The Girl with a Calico Dress.
A fig for your "fashionable girls,"
With their velvets and satins and laces,
Their diamonds and rubies and pearls,
And their milliner figures and faces;
They may shine at a party, or ball,
But give me, in place of them all,
My girl with a calico dress.

She is as plump as a partridge, and fair
As the rose in its earliest bloom;
Her teeth will with ivory compare,
And her breath with the clover perfume.
Her step is as free and as light
As the fawn's whom the hunters hard press;
And her eye is soft and as bright—
My girl with the calico dress.

Your dandies and foplings may sneer
At her simple and modest attire;
But the charms she permits to appear
Would set a whole iceberg on fire.
She can dance, but she never allows
The hugging, the squeeze and caress;
She is saving all these for her spouse—
My girl with the calico dress.

She is cheerful, warm-hearted and true,
And kind to her father and mother;
She studies how much she can do
For her sweet little sister, or brother.
And when I get a companion for life,
To comfort, enliven and bless,
I think I'll marry this girl for a wife—
My girl with the calico dress.

JANE MILLER;

A TALE OF THE REVOLUTION.

About a quarter of a mile from Culybark (the name is now changed to Croton Point) on a beautiful little knoll, stood in the time of the Revolution, a neat and pretty (for those days it was a very pretty) American farm house, which was inhabited by an old native whom we shall call Job Miller, his "better moiety" and two lovely daughters, just budding into womanhood. From the piazza of the house the view of the surrounding country was beautiful. The majestic Hudson, a short distance from the doorway, the Highlands, and the tall trees with their rich foliage made it a scene almost enchanting. The quiet and peace of the good old farmers were not disturbed in those days by the noise of steam-boats and other river crafts; a holy calm pervaded all around, and nature seemed fairly intoxicated with her own loveliness.

Close by the kitchen door of the farm-house was a well, which was said to be over a hundred feet deep, at the bottom of which old gossips shrewdly hinted that "lots of gold" was buried to prevent its getting into the hands of the British and Hessians. Job Miller's house was two stories high, very large and commodious, with plenty of room for his family, and more to spare "for company." In those days painters and carpenters were not so plenty as they are now, you probably know, and therefore Job Miller was prevented from having the external appearance of his house looking just as he wanted it—for he was a man of very great taste, and rather upper ten thousandish in his views.

It was the close of the last day of the summer of 1783; that our story commences. It had been a lovely day, and the departing rays of the sun shed a rich lustre on the surrounding scenery, which made it more picturesque and beautiful than ever. Job had just finished his supper, when the news arrived that an intimate friend of his had fallen from a tree, broken both his legs, and was not expected to survive. It was a distance of over ten miles, and although Job had been hard to work all day in the field, he resolved to set off immediately. After seeing that everything was safe and secure in the house, for Job Miller was a man pretty well to do in the world, he had the "Gray Mare" saddled for the ride. He had frequently gone away and left his family alone before, although those were dangerous times to do so, and as they had never been molested, he felt all the more confident that they were perfectly safe, and he started off with a light heart. "Mind, Sarah, keep the house well fastened," said Job to his wife, as he mounted his horse. "I have the rifles well loaded in the garret, and you will find plenty of powder and shot in the iron chest if you want it. I will be back by ten to-morrow—Good by!" and as he said this, he dashed his spurs into his horse's sides and was soon out of the lane into the road. His wife and daughter watched him from the piazza until he was out of sight, and the noise of his horse's hoofs had died away.

"The Hessians will have to be pretty cute to get our new hats this time, won't they Mary?" said Mrs. Miller to her eldest daughter as they were seated around the sewing table in the evening.

"Indeed they will," was the brief reply.

"How is that?" asked Jane, the youngest, who was very busily engaged at sewing something similar to patchwork.

"Why mother has buried them?" said Mary.

"Buried them? that's quite a joke, ha! ha! you don't mean it," asked Jane, laughing until the tears started in her beautiful blue eyes.

"I do mean it, and what's more, I mean that no one will know where they are but ourselves," replied Mary.

"I think myself it's a famous idea, said Mrs. Miller—"People bury money; why cannot we bury our hats!"

"Hark!" exclaimed Mary, suddenly starting up, "I thought I heard a voice under the window!"

