BOND ELECTION

Bonds for $25,000 for the extension of the waterworks of Sullivan, will be voted on next Tuesday, May 26.

We publish in this week's issue the specimen ballot, and that ballot includes the ordinance and provisions of the act.

These provisions are therein clearly and distinctly enumerated.

Bonding the city for $25,000 for the exclusive purpose of extending the waterworks system of the city of Sullivan. Not $1 00 of it can be used for any other purpose.

The voters of this city are as well acquainted with the waterworks and other interest of this city as we are. We urge upon you to read the provisions of this ballot, read between the lines, understand what is therein said and vote for the best interest of Sullivan and community.

All promoters of public improvements, and instigators of public interests, should present fair and square propositions and when it comes to the execution give just what they bargained for, no more and no less. Fair understandings and fair dealings and clear understandings between the ruling bodies and their constituents establish confidence and harmony.

Council Meeting.

The City Council met in their hall Monday evening. After the reading and approval of the minutes, they proceeded to the business of the evening.

Motion by Alderman McClure, seconded by Alderman Moore, that the petition of the Rexall Drug store be tabled for want of resolution and for the council to discuss the question of raising the license. Motion carried.

Motion by Alderman Burns, seconded by Alderman McClure, that the superintendent of the City Plant be instructed to buy the transformer for the cluster lights, from the Maloney Electric Co., at per quotation.

W. H. Chase bid to furnish the city coal at $1.65 per cwt, F. O. B. on motion it was lost, as was the Lovington bid at $1.50.

The bond of Hugh Hoke and John Tolley at $2000 each was approved.

Dr. W. P. Davidson was appointed the health officer.

Alexander T. Martin

Alexander T. Martin, aged seventy years, a life-long resident of Cole county, died on Sunday afternoon at two o'clock at the family residence, about seven miles southeast of Mattoon. Death was attributed to dropsy and to hardening of the arteries. Mr. Martin had been bedfast for only two weeks.

Funeral services were held at ten o'clock Tuesday morning from Bethel church and burial made in the adjoining cemetery Eld. E. D. Elder of Sullivan, had charge of the rites.

Mr. Martin was a brother to Mrs. W. G. Covey, of Sullivan.

Teachers Selected

The board of education of the Sullivan schools has finished the task of selecting teachers for the next school year.

Professor Finley, who has been superintendent of the schools for the past three years, decided not to put in his application as superintendent again. Professor Finley's work in the schools here has been very satisfactory both to the board of education and to the general public, and it is with a great deal of regret that he is given up, but the board feels that in choosing the man whom they have selected to fill his place that they have been fortunate in getting another good man.

Those selected for the high school for the next school year are:

Superintendent—B. H. Gault, Shelbyville, $1,200 for school year.

Principal and English teacher—Miss Olive Martin, $1,000 per year.

Science department and athletics—M. D. Abney, $1,000, Harrisburg, Ill.

Mathematics—O. B. Lowe, $100 per month.

Biology—Miss Ella Climer, Urbana, $75 a month.

Latin and German—Miss Grace Reed, Eureka, $75.

History and economics—Miss Lillian Blaney, Monmouth, $75.

Music—Miss Marvone Campbell, Evans-ton, $75.

GRADES

First grade—Miss Sarah Powers, $80.

Second grade—Miss Mary Powers, $80.

First and second grade—Miss Ella Shepherd, $80.

Third grade, two different rooms—Miss Ola Reedy, $55, and Miss Ruby Dickey, Sparta, Ill., $50.

Fourth grade—Miss Clara Hawkins, Charleston, $50, and Miss Rena White, Palestine, $50.

Fifth grade—Miss Grace Harshman, $55.

Fifth and sixth grades mixed—Miss Lone Lewis Shaw, West Union, $50.

Sixth grade—Miss Beatrice Campbell, $55.

Seventh grade—Miss Pearl Powell, $60.

Eighth grade—Miss Emma Warren, $60.

High School Commencement

Thursday evening, May 28th, 1914, the Sullivan high school commencement exercises will be held in the Methodist church, Dr. Edgar F. Dougherty, of Vincennes, Indiana, will be the orator of the occasion. His subject "The Punch and Pull of Conscience" teems with life and animation. None surpass and few equal him in broadness of view and fluency of expression.

"Mr. Daugherty is a man's man and a sterling orator."—Evansville, (Ind.) Courier.

"Rev. Daugherty has a matchless flow of language to clothe his powerful logic, which combined with his earnest delivery, gives him the quality that constitutes an effective public speaker."—Vincennes Sun.

HON. DELBERT R. ENOCHS.

ENOCHS ENTERS RACE FOR BENCH

Champaign Lawyer Seeking Nomination at Hands of Democrats.

