OUR NEIGHBORS.

How many social ties there are neglected That should rejoice our days! How many happy spirits sit rejected Beside the world's highways!

A blessing, then, be on those pleasant faces, That genial warmth impart ! Sunbeams they are, that brighten darkson Within the human heart.

Such cheerful faces have I to befriend me, feend me. In our retired streets; What pleasant nods and kindly smiles they Whene'er our glances meet!

How joyous is our morning salutation, How hearty our good-night! The thousand visits without preparation . How welcome with delight!

The household news, how earnestly related, And small domestic cares! The aches and ailments mutually tasted,

And costs of various wares A II. WAGCONER Trifling, indeed, those themes of conversation

And yet momentous still; For the small world of household occupation These topics almost fill.

And let not those who legislate for nations Despise these little things-

The heads of family administrations Bear weightier cares than kings.

Our silent street is like a river flowing Towards the commercial sea; But the rude storms there furious blowing Do us no injury.

There is no tariff on the freight we charter ! From heart to heart we move: The noble fortunes that we make by barter

Are those of growing love. May peace be with you, then, my pleasant neighbors, Wherever you abide ! And when we leave this scene of earthly labors We'll still keep side by side.

My First Love.

AN HUMOROUS SKETCH.

COHAT I was borne in love was a fact that did not admit of a shadow of doubt. I deported myself like a person in love. The affection that had taken possession of my youthful heart was no every day one; was so sure of that. There wasn't words enough in the English language to describe the height, depth, width, and length of its grandeur. It was destined to be a grand accompaniment of the ages yet to be a fixed principle throughout eternity; a plant of surpassing beauty in the broad heavens of home affections. My love was returned—the strong yearnings of my mineteen-year old heart went out in direction of the most beautiful maiden in all shire, and the most beautiful maiden in all shire, in return, sent the yearnings of her heart out to meet mine. Twice a week, as often as the week came round, I went stoudars to tell his daughter my love the road side, I walked cautiously up and regularly listened to a recital of the long lane to the doctor's house, its return from the red lips of my charming Janet. The good doctor a white handkerchief in the manning of made merry at our expectations. made merry at our expense, and his jolly wife took a wicked pleasure in constantly reminding us of our youth. Janet was tortured by sly references to her play house in the shed, her long deeved pinafores and pantaletts of six months before; while I was offered while the doctors wife wore a face of immovable sobriety, an old cost of the doctor's for my mother to make into a dressing gown for me.

We were, nevertheless, determined to be married. We would steal slily away from the house while our cruel friends reposed in the arms of Morphthe nearest city? Janet would become in's moment's time, Mrs. Jason Brown stealthily, get my father's gray nag of my fingers, hiding entirely from coat a splendid one, father noiselessly out of the barn and harness view the luxurient pair of white silk at the length of its tails?

her, and to proceed to Janet. Janet was to be waiting at her chamber window. I was to place a ladder at that same window; she was to descend that ladder; we were to fly down the road through the old lane, to the spot where the horse was fastened, and then the wind should not out run

There was but one difficulty in the the way. Janet's room was shared by her sister Fanny, a little mischievous, wicked creature of eleven summers, who, to use Janet's words, was awake at all hours of the night. There was but one way for us if Fanny was aroused; she must be bribed into silence. For that purpose I place in Jacet's hand a round, shining silver dollar. But Janet needed assistance, so she concluded to make Fanny her confidant the very afternoon before we started, and in that case prevent all possibility of her raising the house by sudden outcry.

Well, the long looked for, hoped for and yet dreaded night arrived at last How slowly its leaden feet carried away the hours, and what a strange heartfull of emotions I bore up, as I sat by my chamber window, looking tom of my heart for her kindness! out, as I thought, for the last time, upon the home of my father. The moon was out in all her splendor; she was kind to me, lighting up, with her silver touches, all the spots my eyes might wish to rest upon before I went out into the world a wanderer. The broad fields lay out smooth and shining before my gaze; the field in which I had worked by my father's side since I was a little boy—ah! a dear, kind father he had been! (At this juncture my throat began to swell.) I turned away from the window.

