TO F. M. W**.

Thou art married, cousin dear,
To a fair young bride,
To assist thy bark to steer
Adown life's wayward tide.

Oh may no storm thy bark o'ertake,
Nor winter's chilling blast;
May no high waves around it break,
Nor gales o'erthrow its mast.

Oh may thy sky be fair and bright,
With out one cloud to play
Across its bosom of delight,
To drive thy smile away!

Oh happy bark, float calmly on,
As down life's stream you glide;
May Heaven shower its blessings on
"The bridegroom and the bride!"

And years from now, Oh may we find
The happy bark still gliding,
And not one chilling, wintry wind
Upon its bright sails riding.

May hope and joy and peace be thine,
To be forever by thy side;
Heaven's brightest gift upon thee shine,
And bless thy loving bride.

And when ye both are called away—
When ties of earth are riven,
May holy angels round you stay,
And bear your souls to Heaven.

KATE CAMERON;

OATH OF THE BLACK BAND.

BY JOSEPH HAMILTON, M. D.

CHAPTER I.

The sun sets in Massachusetts as well as in New York, a phenomenon for which the writer of this veritable narrative does not hold himself responsible, whatever the native transcendentalists of that ancient commonwealth may opine on the subject. The event—the going down of the sun, and that among huge piles of golden clouds in the distant west—was taking place at the time in which our scene opens.

The farewell beams of the August luminary slanted across the stubble furrows, the grass just fading from the slopes and hill-sides of Rosemary Vale, that delightful tract of country which lies on the inland side of the village of Efindala.

The woodchopper drove his tired team before him, as with coat on his arm and in his bagged trousers, he trudged homeward to his evening meal, while the rosy daughter of the soil brought from the oow-yard the limpid beverage from which the limpid waters are taught to keep at a respectful distance.

On a brown hill overlooking this pastoral scene, was a small but thick wood, or were drawn around it like a curtain—for I believe that philosophers have not decided which of these two events took place on that occasion—the wood of which I have spoken became more sombre until its aspect was peculiarly dark and gloomy; while the hooting of a solitary owl was calculated to awaken in the breasts of the superstitious, or the readers of old romances, the impressions made by those tales of midnight horrors which were not yet banished from the primitive firesides of Rosemary Vale.

If we were to peer into this black wood at the present juncture, we should see, standing upon a mossy rock and under the low branches of a benlock, a man apparently of middle age, in homely apparel, tall in stature, and whose motions of vulgar impudence, like that of a person who does not care to be left long alone with his own thoughts.

As this ominous individual started and looked about him at every rustling of the dry leaves, we may justly conclude that he was waiting for the appearance of another; perhaps, a companion of the same stamp as himself.

"Yes—trap him!" murmured he, "trap him! we do all the dirty work, and the popinjays have all the glory, and the money too. Besides, that insult! I'll weave a halter for his neck, proud as he is, and cunning as he thinks himself! I'll put him under the sod, though he thinks me his friend—but, softly—did I not hear a step?"

"On yours perch, old Crow-foot, eh!" cried a voice, as a youth of matchless form and ingenious though decided features leaped lightly on the ancient rock and approached the moody soliloquist.

"Ha! yes—yes—here I am—ahem!" returned the other twisting his mouth into a smile, if such a sinister contortion could be denominated a smile.

"And I've waited long enough, too." "Not bad, either," was the reply of the youth, "for solitude is good for certain temperaments, and they do say that you are disposed to reform."

"Reform! me!" ejaculated the other, with a scowl.

"Solitude is preferable to reflection," returned the youth; "and Zimmerman tells us that, if disposed to amend our lives—"

"Stuff!" cried the other, with a look of concentrated spite, for he now perceived that he was the butt of ridicule; "to business; and in the first place, tell me which way you came?"

The young man held out his left arm, pointing toward the high road. "Good! then you may have met a fellow on horseback?"

"A genteel young man, on a chestnut horse; green coat, drab pants." "The same, my boy! You'll know him if you see him again?"

"Yes, I shall, since I shall never meet him in heaven; that's the only place where his transformation would be so complete that the recognition could not take place."

The other grinned. "You talk of a place," said he, "where he is likely to go soon, if he ever gets there at all."

"How!" cried the youth, surprised out of his rallery; "what do you mean, old Crow-foot?"