The Herald carries the announcement of Delbert R. Enochs, of Champaign, as a candidate for the democratic nomination for circuit judge, in the primaries to be held June 27. This announcement is attracting much attention in democratic circles, because of the high scholarship and ability of the candidate, and the vigor of the campaign which he and his friends promise to make in the primary, and in the election July 28, if the nomination falls to him.

Of Mr. Enochs' general scholarship and fitness for duties in the legal profession, Prof. William L. Drew, known as one of the most profound thinkers and conservative men who ever held a chair in the University of Illinois college of law, had the following to say when Mr. Enochs graduated from that school in 1903:

"He has attained the highest honors in the entire University this year, and his record for scholarship is the highest yet attained in the law school. He has a mind singularly well adapted to legal thinking, and has combined with this ability the highest degree of industry and faithfulness. He has a pleasing personality, and his moral character and habits are beyond reproach."

Mr. Enochs came to Champaign from Canton, Ill., in 1894, and completed his collegiate course at the University in 1898. He then taught school two years, during the second of which as principal of the Monticello high school, he made many friends in Piatt county.

During his law course, Mr. Enochs helped originate the law scholarship fraternity, Theta Kappa Nu. He also was prominent in track athletics while in college.

After his graduation in law in 1903 Mr. Enochs located in Chicago, and was actively engaged in practice before the Chicago courts for six years. In addition to this work, he taught for three years in the Chicago Law school, having the subject of wills in his charge, and the authorities of that school give him high standing. While in Chicago he took an interest in politics, and was the democratic candidate of his district for state senator, in 1906, but went down to defeat in the republican landslide of that year.

A severe spell of sickness forced the young attorney to give up his indoor work in Chicago in 1909, and when he had recuperated sufficiently, he located in Champaign in 1911, and for a time gave part of his attention to investments in real estate, in which line he has made good and become well known throughout Champaign county. He is now in robust health, and is actively engaged in the practice of law.

Mr. Enochs has many friends who credit him with the sterling character, the natural sound judgment, and the thorough knowledge of technical law which fit him well for service on the bench. They predict his nomination, and election, and are confident of his success and popularity as a judge, if elected.

Mr. Enochs was married in 1913, and lives at 618 West Clark street. He is a member of the Champaign lodge of Knights of Pythias, the University club, and the Modern Woodmen of America. He has been a staunch democrat all his life, and always has taken an active interest in all movements for a clean, honorable administration of public affairs.

This Week's Shows.

The citizens of Sullivan have been amply amused this week as a tent show and the Clifton-Kelley carnival company have been here all week.

The tent show of Pullen's Come dians on the Craig lot has been packed every evening this week. Their show and staging would do credit to any opera house. Thursday evening it became necessary to extend the boundary of their tent.

The Clifton-Kelley carnival company had good attractions, and deserved better patronage.

All the people connected with both shows were very orderly, well behaved, nice appearing people. Their tents and all their belongings were clean, new and nice looking.

They are as nice a bunch of people as ever came to our town to exhibit.

Toughs at it Again.

Sunday evening John Baucom and Marcus Witts met a couple of young men near the home of S. W. Wright, on West Harrison street, and after accosting them, gave them a severe beating. The young men finally escaped and just about that time a Mr. Smith, of the carnival company, was attacked near the same place. He was holding his own, and then some, when Chief of Police Tolley appeared upon the scene. Smith was at this time choking Witts, who was calling to Baucom to get in some good work. Mr. Smith ceased to administer his reprimand when Tolley approached. Baucom and Witts were arrested and put in the calaboose for the night. Monday morning they were taken before Police Magistrate Edwards and fined $15.00 and costs each, amounting to $17.50. Mr. Witts paid his son's fine. Baucom was taken back to jail and was supposed to work his fine out on the streets, Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Mert Carpenter went to Chief of Police Tolley to make arrangements for giving him bond.

The young men first attacked by the toughs were, to all appearances, respectable gentlemen. They represented a cutlery company and were selling the goods over town.

So ends another chapter in Sullivan's disgrace. Who will be the next victim?

We have heard of people so economical that they would skin a flea for the hide and tallow if they knew they would spoil a knife worth a dollar. That is precisely the thing our police magistrate, C. S. Edwards, is trying to do. Whose neck is the chain on? Our police officers arrest these incorrigible toughs, as in this case, for beating three men until they were badly bruised and disfigured. Would Mr. Edwards stand and have the bruises administered upon his countenance that one of these young men bore, for $15.00? It is a burning shame that in his position he always assesses the minimum fine! Why? Who can answer? How long must this be tolerated? Some day, and that not far distant, when these chaps are on a raid, they will be settled by a gun. Murder will be committed just because of lack of defense in this same court. Then this police magistrate will realize that he has sacrificed his respect and reputation skinning fleas.

Then again, why should this Carpenter woman be hanging around the calaboose at night with men? Why was this female and Marcus Witts at the jail one night this week, sympathizing with John Baucom?

Women out of their sphere should be handled. They deserve no mercy and should be arrested whenever out of the line of decency.

