Neoga Physician Does Great Work

The citizens of Neoga and surrounding country are justly proud of the labors of Dr. G. F. Dougherty, their fellow townsman, who, after years in investigation and scientific study of the therapeutic action of remedies, was able to blend those agents and formulate a perfect system of internal treatment by which the cure of appendicitis is assured. We are informed that after a careful examination the patient receives his treatment, returns to his home and is not confined for weeks to his bed.

Hundreds of cures have been made in and near Neoga. Hundreds coming, others are waiting for his treatment, while many are asking him to visit their homes in various parts of the state. The latter request he is unable to grant as his time is fully taken.

Dr. Dougherty is a reliable physician, having resided in Neoga, Ill., for the past 35 years. He has a very extensive practice and is considered the leading physician in this part of the state.—Shelbyville Democrat.

Mattoon, Ill., March 12, 1912.

I had been suffering with appendicitis for two or three years and had been advised to have an operation performed. I heard of Dr. G. F. Dougherty, of Neoga, Ill. I consulted him; after a very thorough examination he gave me his treatment. I returned home. After taking two months I was cured and have had no return of trouble. I can fully recommend Dr. Dougherty's treatment.

Missing Pastor.

Rev. O. M. Eaton, pastor of the Christian church at Cowden, has been missing from his home several days. He took charge of the church at that place on the first of January. Previous to that time he was an evangelist. He has a wife, two children and his aged parents dependent upon him. His father is 80 years of age and his mother 65. The wife and children have gone to her father, John Warren, living near Arthur. The father and mother are being cared for by the people of the Cowden church.

On the 8th of February Rev. Eaton left home to go to Flora, ostensibly to see the secretary of the evangelistic board. He did not go to the house but was seen at different times about town and sitting in the depot holding his head in his hands. He has held a clear record in the Christian church. His absence is a mystery and the people knowing him believe that he is suffering from some mental trouble.

A diligent search has been made for the man, and circulars were mailed throughout Central Illinois.

A letter received at Cowden a few days ago from Rev. Eaton, states that he had no intention of leaving his family, but he was in debt and got afraid and that he would send his parents some money in a few days. He also said he had a chance to make some good money.

That was all the information the letter conveyed.

Convict Labor.

At a conference in Springfield on Monday between Governor Dunn, Warden Allen of the Joliet penitentiary and the state highway commission plans were formulated for the employment of convict labor on the roads. Rock will be furnished by the penitentiaries, but township highway commissioners must guarantee the expense of transportation. Five miles was fixed as the minimum stretch of road upon which convicts will be employed. Warden Allen stated that 200 convicts will be available. Any township in the state may avail itself of the use of convict labor.

MARRIAGE.

WILEY-PEARS.
Joseph P. Wiley and Miss Olive A. Pears, of Humboldt, were married in Decatur, Tuesday afternoon, at the home of Rev. J. F. Mills, pastor of the First Baptist church.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wiley, living east of Sullivan. He graduated from the University of Illinois and is a prosperous farmer and stock raiser.

His wife attended the Chicago University three years and graduated from the Charleston normal.

They will reside on the groom's farm east of Sullivan.

To National K. of P. Meeting.

Attorney and Mrs. W. K. Whitfield left Monday evening for Chicago in order that Mr. Whitfield might join the official Knights of Pythias delegates from Illinois to the golden jubilee of the order which is being held in the New Willard hotel in Washington, D. C., on Feb. 19, 20 and 21. A special train was made up at the Grand Central station in Chicago Tuesday afternoon for the party. Among the Illinois officials in Grand Chancellor Whitfield's party were:

Henry Clay Berry, Chicago, the oldest living past supreme chancellor, John J. Brown, Vandalia, supreme representative.

Albert Watson, Mount Vernon, supreme representative.

Henry P. Caldwell, Chicago, grand keeper of records and seals, Joseph M. Omo, Chicago, past grand chancellor.

Charles L. Ritter, Murphysboro, past grand chancellor.

Representatives from other western states went on the special train with the officers.—Decatur Herald.

Change in Teachers.

Miss Olive Martin was elected principal of the Sullivan high school, last Friday night. This is a deserved promotion. There is other talent in the Sullivan school, that by diligence and some time spent in a normal school can prepare themselves for teachers in the Sullivan high school. The board has considered the home applicants and employed them, when they were satisfied as to their ability and capability.

The promotion resulted from the resignation of Prof. A. L. Smith, who had an opportunity of advancement in salary and position. Prof. Smith left for Iron River, Michigan, Thursday. He is succeeded by M. D. Abney, of Harrisburg, Illinois, who took charge of the work in the natural sciences, Friday morning.

Prof. Smith was a member of the McKinley Core club. He left Allen last 2 P. M. and arrived in Decatur about 8:30 of the same day.

On arriving in Decatur, I obtained lodging in the St. James hotel. On the following day I was directed to the interurban station where I met seventeen club winners and we boarded a car bound for Springfield.

On arriving in Springfield, we visited Lincoln's Home, State Capitol and State Library, returned to the station and started to St. Louis, arriving there about 5:15 P. M.

That night we visited an athletic club, and went to the Columbia Theater. We stayed at the Metropolitan hotel for the night.

The next day we visited Forest Park where we saw many different Statues and monuments of war. There were many different species of animals in the park. After we viewed all these interesting things we then were taken to the Mississippi river. We stayed there but a short time and then returned to the hotel where we ate dinner and started for home at 1 P. M. On arriving at Decatur some of the boys stopped off. The rest of us went on to Champaign; on arriving at Champaign, we obtained lodging at Beardley Hotel. The next morning I went to Mattoon on the Illinois Central. This ended my journey.

I advise all boys to become members of the McKinley Boys' Core Club.

MARK BUCKLEW, Brace, Ill.

Birthday Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Z. B. Whitfield gave a valentine party at their home on West Jefferson street, last Saturday afternoon, in honor of their son Zachie's thirteenth birthday. The time was very pleasantly spent with games, music and social conversation. During the afternoon light refreshments were served. Zachie was the recipient of many nice presents.

SYNOPSIS.

Francois Beaupre, a peasant babe of three years, after an amusing incident in which Marshal New figures, is made a Chevalier of France by the Emperor Napoleon, who prophesied that the boy might one day be a marshal of France under another Bonaparte. At the age of ten Francois visits General Baron Gersdorf Goursaud, who with Alixe, his seven-year-old daughter, lives at the Chateau. A soldier of the Empire under Napoleon sets Francois's imagination with stories of his campaigns. The general offers Francois a home at the Chateau. The boy refuses to leave his parents, but in the end becomes a copyist for the general and learns of the friendship between the general and Marquis Zappi, who campaigned with the general under Napoleon. Marquis Zappi and his son, Pietro, arrive at the Chateau. The general agrees to care for the Marquis's son while the former goes to America. The Marquis before leaving for America asked Francoise to be a friend of his son. The boy solemnly promises. Francoise goes to the Chateau to live. Marquis Zappi dies leaving Pietro as a ward of the general. Alixe, and Pietro meet a strange boy who proves to be Prince Louis Napoleon. Francoise saves his life. The general discovers Francoise's secret and sends her to Italy as secretary to Pietro. Queen Hortense plans the escape of her son Louis Napoleon by disguising him and Marquis Zappi as her lackeys. Francoise takes Marquis Zappi's place in the escape of Hortense and Louis. Dressed as Louis's brother, Francoise lures the Austrians from the hotel allowing the prince and his mother to escape. Francoise is a prisoner of the Austrians for five years in the castle owned by Pietro's uncle. He succeeds in his escape and Pietro's old family servants, and through him sends word to his friends of his flight. The general, Alixe and Pietro hear word and plan his rescue. Francoise as a guest of the Austrian governor of the castle prison inspects the interior of the wine cellar of the Zappis.