"That you must kill that genteel fellow in the drab pants and green coat. Do you understand me now?" "I understand too much and too little," was the reply of the youth, staring at his surly companion. "I should be unwilling to shed the blood of so fine looking fellow merely to gratify a whim of yours."

The one called "Crow-foot" twisted up his tobacco-stained mouth into a horrible grin—expressive of scorn and hatred—as he said: "How long have you been so tender-hearted?" "To the point!" cried the other, stamping his foot, and grasping the shoulder of the other so violently that he shook and turned pale; "killing is no job, but if there is a necessity, speak out!"

"You are so impatient!" said he, at length, in a voice of assumed gentleness; "but that fellow in the green coat is cousin to Kate Cameron, and therefore—"

"By Jupiter!" exclaimed the youth, leaping up as if an arrow had pierced his vitals; "and you give that as a reason for spilling his blood! Was it not for my oath—"

"Patience, and hear me out," interrupted the other, with a frightened air; "he is also the lover of Kate."

"Ha!" "He is putting up at her house! He is only her second cousin; I have seen him walking out with her; I have seen her arm under his; I have seen—"

"What?" "Give me time—"

"What have you seen?" cried the youth, bounding toward the assassin. "I have seen his arm around her neck, and her lips—"

"Liar!" thundered the youth; "take back those injurious words, or, in spite of my oath—in spite of the tie that binds us I will twist off your weasand and roll your head from these rocks."

"Well—well—I—I don't exactly say that, since it gives you pain," stammered the other; "but I only spoke of the future; such a thing is likely to be—"

"Likely to be?" "I mean, that if you don't stop his fun, he will win the love of Miss Cameron, and then you will be too late."

The youth fell back, heedless of his cap that had fallen to the ground, and sinking upon a stump which rose above the edge of the rock, he sat a few moments with his face buried in his hands.

Then rising up and slowly approaching the elder man, he said: "Crow-foot, how long has this been?" "Only six or eight days."

"Come, then, how do you know that there is any love on the part of this coxcomb?" "Coxcomb! I thought you looked upon him as a fine young fellow?" returned the man, with a sneer.

"Will you give me a straight answer, when I ask you a question?" "A straight answer—ahem! Yes, of course I will."

"Come, then?" "A servant girl has told me—"

"Does she live in the house of Kate Cameron?" "At Fairy Grove—yes," replied Crow-foot; "she has lived with Miss Cameron rising a year."

"Well, and what did your tattler say?" "She says that he is deep in love with Kate Cameron, and hired her to steal a handkerchief of the lady's, which he puts under his pillow at night and wears next to his heart in the day-time."

"It must be stopped," was the reply. "Good! I knew that when you came to see your interest, you would perceive that I was right. Well, now to that other business—"

"No, no, Crow-foot, not to-night—another time—to-morrow at noon, or whenever you like. I am upset for to-night: my brain is in a whirl; I have no heart for dollars and cents; another time. Good night."

And the youth hurried down the rock at the risk of his neck.

As soon as he was alone, the man called Crow-foot, shook his head and ground his teeth.

"Insolent puppy!" said he; "but I have got him now. He believes this and will go to the death. The young man, stopping with Kate Cameron has a wife already in England, and is going back to her next week; but the trap is just as good for all that. We will see who'll swing, now."

Saying these words, the assassin hurried off in a direction opposite to that which the youth had—

The St. Louis Republican, in noticing the declaration of Governor Wise that Mr. Douglas can not be elected President, if nominated, says:

"This may be Governor Wise's opinion, but it only shows that he knows nothing of public opinion either in the slave States or the free States. Put Judge Douglas and Governor Wise before the slave States of this Union, and we believe that Douglas would beat Wise in the majority of them; and for this plain reason, that they have confidence in Douglas and none whatever in Wise, founded on his past or present political history. The country knows that Douglas is a Union man—that he is a conservative man—that he does not go a-billing as Wise, and Rhett, and Jeff Davis, and a score or two of Southern politicians do, when the slave States are assailed in their rights, but that he does better—comes squarely up to the work in the Union, and acknowledges and defends the rights of the South. The country knows, too, that Douglas can carry the free States in sufficient numbers to elect him to the Presidency with the aid of the slave States; and while this is the case, the thinking, considerate men of the South and the Center are not going to cast him off, simply to oblige Wise, Rhett, Jeff Davis, & Co."