The Hollow of Her Hand

by George Barr McCutcheon

SYNOPSIS.

Challis Wrاندall is found murdered in a road house near New York. Mrs. Wrاندall is summoned from the city and identifies the body. A young woman who accompanied Wrاندall to the inn and subsequently disappeared, is suspected. Mrs. Wrاندall starts back for New York in an auto during a blinding snow storm. On the way she meets a young woman in the road who proves to be the woman who killed Wrاندall. Feeling that she girl had done her a service in bidding her of the man who though she loved him deeply had caused her great sorrow, Mrs. Wrاندall determines to shield her and takes her to her own home. Mrs. Wrاندall hears the story of Hetty Castleton's life, except that portion that relates to Wrاندall. This and the story of the tragedy she forbids the girl ever to tell. She offers Hetty a home, friendship and security from peril on account of the tragedy. Mrs. Wrاندall and Hetty attend the funeral of Challis Wrاندall at the home of his parents. Sara Wrاندall and Hetty return to New York after an absence of a year in Europe. Leslie Wrاندall, brother of Challis, makes himself useful to Sara and becomes greatly interested in Hetty. Sara sees in Leslie's infatuation possibility for revenge on the Wrاندalls and reparation for the wrong she suffered at the hands of Challis Wrاندall by marrying his murderer into the family. Leslie, in company with his friend Brandon Booth, an artist, visits Sara at her country place. Leslie confesses to Sara that he is madly in love with Hetty.

"I say, Leslie, is she staying here?" cried Booth, lowering his voice to an excited half-whisper.

"Who?" demanded Wrاندall vacantly. His mind appeared to be elsewhere.

"Why, that's the girl I saw on the road—Wake up! The one on the envelope, you ass. Is she the one you were telling me about in the club—the Miss What's-Her-Name—who—"

"Oh, you mean Miss Castleton. She's just gone upstairs. You must have met her on the steps."

"You know I did. So that is Miss Castleton."

"Ripping, isn't she? Didn't I tell you so?"

"She's beautiful. She is a type, just as you said, old man—a really wonderful type. I saw her yesterday—and the day before."

"I've been wondering how you managed to get a likeness of her on the back of an envelope," said Leslie sarcastically. "Must have had a good long look at her, my boy. It isn't a snap-shot, you know."

Booth flushed. "It is an impression, that's all. I drew it from memory, 'pon my soul!"

"She'll be immensely gratified, I'm sure."

"For heaven's sake, Les, don't be such a fool as to show her the thing," cried Booth in consternation. "She'd never understand."

"Oh, you needn't worry. She has a fine sense of humor."

Booth didn't know whether to laugh or scowl. He compromised with himself by slipping his arm through that of his friend and saying heartily:

"I wish you the best of luck, old boy."

"Thanks," said Leslie drily.

CHAPTER VIII.

At Which Hetty is Weighed.

Booth and Leslie returned to the city on Tuesday. The artist left behind him a "memory sketch" of Sara Wrاندall, done in the solitude of his room long after the rest of the house was wrapped in slumber on the first night of his stay at Southlook. It was as sketchily drawn as the one he had made of Hetty, and quite as wonderful in the matter of faithfulness, but utterly without the subtle something that made the other notable. The craftiness of the artist was there, but the touch of inspiration was lacking. Sara was delighted. She was flattered, and made no pretense of disguising the fact.

We Was as Deeply Perplexed as Ever.

The discussion which followed the exhibition of the sketch at luncheon, was very animated. It served to excite Leslie to such a degree that he brought forth from his pocket the treasured sketch of Hetty, for the purpose of comparison.

The girl who had been genuinely enthusiastic over the picture of Sara, and who had not been by way of knowing that the first sketch existed, was covered with confusion. Embarrassment and a shy sense of gratification were succeeded almost at once by a feeling of keen annoyance. The fact that the sketch was in Leslie's possession—and evidently a thing to be cherished—took away all the pleasure she may have experienced during the first few moments of interest.

Booth caught the angry flash in her eyes, preceding the flush and unaccountable pallor that followed almost immediately. He felt guilty, and at the same time deeply annoyed with Leslie. Later on he tried to explain, but the attempt was a lamentable failure. She laughed, not unkindly, in his face.

Leslie had refused to allow the sketch to leave his hand. If she could have gained possession of it, even for an instant, the thing would have been torn to bits. But it went back into his commodious pocketbook, and she was too proud to demand it of him.

She became oddly sensitive to Booth's persistent though inoffensive scrutiny as time wore on. More than once she had caught him looking at her with a fixedness that betrayed perplexity so plainly that she could not fail to recognize an underlying motive. He was vainly striving to refresh his memory; that was clear to her. There is no mistaking that look in a person's eyes. It cannot be disguised.