This is the way you are to get there. In the wine-cellar of the castle, which opens from the governor's room—in old times always the room of the lord—in that wine-cellar, on the north wall, is a square block of stone projecting slightly beyond the wall. If you press the lower corner on the left-hand side of the stone under this, the big stone above will swing out and show an opening large enough for a man to pass. Going through, you close the door by pressing the same stone, and you then will find yourself in an underground passage which leads straight half a mile through the earth to Riders' Hollow. The passage is five hundred years old and only the family of the Zappis have ever known of it. I went through it once in my boyhood with my father, and it was in perfect condition, so I believe it will be now. It was built with solidity—as one may believe, for if the old Zappis wanted it at all they wanted it in working order. "Your part will be difficult, Francoise, but I believe you can do it. You will have to get the key of the wine-cellar, or else force the lock. Can you do that? It is necessary to do it, Francoise, for we cannot get on without you, and we shall from now live only to set you free. I send you something which may be useful."

Francoise dropped the letter and picked up the long loaf and tore it apart. There was a file in the center. As if a powerful tonic had been infused into him he felt strength and calmness pour through him. He read the letters over and over till he had them by heart; then he concealed them carefully, with the file, in his mattress. After that he sat down and concentrated his mind with the new force working in it, on his plan.

The governor was almost certain to have him down to dinner again in two or three days; it was a pity that while he was there, all but on the spot, he could not possess himself of the key and escape. He thought over one or two plans on that basis, but they all whiptwrecked on the fact that the guards were accustomed to take him back to his room at eleven, and that, falling notice from the governor, they would certainly come to find out why if they were not called. That would start the pursuit; he must have the night clear. So he unwillingly let go of the great advantage of his own presence in the governor's room, so near the scene of action, and planned otherwise. With infinite forethought, with an eye to every contingency possible to imagine, he planned, and when the notice came, two days later, that the Count von Gersdorf wished him to dine with him that night, Francoise's heart leaped madly but exultantly, for he was ready.

Never had the young Frenchman been more entertaining, more winning to his tyrant than tonight, but the excitement of what was before him made it almost out of the question to eat the count's dinner. As before, the count prescribed old wine as a tonic, and took Francoise with him to get it. Tonight there were three bottles brought up—the count was preparing to drink hard. And Francoise had some trouble in not drinking with him; but he kept up his end with singing and acting, with a dance or two out of the peasant repertoire of the Jura, with a mock drill of an awkward squad at Saint-Cyr, with clever imitations of the few people whom he had seen about the castle, Battista's gruffness and mangled German words, and the sniffling mixed with grandiloquence of one of the guards; finally he grew daring and imitated the governor's superior officer who had visited the prisoner six months ago and had seen Francoise among the others. Francoise, with his body bent out, and a fat waddle, and an improvised eye-glass and a puffy short-breathed manner, spoke of the governor severely, puffing at him between sentences, reproving him, among other things, for having prisoners dine with him.

And the governor roared with delight, for this man was his rival and it did his soul good to see him made ridiculous. He roared, and drank to the imitation, and the imitation rebuked his levity throatily, till the governor roared and drank again and shouted for more. And Francoise, excited, exhilarated, did more; and still the governor drank as he acted. And the vaudeville went on. So that when the guard came at eleven the count was lying across the sofa, too tipsy to get to bed alone, and Francoise had to wait, pretending to be heavy with wine himself, while the two soldiers put the governor to bed.

At last he was taken upstairs between them, leaning on them limply; at last his door clanged shut; he listened to the footsteps of the two dying away down the stone hall, down the staircase; then swiftly he drew out the file and the letters from his mattress; he hid the papers, wrapped tight in their oilskin cover, in his coat lining; he set to work with the file to finish iron bars already three-quarters filed through. That was done and with fingers that seemed to work as fast, as intelligently as his brain, he tore the bedclothes into stout strips and tied them together with square knots which would not slip, and tied knots in the line at intervals of a few feet which might keep a man's fingers from slipping. He had to guess how long the rope must be, but the bedclothes were all used and the rope was many yards—it must serve. He put the file, with two candle ends which he had saved, in his pocket; he made one end of the strip fast to an untouched iron bar of his window; he weighted the other end, then he looked about a moment, half to see if all of his small resources had been remembered, half in a glance of farewell to a place where he had passed hours never to be forgotten.

With that he vaulted to the window-ledge and took the first knot in a firm grip and let himself out into the dark still night. His feet hung in the air, his hand slid fast—down that poor ladder of torn stuff; the die was cast; he was going to things unknown; he had taken a desperate chance and might not go back. And he slipped down, down, from knot to knot. Suddenly he came to the last knot; he had fastened a bit of wood there so that he might know when he got to the end. What was this? It certainly was the last knot; the bit of wood scraped his hand as he held it; but his feet did not touch ground.

There he hung, swaying in blackness, not knowing how far he might be above the earth, not knowing what to do. Only a moment, for instantly he knew that in any case he could not go back, if he would, up that slight swinging rope; he must drop, whatever happened. He bent his knees ready for the fall and let go. With a shock he landed and rolled, bruised and out of breath, but not injured; he looked up and in the dimness saw the last knot with its bit of wood swinging in air twelve feet or so from the ground.

But he had no time given him to consider this point, for at that second, at the far end of the closed yard a door opened, a blaze of light poured out, and a squad of six soldiers stepped from the castle, torches in the hands of the foremost. Francoise dropped, crouching into the shadows against the wall, but his heart grew sick as he realized the futility of this. The soldiers were coming straight toward him.

With that, a gleam on a brighter surface than the ground met his sight, below the level of the ground. His eyes, searching the darkness, made out a great but of water, sunken by the castle wall. Instantly he slid into it, up to his neck. It was not quite full, and his head did not show in the shadows of the inside. The blaze of the torches swept close, brighter, as Francoise, shivering in the cold water, glued himself to the dark side; the blaze of the torches waned, shadowy, gigantic, across the water and the castle wall; he heard the soldiers speak in short deep words; it was like an evil dream, and it slipped past, torches and dark-swinging shadows, and heavy tread of men and stern voices, like a dream. The heavy door shut, the lights were gone, everything was still.

More dead than alive, Francoise dripped from the water-butt. The hardest part of his night's job, the part that needed all his strength of body and brain, was immediately before him, and he stood nerveless, with clinking teeth, as limp as the traditional drowned rat. A moment he stood so, utterly discouraged, without confidence, without hope. Then with his trembling lips he framed words, words familiar to him for years, and with that, in a shock, he felt strength and courage rising in him like a slow calm flood. It was not less a miracle because there was no sign in the heavens, no earthquake or lightning; it was not less a miracle because many people living now might tell of a like help in fearful need. As it was once a long time ago, the water of his blood was changed into wine. So the prisoner stood in the courtyard in the blackness of midnight and found himself ready.

He groped his way to the shed he had seen from the governor's window; with his old boyish agility he scrambled up its sloping roof and felt for the coping he had noticed—the coping wide enough for a man's foot; he had found it; he had found a water pipe above to help him stand on it; he was on the coping, face flat to the wall, working his way with infinite delicate care to the window of the governor. He never knew how long that part took; it seemed a great while, though not many feet lay between the shed and the window. Then he felt the stone sill of the window; his hand crept up; it was open—wide open. With a strong pull he had swung himself over and stood in the dark, in the governor's bedroom.

