THE DESTINY OF THE FARM

In all matters of human activity there is development. Sometimes such development is beneficial to the future of a nation, sometimes it is detrimental.

The farming industry of this country is in a state of transition. Intelligent organization work is now attempting to weld the interests of the farmers into a Co-operative unit of the body politic, in order to stabilize the business of agriculture.

This organization work, being done through farm bureaus, farmers unions, the National Grange, etc., is demanding that legislation shall cease which extends favors to other lines of industry that it denies to agriculture. Just what the outcome of such activities will be is now hidden in the future.

The movement that has brought into being the farmers, demand for equitable legislation is based primarily on two conditions: When the farms produce a big crop, a surplus comes into being. Such surplus or over-abundance results in a clogged market and prices lower than cost of production. Under present laws, the farmer has found no feasible way to handle this surplus problem. Secondly, the farmer sells for what he can get and buys for what the seller demands. To these two conditions of the farmers' troubles may be added several qualifying reasons. The cost of production on farms is on the increase. It takes more and better machinery, more fertilizer and more of everything else that is high priced to produce a farm crop today. The standard of living has been raised on the farms and the farmers will not back up to any lower standard.

The consequences of these conditions are plainly apparent. The farmer has not been making any money in recent years. Many have not made a living. They have fallen behind in payments on their land bought during a period of inflation. Debts have been piling up. Mortgages have been coming due and farms have not been profitable enough to realize funds to take up these mortgages. Sound, cold-blood business reasons dictate a refusal for any extension or renewal under present conditions.

From whence came the money which holds the mortgage on the farm? From those business activities which have proven profitable while farming has not. Big industrial companies such as insurance companies and the like have placed billions in loans on cornbelt farms. Foreclosure of mortgages means that these financial interests are getting these farmlands at a very nominal price. The former farm owner becomes a tenant, a farm hand, or leaves the farm to try making a living in the cities.

Who will do our farming? The pace is too hot for the small farmer. Under conditions as now existing he is dissatisfied. He can't hold his land. He loses it. Bigger interests gobble it up.

As an illustration of this tendency, it is a fact that the bigger banks in cities like Decatur and Champaign, etc., now have "farm managers" who handle their farm interests acquired through mortgage foreclosures. They are operating these farms. Operation on a big scale, like in any other business, reduces the cost of production. Operation on such big scale permits of better and more efficient equipment than the small farmer can afford. Better sires and better livestock increases income from that source.

Do you see which way farming is headed? Unless conditions change and the small farmer, through co-operation with thousands of other small farmers, can secure a square deal, that small farmer is headed toward a tenant house and the title to his farm will vest in the financial powers who have furnished the money and taken the mortgage.

Under present conditions farming on a big scale can be made profitable. Is that what this nation wants? Is America ready to permit conditions that will push the small farmers off their farms and turn them over to great landed corporations?

Big corporations, operating efficiently, cultivating thousands or hundreds of thousands of acres of farm lands can produce food cheaper than it is produced today. There is no question about that, but is such condition desirable?

Since the birth of this nation, its farmers have been its most conservative and dependable type of citizens. The farm owner has been the most important unit in the make-up of our citizenship. Shall the farmer become a mere hired hand on the land he formerly called his own?

Federal courts are clogged up with cases of farmers who are getting out from under by taking the bankrupt law. You don't have to go very far from your own home in any direction before you find some neighbor that has lost his farm during the past year. Are you satisfied to have these conditions continue?

What is the solution? It apparently lies with the organized farm movement. Whether that can save the farming industry to the farmers time will show.

FLOYD THOMPSON REPEATS HIS CHARGES—EMMERSON CROWD HAS FAILED TO ANSWER

The following are parts of a speech delivered by Judge Floyd E. Thompson, democratic candidate for governor at a great rally held in his honor at Roodhouse, Illinois on July Fourth.

"No attempt has been made to answer the specific charges of unfaithfulness that I made at the beginning of the campaign, but my opponent says that my charges are false. I ask him again, which of the statements made by me is false?"

Is it not true that Louis L. Emmerson went to St. Louis in 1920 and bought with cash the support of Nat Goldstein and some other St. Louis gangsters who had been elected delegates to the Republican national convention

Is it not true that Louis L. Emmerson has collected millions of dollars in fees and taxes during his twelve years as secretary of state, that he withholds for months at a time, without authority of law, these vast sums of money, and that he has not paid into the state treasury one cent of interest earned on these funds.