He was as deeply perplexed as ever when the time came for him to depart with Leslie. He asked her point blank on the last evening of his stay if they had ever met before, and she frankly confessed to a short memory for faces. It was not unlikely, she said, that he had seen her in London or in Paris, but she had not the faintest recollection of having seen him before their meeting in the road.

Urged by Sara, she had reluctantly consented to sit to him for a portrait during the month of June. He put the request in such terms that it did not sound like a proposition. It was not surprising that he should want her for a subject; in fact, he put it in such a way that she could not but feel that she would be doing him a great and enduring favor. She imposed but one condition: The picture was never to be exhibited. He met that, with bland magnanimity, by proffering the canvas to Mrs. Wrاندall, as the subject's "next best friend," to "have and to hold so long as she might live," "free gratis," with the artist's compliments, and so on and so forth, in airy good humor.

Leslie's aid had been solicited by both Sara and the painter in the final effort to overcome the girl's objections. He was rather bored about it, but added his voice to the general clamor. With half an eye one could see that he did not relish the idea of Hetty posing for days to the handsome, agreeable painter. Moreover, it meant that Booth, who could afford to gratify his own whims, would be obliged to spend a month or more in the neighborhood, so that he could devote himself almost entirely to the consummation of this particular undertaking. Moreover, it meant that Vivian's portrait was to be temporarily disregarded.

Sara Wrاندall was quick to recognize the first symptoms of jealousy on the part of her brother-in-law. The new idol of the Wrاندalls was in love, selfishly, insufferably in love as things went with all the Wrاندalls. They hated selfishly, and so they loved. Her husband had been their king. But their king was dead, long live the king! Leslie had put on the family crown—a little jauntily, perhaps—cocked over the eye a bit, so to speak—but it was there just the same, annoyingly plain to view.

Sara had tried to like him. He had been her friend, the only one she could claim among them all. And yet, beneath his genial allegiance, she could detect the air of condescension, the bland attitude of a superior who defends another's cause for the reason that it gratifies Nero. She experienced a thrill of malicious joy in contemplating the fall of Nero. He would bring down his house about his head, and there would be no Rome to pay the fiddler.

Brandon Booth took a small cottage on the upper road, half way between the village and the home of Sara Wrاندall, and not far from the abhorred "back gate" that swung in the teeth of her connections by marriage. He set up his establishment in half a day and, being settled, betook himself off to dine with Sara and Hetty. All his household cares, like the world, rested snugly on the shoulders of an Atlas named Pat, than whom there was no more faithful servitor in all the earth, nor in the heavens, for that matter, if we are to accept his own estimate of himself. In any event, he was a treasure. Booth's house was always in order. Try as he would, he couldn't get it out of order. Pat's wife saw to that.

As he swung jauntily down the tree-lined road that led to Sara's portals, Booth was full of the joy of living. Sara was at the bottom of the terrace, moving among the flower beds in the formal garden.

At the sound of his footsteps on the gravel, Sara looked up and instantly smiled her welcome.

"It is so nice to see you again," she said, giving him her hand.

"My heart's in the highlands," he quoted, waving a vague tribute to the heavens. "And it's nice of you to see me," he added gracefully. Then he pointed up the terrace. "Isn't she a picture? 'Gad, it's lovely—the whole effect. That picture against the sky!"

He stopped short, and the sentence was never finished, although she waited for him to complete it before remarking:

"Her heart is not in the highlands."

"You mean—something's gone wrong?"

"Oh, no," she said, still smiling; "nothing like that. Her heart is in the lowlands. You would consider Washington square to be in the lowlands, wouldn't you?"

"Oh, I see," he said slowly. "You mean she's thinking of Leslie?"

"Who knows? It was a venture on my part, that's all. She may be thinking of you, Mr. Booth."

"Or some chap in old England, that's more like it," he retorted. "She can't be thinking of me, you know. No one ever thinks of me when I'm out of view. Out of sight, out of mind. No; she's thinking of something a long way off—or some one, if you choose to have it that way."

She smiled upon him with half-closed, shadowy eyes, and shook her head. Then she arose.

"Let us go in. Hetty is eager to see you again."

They started up the terrace. His face clouded.

"I have had a feeling all along that she'd rather not have this portrait painted, Mrs. Wrاندall. A queer sort of feeling that she doesn't just like the idea of being put on canvas."

"Nonsense," she said, without looking at him.

Hetty met them at the top of the steps. The electric porch lights had just been turned on by the butler. The girl, stood in the path of the light. Booth was never to forget the loveliness of her in that moment. He carried the image with him on the long walk home through the black night. (He declined Sara's offer to send him over in the car for the very reason that he wanted the half-hour of solitude in which to concentrate all the impressions she had made on his fancy.)

The three of them stood there for a few minutes, awaiting the butler's announcement. Sara's arm was about Hetty's shoulders. He was so taken up with the picture they presented that he scarcely heard their light chatter. They were types of loveliness so full of contrast that he marveled at the power of nature to create women in the same mold and yet to model so differently.