Immediately all were silent as death. Jane dropped her work, and Mrs. Miller followed her example. They were still as possible for at least ten minutes, but not a sound was audible. "Oh, pshaw! she's trying to frighten us!" exclaimed Jane, tired with listening.

"Be merry, boys, be merry!" shouted the present leader of the party, "we have settled the account of one of them, and the two others cannot stand it much longer."

The report of a rifle was heard from the window, and another Hessian bit the dust. Hark! there goes another, and another, and another! Each one carries death with it.

"Damnation!" shouted one of the Hessians, "this is paying dearly for a little booty—seven killed and nothing gained yet. Come boys, let's see if we cannot get a little rest. The other party will be along in the morning, and then we will have them without any trouble."

"Agreed," chimed in the other two, and the trio took up their quarters for the night on the piazza.

Mary and Jane overheard their conversation from the window, and finding that they were not to be molested for the night closed the window.—Imagine their feelings after the heat and excitement of the preceding hours were over, on beholding the corpse of her who was to them all they held dear on earth. On gazing upon her cold, clammy brow, an ice tremor ran through the veins of Mary, and she sank back on a chair, her lips colorless, and her cheeks as white and pale as marble. Jane for a moment stood speechless, but recovering herself she ran up to her, fell upon her knees, and as she impressed a kiss upon her clay cold lips, uttered that sweet and holy word, "Mother!"

The sun rose mild and beautiful next morning; the birds caroled forth their gay notes as merrily as ever; but yet there seemed to be a stillness about the old cottage—a mournful stillness that spoke of death and sorrow.

Long before the hour of ten arrived (the time that Job was to come back) Mary and Jane were planning how they could best get away, and inform him of the danger that awaited him if he approached the house.

"After all Mary," said Jane, "I think we had better resume our old position, and guard him from their attacks as best we can. If we attempt to escape from the house we certainly shall be detected, then all hope is lost for him!"

"You are right, you are right, sister," replied Mary, clinging fondly around Jane's neck, "and may God bless you for a kind noble girl!"

Hark! what sounds approach! 'Tis the tramping of horses' hoofs. A moment, and the horse turns the angle of the road with her gallant rider.

Throw those dead bodies in the bushes, Ned; quick, or the old chap will be here before you. Dead men tell no tales, but they had better be out of sight.

"Hold! not quite so fast, my pretty one, I must taste the nectar of those pretty lips before you go. You have done considerable mischief, and you must now in a measure repay us! And so saying the ruffian caught the tender form of the young girl in his arms, and would have polluted her lips with a touch of his, had she not, with one superhuman effort, torn herself from him.

"Stand back, you fiend or—the words were scarcely out of her mouth before a ball from the rifle of Jane had entered his brain, and he fell senseless at her feet.

At the report of the rifle the old man burst away from the hold of the two ruffians, for they had endeavored to bind him to a post in the room, and seeing his escape before him he rushed toward her, but before he reached the stairs a ball from behind made him reel and stagger to the floor.

"They have killed him! quick Jane, they have killed him!" exclaimed Mary on seeing her father fall.

"It's too late now, my beauty," said one of the ruffians, as he caught hold of the bosom of her dress, and tore it open. "It's too late now, my beauty, we have done us enough injury, and by my good name, we'll make you pay for it. Hain't she rosy lips, Bill? I'll take her; and you can have the other up stairs; but you will have to fight amazing hard to get her. The way she popped over the old commodore was a caution to all land sharks, now I tell ye! Good girl, though, good girl, and worth getting!"

He had hardly spoken the words before Job had recovered from the effects of the blow, was on his feet, and had his hands grasped tightly round the ruffian's neck.

"Let go your hold, old man, or I'll strike you hard, I tell ye."

As he spoke the other ruffian raised the butt of his rifle in the air, and the next moment the blood spouted from a broad wound in the old man's forehead, and he fell backward to the floor.

"And you take that," said he, striking Mary a blow with his fist, and as if you can't keep your jaw tight for a while."

The fair young girl reeled and fell behind her father without uttering a syllable. As she fell he uttered a deep groan—he was dying.

Now for the one up stairs, and we are safe," said the ruffian, motioning his comrade to follow.