Stood and listened, hardly daring for the first instant to draw the long breath he sorely needed. Then he smiled. No necessity for that caution at least. The governor was snoring a heavy aggressive snore which would have drowned most noises. Francoise stood quiet till his eyes had grown accustomed to the shadows, and then they searched about quickly. Ah! there they were, the governor's clothes. On a chair by his bed. With wary steps he stole across. He lifted off one or two things and suddenly there was a jingle.

"Ah!" growled the governor and fung out his hand, and the snore came to a full stop.

The hand searched the darkness a second; all but touched that of Francoise, then fell limply, the head turned away, with a deep sigh. Like a statue Francoise stood, frozen to the floor, and dared not look at the figure stirring in the bed, for fear his gaze might awake the sleeper. For he slept; the sound of the keys had only jarred some chord in his uneasy dream. Long minutes after the snoring was in full progress again Francoise waited, and then with careful fingers he clasped the entire bunch of keys softly and carried them into the next room.

There was a low light there, on the writing-table. Francoise slipped the thin, old, brass key which he knew off from the bunch; he glanced about quickly and found the flint and steel on its table and put them in his pocket; he took down that small saber, with its well-polished scabbard, and buckled it about himself; then a thought came to him. A sheet of paper lay on the governor's writing-table as if he had been about to write a letter; pen and ink were ready. The prisoner dropped into the governor's chair and wrote:

"My dear count, I cannot run away without leaving a good-by for you and a word of thanks for the kindness you have shown me. Be sure I shall not forget our evenings together and shall be glad when I hear of your promotion, as I am sure I shall hear. I heartily hope I am not going to make trouble for you. But I have to go—you will understand that. With a thousand thanks again I am, count, your grateful prisoner—Francoise Beaupre."

Still the count snored. Francoise, alert, stood and listened as he folded the note carefully and laid it under a weight on the table. Then he tempted Providence no longer. He slid the battered, bright, old, brass key softly into the lock, let himself into the dark stairway, relocked the door on the inside, groped his way painfully down the steep stairs into the wine-cellar, and when he felt a level floor under his feet struck a light with the governor's flint and steel. He lighted one of his candle ends. The wine-cellar, which he had left only two hours before, seemed almost homelike; it lacked the governor, that was all. He crossed to the projecting stone in the north wall, and pressed the corner of the stone below. Nothing happened. Hurriedly he pressed it again, harder, but the cold even surface of the wall stared him blankly in the face. Again he pushed—with no result. A sickness came over him. Was all his labor and peril to go for nothing? Was he to be caught again and thrust back, this time into some far worse dungeon? How had he dared to hope! The entrance was closed, overgrown, the masonry had grown solid with years and dampness.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Peasant Guide.

He flashed out the saber and desperately he slid it this way and that about the great stone, trying to find a crack, something to loosen, something that would give. And while he worked in a fever, in a chill, he remembered Pietro's letter.

Then he set down the candle end on a shelf and with trembling fingers drew off his coat and drew out the hidden papers. The wet from his bath in the water-butt had stained them a little, but only a little, for they were carefully wrapped in the bit of oilskin in which they had come. He unfolded the letter.

"If you will press the lower corner on the left-hand side," Pietro said—"the lower corner!"

And he had been concentrating all his efforts, all his despair, on the upper corner. When it is a question of life and death a man is superhumanly strong and quick sometimes, but he is also sometimes forgetful. It is an exciting and confusing thing, likely, to be working for life and liberty after five years of imprisonment. Francoise pushed the lower left-hand corner and like magic the great block above swung out. With his lighted candle end in his hand he slipped through and turned and swung back the door into place and turned again and faced blackness. Narrow, low, cold blackness. Quickly enough, however, with good courage, with his heart thumping out a song of hope, which he had kept down sternly till now, he walked, at times stooping low as he must be because of the descent, down the secret road of the old Zappis. His candle held forward, he could see a few feet ahead, but all he could see was huge blocks of rough stone, green with mold, water dripping between them. The air he breathed was heavy and thick; through his wet clothes he felt a chill as of the grave. But what mattered the road, when the road led to freedom?

Suddenly it came to him that the passage might be blocked. It was years since Pietro had been through it; some of the stones might have fallen—it would take very little to close so narrow a way. With an anxiety which was physical pain, with breathless eagerness now, he hurried on. He had to stop to light his second candle; again he hurried on. Would the end never come? Was any mistake possible? With that he stumbled against something and fell, and the candle flew from his hand and was put out; with a hoarse groan he threw out an arm to steady himself, to rise; his hand went through a yielding, prickly mass; a glimmer came in past it—light—the end!

Pushing, crashing, staggering through, he came into a strange place. It was as if a giant had taken a huge spoon and scooped out the top of the earth deep, very deep. All of this great hollow was filled with trees and tangled undergrowth. It was full of vague shadows in the glimmer of the earliest dawn. Francoise, standing there sobbing, ghastly with paleness, with matted hair and wild-staring eyes and gasping mouth and wet torn clothes, was a fit demon for the haunted spot. He saw nothing, no one; with that there was a soft snapping of twigs and a movement in the darkness farthest from him; a movement toward him. Tottling he crawled to meet it; in another second the shadows had shaped into figures—a peasant boy on a horse, leading another horse.

Then he stood close to them, and the boy, leaning over without a word put something into his hand, and Francoise, swaying with exhaustion, saw that it was a flask. He took a long swallow of cognac and his chilled blood leaped, and with that he had caught the bridle from the lad and was in the saddle.

In the shadows of trees, in a lonely lane, the peasant boy stopped his horse suddenly and made a short gesture toward the flask sticking out of Francoise's coat pocket. His strength was going again; it was exactly the right moment. Another swallow of brandy and he rode on with fresh courage. But something in the gesture of the peasant boy; something about his seat in the saddle, about the touch of his hands on the rein, gave Francoise a curious undefined shock. In the growing daylight he turned toward the silent rider. The coat collar was up and the broad-brimmed soft hat drawn down. The slim figure, outlined against the cool pink vastness of the morning sky was clad like an ordinary young peasant—yet! There was a poise, a grace, which seemed unlike a peasant, which seemed like— "Have we far to go?" Francoise demanded suddenly in French. The head turned swiftly; black exaggerated lashes lifted and under them were the blue eyes he knew.

"Alixe."

He cried it out loud, reckless, forgetting everything. But she did not forget. In an instant her hand was on his mouth, and she was whispering in terror.

"Francoise, dear Francoise, be careful. We are not safe yet. We have a village to ride through—see, there is a house. It is almost time for them to be awake. Ride fast. It is two miles yet."

They were racing again over the soft ground, the horses' unshod feet making little noise, and Francoise's heart was playing mad music. No need now of cognac. Then they were galloping down the sand of a lonely beach, and with that there was a little group of people and a boat drawn up; and they had pulled in the horses, and Francoise felt himself lifted off like a child and lying like a very little, worn-out child in the general's arms; and the general was crying, swearing, hugging him without shame. Pietro was there; Pietro was rubbing the thin hands in a futile useless sort of way, and holding them by turns to his face. Alixe, her peasant hat off now, bent over them, lovelier than ever before, not minding her boy's dress, and smiled at him, wordless. There was a huge man also who took the horses, and Francoise wondered if he had heard aught that Alixe called him "little Battista." Wondering very much at everything, the voices grew far away and the faces uncertain, and he decided that it was without doubt a dream and that Battista would unlock the door shortly and bring in his breakfast. And with that he knew nothing more till he awoke in a boat.

