to him! Battista, for God's sake, you will not repeat that name?"

Battista spoke low, glancing at the heavy iron door of the cell. "God forbid, signor," he whispered, "that I should speak here in my own castle, the name of my young master."

There was a long silence. "The prisoner and his jailer gazed at each other as if saying things beyond words. Then the boy put out his long hot fingers and caught the man's sleeve."

"Battista," he murmured, "Battista—is that true? Is it possible? Do you know—my Pietro?"

"Know him, signor?" Battista's deep voice was unsteady. "My fathers have served his for eight hundred years." The man was shaking with a loyalty long pent up, but Francois lifted his head, leaned on his elbow, and looked at him thoughtfully.

"But, Battista, I know you now; he has spoken to me of you; it was your son, the little Battista, who was his body-servant when they were children?"

"Yes, signor."

"I did not dream of it; I never knew what castle this was; I never dreamed of Castleforte; you would not tell me."

"I could not, signor. It was forbidden. It is forbidden. I am risking my life every minute."

"Go, Battista," and Francois pushed him away with weak hands. "Go quickly—you have been here too long. There might be suspicion. I could not live if I brought trouble on you."

"It is right so far, signor," Battista answered. "It is known you are ill; I must care for the sick ones a little. But I had better go now."

With that he elipped to his knees and lifted the feverish hands to his lips. "The friend of my young master," he said simply, but his voice broke on the words. The traditional faithfulness of centuries was strong in Battista; the Zappis had been good masters; one had been cared for and contented always; one was terrorized and ground down by these "Austrian swine"; the memory of the old masters, the personality of anyone connected with them, was sacred. Battista bowed his head over the hands in his own, then he stood up.

"I shall be back at bedtime, signor," he said quietly, and was gone.

Whole Family Benefited By Wonderful Remedy

There are many little things to annoy us, under present conditions of life. The hurry, hard work, noise and strain all tell on us and tend to provoke nervousness and irritability. We are frequently so worn out we can neither eat, sleep nor work with any comfort. We are out of line with ourselves and others as well.

A good thing to do under such circumstances is to take something like to relieve the strain on the nerves. Mrs. J. B. Hartsfield, 33 Corput St., Atlanta Ga., writes:

"I have on several occasions been vastly relieved by the use of your medicines, especially the Anti-Pain Pills, which I keep constantly on hand for the use of myself, husband and two sons. Nothing in the world equals them as a headache remedy. Often I am enabled by the use of one or two of the Pills to continue my housework when otherwise I would be in bed. My husband joins me in my praise of the Anti-Pain Pills and Nervine."

The secretions may be dark, contain sediment.

Passages are sometimes frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is often present day and night. Headaches and dizzy spells may occur.

Weakened kidneys should receive quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys, backache and urinary disorders.

Arcola evidence proves their worth.

Mrs. Frank Schneider, 8, Pine street, Arcola, Ill., says: "In my opinion, Doan's Kidney Pills are the best kidney medicine on the market. I have used them on several occasions, when being annoyed by backache and they never failed to give me positive relief. I not only speak highly of Doan's Kidney Pills from my experience alone, but they have been used by others of my family with the most satisfactory results."

Price 50 cents at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Schneider had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. Advertisement.

Some Profit.

A handful of raw pig iron, weighing about five pounds, is worth five cents. From it 60 table-knife blades can be made, of a value of $15. Converted into steel watch springs, there can be about 110,000 of those tiny coils made from it. They sell for $1.75 a dozen, which would bring the neat sum of $19,070.83 for the five cents' worth of raw metal.—Browning's Magazine.

The Best Cough Medicine.

"I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy ever since I have been keeping house," says L. C. Hames, of Marbury, Ala. "I consider it one of the best remedies I ever used. My children have all taken it and it works like a charm. For colds and whooping cough it is excellent." For sale by Sam B. Hall and all dealers. adv.

Science Purposes Criminal.

Ultra-violet rays used while photographing a forged check are said to render detection absolutely certain. The forger uses a chemical ink eraser to remove some portion of the writing, but even though this be done so skillfully as to defy detection, under a high-power magnifying glass the rays reveal in the photograph a heavy smudge where the erasure occurred.

Sure Enough.

"So you depend on recognition from posterity?" said Mr. Dustin Stax. "Yes," replied Mr. Penwiggle. "Another generation will recognize my genius." "But how are you going to know whether the opinion of a future generation is any more trustworthy and desirable than that of the present public?"

Chance for Missionaries.

A missionary stationed in a land where the natives were cannibals wrote for assistance as follows: "Our small force of brethren seems to be unable to cope with the distress which prevails in this dark and benighted land. Many of the natives are starving for food. Please send a few more missionaries."

Faults Common to All.

On the whole we make too much of faults. Faults! The greatest of faults, I should say, is to have none.—Thomas Carlyle.

Take Notice!

I have purchased the entire stock of M. E. LEARNER, northwest corner of the public square, Sullivan, Illinois, and it is my intention to turn same into cash just as soon as possible.

CURE FOR APPENDICITIS NO KNIFE. NO OPERATION

1877-Dr. G. F. Dougherty-1913

The Specialist

Of Internal Diseases. Has been in the present location 36 years. One patient cured sends another. I have never changed location in all my life. Patients come to me.

APPENDICITIS

Treated and cured without an operation by the use of my SPECIAL FORMULA OF INTERNAL MEDICINE perfected years ago.

I have a RECORD of hundreds of cases of APPENDICITIS treated and cured without an operation. This RECORD is open for inspection to those interested. If your family physician can not cure appendicitis without an OPERATION have him come with you; I will give him some valuable information.

Liver and Intestinal Disorders:

Inactive or Torpid Liver. Intestinal Fermentation and Putrefaction. Intestinal Auto-Intoxication and Complications.

Bile Tract Infection:

Inflammation of Gall, Bladder and Ducts. Catarrhal Jaundice. Gall Stone Diseases, and Sequelae.

DISEASE OF THE STOMACH

Years ago I perfected a SPECIAL FORMULA OF INTERNAL MEDICINE for the treatment and cure of diseases of the stomach. I have a RECORD of hundreds of cases cured. I am better able to handle those cases for they have been my specialty all my professional life.

I DO NOT TRAVEL

It is not necessary for me to travel. Patients are coming from all parts of the state. My time is fully taken. You must secure a date before coming. Many dates are taken in advance. I accept, examine and give treatment to only two patients in one day. No Sunday work. Office closed on Sunday. For Particulars and dates, address