As they entered the vestibule, a servant came up with the word that Miss Castleton was wanted at the telephone, "long distance from New York."

The girl stopped in her tracks. Booth looked at her in mild surprise, a condition which gave way an instant later to perplexity. The look of annoyance in her eyes could not be disguised or mistaken.

"Ask him to call me up later, Watson," she said quietly.

"This is the third time he has called, Miss Castleton," said the man. "You were dressing, if you please, ma'am, the first time—"

"I will come," she interrupted sharply, with a curious glance at Sara, who for some reason avoided meeting Booth's gaze.

"Tell him we shall expect him on Friday," said Mrs. Wrاندall.

"By George!" thought Booth, as she left them. "I wonder if it can be Leslie. If it is—well, he wouldn't be flattered if he could have seen the look in her eyes."

Later on, he had no trouble in gathering that it was Leslie Wrاندall who called, but he was very much in the dark as to the meaning of that expressive look. He only knew that she was in the telephone room for ten minutes or longer, and that all traces of emotion was gone from her face when she rejoined them with a brief apology for keeping them waiting.

He left at ten-thirty, saying good night to them on the terrace. Sara walked to the steps with him.

"Don't you think her voice is lovely?" she asked. Hetty had sung for them.

"I dare say," he responded absently. "Give you my word, though, I wasn't thinking of her voice. She is lovely."

He walked home as if in a dream. The spell was on him.

Far in the night, he started up from the easy chair in which he had been smoking and dreaming and racking his brain by turns.

"By Jove!" he exclaimed aloud. "I remember! I've got it! And tomorrow I'll prove it."

Then he went to bed, with the storm from the sea pounding about the house, and slept serenely until Pat and Mary wondered whether he meant to get up at all.

"Pat," said he at breakfast, "I want you to go to the city this morning and fetch out all of the Studios you can find about the place. The old ones are in that Italian hall seat and the late ones are in the studio. Bring all of them."

"There's a devil of a bunch of 'em," said Pat ruefully.

He was not to begin sketching the figure until the following day. After luncheon, however, he had an appointment to inspect Hetty's wardrobe, ostensibly for the purpose of picking out a gown for the picture. As a matter of fact, he had decided the point to his own satisfaction the night before. She should pose for him in the dainty white dress she had worn on that occasion.

While they were going over the extensive assortment of gowns, with Sara as the judge from whom there seemed to be no appeal, he casually inquired if she had ever posed before.

He watched her closely as he put the question. She was holding up a beautiful point lace creation for his inspection, and there was a pleading smile on her lips. It must have been her favorite gown. The smile faded away. The hand that dangled the garment before his eyes suddenly became motionless, as if paralyzed. In the next instant, she recovered herself, and giving the lace a quick flip that sent its odor of sachet leaping to his nostrils, responded with perfect composure.

"Isn't there a distinction between posing for an artist, and sitting for one's portrait?" she asked.

He was silent. The fact that he did not respond seemed to disturb her affer a moment or two. She made the common mistake of pressing the question.

"Why do you ask?" was her inquiry. When it was too late she wished she had not uttered the words. He had caught the somewhat anxious note in her voice.

"We always ask that, I think," he said. "It's a habit."

"Oh," she said doubtfully.

"And by the way, you haven't answered."

She was busy with the gown for a time. At last she looked him full in the face.

"That's true," she agreed; "I haven't answered, have I? No, Mr. Booth, I've never posed for a portrait. It is a new experience for me. You will have to contend with a great deal of stupidity on my part. But I shall try to be plastic."

He uttered a polite protest, and pursued the question no farther. Her answer had been so palpably evasive that it struck him as bald, even awkward.

Pat, disgruntled and irritable to the point of profanity—he was a privileged character and might have sworn if he felt like it without receiving notice—came shuffling up the cottage walk late that afternoon, bearing two large, shoulder-sagging bundles. He had walked from the station—a matter of half a mile—and it was hot. His employer sat in the shady porch, viewing his approach.

The young man drew a chair up to the table and began the task of working out the puzzle that now seemed more or less near to solution. He had a pretty clear idea as to the period he wanted to investigate. To the best of his recollection, the Studios published three or four years back held the key. He selected the numbers and began to run through them. He was searching for a vaguely remembered article on one of the lesser-known English painters who had given great promise at the time it was published but who dropped completely out of notice soon afterward because of a mistaken notion of his own importance. If Booth's memory served him right, the fellow came a cropper, so to speak, in trying to ride rough shod over public opinion, and went to the dogs. He had been painting sensibly up to that time, but suddenly went in for the most violent style of impressionism. That was the end of him.

There had been reproductions of his principal canvases, with sketches and studies in charcoal. One of these pictures had made a lasting impression on Booth: The figure of a young woman in deep meditation standing in the shadow of a window casement from which she looked out upon the world apparently without a thought of it. A slender young woman in vague reds and browns, whose shadowy face was positively illuminated by a pair of wonderful blue eyes.