And it was with a new feeling; with a desire and a hope to live. Pietro sat watching him and brought him warm milk and held his head up as he drank it, like a woman. Then, in quiet, slow tones, he explained all the puzzle which Francoise had by now begun to wonder over. It seemed that just before little Battista had brought Francoise's letter to Viqueles, Pietro had received another unexpected letter, from a Colonel Hampton in Virginia, whose estate lay next the six thousand acres of land which the Marquis Zappi had bought fifteen years before. Colonel Hampton wrote with two requests. The first was that the Marquis Zappi should come to Virginia, or send some one with authority to look after his property. The land was going to rack and ruin for want of management; the uncontrolled slaves on the place were demoralizing to the neighborhood. Colonel Hampton had done what he could, but he had not the power of a master, and moreover he was busy with his own large estate. The marquis should come or send a qualified agent at once.

The next object of the letter was to ask that the marquis should receive and entertain the nephew of Colonel Hampton, Mr. Henry Hampton, who, sailing on Colonel Hampton's ship, the Lovely Lucy, would bring this letter to the marquis. The ship would go first to England and discharge there her cargo of tobacco, and after that it was to be at the service of young Mr. Hampton, to visit such countries of Virginia. He could not go himself, for he was in close connection with the work of Italian patriots outside and inside of Italy; with Mazzini in London; with others in other places. And he did not know anyone whom he could send.

So the matter stood when the big little Battista had brought Francoise's letter to Viqueles. And when Alixe had appealed to him to take Francoise's liberation on his shoulders, with the thought of the secret passage and the vaguely outlined plan of escape had come to him the recollection of Colonel Hampton's letter and the long sea voyage to Virginia.

So when Mr. Henry Hampton landed at Calais, a tall and very handsome and very silent young man took quiet possession of him and told him that he was the Marquis Zappi and that Mr. Hampton was to go with him to the chateau of Viqueles in the Jura. There was a certain gentle force about this young marquis which made opposition to his expressed wish something like banging one's head against a stone wall. Mr. Henry Hampton had planned going direct to Paris, but he went to Viqueles. And on the journey down the Marquis Zappi opened out a plan which richly rewarded him for his pliability. Mr. Hampton had come what clearer ideas on Italian politics than his uncle; he knew enough to detect the Austrians and to have a keen sympathy for the long, heroic, losing fight—so far losing—of those devoted men who were counting their lives as nothing for a united Italy. The scheme of helping to rescue a prisoner out of an Austrian fortress was an adventure such as made his eyes dance. Mr. Hampton was twenty-one and full of romance, romance as yet ungratified. So, Pietro told Francoise, this long explanation over, the Lovely Lucy was anchored at an unimportant island outside the port for which they were bound, and Francoise and the others were to go on board and set sail promptly for some port of France. There the general, Alixe, Pietro and little Battista, were to be put ashore, and Francoise was to sail across to Virginia with Mr. Hampton and take possession for Pietro of his American estates.

Francoise, lying in bed with his eyes glowing like lanterns, listened. But as his friend finished he broke out, with a sharp pain in his voice.

"Pietro! I want to see my mother."

And Pietro was silent, laying a quiet hand over the unsteady one. Without a word he sat so and let the sick man think. The line of red which came into the pale cheeks told that he was thinking intensely, and at last, with a shivering sigh which went to the other's heart:

"You are right, Pietro," he said. "It is a wonderful plan for a broken man. It is like you to do everything right without a word said. The sea voyage, the healthy life in Virginia—that ought to make a man of me again soon, ought it not, Pietro?"

Pietro could not speak as he looked at the wrecked figure, but he nodded cheerfully.

"As for your place, I'll have that in order in a month, and in a year it will be a model for Virginia; and then I'll come home."

Pietro smiled.

"Come home and fight for the prince—for our Prince Louis. Do you remember that afternoon at the chateau, Pietro, and the strange boy, and how he fascinated us and how—the weak voice stopped at every syllable, but slipped on again cheerfully. The familiar charm of the boy Francoise was strong as he talked. "And how he was not to be frightened by any danger of an old wall—" and Francoise stopped, smiling.

"And how you saved him," Pietro added.

"That was a chance," said Francoise quickly. "But, Pietro, do you remember how Alixe turned on you, because I had done it? Droll little Alixe!"

"She always scorned me because I was not wonderful like you, Francoise. You were always the hero," Pietro said gently, and pressed the skeleton hand under his own.

Francoise's eyes blazed up at him then as they had done so often in boyhood. "Not that, Pietro. You do not understand. It was because Alixe wished always to see you first. I was older and had a certain quickness—she wanted you to have my poor facility as well as all of your own gifts."

Pietro smiled his kind quiet smile. "My Francoise, I have no gifts. And if Alixe is more proud of you it is right, for you are a pride to all of us and I am the last to grudge one particle of honor or love to you. Francoise—Pietro's deep voice stopped, and then he went on in his straightforward, simple way—"Francoise, it is not possible for me to tell you how glad I am to have you, my brother, back from the dead."

And weak, nerve-wrecked Francoise, holding tight to Pietro's hand, turned his face to the wall and cried.

Now that the end of effort was over, the strain of the long years showed their effects in a collapse; the stretched chord had fallen loose, relaxed as if it might never make music again. When the time came to leave the sailboat of Luigi and go aboard the Lovely Lucy, the effort was too much for the man who, two nights before, had shown the nerve and agility of an acrobat. When he must leave the boat and make the change, he fainted, and, wrapped in a blanket, ghastly white, unconscious, the little Battista carried his light weight up the ladder of the American ship.

REVOLUTION OF NORTH POLE

Striking Confirmation of the Shifting of Earth's Axis Comes in Report From South Africa.

A quarter of a century ago it began to be noticed that the north pole is wobbling slightly, and soon afterward two movements were made out—an annual revolution in an ellipse about 20 feet long, and a revolution in about 425 days in a circle about 26 feet in diameter. Striking confirmation of this shifting of the earth's axis now comes from South Africa. A report of the Cape observatory shows that on installing a new transit circle some years ago permanent longitude and latitude marks were made on the solid rock many feet below the earth's surface, and since then variations of these marks, as compared with star observations, indicate a revolution of the pole, as has been calculated.

USING A MASSAGE MACHINE

Squeezing of Bulb Makes Rod Work Like Plunger—Plunger Rapidly Moved Back and Forth.

A compact and effective massage machine that is operated by hand is shown in the illustration. It was designed by a Philadelphia man. The apparatus works on the same principle as the piston rod of an engine. A driving shaft is pivoted in the cylinder and is driven by compressed air forced into the cylinder by squeezing the big rubber bulb on the end of the latter. The plunger is thus rapidly moved back and forth. On the other end of this plunger is a rubber suction cup and this cup acts like all suction massage devices, taking hold and letting go of the flesh as the plunger approaches and recedes. The advantage of this little machine is that the user need not press down with the cup, as in some makes, and then pull it loose each time. All he has to do is to keep on squeezing the bulb and the piston rod will do the rest.

ODD VEHICLE FOR INVALIDS

Wheels Are Revolved by Stamping Up and Down on Pedals—Works on Principle of Bicycle.

An Illinois man has designed an odd-looking vehicle and just what purpose it will serve is a problem, unless it can be used by invalids. A small platform has a post rising from the back with a seat on it and steering post rising from the front, the latter operating a guide wheel. Two larger wheels are mounted beneath the platform and between them is a drum with a ratchet mechanism in it. Treadles rise through the platform and by pedaling on these the ratchet mechanism is set in motion and the wheels revolved. The vehicle works on the same principle as that old-fashioned type of bicycle that was driven by pushing up and down instead of by driving pedals, as all do now. With this apparatus a man can walk about while sitting down.