'If I could but see my mother once more," I exclaimed, rubbing my eyes with my coat sleeve. 'No one ever had a better mother than I have."

I sat down in a chair and sobbed outright. I looked around for something to take with me that my mother's hand blessed with her touch .-There was a spinning-wheel in the room where I slept; at the end of the spindle hung a woolen roll. With my knife I half cut and half tore it off, pressed it fervently to my lips, and then placed it tenderly in my vest pocket. I had not time to do more; the old clock in the kitchen warned he should be awakened me solemnly that my appointed time had arrived; and with a slow, sad, vet noiseless step I left the house. Once out in the open air, my wonted lightness of spirits returned. I consoled myself with the thought that in a few years I should return again, a strong, my friends, and the husband of Janet.

I have often wondered since, how I succeeded in getting away from home with my horse and cart without arous ing any one. But as good luck would have it, I made a triumphant exit from the old place, and in a few moments was jogging fearlessly along towards the home of Janet. My only dread was of the little sprite, Fan; if after all she betray us, what a dreadful, direful desperate mischief it would bel—what a wretched predicament affairs would "Mother, mother, don't one of these be in! I grouned aloud at the thought; said that if it was right that we should go, we should go; if it wasn't, in all probability we should stay at Fan did betray us, I'd spend all my days in avenging the wrong—that was certain. Was I in earnest!—did I mean it? But we shall see.

How earnestly and anxiously I gazed towards the chamber window of told me that everything was right, that in a few moments I should clasp Janet to my breast, mine forever! Ah how happy I was?—so happy, indeed, that I stood still there in the moonlight, with my two hands pressed firmly to my left side, for fear my overloaded heart would burst away from me entirely. What a figure I must must have looked, with my fine proportions, wrapped up in my wedding suit! I was slender; I was tall; I was guant; I am sure I was ugly-looking at that moment. have cut then!-What an Appello I

Oh, ye stars and moon that looked upon it, testify with me that it was a hat!—a hat and not a stove pipe, a hat and not a boot-leg! That hat!—looking back as if through the mists of twenty-five years, it seems to have arisen to the statue of two full feet, while the brim appears little wid er than my thumb nail. My eyesigh isn't quite so perfect now as it used to be, and so I may not see quite rightly Make all due allowance, dear reader. I say that I must have looked ugly at that moment. Be that as it may, thought I was looking splendidly; thought the figure I cut was an honor it; proud as I walked up to Janet's window, and placed carefully there the ladder that was to bear her to my side. Everything was silent about the house. Fate was surely with us; Fanny had been bribed into service As I stood there, I could see her light lithe little figure flit noiselessly to and fro by the window, and how I blessed her-blessed her, from the very bot-

"Be quiet, Fan," whispered Janet, as her sister appeared at the window and poised the bundle above our heads. 'Be quiet, Fan, for heaven's betrayed us. I vowed vengeance up sake, and drop it quickly!'

But Fanny still stood there, swing ing backward and forward, backward and forward, the huge bundle, with- Stoddard brought home my father's ont heeding Janet's earnest entreaty.

The total population attached to Baptist views is estimated at from six to seven millions. By the United States sensus of 1850 it appears that they then had 8,791 church edifices, valued at $10,931,382, and containing nearly one-fourth of the church accommodation in the United States .-Since then, 1857, these have been greatly multiplied and improved.

The number of Baptists in this country, says a recent writer, with their relative progress and rapidly growing facts of the age. As such, it may well challenge the attention of the philosophical historian and statesman, no less than that of the thoughtful Christian. It is not explained by ordinary causes. No large body owes so little of its increase to emigration from Europe. No one of the original colonies was planted by them.