He came upon it at last. For a long time he sat there gazing at the face of Hetty Castleton, a look of half-wonder, half-triumph in his eyes. There could be no doubt as to the identity of the subject. The face was hers: the velvety, dreamy, soulful eyes that had haunted him for years, as he now believed. In no sense could the picture be described as a portrait. It was a study, deliberately arranged and deliberately posed for in the artist's studio. He was mystified. Why should she, the daughter of Colonel Castleton, the grand-niece of an earl, be engaged in posing for what evidently was meant to be a commercial product of this whilom artist?

Turning from a skillfully colored full page reproduction, he glanced at first casually over the dozen or more sketches and studies on the succeeding pages. Many of them represented studies of women's heads and figures, with little or no attempt to obtain a likeness. Some were half-draped, showing in a sketchy way the long graceful lines of the half-nude figure, of bare shoulders and breasts, of gauze-like fabrics that but illy concealed impressive charms. Suddenly his eyes narrowed and a sharp exclamation fell from his lips. He bent closer to the pages and studied the drawings with redoubled interest.

Then he whistled softly to himself, a token of simple amazement. The head of each of these remarkable studies suggested in outline the head and features of Hetty Castleton! She had been Hawkright's model!

The next morning at ten he was at Southlook, arranging his easel and canvas in the north end of the long living room, where the light from the tall French windows afforded abundant and well-distributed light for the enterprise in hand. Hetty had not yet appeared. Sara, attired in a loose morning gown, was watching him from a comfortable chair in the corner, one shapely bare arm behind her head; the free hand was gracefully employed in managing a cigarette. He was conscious of the fact that her lazy, half-alert gaze was upon him all the time, although she pretended to be entirely indifferent to the preparations. Dimly he could see the faint smile of interest on her lips.

Hetty came in, calm, serene and lovelier than ever in the clear morning light. She was wearing the simple white gown he had chosen the day before. If she was conscious of the rather intense scrutiny he bestowed upon her as she gave him her hand in greeting, she did not appear to be in the least disturbed.

"You may go away, Sara," she said firmly. "I shall be too dreadfully self-conscious if you are looking on."

Booth looked at her rather sharply. Sara indolently abandoned her comfortable chair and left them alone in the room.

"Shall we try a few effects, Miss Castleton?" he inquired, after a period of constraint that had its effect on both of them.

"I am in your hands," she said simply.

He made suggestions. She fell into the position so easily, so naturally, so effectively, that he put aside all previous doubts and blurted out:

"You have posed before, Miss Castleton."

She smiled frankly. "But not for a really truly portrait," she said. "Such as this is to be."

He hesitated an instant. "I think I recall a canvas by Maurice Hawkright," he said, and at once experienced a curious sense of perturbation. It was not unlike fear.

Instead of betraying the confusion or surprise he expected, Miss Castleton merely raised her eyebrows inquiringly.

"What has that to do with me, Mr. Booth?" she asked.

He laughed awkwardly.

"Don't you know his work?" he inquired, with a slight twist of his lip.

"I may have seen his pictures," she replied, puckering her brow as if in reflection. "Oh," she cried, with a bright smile of understanding. "I see! Yes, I have a double—a really remarkable double. Have you never seen Hetty Glynn, the actress?"

"I am sure I have not," he said, taking a long breath. It was one of relief, he remembered afterward. "If she is so like you as all that, I couldn't have forgotten her."

"She is quite unknown, I believe she went on, ignoring the implied compliment. "A chorus girl, or something like that. They say she is wonderfully like me—or was, at least, a few years ago."

He was silent for a few minutes, studying her face and figure with the critical eye of the artist. As he turned to the canvas with his crayon point, he remarked, with an unmistakable note of relief in his voice:

"That explains everything. It must have been Hetty Glynn who posed for all those things of Hawkright's."

"I dare say," said she indifferently.

"Do you think it like me?" she inquired innocently.

"Amazingly like you," he declared with conviction.

She turned the page. He was watching her closely. As she looked upon the sketches of the half-nude figure, warm blush covered her face and neck. She did not speak for a full minute, and he was positive that her fingers tightened their grasp on the magazine.

"The same model," he said quietly. She nodded her head.

"Hetty Glynn, I am sure," she said after a pause, without lifting her eyes. Her voice was low, the words not very distinct.

He drew a long breath, and she looked up quickly. What he saw in her honest blue eyes convicted her.