Vertical Motor.

A vertical axis rotary motor has been developed in France for use in hydro-aeroplanes, as it can be completely protected from water.

HOSPITAL CAR FOR RAILROAD

Sanitary Bed, Easily Disjointed, is One of Accessories—Also Adaptable to Outdoor Sleeping.

The latest accessory to railroad equipment is the hospital car, and it promises to play an important part in the provision for the care of injured persons.

The car, which was designed by Dr. Anthony Thomas Weber, a railroad surgeon, is fitted up with an operating room and a ward, separated by a screen partition. For the care of the injured, the ward is supplied with sanitary spring beds. These beds, the invention of a retired member of the Chicago police department, Mr. Alton E. Gosso, 164 North Central avenue, Chicago, are rapidly becoming an important factor in the equipment of hospitals, bunk cars, emergency cars, camps, summer homes, and private residences where emergency or practical sanitary beds are required.

The bed is an innovation, brought out by the fact that the inventor saw the need of a more practical stretcher than those in vogue in the police department. By fitting the frame to the handles with springs, he nullified the shock to the patient while being carried, and by still further improvement he developed this stretcher into a spring bed. The frame being made entirely of steel, with the canvas stretcher which can be readily removed and washed, the sanitary features of this bed appealed at once to the physicians, and many leading surgeons of Chicago have tried it in various capacities, and have given it hearty endorsement.

The bed is easily disjointed and stored in a compact space when not in use. It can be readily assembled, and in addition to its unusual virtues for hospital and emergency use, it is adaptable to outdoor sleeping, or can be used as a most comfortable indoor bed. Because of its compact and sanitary qualities, the bed was recently installed in the Municipal lodging house in Chicago, where it instantly became popular among the patrons. Because of its spring attachment, these men gave it the preference over beds equipped with mattresses.

The Man Without Folly.

William Dean Howells, apropos of the tercentenary of the birth of La Rochefoucauld, quoted at a dinner in Boston some of the famous Frenchman's maxims.

"La Rochefoucauld," said Mr. Howells, "wasn't the sorrowful misanthrope some people think, but a gay and gallant figure. His character was best portrayed, indeed, by one of his best maxims:

"He who is without folly is not so wise as he thinks."

ECZEMA SPREAD OVER BODY

Roxbury, Ohio.—"When my little boy was two weeks old he began breaking out on his cheeks. The eczema began just with pimples and they seemed to itch so badly he would scratch his face and cause a matter to run. Wherever that matter would touch it would cause another pimple until it spread all over his body. It caused disfigurement while it lasted. He had fifteen places on one arm and his head had several. The deepest places on his cheeks were as large as a silver dollar on each side. He was so restless at night we had to put mittens on him to keep him from scratching them with his finger nails. If he got a little too warm at night it seemed to hurt badly.

"We tried a treatment and he didn't get any better. He had the eczema about three weeks when we began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bathed him at night with the Cuticura Soap and spread the Cuticura Ointment on and the eczema left." (Signed) Mrs. John White, Mar. 19, 1913.

MEMBER OF PASTOR'S FLOCK

Benevolent Clergyman Was Right in Assuming That He Knew Youngster He Addressed.

Dr. Milo Hudson Gates, vicar of the Chapel of the Intercession, is a benevolent and fatherly man. He has no children of his own, but is godfather to nearly 80. A few belong to his friends, but the greater number are children who have been presented for baptism with no one to stand sponsor for them. A dozen or more bear Dr. Gates' name.

Not long ago he was walking down Broadway near One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street, and saw a small Italo-American industriously digging in the dirt. Thinking there was something familiar about the youngster's appearance, he patted him on the head and asked: "What's your name, young man?"

The boy looked up from his excavating and replied: "Meelo Hud-so-a Gatus!"—New York Evening Post.

SWEEPSTAKE UPON SWEEPSTAKE

CANADA ADDING OTHERS TO ITS SERIES OF VICTORIES.

A Manitoba Steer Carries Off Similar Honors to Those Won by a Half-Brother in 1912.

When Glencarock I, the Aberdeen-Angus steer, owned by Mr. McGregor of Brandon, Manitoba, carried off the sweepstakes at the Chicago Live Stock Show in 1912, it was considered to be a great victory for barley, oats and grass versus corn. So that there might be no doubt of the superiority of barley feeding, Manitoba climate, and judgment in selecting the animal, Mr. McGregor placed in competition in 1913, another Aberdeen-Angus, a half-brother to the animal that won last year, and secured a second victory in the second year. In other classes he had excellent winnings, but the big victory was the sweepstakes for the best steer. This victory proved that Manitoba-grown barley and oats, and prairie hay, had properties better than any contained in corn, which in the past has been looked upon as being superior to other grains in fattening and finishing qualities. Not only this, but Glencarock's victory proves that the climate of the prairie provinces of western Canada, in combination with rich foods that are possessed by that country, tends to make cattle raising a success at little cost.

Other winnings at the live stock show which placed western Canada in the class of big victories were: Three firsts, seven seconds, and five other prizes in Clydesdales. The winners, Bryce, Taber, Sutherland, Sinton, Mutch, McLean, Haggerty, Leckie and the University of Saskatchewan are like family names in Saskatchewan. Each one had "the goods" that won honor to himself and combined made a name and record for Saskatchewan.

Look at the recent victories won by western Canada within the past three years.

In February, 1911, Hill & Sons of Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, showed a peck of oats at the National Corn Exposition, held at Columbus, Ohio, and carried off the Colorado silver trophy, valued at $1,500.

In February, 1913, the same men, father and son, had a similar victory at Columbia, N. C., and should they win in 1914 at Dallas, Texas, they will own the trophy.

In 1911, Seager Wheeler of Rosthern won $1,000 in gold at the New York Land Show for the best 100 pounds of wheat.

In 1912 at the Dry Farming Congress at Lethbridge, Alberta, Mr. Holmes of Cardston won the $2,500 Rumley engine for best wheat in the world.

In 1913, at the Dry Farming Congress, held at Tulsa, Okla., Mr. F. Gerlack of Allen, Saskatchewan, carried off the honors and a threshing machine for the best bushel of wheat shown in competition with the world.

In 1913 at the International Dry Farming Congress at Tulsa, Okla., Canada won the majority of the world's honors in individual classes, and seven out of the sixteen sweepstakes, including the grand prize for the best bushel of hard wheat.

The grand prize, a threshing machine, was won by Paul Gerlack for best bushel of hard wheat, which weighed 71 pounds to the bushel, and was of the Marquis variety.

In the district in which the wheat was grown that won this prize, there were thousands of acres this year that would have done as well. Mr. Gerlack is to be congratulated, as well as the province of Saskatchewan, and western Canada as a whole, for the great success that has been achieved in both grain and cattle.

Other prizes at the same place were:

- Best peck of barley, Nicholas Tetmiger, Claresholm, Alberta.
- Best peck of oats, E. J. Lanigan, Elfrass, Saskatchewan.
- Best bushel of fax, John Plews, Carnduff, Saskatchewan.
- Best sheaf of barley, A. H. Crossman, Kindersley, Saskatchewan.
- Best sheaf of fax, R. C. West, Kindersley, Saskatchewan.
- Best sheaf of oats, Arthur Perry, Cardston, Alberta.

Best Relief from Sciatica. "I had my back hurt in the Deer War and two years ago I was hit by a street car. I tried all kinds of dope without success. I saw your Liniment in a drug store and got a bottle to try. The first application caused instant relief, and now I can get on my feet. I am almost well."—Wm. J. Adams, Memphis, Tenn.