The Chinese have a temple in San Francisco which cost $20,000, and have imported an idol from China at a cost of $40,000. It is the image of a man who figured in China 300 years ago, and was a great statesman and warrior, as one said: "like your Washington." The only efforts in California to christianize the Chinese are by the Methodists at Sacramento. The law prohibiting Chinamen from coming to the States is pronounced unconstitutional, and their number, now 60,000, is rapidly increasing.

The Democratic Doctrine.

Senator Fugh, of Ohio, opened the campaign in that State, the other day, at Batavia, in an elaborate and able speech. We extract the following paragraphs from a sketch of it in the Cincinnati Enquirer:

The Democratic doctrine was not only to leave to each State the power to decide whether it would have slavery or not, but also each territory, which was nothing but a community about to become a State. They were interested in the matter, and were abundantly qualified to decide it for themselves. If they wanted slavery they could have it, and if they did not want it they could exclude it. It was their own business. He was aware that some fire-eaters in the South claimed that Congress could and should protect it in the territories, as the Abolitionists claimed it could and should prohibit it—he repudiated both heresies as wrong and anti-Democratic. The fire-eaters and Abolitionists were sectional and fanatic alike. If the fire-eaters were North, they would be Abolitionists; and if the Abolitionists were South, they would be fire-eaters. Both circulate the sentiments of the others in the opposite sections of the Union to influence its component parts, and put enmity between the North and South. The Republicans now had been so annihilated in argument that they now only claimed to be opposed to the extension of slavery. Who was not opposed to it in the free States? He knew of none who were in favor of it. But while opposed to the extension, if the people of the territory wanted it they had a right to it. Congressional prohibition could not prevent it. The people of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois held slaves in considerable numbers against the provisions of the Ordinance of 1787. The Republican Philadelphia platform claimed that Congress had "sovereign power" to prohibit slavery in the territories. There was no such word as "sovereign" in the constitution, nor nothing analogous to it. The claim of congressional sovereignty over the territories was but a reiteration of the Tory and British doctrine before the American revolution. They claimed that the British king and parliament could bind the colonies, although the latter were not represented in it. So the territories were not represented, and had no votes in Congress, yet the people were to be treated as King George desired to treat his American subjects.

The Abolitionists denounced the fugitive law, which was an exact copy of the law of 1793, approved by George Washington, save that justices of the peace remained slaves to their masters instead of commissioners. In neither case was there any trial by jury. The Abolitionists had created the necessity for the change by passing a law in some States that the justice of the peace should not act. Now they say that the law ought to be passed by the States and executed by State officials!

You Will Be Wanted.

Take courage young man. What if you are but an humble and obscure apprentice—a poor and negligent orphan—a scoffer and by-word of the thoughtless and gay, who despise virtue in rage, because of its tatters. You have an intelligent mind, all uttered through desire and hottest heart.—Depend upon it, one of those days you will be wanted. The time may long be deferred. You may grow to manhood, and may even reach your prime ere this call is made; but virtuous aims, pure desires, and honest hearts are too few not to be wanted. Your virtues shall always wait upon you about as with a mantle; obscurity shall not always veil you from the multitude. Be chivalric in your combat with circumstances. Be active, however small your sphere of action. It will surely enlarge with every moment, and your influence will have constant increase.

When you doubt between words choose the plainest, the commonest, the most idiomatic. Use few fine words as you would choose love simple ones as you would native roses on your cheeks.

JOSEPH H. WAGGONER, Editor & Publisher.

SULLIVAN, ILLINOIS.

Friday, August 26, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1860,

HON. STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

TO OUR READERS.

We Club, only, with such publications as we can recommend. The Express and Godey's Lady's Book can be had for $3.25. We will furnish the Express, and the Atlantic Monthly, for $3.00 per year. The Express, and the Prairie Farmer, for $2.25 per annum. The Express, and the North-Western Prairie Farmer, for $3 a year. Call at our office and see specimens.

Religious.

