DR. FRANK CRANE SAYS AMERICA MAKES HER

OWN PROSPERITY

It should be remembered that the cause of prosperity in a country is not only its ability to produce, but its ability to consume.

America is prosperous not only because its labor is efficient, it has great skill, and produces a large quantity of goods, but also because it contains a very large proportion of pople who want a great many things.

The superiority of America over Europe is not only caused by the fecundity of the American workman, but also by the supremacy of American wants.

Recent figures show that real wages : nthe United States, that is, wages in terms of food, clothes and rent, says George W. Hinman, are double the real wages in Great Britain and three or four times the real wages on the continent of Europe. This is due not only to our enormous supplies, but equally due to our enormous demand. In the prosperity of a country must be taken into account its ability to manufacture and transport, but important is its ability to consume.

The advertisements in the newspapers are constantly creating new desires among our people. They are stimulating the want for more and better things and thus creating an enormous market for our products. Thus there is direct connection between the superior newspapers of the United States and its superior prosperity.

Whatever induces a people to want more and better goods is valuable, as well as whatever stimulates them to produce more and better

It must always be remembered that prosperity is twoedged. It must include a sharp demand as well as a sharp supply. Because the people of this country live so well and ask so many luxuries, there is a constant demand for the goods we produce.

We sell much goods abroad and the profits from our external trade are considerable. But those profits are small compared with the advantage of our internal consumption. Andrew Carnegie said some years ago that the Pennsylvania Railroad alone carries more goods than the entire shipping of Great Britain.

And as canal from the lakes to the Atlantic also seems probable if an agreement can be made with Canada for joint use of the St. Lawrence. . . .

The right plan would be an all-American waterway from the lakes through New York State, and that will come. But it would cost five or six hundred millions more than the low cost of the St. Lawrence canal, which probably will come first.

Farmers are deeply interested in prosperity has these canal projects, for which Secretary Hoover deserves greatest praise. He is a worker. The canal will cut an average of twelve cents from the freight on export wheat and add twelve cents to the farmers' ch other too much price.

CORN DISEASES COST ILLINOIS FARMERS $46,861,977 DURING 1926

Illinois farmers this year paid a toll of $47,861,977 to corn diseases, according to Prof. J. C. Hackleman, crops extension specialist of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. This sum represents the labor which was expended on 1,782,569 corn producing acres which were rendered unproductive by the diseases, he said.

The figures are based on a large number of corn germination tests which crop specialists of the college made last spring and which indicated that 16 per cent of the 1926 crop would be lost because of the root, stalk, ear and cob rot diseases of corn. Some of these same diseases have probably blocked the progress of the corn improvement from the time of the earliest breeders, according to Prof. Hackleman.

"The loss probably has been more than the estimated 16 per cent, because of the unprecedented fall rains but if it was only 16 per cent the total reduction would be 60,248.000 bushels, since the crop now standing in Illinois fields is estimated at 316,-317,000 bushels.

"Figured at an average yield of 33.8 bushels an acre, this 60 odd million bushels of corn represents 1,-782,569 vacant corn producing acres. It costs about $26.85 an acre to raise a corn crop ready for harvest, according to 1925 figures for central Illinois."

These same corn diseases were probably the cause of disappointments which early breeders met in their efforts to imrpove this crop, according to Prof. Hackleman. Frequently those early breeders found —John Smith of Villa Grove who that the ideal ear was disappointing as a parent, probably because of its susceptibility to one or more of these diseases, he said.

"Many times a sample which was placed first in a corn show proved to be inferior to a very ordinary looking sample when the two were tested out in the field. While inheritance, or breeding, undoubtedly was a great factor, the variation in performance of the ears of the same breeding is thought to have been in part; at least due to these diseases.

"In seeking the cause for this, investigators at the experiment station of the Illinois agricultural college and others found a whole group of fungus and bacterial diseases of corn. It is now recognized that the root, stalk, ear and cob rot diseases of corn are one of the greatest stumbling blocks in the way of more efficient corn production. The next advance was the discovery that there was a correlation between ear characters and the prevalence and kind of diseases.'

With these facts as a background. Prof. Hackleman, working in cooperation with other investigators of the agricultural college and the federal department of agriculture, in 1921 set up a score card which placed the emphasis on those corn characters which had ben found to forecast field production. This score card is now known as the score card for utility type corn and this type has rapidly become the standard in Illinois.

Two years ago the college summarized its seven years of reasearch work on corn disease problems in the form of Bulletin 255 and this bulletin immediately became the text book from which Illinois farmers were to get their information regarding corn production, Prof. Hackleman said.

Those who object, like the negro in this story, to the high fees of a good physician, do not always realize what they are paying for. The doctor in question was called out to attend an unknown patient. When he arrived he found that a decrepit negro wanted his attention.

The sick man first asked, much yo' charge, Doctah?"
"Five dollars a visit," said the other, and when the negro had gasped his surprise, he continued, "That includes, you know, my time, experience, advice and the medicine."

"A pore old niggah like me don't ned all dem extras," remarked the patient. "Just give me ten cents' wo'th of yo' cough med-cine, dat's enough fo' me."

CECILIA PATTERSON was a young lady possessed not only of good looks and a will of her own, but of "lands and fine houses and cash in the bank." Both of her parents were dead, and Cecilia had inherited from them her good looks, her strong will, and her money.

Jack Edgecomb was a year or two older than Cecilia when his father died, and had been so busy enjoying himself all his life that, as he said, he "had not had time to get married." He had hunted big game in Africa, yachted and traveled. The death of his father now forced Jack, for the first time in his life, to make an effort to comprehend that complicated and somewhat mysterious science called business, for the investments and financial interests of the elder Edgecomb had been many, various and extended.