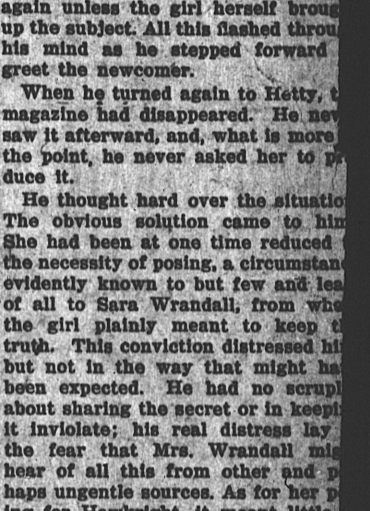

Sara Wrاندall came into the room at that moment. Hetty hastily closed the magazine and held it behind her. Booth had intended to show the reproduction to Mrs. Wrاندall, but the girl's behavior, caused him to change his mind. He felt that he possessed a secret that could not be shared with Sara Wrاندall, then or afterward. Moreover, he decided that he would not refer to the Hawkright picture again unless the girl herself brought up the subject. All this flashed through his mind as he stepped forward to greet the newcomer.

When he turned again to Hetty, the magazine had disappeared. He saw it afterward, and, what is more to the point, he never asked her to produce it.

He thought hard over the situation. The obvious solution came to him. She had been at one time reduced to the necessity of posing, a circumstance evidently known to but few and less of all to Sara Wrاندall, from whom the girl plainly meant to keep the truth. This conviction distressed him but not in the way that might have been expected. He had no scruple about sharing the secret or in keeping it inviolate; his real distress lay in the fear that Mrs. Wrاندall might hear of all this from other and perhaps ungentle sources. As for her posing for Hawkright, it meant little to nothing to him. In his own experience two girls of gentle birth had served models for pictures of his own making, and he fully appreciated the agencies that had driven them to it. One had posed in the "altogether," She was a girl of absolutely unapproachable character, who afterwards married a chap he knew very well and who was fully aware of that phase in her life. That feature of situation meant nothing to him. It was in no doubt concerning Hetty, was what she appeared to be: A tlewoman.

He admitted to himself that he was under the spell of her. It was love, he was able to contend; it was a mysterious appeal to something within him that had never veiled itself before. He could quite explain what it was.

In his solitary hours at the cot on the upper road, he was wont to take his friend Leslie Wrاندall into consideration. As a friend, was it his duty to go to him with his so little tale? Was it right to let Wrاندall go on with his wooing when he existed that which might make a difference in the world to him? Invariably brought these deliberations to a close by relaxing into a grimace of amusement, as much as to "Serve him right, anyway. Trust to sift her antecedents through He's already done it, and he is satisfied with the result. Serve him right, for that matter."

But then there was Hetty. What of her? Hetty Glynn, mythical, was a disturbing factor in his deductions. If there was Hetty Glynn and she was Hetty Castleton's double, what then?

On the fifth day of a series of prolonged and tedious sittings, obliged to confine his work to a and a half in the forenoon, Mrs. Wrاندall was having a few friends, an auction-bridge immediately after noon. She asked him to stay or take a hand, but he declined, not play bridge.

He Was Watching Her Closely.

CHAPTER IX.

The Ghost at the Feast.

The next day he appeared bright and early with his copy of the Studio. "There," he said, holding it before her eyes. She took it from his hand and stared long and earnestly at the reproduction.

The child was also a niece of James Kelley, who lives near Sullivan. The Sullivan, Bethany and Dalton City juvenile orchestras gave a musical contest in the Armory hall Monday evening, which was fairly well attended. The entertainment was highly appreciated by the audience. Oscar Schwarze, of Bethany, is director of the three orchestras. A meeting of the executive committee of the Moultrie County Teachers' Association was held at the superintendent's office, Saturday, May 16, at which it was decided by the committee that there will be no summer normal. However there will be an institute held during the week beginning August 24, at which able speakers will be present and it is hoped everyone will attend. The assembly room of the high school was crowded Tuesday by an audience to hear the class play. The scheme of the play and the acting was all exceptionally good, and with the music, highly appreciated by the audience. There were two plays, "The Balm of Gilead," by the seniors, and the "Worst of Men," by the juniors. Miss Fanny Emmons has accepted the position of stenographer in the office of Att'y. E. J. Miller. The vacancy was occasioned by the resignation of Miss Marguerite Hughes. Her parents, who came here from Paas last fall to take charge of the Birchfield house, returned to their former home in Paas, last Monday. Mrs. Sherman Elder and Clarence Lang were discharged from the Public Service Co.'s, force last week. The company claim they are reducing expenses by reducing the pay roll. Mr. Davis was left alone in the office and considering the work too heavy for one man, he employed Mr. Lang at his own expense. Mrs. Elder has accepted a position in the Matinee store. Mrs. Clum Hampton entertained a number of friends to dinner, Friday, of last week, in honor of her aged mother, Mrs. Sarah Elder, who spent the winter with her, but has gone to spend the summer with relatives near Lake City. Her guests were Messrs. Dan Frantz and T. F. Harris and their wives. The dinner was fine, and all enjoyed the visit very much.

U.C.T. WILL MEET IN CAPITAL CITY

Select Springfield at a Meeting Held in Chicago.