As a user of your Liniment for the last 15 years, I can say it is one of the best on the market. Fifteen years ago I contracted my ankle and had to use crutches, and the doctors said I would always be lame. A friend advised me to try your Liniment and after using it night and morning for three months I could walk without a cane and run as good as any of the other fellows in my department. I have never been without a bottle since that time."—Mr. J. James H. Brown, Genoa, Ill.

How to Detect the Alum Baking Powder

"Which are the alum baking powders; how can I avoid them unless they are named?" asks a housekeeper.

Here is one way: take the can of a low-priced powder in your hand and read the ingredient clause upon the back label. The law requires that if the powder contains alum that fact must be there stated. If you find one of the ingredients named alum, or sulphate of aluminum, you have found an alum baking powder.

There is another and a better way. You don't have to know the names of the alum powders. Use Royal Baking Powder only; that assures you a cream of tartar powder, and the purest and most healthful baking powder beyond question.

Mrs. Sarah Armstead has been in declining health for several months in the hotel of Miss Sadie Scott. Her condition has become so serious as to need an attendant part of the time. Miss Scott is caring for her for charity's sake, but not being strong or well herself, the burden is too much for her.

Mrs. N. A. Heacock has been absent from Sullivan several months. She had been in Arkansas with Mr. Heacock while he harvested his rice crop. Returning, they stopped at their farm a while in Missouri. They are estimable young people and we wish them ever success.

"The New Minister"

The play given under the direction of the Ladies Aid of the M. E. church in the Armory last Tuesday evening, was not only a good play, but the participants played their parts well. It was evident that in assigning the parts, the right ones had been selected to impersonate the characters.

The audience was in a roar of laughter from the beginning to the end of the play.

The stage was well arranged and the speakers could be distinctly heard. The music furnished by the orchestra was good.

Be sure and attend next Tuesday evening.

Ask those that were there last week, if it was not fine.

Tuesday, February 24. Admittance to all parts of the house 25 cts.

Give that Puny Child this Guaranteed Remedy.

If your child is under-weight, listless, allig, liable to get sick easily, it needs a medicine to build its weight and strength. For this purpose there is nothing else we know of that we can so strongly endorse as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. The remarkable success of this splendid medicine is due to the fact that it contains ingredients that tone the nerves, enrich the blood and furnish to the entire system the strength, weight and health-building substances it needs. And it does all this without injuring the stomach. In fact, Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is not only pleasant to take, but even the most sensitive stomach is benefited by it and the digestion improved. On the other hand, it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs, which most parents object to giving their children. It does its good work by taking hold of the weakness and builds up the body to its natural strength, at the same time making it strong to resist disease.

If Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion doesn't build your child up, feed the stunted, puny muscles, and make the little one lively, strong, well and full of the animal spirits children are meant by nature to have, come back and tell us and get your money back. We don't want you to lose a cent. We think this is no more than fair, and it leaves you no cause to hesitate. For old people also—for convalescents—for all who are nervous, tired-out, run-down, no matter what the cause—we offer Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion with the same guarantee of entire satisfaction or money back. HOLY ROLLER BAND MOBBED IN COURT

PREACHER, ONE OF FOUR WHO WHIPPED BOYS, IS BADLY BEATEN AT TRIAL.

LYNCHING BEE THREATENED

Courtroom Crowd Is Uncontrollable When the Victims Bare Bruised Backs—Second Assault Made on the Way to Jail.

Newton, Ill.—Prompt action on the part of Sheriff Pippin prevented the lynching of four Holiness fanatics after they had been found guilty and each fined $100 for beating two small boys in order to rid them of the devils which they were supposed to possess.

According to the story told at the trials, Raymond Richardson and Cameron C. Richardson, 10 and 12 years of age, sons of Mrs. Allie Richardson, were supposed to be possessed of devils and were badly beaten at a meeting of the Holiness cult. As a result four were arrested.

Those arrested were: Frank Cummins, Cameron Cummins, Mrs. Emma Vantress and Rev. Lyons. The charge preferred against them was assault and battery.

Fined Second Time. A trial was held the next day and resulted in a verdict of guilty being found against each defendant and each was fined $100 and costs. They gave bond and were freed only to be rearrested on similar charges. The second trial resulted in the second verdict of guilty and a repetition of the fines assessed at the first trial.

The evidence given by the Richardson boys was the basis of the prosecution. When the backs of the boys were exposed in court and were seen to be a mass of cuts and bruises, those at the trial became so enraged that an assault was made on Rev. Lyons. The preacher was badly beaten before Sheriff Pippin and his aids could restore order. A second outbreak occurred at the conclusion of the trial. As the defendants were taken to jail for protection a mob followed them and threat of lynching were made, but Sheriff Pippin and a large force of special deputies surrounded the prisoners and protected them.

Different Colors of Clouds. In answer to a subscriber's question concerning the color of clouds, the Nature and Science department of St. Nicholas says:

"White clouds are those which are so thin that sunlight comes through them, or else they are in such a position that the side seen by the observer is lighted by the sunlight. Black clouds are those that are so thick, or dense, that little sunlight passes through them, and at the same time are not illuminated by sunlight on the side seen by the observer. It is these heavy, large clouds that are most likely to produce rain.—St. Nicholas.

Cold Cured by Cold. "Without having gone anywhere near either pole," writes a correspondent of the London Chronicle, "I have had my experience of the fact that intense cold outside stops the cold in the head. We were six men, essaying to ascend on the Grand Combin, in the Alps (over 14,000 feet). From our first attempt we were driven back by a thunderstorm and a stay of some hours to dry in the hut with the stove going woke up all the microbes. When we returned to the hut next day from the valley, there were at least four severe colds among us, with sneezing and sore throats. On the third morning we traversed our peak slowly cutting snow and ice steps in weather memorably bitter even for that height. On the other side it suddenly occurred to me that I had no 'cold' left, and the others made the same discovery."

SCHOOL TEACHERS. Also Have Things to Learn. "For many years I had used coffee and refused to be convinced of its bad effect upon the human system," writes a veteran school teacher.

"Ten years ago I was obliged to give up my much-loved work in the public schools after years of continuous labor. I had developed a well defined case of chronic coffee poisoning.

"The troubles were constipation, flutterings of the heart, a thumping in the top of my head, and various parts of my body, twitching of my limbs, shaking of my head and, at times after exertion, a general 'gone' feeling, with a toper's desire for very strong coffee. I was a nervous wreck for years.

"A short time ago friends came to visit us and they brought a package of Postum with them, and urged me to try it. I was prejudiced because some years back I had drunk a cup of weak, tasteless stuff called Postum which I did not like at all.

"This time, however, my friends made the Postum according to directions on the package, and it won me. Soon I found myself improving in a most decided fashion.

"The odor of boiling coffee no longer tempts me. I am so greatly benefited by Postum that if I continue to improve as I am now, I'll begin to think I have found the Fountain of Perpetual Youth. This is no fancy letter but stubborn facts which I am glad to make known."

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

DENTISTS PICK MARION FOR MEET

Southern Illinois Association Close Meeting.

NEW OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Dr. R. A. McCall of Vienna Chosen President—Thirty-Five Delegates Attend the Gathering in Anna.

Springfield.—The two days session of the Southern Illinois Dental Society was brought to a close in the city of Anna.

Marion was selected as the 1918 meeting place at the final session of the convention.