Rev. Joel Knight will preach on the first and third Sabbath in each month, at the Presbyterian Church, at 11 o'clock A. M. Rev. Wm. H. McVey will preach at the above place next Sabbath, (the 13th inst.) at 3 o'clock P. M., and subsequently every two weeks. Preaching every Sunday, at 11 o'clock, at the Christian church.

The Late Elections.

We think that the result of the recent elections in the Southern States augurs well for the success of the Democratic party in the Presidential election in 1860. So far as the general result is concerned, we think that the Democratic majorities in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and North Carolina, are greater than was given to Mr. Buchanan in the last Presidential election. True, there have been disasters in some particular districts, by which we have lost several members of Congress, but these have been owing either to divisions in the party, or to the abandonment of some vital principle of party faith. A defeat from either of these causes, at this particular time, will be beneficial rather than injurious. If we have lost anything from the first named cause, our friends will have time to see the folly of their course, and to rally their broken columns into a compact body in time for the great struggle of next year; if from the latter cause, those who have erred will return, like the prodigal son, in time to partake of the fattened calf that will be killed for the great Democratic army, that will sweep everything before it, in its victorious career in the next Presidential election.

We are glad to see, that everywhere in the South, where the Democratic party have taken unequivocal grounds in favor of non-intervention, and popular sovereignty, they have more than maintained their ground.

There seems to be a perfect understanding between the opposition North and South. Whilst in the North they have been falsely denouncing the Democratic party as a pro-slavery party, bent on spreading slavery, at every hazard into all our Territories; in the South they have raised a terrible hue and cry because the Democratic party there, would not advocate the passage, by Congress, of a slave-code for the Territories. And these philanthropic anti-slavery oppositionists have stood ready to flap their wings and crow at the success of their Congressional-Slave-Code allies in the South, and the slave-code men have all the time held their breath in anxiety, to hear the first rumblings of a victory by their free-soil brethren of the North. This stamps both branches of the opposition as mere political tricksters, who only seek the overthrow of the Democratic party in order to get the loaves and fishes of office; and if the Democracy stand firmly together, by their honored creed, as we verily believe they do, the people who love honesty and fair dealing, and hate chicanery, will rally around our standard in such numbers as will overwhelm all opposition.

McClure has the best cigar in town.

Our Boys. We see that many of our late exchanges have something to say about boys of their respective towns; and as yet nothing good has been recorded. Now, we propose to say something of our boys, here in Sullivan—at least three or four of them—but this time, (more's the pity), we can't say anything very flattering. Old Mr. Cochran, our blind wood-sawyer, who earns his living by the hardest licks, always manages by his industry, to have the best garden in town. A few nights ago some boys, who neither have any respect for themselves nor parents, entered Mr. Cochran's garden and pulled up his sweet potatoe vines, destroyed his melons, and, in fact, nearly ruined his garden. Such boys—boys that steal into the garden and destroy the hard earnings of a blind man—what is to become of such? Boys, for shame, never do so again as long as you live! We have your names, but if you promise to do so no more, we'll not tell who you are. Remember!

Come in to the show next Monday, and let's see if there is not yet a little money in the country. We do not yet despair—we think some one has money, and they'll be apt to show some of it that day. We'll see. Don't forget the Printers, on that day—call and pay that little you owe us, then go to the show with a light heart and a clear conscience, and you'll be better prepared to enjoy what you may see there. Do, for goodness' sake, pay us something! Won't you?

U. S. Fair Premium List.

We have received the Premium List of the Fair of the United States Agricultural Society, to be held at Chicago, Ill., from the 12th to the 17th of September next. This promises to be the most brilliant exhibition that has ever taken place in this country. That's the place to take your stock if you want to get large premiums. That's the place to go if you want to see all the people and "the rest of mankind." The premiums offered on stock ranges from thirty-five to one thousand dollars. Premium on the fastest trotting horse is $1,000!

Our Presbyterian and Methodist friends concluded their protracted meeting, of two weeks' duration, on last Sunday evening; and which, it is hoped, has resulted in much good. On Monday evening our friends of the Christian church commenced a protracted meeting, which is progressing now, and likely to continue several days yet. A great religious interest seems to be manifested by our citizens, judging from the immense crowd in attendance each night of worship.

Governor Chase, of Ohio, is at Washington, endeavoring, it is reported, to secure the support of the "National Era" for himself as a candidate for the Presidency.