Among his father's papers Jack found a bundle of documents relating to the "Rio Verde Copper Mines," with a memorandum, "See Steinitz & Co." Unable to make head or tail out of the papers, Jack looked up Steinitz & Co., in the directory and went to the address given.

The outer office was a large room where, beyond a little railed-off space, were several clerks, most of them well along in years.

"Please take my card to Mr. Steinitz," said Jack, and an angular typist, rising without a word, took the card and disappeared.

Presently she returned and motioned Jack toward the inner office. He entered and, to his surprise, saw that the room was tenanted only by a remarkably pretty young woman of between 25 and 30 who said: "Sit down, won't you, Mr. Edgecomb?" "I-er-wished-to see Mr. Stein-itz, if I might," replied Jack.

"Ok, that's all right," laughed the young lady. "There isn't any Steinitz. I am Steinitz & Co. People are often surprised. You see there was a Steinitz when father first went into business; but he died long before I was born and father kept the old firm name. And when father died, and I took over the business, I kept it also. Had to. Imagine trying to carry on business under the name of Cecilia Patterson!"

"Are you Cecilia Patterson?" cried "I have often heard of you." "Of course you have," replied Cecilia, "and I of you; and have wanted to hear at first hand an account of your elephant shooting. But business first."

"What a wonderful woman," thought Jack as he left the office. And Cecilia thought, "What a delightful young man-but how utterly and densely stupid."

Jack had to see Cecilia many times after that "on business," and he was invited to call at her house, too, where they dropped business and talked of other things. In short, they became very intimate and Jack proposed.

"Oh, Jack," she said, "I am sure I But think, dear, you are so stupid in business matters. Your fortune and mine, combined, would take a lot of looking after. Can't you, won't you, try and get a grasp of business affairs? I tell you what I'll do. If, at the end of a year, you can prove to me that you have mastered the principles of business, I will marry you." Cecilia was crying now, but between her sobs she managed to say, "About the Rio Verde?"

"No as you please with it," returned Jack, "I'll send you a power of attorney.

For a year Cecilia did not see Jack. Some said he was still in the city; some that he was hunting in the Rockies. Cecilia devoted herself to the Rio Verde. At first everything went well. And then things began to happen. The bears got hold of the stock and clawed the life out of it; the bulls tossed it upon their horns, only to throw it back again to the bears. For a while it would rank among the must decidedly inactive stock, and then suddenly begin strange and unaccountable gyrations. Cecilia was in great distress; she was losing her own money and Jack's too. All her financial acumen seemed to be of no avail. Then, when things were at the very worst and a crash seemed impending, Rio Verde began to steady itself. The stock went up and up in a calm, healthful climb. Rio Verde became standard and unassailable. And the year of Jack's probation was over. He came into the office of Steinitz & Co., looking hearty and brown as a berry. 'Hello, Cecilia," said he. "The year's up. Just back from six months on the yacht in Europe. How are you, and how's Rio Verde?"

"Oh, Jack, I'm glad to see you," cried Cecilia. "Rio Verde came near ruining us both."

"I suppose Chew & Co. made you the most trouble, didn't they?" asked Jack. "Why, yes, but how did you know?" said Cecilia.

"Oh," was the reply, "I've been silent partner of that brokerage firm for a year." "But you have months," she said. been away

FOUR MACK SENNETT STARS FEATURED IN

"THE NERVOUS WRECK" Four former Mack Sennett stars, graduates from the school of bathing beauties and policemen are again together at the Illinois Theatre in Al tors. Christie's newest feature, "The Nervous Wreck." Phyllis Haver, Mack Swain, Chester Conklin and Vera Stedman are the four who during the production of this laughter special were often found in one corner of the set engaged in conversation which began "Do you remember the This picture is being shown for the benefit of Parent-Teachers association on Thursday and Friday nights of this week.

Phyllis Haver, who is featured with Harrison Ford in "The Nervous Wreck," made her first screen appearance in a comedy which headlined Chester Conklin. Vera Stedman, in addition to being one of the bathing girls, was also the Sennett diving

It is an unusal coincidence that Mr. Christie's feature "Up in Mabel's Room," made just before "The Nervous Wreck," also had a former bathing girl in the leading role. "Up in Mabel's Room" starred Marie Prevost one of the most famous of the acquatic beauties.

The efficacy of the comedy experience is urther illustrated in the cases of Colleen More, Betty Compson and dozens of other well known players who received their early screen lessons in Christie Comedies.

DEAN MUMFORD CITES PRACTICAL VALUE OF FARM-ERS' WEEK PROGRAM

Seldom, if ever, have conditions surrounding corn belt farming made it more necessary for farmers to consider every detail of their business in order to increase their net income by decreasing their costs of operation and by recognizing more fully the importance of marketing, H. W. Mumford, dean of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, said in his announcement of the program for the annual Farmers' Week at the College, January 17 to 22, 1927.

Seven sectional or group meetings featuring work in soils and crops, animal husbandry, dairy husbandry, farm organization and management. farm mechanics, horticulture, and bee keeping will be held on each of the five days of the week. This scctional meetings will run until 3 o'clock each afternoon at which time a general meeting will be held with some topic of general interest farmers as the attraction.

Lessons which corn belt farmers may learn from the cotton belt, the European corn borer, East South Africa as possible agricultural competitors and agricultural surpluses and the tariff, are among the topics which will come up for cussion at four of these general sessions. The fifth will be given over to an inspection of the annual utility corn show.

Speakers for these afternoon general sessions include Dan T. Gray, Dean of the College of Agriculture, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; H. L. Shantz, head of the Botany Department of the University of Illinois, who served on a committee of technical advisers which prepared data for the U.S. Commission which took part in the negotiations for peace at the end of the war; D. J. in charge of on the European corn borer for the Federal Department of Agriculture, and Henry C.