Thirty-five delegates attended. Dr. Don M. Galles of Chicago gave an illustrated lecture on the care of the teeth to public school pupils. Dr. G. W. Winters of St. Louis lectured on "Exodontia."

Dr. R. A. McCall of Vienna was elected president, J. L. Ferry of Murphysboro, vice-president, and Dr. W. A. McFee of Centralia, secretary.

Lincoln Honored in Springfield.

United States Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Arkansas; Dr. Steven Wise, rabbi of the Free Synagogue, New York city, and Percival G. Rennick, Peoria, addressed a brilliant banquet in the state arsenal here, given under the auspices of the Lincoln Memorial association, to honor the memory of Lincoln, in this his home and his burial place.

Those who sat at the speakers' table were United States District Judge J. Otis Humphrey, toastmaster; Gov. Edward F. Dunne, Justice Frank Dunn of the Illinois supreme court, Charleston; State Treasurer William Ryan, Jr.; Attorney General Patrick J. Lucey, Secretary of State Harry Woods, Francis G. Blair, state superintendent of public instruction, and John W. Bunn, Springfield.

Senator Robinson declared in his address: "If Mr. Lincoln were alive today, there is not a home in all the south that would not give him a joyous welcome. The surviving followers of the dauntless Lee, United Knights in Gray, would combine with the scattered fragments of Grant's legion to form his guard of honor."

Stephenson Post, G. A. R., held exercises at the monument in Oak Ridge.

Pension Law of Interest.

The proposed teachers' pension law, which has the endorsement of the state teachers' association, of which Superintendent H. S. Magill, Jr., of Springfield schools is president, is the subject of many letters and much inquiry from Mr. Magill by teachers throughout the state, who are either in favor of or opposed to the proposed legislation.

The most pronounced opposition to such a measure comes from among the older teachers, who are aroused lest the burden of their contributions to the pension fund would be too large, while on the other hand, protests come from young teachers, who object to being confronted with 25 years of contributions to the fund before they will be allowed to participate in the benefits. There are also numerous inquiries from teachers who have served 25 years in class rooms as to whether they are to be entitled to pension benefits.

Survey of Illinois to Be Published.

The preparation and publication of an historical, economic and social survey of the state of Illinois practically was agreed upon by Governor Dunne and members of the Illinois centennial commission as one of the features of the celebration in 1918 of the centennial anniversary of the admission of Illinois to statehood.

Members of the publications committee of the centennial commission, who met with the governor, were advised to prepare as accurate an estimate as possible of the cost of the work contemplated, together with a prospectus of the plan and scope of the survey, and to lay them before the governor as soon as convenient. When the plans and figures are brought down to a point approved by the governor, he will be ready to recommend the project to the next general assembly, which will be asked to provide funds for the undertaking.

The delegation in conference with Governor Dunne included Dr. Otto L. Schmidt, president of the State Historical society, and Prof. E. B. Greene of the University of Illinois, both members of the centennial commission, and Professors De Wolfe and Forbes of the University of Illinois, whose expert opinion regarding the prospective publications was desired.

It is planned to make the volumes in question popular works, rather than scientific, so they will be of value to people generally who are engaged in any industry relating to the subjects treated of, rather than of mere academic value to those of historical or literary inclination.

Would Unite Labor Bodies.

An appeal to all unaffiliated central bodies and local unions in the state was sent out from the local offices of the Illinois Federation of Labor, over the signatures of President John H. Walker and Secretary-Treasurer James F. Morris, asking that these unaffiliated units of labor become members of the state organization.

The following was in part the text of the circular: "If there are any enemies of organized labor in official government positions that you would like to have defeated we would like to render you whatever assistance we can in that direction, and would like to get your assistance in doing the same work against all other enemies of organized labor that may be in official positions in the different other sections of the state. We would like to have your cooperation too in seeing that only honest men and women real friends of the toilers are elected or appointed to positions of influence in our government."

"We would like to, in the event of strikes to be able to render what assistance we can in informing the membership of the state of your point of view in the matter, and in contributing our appeal that they assist you under those circumstances."

"We would also like to have you in a position where you can learn the point of view of the other workers in the state who may have to battle to improve conditions, or against adverse conditions, that the employers attempt to impose on them."

"Outside of all this it is every good man and woman's plain duty to do their full share in the common battle for humanity's progress, and on that account you should be with us."

Will Retain Position.

Mrs. Estelle Baird, assistant state librarian, against whom Secretary of State Woods some time ago filed charges of incompetency, will continue in her position. The state civil service commission, which conducted the hearing, so decided.

Not only will Mrs. Baird be reinstated, but back pay will be allowed her for the period of suspension, pending the investigation of the secretary's charges.

The civil service commission did not pass exhaustively on the question of competency. In view of the fact that there now exists no basis for the adjudging of competency in the state library under the classified service, the commission in the near future will conduct an examination, to which all library employees will be subjected.

Articles of Incorporation.

Secretary of State Woods issued certificates of incorporation to the following:

North American Specialty company, Chicago, capital, $50,000. Incorporators—J. Kennedy Anderson, Gustav Cohn, William S. Smith.

Grawlog Artificial Ice company, Chicago, capital, $5,000. Incorporators—Haim Grawlog, Allen Grawlog, Isadore Grawlog.

INTO THE OPEN FIELD

Should Go the Seeker of Spiritual as Well as of Physical Welfare.

Undoubtedly one of the most salutary discoveries of modern medical science is that of the value of fresh air as an agent of general bodily health. In the old days we use to muffle up our throats to keep out bronchitis, pad our chests against contamination and sleep behind closed windows to escape the contagion of the night atmosphere. Today all this is changed. The victim of a bad throat or weak chest is taught to expose the affected parts to the outer air as much as possible. The fresh air treatment of tuberculosis is now universal. The wise man sleeps in winter as well as in summer with every window wide open—or, still better, out of doors! To keep out in the open air is in our time the first law of health.

Now, very impressive is it to note that what is true as regards the body is no less true as regards the soul. In the spiritual life as well as the physical, we are learning the value of fresh air. No longer do we drive the tempted soul into the ways of solitude or separate the sinner from contact with his fellows.

Active Life Beneficial. No longer do we regard the monastery as the refuge of virtue or the dark silence of the hermit cell as the cure of spiritual corruption. We know today that retirement is dangerous and active life in the outer world always beneficial. If a man be overwhelmed with cares or beset with temptations or stricken with some loathsome moral cancer let him flee from the lonely chamber where he knows only dull brooding and sterile remorse and desert the towering altars where he makes confession and does penance. Let him take his anxiety or sin into the open air. Let him go down to the sea, and look out to the hills. Let him heed the skylark, and dance with the daffodils. Let him seek the company of the sun, and bow to the benediction of the stars. Let him, in a word, hold "communion with Nature in her variable forms," and let his cares will fall from him like a ragged garment and his sin vanish away as a little thing. The air will make him pure. The sun will give him light. The shining firmament will lift him to its own expanse of beauty. In the words of Mrs. Browning:

The little cares that fretted me I lost them yesterday Among the fields above the sea, Among the husking of the corn Where drowsy poppies nod, Where all thoughts die and good are born, Out in the fields with God.

Getting Rid of Troubles. And if it is beneficial thus to bring our ills under the influence of Nature, how much more beneficial still is it to bring them under the influence of our fellows! What unworthy thought can flourish in the presence of a good man, or what ignoble motive survive the grace of a good woman? How shall we maintain our petty envies and deceits in the face of little children, or keep our selfishness alive amid the sweet influences of comradeship and family love? Where is there cruel passion or secret sin which is strong enough to resist the wholesome impulses of the crowd? What we need, if we would keep our souls free of all unhealthiness, is simply the open air—the open air of rubbing elbows, clasping hands, making friends, knowing people, "going with the multitudes"—above all, of seeking the near companionship, if possible, and the distant influence, if nothing better, of men and women who are stronger, braver, purer than ourselves! To know men, to love men, to work with men, to live with men—to know the grace of brotherhood and the joy of fellowship—this is the first law of the spirit.