Mary was recovered from the effects of the blow, and kneeling by the side of her dying father. In an instant Jane was there also. The young officer offered his assistance, but it was of no avail. The spirit of the old man was soon to return to the God who gave it. With great effort he was raised partly up by his own request, and taking hold of the hands of Mary and Jane, he faintly articulated, "Blessings on—the last word died away in his throat, and he sank back in Jane's arms, dead!"

Five months from that day America and England were at peace, and one year from that Jane Miller was the happy wife of Russell E. Green, the gallant young officer. Mary never married, but lived with her sister till the day of her death. Where she stood the old farm-house of Job Miller, there is now erected a large and elegant mansion, owned by a wealthy merchant of New York.

GREAT ARTESIAN WELL.—The great artesian well at Louisville, Ky., was commenced in April, 1857, in the bottom of a well 20 feet deep. It was undertaken for the purpose of obtaining pure water for the paper mill.

During the first 74 feet the bore is 5 inches in diameter. This portion of the well is through sand and gravel, requiring a tube. The remainder to the bottom is three inches in diameter, through lime stone and sand stone sufficiently hard to render a tube unnecessary. The whole depth is 2,000 feet, of which 1,593 feet is through limestone more or less pure. The boring of the well was accomplished in 15 months. The well discharges 230 gallons of water per minute, or about 330,000 gallons in 24 hours. The water rises with such force that it rises in pipes, by its own pressure, 120 feet above the surface. Its force is estimated to be equal to that of a steam engine of 10 horse power. The water is perfectly limpid, with an invariable temperature of 74 deg. It is highly charged with mineral water, and is fit for the use intended; but it is supposed to be valuable for medicinal purposes. The solid contents of a wine gallon of the water is 915 grains, of which 815 grains are chloride of sodium (common salt) 86 grains of other chlorides, and 184 grains of sulphate.

LOCATION.—If a man really wants to locate himself permanently and happily, let him take some place not too much improved already to his land, but only capable of being improved slowly and gradually, as he can comfortably spare the means. Let it have a little spot of garden where he can plant a tree or two, and see them grow, and a vine, the fruit of which he may eat, and feel that his industry and genius brought it up out of the ground that otherwise would have produced nothing. Let him furnish his habitation and add room after room to it, all by degrees, and with an eye to permanent convenience. To such a home he will grow attached; it will become more respectable through age than more modern ones, through the newest styles of decoration. He will have saved turmoil and rejoice in all his labor. His house will not have been ruined but made his, and he will leave it for an heritage to his children's children.

SAT LOUISMOON AND THE LOCOMOTIVE.—The first locomotive Sat ever saw was standing with steam up, and nearly ready to go, making no noise save a suppressed humming from the safety valve. Sat had, in his shrewd, cautious way, clambered to the top of the tender to find out "what sort of a beast" it was when the engineer dived gave the whistle lever a long pull, "chay-y-y." Sat leaped twenty feet distant on a pile of cord-wood, and after running until he got strengthened up, he turned round with eyes "bugger" out, and said, "What in the durned did you do to it, mister?"

Just at this moment a negro came trundling a trunk, with a cooling stove, a joint of pipe on the fire hole, and pots and pans hanging all around. Sat took a look first at the stove and then at the locomotive; right broke out over his propensity, and he darted to the engine.

"Oh, yes, I understand it all now, the durned old trunk was just a stick-rod for the boiler!"

OFFICERS IN THE EUROPEAN WAR.—The Paris correspondent of the New York Times writes: Captain Jerome Bonaparte, who lately returned to France from a visit to his parents at Baltimore, has been placed in the service of the French army. He will command in the Chasseurs d'Afrique, a body of light cavalry, every man of which is mounted on an Arabian steed of great speed and endurance. This body is divided up and thrown forward in advance of the army in scouting parties, and is employed in all dangerous and rapid reconnaissances. The captain, on arriving at Paris ten days ago, left immediately for Algiers, to join his company, from whence he will most probably land at Genoa, on Sardinian territory, which is to be, on account of its proximity to Toulon and Marseilles, the future base of operations of the French army.

I have been told that Maj. Kearney, of New York, has entered the staff of one of the French generals of division, as a volunteer. Maj. Kearney, it will be recollected, distinguished himself in the Mexican war, in which he commanded a volunteer cavalry company, raised and equipped entirely at his own expense.

