Munson And Burns Benefit Thru Ruling Of Supreme Court

States Attorney Plan to Have Men Tried Again on Gays Bank Robbery Charge. Freed on Technical Point

Mr. Brown indignantly repudiated any such statement. He declared that he never made it and that he was grossly misrepresented in what he was supposed to have said relative to this dates for the following offices:

The facts of the matter are that Munson was released on a mere legal technicality which does not affect his guilt or innocence. None o fthe other bank robbers have ever made confessions which clear either Munson or

As Burns' case is in the same legal status as that of Munson, he will doubtless be given the same treatment by the upper courts and this action will not be opposed.

The officials are, however, firmly convinced of the guilt of both of these men and an effort will be made to have the March grand jury again indict them. Every precaution will be taken to avoid any further legal pitfalls in these cases in the future procedure against them.

The cases are based on positive identification by Jack Fleming and Milton Waggoner, two men who were in the bank at the time of the rob-

ANDREW J. DUFFIELD, FRIEND AND HOST TO

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, DIES Way back in the days before the Civil War there lived on East Water street in this city, in the house now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Lucas, a family named Duffield. Dr. Duffield was an inmate friend of Abraham Lincoln, the lanky circuit riding attorney. When Lincoln came to Sullivan to practice law, he was often entertained in the Duffield home.

Andrew Peston Duffield, a son, became a great friend of the guest. When the nation elevated Lincoln to the presidency and the Southern states seceeded the call went forth for volunteers. Andrew Duffield, though but a youth in his teens, responded to the call of "Father Abraham" and enlisted in the Union army and fought throughout the war.

This veteran died last week in Hollywood, California. The following clippings are taken from a Hollywood paper and we are indebted to Mrs. Frank B. Smith of Decatur for them:

"Arrangements are being made for the funeral of Andrew Duffield, aged 79, who died last night at his Hot Springs, Ark. home, 1312 Citrus avenue, and who will be buried tomorrow from the Little church of the Flowers at Forest Lawn. The Daughters of Veterans will be in charge of the service. Dr. Willsie Martin will make an address.

"Mr. Duffield knew Abraham Lincoln when, as a young lawyer, Lincoln boarded in the Duffield home in Illinois. Fired with patriotism he enlisted at the age of 14 in the Union army at Lincoln's first call. He became a bugler, later as scout and orderly, and came into contact with all the great commanders of the Federal forces. He remained in service during the entire period of the war and may call it that. because of his initiative and value to the government was kept in service for a year afterwards.

You know Luke says in the 14th chapter and 27th verse, "Whosoever does not bear his cross and come after me, cannot be my disciple".

There is always the shadow of the cross resting on the Christians path. Is that a reason why you should avoid Ivory Martin. I am of the opinion or not undertake the duty? Have you made up your mind you will follow your Master everywhere else. save when He ascends the path that leads to the cross? Is that your religion? If so, the sooner you change it the better. The religion of the Lord Jesus Christ, is the religion of the cross and unless we take up our cross we can never follow Him. Then as the song says "The way of the cross leads home." What a blessed thought. Home and rest. "There remaineth a rest for the people of God."

JAMES EARL CROWDER "The Illinois Burbank

of Sullivan, Illinois has consented to give a series of articles on farm, soil and seed. One article will appear in this paper each successive week. Last week the first article of "Light and Heat" appeared.

"Soil Fertility"

veloped, through its economical financial system, the greatest agricultural university the world has ever known. They have been working on the soils of Illinois for more than a lifetime. Many years ago, men were sent out by the University who took samples of soils from all of the lands throughout the state. These soils were analyzed as to their elements and today are on file at the University. You can write them today about your particular farm and they will tell you the elements your soil is made up of and what elements it is deficient in.

Remember that during the World War, the third chemical that was necessary to be formulated to make that terrible deadly gas that was proposed and intended to be used by aeroplanes spreading the powder throughout the German nation, and it would have destroyed all forms of life both animal and vegetation, was furnished by one of the men of the University of Illinois. I merely make mention of this to show to the world that all the great men of the universe do not live outside of Illinois.

Different Elements of the Soil.

Some of our soils can stand much more continuous farming than others. Some will yield up their elements much easier than others and, on the other hand, will build back much easier.

There are many different elements that go to make up the many different types of soils we have through our land but the first thing we have found out are required for the growing of the common farm grains are ammonia, phosporus, potassium and potash.