NEW OFFICERS ARE NAMED

F. F. Lovett of Decatur is Chosen Grand Counsellor—Delegation to Attend National Convention June 23.

Springfield.—Springfield was selected as the next meeting place of the United Commercial Travelers' Association of Illinois at the state convention held in Chicago.

It was decided to send a delegation to the national convention in Columbus, Ohio, June 23, to start a movement for the establishment of a home for orphans and widows of the members.

Will Fill Hart's Place. It is regarded as probable that no attempt will be made to fill the position of Patrick H. Hart, deceased secretary of the state bureau of labor commissioners...

Rebekah Lodge to Meet. Plans have been completed for the sixteenth annual meeting of the Rebekah lodge of the Twenty-third Illinois district, which will be held in Mt. Sterling May 26.

400,000 Settlers a Year

Immigration figures show that the population of Canada increased during 1913, by the addition of 400,000 new settlers from the United States and Europe. Most of these have gone on farms in provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

THOUGHT IT "REGULAR JOB"

Old Workman, Grown Gray in the Harness, Resented Being Looked On as a "Casual."

Bill Smith had worked at a certain firm for sixty years. So the two sons of the employer thought that he had worked for them sufficiently long, enough to be pensioned off, and this they decided to do at once.

"Now, boys," said the schoolmaster, "I want you to bear in mind that the word 'stan' at the end of a word means 'the place of.' Thus we have Afghanistan—the place of the Afghans; also Hindustan—the place of the Hindus. Can anyone give me another example?"

Overworked.

The papers are publishing stories of Dr. Weir Mitchell. This is one of the best of them: One day a patient came into his office and found him closing a large bundle of letters. "All resignations from committees or boards," he said gleefully, "I'm going to get off all them. I have told my wife that when I die I want her to put on my tombstone, 'Committed to the grave!'"

Sick Women Made Well

Reliable evidence is abundant that women are constantly being restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The many testimonial letters that we are continually publishing in the newspapers—hundreds of them—are all genuine, true and unsolicited expressions of heartfelt gratitude for the freedom from suffering that has come to these women solely through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Money could not buy nor any kind of influence obtain such recommendations; you may depend upon it that any testimonial we publish is honest and true—if you have any doubt of this write to the women whose true names and addresses are always given, and learn for yourself.

Read this one from Mrs. Waters:

CAMDEN, N.J.—"I was sick for two years with nervous spells, and my kidneys were affected. I had a doctor all the time and used a galvanic battery, but nothing did me any good. I was not able to go to bed, but spent my time on a couch or in a sleeping-chair, and soon became almost a skeleton. Finally my doctor went away for his health, and my husband heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me some. In two months I got relief and now I am like a new woman and am at my usual weight. I recommend your medicine to every one and so does my husband."—Mrs. TILLY WATERS, 1135 Knight St., Camden, N.J.

And this one from Mrs. Haddock:

UTICA, OKLA.—"I was weak and nervous, not able to do my work and scarcely able to be on my feet. I had backache, headache, palpitation of the heart, trouble with my bowels, and inflammation. Since taking the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am better than I have been for twenty years. I think it is a wonderful medicine and I have recommended it to others."—Mrs. MARY ANN HADDOCK, Utica, Oklahoma.

Now answer this question if you can: Why should a woman continue to suffer without first giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? You know that it has saved many others—why should it fail in your case?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Cause of Death. "You say your automobile didn't touch this man, and yet he was dead when you picked him up?" shouted the prosecuting attorney. "That's my claim," coolly retorted the prisoner. "My machine didn't touch him. "And you were driving not over 12 miles an hour?" "Not over 12 miles and—" "And you saw this man start to cross the street?" "Yes." "Did you blow your horn?" "I did." "What sort of a horn is it?" "One of those newfangled clatter-boxes that create a sound that is a cross between a shriek and a dying wail."

Better Soldier Than Statesman. One hundred years ago on the forty-fifth anniversary of his birth, Lord Wellington was rewarded with the title of duke in recognition of his successes in the Peninsula campaign against the French. At the same time the house of commons voted $3,000,000 for the support of his new dignity. Within a little more than a year the famous soldier was destined to win the great victory at Waterloo and to be made the commander-in-chief of the British forces. Later in life the duke of Wellington became British prime minister, but the strong personal qualities that had helped him to success as a soldier were not the qualities that best befitted for the premiership, and the career of the duke as a statesman added little to his fame.

On Holiday. While visiting his uncle in the country Willie was much interested in watching the ducks "tipping up" in a pond.

Its Kind. "Doctor, my trouble is wholly athletic." "What do you mean?" "I've got a jumping toothache."

They're most all young ones, aren't they?" he observed to his uncle. "Why, no, boy; they're old ones. What makes you think they are young?" "I thought they were young," Willie explained, "because they don't seem to be able to swim without upsetting." —Saturday Journal.