Advices from Oregon say that Stout, Democrat, is elected to Congress by 41 majority.

HOME MAGAZINE, September number, has been received, and delightfully welcomed. It is a lovely little magazine. We expect to take it unless we get too blind from old age to read anything—even then, if some one will read for us, we'll still take it.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK for September is on our table. This magazine finds its way into nearly every family on the continent of America, and is always hailed with greater delight than any other. This No. contains five steel engravings of the Heroic Women of the Revolution. Godey is determined not to be excelled.

Spurious five dollar bills are circulating freely in St. Louis, on the Tamson Bank, Tamson, Mass.'s note, country store, wall cars, ships, and city in the distance; goddess of liberty on lower right corner, Franklin on lower left corner.

Douglas and Jackson. The Democrats of New Haven, Conn., lately presented a service of plate to Mr. Gallagher, the friend of Douglas, who was recently turned out of the custom house at that place. In his reply to the presentation speech, Mr. G. spoke warmly and eloquently in favor of Douglas; and in the course of his remarks he related the following incident concerning Douglas and Jackson in 1844:

In that year a number of the friends of Gen. Jackson were met at the Hermitage on invitation of the venerable patriot. Among them was Judge Douglas of Illinois—who was introduced to the General by Governor Clay of Alabama. When thus introduced, Gen. Jackson rested his yet brilliant eye upon the Judge, and inquired if he was the Mr. Douglas of Illinois who had delivered a speech in Congress on the subject of the fine imposed upon him (Gen. Jackson) for proclaiming martial law in New Orleans. Judge Douglas modestly replied that he had delivered a speech upon that subject. "Then stop, and sit here beside me," said Gen. Jackson, "I wish to offer you my sincere thanks for that speech. It was a full and complete vindication of my conduct on that trying occasion. You are the first man who has dared to justify that conduct, and you have relieved my mind of a weight that has rested upon it for thirty years. I can now go down to my grave with the consciousness that I have never broken the laws of my country or the constitution. You have set me right on the record. I heartily thank you, sir." And when Gen. Jackson was placing in the hands of his biographer material for the work on his life, he gave directions to have Judge Douglas' speech published therein, saying, "my biographer will insert this speech of Judge Douglas as the reasons which governed me in proclaiming martial law in New Orleans." This one incident in the life of Judge Douglas, said Mr. Gallagher, ought to have restrained the hatred and the malignity with which the administration followed the Illinois Senator in his own State, while battling nobly against the foes of democracy and the Union.

Affairs in Europe.

It will be seen, from accounts from various parts of Italy, that agitation is universal and determined. The Pope is making war upon his revolted provinces, the King of Naples gives no signs of joining the Italian Confederation, and, in fact, it is quite certain that he will not. The people of Tuscany, have resolved, as one man, not to receive the Grand Duke back again, and is understood that the Emperor of the French, has declared that his troops will not be engaged in enforcing his return. Piedmont is in a dubious state. The conduct of the King is extremely doubtful. Cavour's resignation, if it is now alleged, was insisted upon as one of the conditions of peace, by Louis Napoleon. A new ministry has been formed but of a character which gives no security that the constitution, suspended during the war, will be restored. Genoa, in a sarcastic but ardent address to the King, laments that he was coerced into conditions, which they repudiated.

A Horse-Thief Shot.

The Sheriff of Woodford county, Ill., and a Mr. Miller of Decatur, were pursuing two horse-thieves, whom they overtook a few miles north of Bloomington, on last Friday week. They rode toward the men until quite near them, when suddenly the fellows drew each a revolver and covering his man separated to strike out across the prairie. The Sheriff followed one, Miller took the other, and the former pressed his fugitive so closely that the latter turned and made some movement as if to fire, when the Sheriff, seeing the thief's design, fired his own pistol, and shot the man through the breast. He fell dead from the saddle without a word, the ball having passed through his heart. The other man, seeing the fate of his comrade, gave himself up quietly. Both the living and the dead horse-thieves were taken to Bloomington that night. Such a Sheriff as the above should be awarded a special premium at our coming State Fair.

The Indianapolis Sentinel states that a majority of the State Central Committee are in favor of changing the time of holding the Democratic State Convention in that State, and that they will soon give an announcement of another day than the 5th of January, 1860.