WHY DON'T YOU LEARN A TRADE?—This question was propounded, in our hearing, a few days since, to a young man who had been for several months unsuccessfully seeking employment as a clerk or salesman in some of our leading houses. Complaining of his ill luck, one of his friends, who knew he had a mechanical talent, but doubted whether he could make himself useful either as a clerk or salesman, put the interrogatory to him which we have placed as the caption of this article. The reply was; not so respectable as a mercantile occupation. Under this delusive idea our stores are crowded with young men who have no capacity for business, and who, because of the fancied respectability of doing nothing, waste away their minority upon salaries that cannot possibly liquidate their expenditures.

Late, too late in life, they discover their error, and before they reach the age of thirty, many of them look with envy upon the thrifty mechanic, whom in the days of their boyhood, they were accustomed to deride.—Ex.

A CARD TO THE LADIES.

Dr. Duponce's Golden Periodical Pills, FOR FEMALES.

Are infallible for removing Stoppages or Irregularities of the Menses.

The pills are nothing new, but have been used by the Doctor in his practice for many years, both in France and America, with unparalleled success in every case; and he is urged by many thousand ladies who have used them, to make the Pills public, for the alleviation of those suffering from any irregularities whatever, preventative to ladies whose health will not permit of an increase of family.

Pregnant females, or those supposing themselves so, are cautioned against using pills while in that condition, as the proprietor assumes no responsibility after the above admonition, although their mildness would prevent any injury to health; otherwise these pills are recommended. Directions accompany each box. Price $1.

N.B.—Ask for Dr. Duponce's Golden Pills. See signature on every box. You then obtain a pill you may depend upon.

Ladies, by enclosing one dollar by mail to either of the agents below, can have the pills sent (confidentially) to any part of the country.

THE GREAT WONDER

Of the Nineteenth Century.
PROF. WOOD'S HAIR RESTORATIVE.

Says the St. Louis (Mo.) Democrat: Below we publish a letter to Dr. Wood, of this city, from a gentleman in Maine, which speaks glowingly of the superior merits of his hair tonic. Such evidence must have its effect, when coming from a reliable source. It certifies as guarantees of truth, the Dr. needs no encomiums; how useless puffery from the press:—

BALTIMORE, Jan. 29, 1859.
Professor O. J. Wood & Co.
Gentlemen: Having my attention called a few months since to the highly beneficial effects of your hair restorative, I was induced to make application of it upon my own hair, which had become quite gray, probably one third white; my whiskers were of the same character. Some three months since I procured a bottle of your hair restorative, and used it. I soon found it was proving what I had wished. I used it about twice a week. I have since procured another bottle of which I have used some. I can now testify to the world that the gray or white hair has totally disappeared, both on my head and face, and my hair has resumed its natural color, and I believe softer and glossier than it has been before for twenty-five years. I am now sixty years old; my good wife, at the age of fifty-two, has used it with same effect.

The above notice I deem due to you for your valuable discovery. I am assured that whoever will rightly use, as by direction, will not have occasion to contradict my statements. I am a citizen of this city, and a resident here for the last fifteen years, and am known to nearly every one here, and adjoining towns. Any use you may make of the above, with my name attached, is at your service, as I wish to preserve the beauty of nature in others as well as myself. I am, truly, yours,
A. C. RAYMOND,
BALTIMORE, Jan. 23, 1858.

WOODS' HAIR RESTORATIVE.

Professor Wood—Dear Sir: Having had the misfortune to lose the best portion of my hair, from the effects of yellow fever, in New Orleans in 1854, I was induced to make a trial of your preparation, and found it to answer as the very thing needed. My hair is now thick and glossy, and no words can express my obligations to you in giving to the afflicted such a treasure.

FINLEY JOHNSON.
The undersigned, Rev. J. K. Bragg, is a minister in regular standing, and pastor of the Orthodox Church and Brookfield, Miss. He is a gentleman of great influence and universally beloved.

W. M. DYER,
Brookfield, Jan. 12, 1858.

Professor Wood—Dear Sir: Having made trial of your Hair Restorative, it gives me pleasure to say, that its effect has been excellent in removing inflammation, dandruff and a constant tendency to itching with which I have been troubled from my childhood; and has also restored my hair, which was becoming gray, to its original color. I have used no other article with anything like the same pleasure or profit. Yours truly,
J. M. BROWN,
The Restorative is put up in Bottles of three sizes, viz: large, medium, and small; the small holds 4 a pint, and retails for one dollar per bottle; the medium holds at least twenty per cent more in proportion than the small, retails for two dollars per bottle; the large holds a quart, 40 per cent more in proportion and retails for $3 per bottle.