Even in Rhode Island, Roger Wilhams and Dr. John Clark were not Baptists at first. Nor was their introduction or subsequent spread the resionary system, like that of the Methforegoing bond of future membership, like infant baptism, on which most of the other sects rely for the perpetuation and spread of their peculiar views of religion, as well as of religion itself. Nor is it, on the other hand, the con sequence of lowering the claims of Christianity, the qualifications for church membership, or the vigor of discipline; for no denomination, in these respects, holds up a higher stan-dard. And it is but just to say that ers, in two or three months. no body of Christians in this country has done, or is now doing more, to extend vital evangelical piety, at home or abroad. None is more free, yet united; none more conservative, yet progressive; none, though subscribing a common ereed, more unanimous in taith and practice, or more closely knit together in love. Those who imagme the contrary do not know them. "The ministry of the Baptists," says Dr. Baird, "comprehends a body of men, who, in point of talents, learning and eloquence, as well as devoted pi ety, have no superiors in the country.

The Baptists have never made classical scholarship a pre-requisite to the ministry of the gospel, lest they should seem to be wiser than God; but it is a mistake to suppose they have ever despised education or knowledge, except when substituted for holier gifts. As early as 1764, when numbering in Amersca only sixty-six churches, and about 5,000 members, they founded their first college in Rhode Island.— Long before, they had fostered Harvard, and helped Franklin to lay the foundation of the University of Pennsylvania. They now have thirty-three colleges and universities of their own, over one hundred academies and fo male seminaries of a high grade, and eleven theological schools. They have publication societies at Philadelphia, Charleston and Nashville, besides many flourishing private houses in our large cities. They maintain forty-two periodical organs, two of which are quarterly reviews. If we add those of the British Provinces, the total is thirteen theological schools; thirty-five colleges, and forty-eight periodical or-North America. Can all these fail of elevating intellectually and religiously unot, only the denomination, but the country itself?-Christian Watchman.

He disclaims all idea of a the purest sympathy for Italy, and says he is about to place himself at the head of the army and leave the Empress and his son to the patriotic care of the French people.

Austrian troops were concentra-ting along the Sessia, and had occupied Vercilli.

Trieste and the surrounding territory had been declared in a state of seige. General Genlay, the Austrian commander, had imposed a heavy contribution.

The English parliamentary elections were progressing. The gov-ernment gain, out of 486 returns, is 15 to 20. Many country and Irish elections were yet undecided.

The panic on 'Change at London had subsided. Business was dull, dut consols had advanced. On the Paris bourse the 3 per cents declined to 60f. 75c.

HAIR RESTORATIVE

Says the St. Louis (Mo.) Democrat: Below we publish a letter to Dr. Wood, of this city, from a gentleman in Maine, which speaks glowingly of the superior merits of his hair jonic. Such evidence musthave its effect, when coming from a reliable source. If certificates are guarantees of truth, the Dr. needs no encor ms, nor useless puffery from the press; Barn, Hann, Jan 20, 1858. Professor O.J. Wood & Co.

Professor O. J. Wood & Co.

GENTLEMEN: Having my attention called a few months since to the highly beneficial effects of your hair restorative, I was induced to make application of it upon my own hair, which had become quite gray, probably one third white; my whiskers were of the same character. Some three months since I procured a battle of your hair restorative, and used it. soon found it was proving what I had wished.
I used it about twice a week. I have since procured another bottle, of which I have seed some. I can now certiff to the world that the gray or white hair has totally disappeared, both on my head and face, and my hair has required its natural color, and my hair has required its natural color, and I believe me. sumed its natural color, and I believe mor-soft and glossy than it has bee before for tweny ty fire years. I am now sixty years old; the good wife at the age of fifty two, has used it with same effect.

The above notice I deem due to you for your valuable discovery. I am assured that whoever will rightly use, as by direction, will not have occasion to contradict my statements. I am a citizen of this city, and a resident here am a citizen of this city, and a resident here for the last affect years, and am known to nearly every one here and adjoining towns. Any use you may make of the above, with my name attached, is at your service, as I wish to preserve the beauties of nature in others as well as myself. I am, truely, yours,