Mons. Antoine Delays, a well known tight-rope performer, proposes to cross the falls of Niagara on a wire. That beats Blondin!

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER HUNGARIAN

Farther Point, Aug. 20. The steamer Hungarian has passed this point bound to Quebec, where she will be due to-night. Her dates are to the 10th inst., four days later than previous advices. The subscription to the new stock of the Atlantic Telegraph company is progressing very favorably. In the long list of the takers of this stock appear the names of Bering, Brothers & Co.; F. Huth & Co.; Samuel Gurney, of the firm of Exern, Gurney & Co.; N. Rothschild & Co.; George Peabody, of the firm of Peabody & Co.; Hankey & Co.; Barclay, Beaver & Co.; J. H. Schroder, of the firm of John Harny, Schroder & Co.; C. M. Sampson, Thomas Brassey, and Wm. Brown.

The Peace Conference met at Zurich on Monday, the 18th inst., according to the previous announcement. Nothing had transpired regarding the proceedings thus far. Sardinia was represented in the conference.

Emperor Napoleon was on a visit to camp Chalons, witnessing the maneuvers of the troops. The British Parliament was still debating the Italian question, but in a more subdued tone than has hitherto characterized the speeches. The official authorities at Zurich had given the ambassadors to the peace conference a warm welcome, and were to entertain them at a public dinner on the 11th inst.

The London Times has an article on the stipulations of the treaty alleged to have been arranged between the American minister to Mexico, McLane, and President Juarez. Although the Times thinks the treaty would be beneficial to Mexico as well as to the world, yet it fears it would result in injury to the interest of the foreign bond-holders.

The Grand Duke Constantine of Russia had arrived at Spithead in a Russian vessel of war.

Mazzini publishes in several of the London journals an article under the caption of "The European coup d'etat."

Pike's Peak.

From the Leavenworth Herald of the 17th we clip the following very interesting news from the gold mines by the last Express to that city:

Yesterday morning, about 2 o'clock one of Jones, Russell & Co.'s Express Coaches arrived in our city, bringing dates to Aug. 6th. The coach we learn came full of passengers.

We are indebted to the polite and gentlemanly clerks of the Express Office for the news.

The express brought in $1,846.25 in gold dust. The news from the mines continues very favorable, and establishes beyond a doubt as a "fixed fact," that gold exists in large quantities in the mountains, and that too, over a large scope of country.

The passengers confirm all the accounts, and state that many are making fortunes, others are making fair wages of from five to ten dollars per day to the hand, while others are making nothing.

Emigrants are going to the mines and some few dissatisfied persons are leaving. The season is now getting far advanced for persons to go to the mines. But next season it is anticipated a large emigration will go to the mines.

Messrs. Jones, Russell & Co. received yesterday $3,726 from the Philadelphia mint, made from actual Pike's Peak gold. The dust was sent to that place, and there coined and returned here. This is the first Pike's Peak gold coin and is something of a curiosity, but ere long we expect to see plenty of just such coin.

THE ROLL OF HONOR.—The following are the names and ages of the Revolutionary soldiers supposed to be alive, who are pensioned on the rolls of the State of Virginia: Wm. Cunningham, 65 years; George Estes, 96; Daniel Hicks, sr., over 97; Wm. Oney, 98; Peter Rife, 97; Wm. Stewart, 98; Mathew Seay, 96; Henry Willoughby, 100.

One of the best photographers in Europe took a bank note for 5,000 francs on the Bank of France, and photographed one so much like it that the bank's judges, the photographer himself, and in fact all who have seen the two, are unable to distinguish one from the other. The bank considers such success rather dangerous.

The Grand Singer and Minnie, of last Monday evening, was "hoisted" out of town.—Patriot Democrat, 20th.

Wonder if this could have been the renowned Mons. Julian Duvisiore?

Compromises.