Ammonia is secured in many forms. By one process it is taken from the air. Phosphorus is now being secured to replenish the soil in the form of raw ground work. This, being teated with acid, makes available phosphorus. Potash and potassium are used in the commercial fertilizers and are very beneficial to most soils.

No doubt thousands of years pass ed by in the forming of our soils and thousands of crops of vegetation grew to maturity, fell down and decayed. This vegetation gathered from the air and the water elements that could not be obtained in any other form, therefore, when they decayed they added to the soil other elements or more of the same elements, making it richer in these particular elements.

I am inclined to think that our Maker did not use animals to enrich the soil, as many of our best farmers have practiced for years, but merely caused the growth to come on and fall down, as above described, adding to the soil year after year abundance of nitrogen, phosphate, potassium and all other elements contained in our soil makeup.

Burning of Dry Vegetation.

There is nothing upon the earth that any man can absolutely destroy. All we are able to do is change its form.

troy chinch bugs or other insects or worms rake their corn stalks and burn them with this motive in view. But as a rule they burn few insects. In modern conveniences of this kind, ac-Many times men who wish to des

The Work of the Univerity of Illinois all probability they do their soil more Our great state of Illinois has de- harm than they do themselves good by this method. Remember when fire is applied the ammonia an part of the phosphate as well as some other minor elements will pass into the air again. The farmer has not destroyed these elements but merely changed their form through the process of fire. He sustains only a loss as these stalks need to be turned under to add humorous to the soil.

Humorous is very beneficial in making the land fluffy, loose and grainy-like.

As far as destroying the insects is concerned, the writer has seen heavy masses of chinch bugs on green corn stalks and has piled straw around these stalks, setting fire to it. The bugs would fall right through the fire and when the burning was over and the ashes raked away, the bugs were there on the ground, thriving and unhurt.

We do not see as much burning of stalks as we used to but still some people have that foolish idea of trying to destroy the insects in this way. Burning of grass in the fence rows may be beneficial to some extent by destroying some of the eggs but, as far as destroying any of the old bugs is concerned, it is hopeless due to the fact that the bugs will sneak to the ground upon the presence of any excessive heat.

Humorous can be added in different ways by the scattering of straw, by turning under stalks, or by turning under green lebumes. It addition to the humorous, you are adding phosphate, some potassium and nitrogen, or in this form called ammonia.

Continued next week with Mr. Crowder's article on "Raw Limestone and Raw Rock Phosphate."

CHIROPRACTORS BUREAU ADVISES ADVERTISING

Belleville, Ill., Feb. 6.-Newspaper advertising is the best means of professional people reaching the public, according to resolutions announced today by the board of directors of the Illinois Chiropractic Research Bureau.

FARM HOME WATER SYSTEM REQUIRES NO BIG OUTLAY

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 10.-A belief on the part of many farm people that a large outlay of cash is needed to get cording to a new circular entitled, "Water and Plumbing Systems for Farm Home", which the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois has just published for free distribution to interested persons. It is true that complete and elaborate systems may cost several hundred dollars, but it is not generally known that simple systems can be installed at relatively small cost, the circular points out. It adds that no type of equipment for farm homes is needed more than a system of plumbing and water under "Such a system adds health, happiness and contentment to the life of every member of the farm family. The women especially appreciate a plentiful and convenient water supply, for it means not only more healthful conditions but also a saving of labor in preparing food, caring for the family and doing other work in the home.

"The plumbing requirements for a rural home do not differ from those of the city home, once a supply of water under pressure has been provided and a plan made for disposing of the sewage. The first answer to the question, What kind of a plumb-ing system shall I install? is: Plan a complete plumbing system and then if it cannot be installed immediately, have it installed in units as circum-stances permit. The first unit may be nothing more than a sink and drain, but this unit should be selected and installed with care so that it can be utilized to advantage when more equipment is added later."

The circular discusses pure water, the amount of water that is needed under pressure, the kitchen sink and drain as a first unit, the suction pump, hot water units, different systems of supplying water under pressure, provisions for soft water and the kind of power that should be used in connection with the different systems. The new publication was written by E. W. Lehmann, head of the farm mechanics department, and F. P. Hanson, farm mechanics extension specialist. It contains 20 pages and may be obtained free by writing the college at Urbana.