LETTER RIB OR GRIND!

Take pleasure in announcing to the citizens of Moultrie and adjoining counties, that I have just put in successful operation a number one and in connection with it, a first rate Corn-sheller and Grist Mill. The will be run on Wednesdays and Fridays, and if necessary, a greater part of the week will be given to it, for I am determined that no one, who comes to mill on these days shall go home without his grinding. The Saw will be run all the time when the Grist Mill is not in operation.

SAW MILL

RETURNS
I will save for one-half the number, or for seventy-five cents per hundred, where the logs are furnished.

I will shell and grind corn for one sixth.

I have by close attention to business, and living square up to my word, to merit and receive a liberal patronage.—Bring on your Corn & Logs.

My Corn-sheller is now in operation, and does splendid work.

CARPET BAG.

There will always be different fancies among women about beads—Some like 'em, and others "set their faces against 'em." Many a girl who scolds about mustaches, has no objection to having one on her own lip—provided it belongs to the right fellow! Who wrote the following saucy epigram?

Kate hates mustaches? so much hair
Makes every head look like a bear;
But "Fannie," who no thought can fetter,
Bursts out, "the more like bears the better,
Because (her pretty shoulders shrugging)
"Beards are such glorious things for hugging."

Here is an excellent item for our sensitive novelists:

Frederick—"But, I assure you, dearest—"

Emily—"Oh, nonsense, Frederick! Don't tell me! I judge by deeds, not words; and I am sure you can not really love me, or you never would have given that horrid Miss Chapperton the wing of the chicken, and me the leg! Besides, you handed the strawberries first to Flora Giggles, and you know that I hate her."

An Irish Compliment.—A lovely girl was bending her head over a rose tree which a lady was purchasing from an Irish woman in Fulton Market, when the woman, looking kindly at the young beauty, said:—"I axes yer pardon, young lady, but if it's pleasing to ye, I'd thank ye to keep yer cheek away from that rose. Ye'll put the lady out of count with the color of her flowers."

An Ohio editor recently attempted to describe the powerful effects of the warm weather, and here is one instance:

"A small negro boy injudiciously leaned against the sunny side of a house yesterday, and fell asleep. In a few minutes he began to soften, and in three quarters of an hour he ran all over the yard!"

An editor in Iowa has been fined two hundred dollars for hugging a young lady in church. To this the Chicago American replies: "Cheap enough! We once hugged a girl in church, some ten years ago, and the scrape has cost us a thousand a year ever since."

Little, junior, a bright and thoughtful fellow of four summers, awoke the other morning, and, turning to his grandmother, said: "Grandma, I dreamed I had a carriage, last night! 'Did you?' said she; 'well, what did you do with it?' 'Oh,' said he, in his thoughtful manner, 'I left it in the dream house!'"

"Pa, can a person catch anything if he don't run after it?"

"Certainly not!"

"Well, then how did you catch the cold you have got?"

"By running after your mother, to bring her home from Women Right's Meeting."

"Master at home!"

"No sir, he's out."

"Mistress at home!"

"No sir, she's out."

"Then I'll step in and sit by the fire."

"That's out, too."

Miss Matilda Sawyer, a young lady of New York, who was about to be married was sitting up to make her wedding garments, when the explosion of a camphine lamp caused her death.—Ex.

An individual the other day remarked upon the street, that money is the great lever in the affairs of mankind. "A very good lever," remarked Blinks, "I never could keep it."

"Father, have you seen anything of my bonnet? I must have left it in this room." "No, my dear, I have not; but I will take the microscope and look for it."

ROUSSEAU says: "The empire of woman is an empire of softness, of address, of complacency—her commands are entreaties, her menaces are tears."

A Farmer's Toast.—"Women—The fairest work of creation, the edition being extensive, let no man be without a copy."

That was a smart boy who asked his father what kind of wood the Board of Tax Commissioners was made of.

An Iowa farmer, on being asked if he had ever done much farming before, replied: "No; but last year I farmed considerably being."