One or two Republican papers affect to find matter for ridicule in Senator Douglas' recent clear and dignified letter on citizenship and the slave trade, and especially in the observations contained in that letter respecting the "compromises of the constitution." The man, they say, who repealed the Missouri compromise, talking about the sacredness of compromises! These papers do not consider the different character of different compromises.—The Missouri restriction, generally but falsely called the Missouri compromise, was simply a temporary arrangement between the politicians of 1820 to settle a question which was giving them some trouble. If it was ever a compromise, it was not a compromise of the constitution. It had false principles for a basis, and it was denounced by the wisest and best men of that day as a dangerous expedient—one whose import startled Thomas Jefferson as "a fire bell in the night!" This compromise Senator Douglas repealed; and the country has sustained the repeal. It was a measure absolutely necessary, before the fundamental principle of our government—popular sovereignty—could be secured to the people in the territories. But the compromises of the constitution he will uphold; and one of those compromises forbids the revival of the African slave trade. Are the Republicans in favor of it?—If not, we are at a loss to know what objection they can urge to Senator Douglas' letter.—Chicago Times.

DIED

At his residence, eight miles west of Sullivan, on the 12th day of August, 1859, Bro. Past Grand, S. M. Kearney.

At a special meeting of Moultrie Lodge, No. 158, I. O. O. F., held on the 13th day of August, 1859, Bro's P. B. Knight, J. E. Eden and C. L. Roane were appointed a committee to draft resolutions, expressing the feelings of the Lodge on the occasion.—Said committee presented the following resolutions, which were adopted by the Lodge:

Resolved, That it is our duty to bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, in the plenitude of His wisdom, to remove from our number, by death, our late worthy Brother, S. M. Kearney.

Resolved, That it is our duty to bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, and so to live that when the summons shall come, we may be prepared to enter the Grand Lodge above, where parting will be no more.

Resolved, That with his immediate relatives and friends in this affliction and bereavement, we most sincerely, deeply and affectionately sympathize.

Resolved, That in Brother Kearney we recognize a faithful brother, and a true Old Fellow.

Resolved, That the Lodge wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to furnish a copy of these resolutions to the Widow of our deceased Brother.

Resolved, That the "Express" be requested to publish a copy of the foregoing.

By order of the Lodge, August 23d 1859.

P. B. KNIGHT, N. G.

B. B. HAYDON, Sec'y.

Special Premiums.

To be Awarded at the U. S. Fair, at Chicago Illinois.

In addition to the $15,000 in premiums offered by the Society, the following volunteer premiums have been already offered.

Citizens' Purse for the Best Trotting Horse.—Single Horses in harness, $1,000—open to all. To be decided by the committee of classes 39, 40 and 41, and on the same principles that govern them—speed to count with other good points only.

Hotel Premium on Butter.—Best 100 lbs. made at any time. Tremont House gives $25, Matteson House $10, Metropolitan Hotel $5. Others not yet handed in.

Vegetables.—The Tremont House gives $25 towards the best display of the Vegetables.

Colored Photographs and Oil Paintings.—A. Hessler gives $10 towards a Special Premium on the former, and $5 on the latter.

WHEAT.—The Chicago Board of Trade offer the following premiums on Wheat:—Best 100 bushels of white winter wheat, a premium price of $2.50 per bushel.—Best 100 bushels of red winter wheat, a premium price of $2.25 per bushel. Best 100 bushels of Spring wheat, a premium price of $2 per bushel. The wheat to become the property of the Board of Trade, and the whole of it must be in Chicago, ready for delivery, and not less than two bushels must be on exhibition on the grounds.

John McClure has our thanks for the present of a nice large water-melon, weighing thirty pounds, which can beat all the water-melons in town.

We are authorized to announce the name of Col. J. W. B. Mosier as a candidate for the office of Treasurer and Assessor, at the ensuing November election.

MARY VOYERS.

WIT AND WISDOM.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

BY F. H. WAGGONER.

From the Boston Post.

(Society at Saratoga.)

Saratoga society—

What endless variety!

What pinks of propriety!

What gems of—sobriety!

What garrulous old folks,

What shy folks, and bold folks,

And warm folks, and cold folks!

Such carolers dressing,

And tender caressing,

(Of course that is guessing!)

Such sharp Yankee-Doodles,

And dandified noodles,

And other pet poodles!

Such very loud patterns,

(Worn often by slatterns.)

Such hoops—big as Saturn's!

Such straight necks, and bow necks,

Such dark necks, and snow necks,

And high necks, and low necks!

With this sort, and that sort,

The lean and the fat sort,

The bright and the flat sort,—

Saratoga's Saratoga!

And raimed full, and jammed full,

[I dare n't say a full!]