Out in the open, therefore! Away from solitudes and silences—from windows closed and doors barred against the world! And lo! it shall be seen that strength and beauty are the sanctuary of the soul as well as of the body.

Bits of Truth. There is satisfaction which accrues to the individual who is tired when the evening shadows fall with the weariness of an honest day's work.

Vice would lose its horror if we were compelled to do wrong and virtue its merit if we were slaves to do right. This is where independent manhood and womanhood may exert itself. We are placed upon our merits. The world will find you out. It will discover the kind of material of which you are made. Christ would have each become manly men and womanly women because this type of life yields the largest returns to the individual and the age.

Man may "sow," but "God must give the increase." If we have been the recipients of large gifts they should be dedicated for service. The bountiful harvest should hasten the rule of the Prince of Peace in the hearts of a grateful people.

We err when we separate God's interest from the activities of the world which he has created.—The Rev. Frank W. Court.

Consolation in Labor. There is nothing worth having that can be had without labor; labor, therefore, and improve the time. If we neglect our springs, our summers will be useless and contemptible, our harvest will be chaff, and the winter of our old age unrespected and desolate.—Sir Walter Scott.

WONDERFUL PERFORMANCE OF WIND WAGON

Wind Wagon Equipped With Runners Furnishes Much Good Winter Sport.

Surprises come often when the wind wagon performs. It has now been equipped with runners and has been driven at high speed over the snow-covered roads and the ice of the river and creeks around Indianapolis. The wind wagon is driven entirely by the wind resistance created by the revolving propeller in the rear. The differential is not connected with the drive shaft. In fact, there is no drive shaft.

as a chain combination connects the motor and the eight-foot wooden aeroplane propeller in the rear. There is only a six-inch clearance between the wooden propeller and the ice and for this reason, and also because it frightens horses, it cannot be used much on the roads. One can have great winter sport "skating" with the wind wagon on the river when the ice is thick enough.

MAKE-UP OF MONORAIL SLED

In Coasting the Rider Lies at Full Length on the Top Board, With Hands on Steering Bar.

A monorail sled, having a simple tandem arrangement of the runners, is very easily constructed as follows: The runners are cut from one-inch plank of the size and shape given in the sketch, and are shod with strap iron, one inch wide and one-quarter-inch thick. Round iron or half-round iron should not be used, as these are liable to skid. The square, sharp edges of the strap iron prevent this and grip the surface just as a skate.

The top is a board six feet long and 11 inches thick, securely fastened to the runners as follows: Blocks are nailed, or bolted, on either side of the upper edge of the rear runner and the top is fastened to them with screws. The runner is also braced with strap iron, as shown. The same method applies to the front runner, except that only one pair of blocks are used at the center and a thin piece of wood fastened to their tops to serve as the fifth wheel, writes Harry Hardy of Whitty, Ont., in the Popular Mechanics.

The hole for the steering post should be six inches from the front end and a little larger in diameter than the steering post. The latter should be rounded where it passes through the hole, but square on the upper end to receive the steering bar, which must be tightly fitted in place.

In coasting, the rider lies full length on the board with his hands on the steering bar. This makes the center of gravity so low that there is no necessity for lateral steadying runners, and aside from the exhilarating glide of the ordinary sled, the rider experiences a buoyant sense of freedom and a zest peculiar to the monorail type. Then, too, the steering is effected much more easily. Instead of dragging the feet, a slight turn of the front runner with a corresponding movement of the body is sufficient to change the direction or to restore the balance. This latter is, of course, maintained quite mechanically, as everyone who rides a bicycle well knows.

Magnet. Generally speaking, this word is thought to be derived from the word Magnesia, a city of Lydia in Asia Minor, where the peculiar magnetic properties of the ore of iron known as lodestone were first discovered.

Another authority, however, declares that the word can be traced back to Magnes, the name of a shepherd who was detained on Mount Ida by the iron in his shoes and found himself unable to move.

Modern Childhood. "Now shall I tell you about the babes who got lost in the woods?" "Oh, you can't get lost in the woods, uncle. Woodcraft is the first thing you learn as a boy scout."—Kansas City Star.

CONSTRUCTION OF ICE BOAT

For Use on Lakes and Wide Rivers Craft Has No Equal—Three Boys Can Build One.

The ice boat shown in this sketch runs directly before the wind, with a square sail as shown in the picture. A three-cornered sail may be used, but it is harder to manage. The frame work of the craft consists of two two-inch planks, which are laid across each other as in Fig. 2. Fig. 3 shows the under part of the top plank at the rear end. Note how the planks are jointed and braced with wire.

The steering is done with the rear single runner. The lower part of Fig. 3 shows how it is made. A bolt in the center of "A" fits in a hole in the center of "C," not so tightly as to interfere with the free motion of the steering runner. The bottom of the runners should be shod with flat iron. Half round or round iron will not do. The mast is three inches in diameter by six feet long. The sail is six feet by four feet. The mast is braced by running two stout wires from the top to the cross plank. The sail is controlled by a wooden handle bar. For use on lakes and wide rivers this boat has no equal, writes Moses La Bom-

MUST BE POLITE TO POLICE

Visitor to Montevideo Finds It Necessary to Take Off His Hat When Addressing Patrolman.

The policemen of Montevideo are mostly of Indian origin. They are always courteous and polite, but they are great sticklers for etiquette. Through ignorance of their customs, a foreigner sometimes finds himself in an embarrassing situation.

One day last summer a well-dressed American stepped up to a policeman in the Plaza Independencia and said in very good Spanish:

"Will you please tell me where the Calla Rincon is?"

The policeman looked haughtily at the stranger and turned away.

The American tried again with still more courtesy:

"Would you be so extremely kind as to very accommodatingly tell me where the Calla Rincon is?"

To his astonishment, the policeman retorted:

"You have no manners, sir!"

Needless to say, the American was quite abashed, but he had to find the Calla Rincon, so he put the question to a Spanish youth who was standing near. The youth answered very cordially and went some little distance to direct the stranger properly. After the American had thanked him he asked:

"Why did the policeman refuse to answer me?"

"Because," replied the youth, "when you addressed him you neglected to take off your hat."—Youth's Companion.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa.—"When I started taking Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health; had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache."

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Women Have Been Telling Women for forty years how Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when suffering with female ills. This accounts for the enormous demand for it from coast to coast. If you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women why don't you try Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound? It will pay you to do so. Lydia E. Finkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

DANGER AFTER GRIPPE

Lies in Poor Blood, Cough and Worn-Out Condition.

Grippe, pleurisy, pneumonia are greatly to be feared at this season. To prevent grippe from being followed by either pleurisy or pneumonia, it is important to drive the last traces of it out of the system.

Our advice is to take Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, and get your strength and vitality back quickly.

W. W. Lake of Aberdeen, Miss., says: Grippe left me weak, run-down and with a severe cough from which I suffered for a long time. I tried different remedies, but nothing seemed to do me any good until I took Vinol from which I received great benefit. My cough is almost entirely gone and I am strong and well again.

Try Vinol with the certainty that if it does not benefit you we will give back your money.

P. S. For Bessie of Soap try our Sazo Salve. We guarantee it.