Is it not true that his running mate, Fred E. Sterling, as state treasurer, loaned millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money to the meat-packing companies of Chicago, through the phantom Grant Park Bank, and failed to account for hundreds of thousands of dollars of interest earned on these funds?

"Is it not true that Oscar E. Carlstrom, as a candidate for attorney-general in 1924, promised to dismiss the suit brought by his predecessor against his running-mate and political sponsor, Len Small, to recover the people's money, and then lacked courage to carry out his disgraceful promise?"

Is it not true that Oscar E. Carlstrom added to the taxpayers' burdens by giving away millions of their money in the settlement of the interest suit against Len Small, in failing to prosecute the interest suits against Fred E. Sterling and other state officers which have been pending for five years, and in settling the suit against the Illinois Central Railroad Company for several million dollars less than the amount established by his predecessors to be due?"

"When my opponent and his running mates answer these queries by specific explanation on their conduct, backed by public records which ought to have been kept by them, you will know whether you want to continue them in office. Until they do meet the charges squarely and unequivocally they stand convicted of breach of trust."

HOLDING THE 'SOLID SOUTH'

There may be some bolting of the national Democratic ticket in the "solid South" this fall, but the party leaders are planning to take no chances with this "irreducible Democratic minimum" in the coming campaign. Senator Robinson has just said that "an organized effort is in progress in several Southern states to defeat the ticket, and while the force and volume of this movement is not yet known, I am of opinion that sound policies should prompt our party managers to meet this opposition decisively and promptly."

The advice of the Democratic vice-presidential nominee is timely and sound. Conditions in the South are vastly different this campaign than in those prevailing heretofore. Possibly dry Democrats will remain away from the polls, but there is also the possibility that wet Republicans will offset these discontented dries.

Then, too, there are those dries who believe with Carter Glass and Joseph Daniels that they are first of all Democrats and must support the party nominee, and with Col. "Breck" Musgrove of Alabama for two decades an "angel" to the national dry organization; that "Smith, as President, would enforce the prohibition law better than Mellon's crowd, and Congress, with only a handful of wets in both houses, will take care of our prohibition law."

One of the new conditions that Senator Robinson draws attention to, but does not name specifically, is the religious issue. Col. Musgrove's newspaper, The Jasper Eagle gives the clew to the attitude to be assumed by the solid South:

The Roman Catholic bugaboo can be dismissed as ridiculous. The Pope can't control the Italian government. If he can't control governments where the people are 90 percent Catholic, how can he control America, where one out of seven is Catholic?

Again the Jasper Eagle points the way for the party managers to meet the general opposition the Republicans seek to foster:

"Gov. Alfred Smith, the Democratic nominee for President, was not The Eagle's choice for President, BUT—"He is the choice of a majority of the Democrats of America"—and while Gov. Smith is a wet, "he merely differs from prohibitionists as to the best methods of handling the liquor problem for the promotion of temperance."—St. Louis Star.

STONE AGE MUMMIES THE GREATEST MAGNET ROCKEFELLER SEES KINDNESS WAR DOES NOT PAY

Mammoths, extinct thousands of years, have been found preserved, skin, hair, flesh, in the Northern ice. Hoping that men of the Stone Age might be similarly preserved, an expedition was sent to look.

On an island, far North in cold Alaska, scientists discovered at the top of an almost inaccessible cliff the grave of an ancient Stone Age chief.

His coffin was lined with well cured skins of the sea otter. His shirt was of bird skins, his clothing made of the finest furs. A favorite child, a seamstress to sew for him, a servant and hunter to get game for him, had been killed and buried with him to accompany him on his death journey.

This mummified family from the Stone Age will enlighten scientists. It interests us all, illustrating the unconquerable belief in a future life so deeply planted in the human brain.

Why was the belief put there if only to be disappointed?

The French Government builds a gigantic magnet several thousand times as powerful as any built thus far.

It will be used in scientific experiments in connection with the molecular and atomic construction of matter, etc. The magnet eventually will be of great use in the industry.

Here the steel companies use magnets picking up tons of steel rails and loading them on cars, dropping them down, lifting them up, as a boy lifts tacks with his toy magnet.

Man is an intelligent animal, living on a gigantic combination power wheel and magnet—the earth. He constructs his own little power plant, builds his own electric and magnetic power.

In the north day before yesterday man's electric work felt an electric storm, and an amazing aurora borealis, stretching all across the northern part of the continent.

If men could borrow and use the inexhaustible electric power of the earth, they need not turn coal or water falls into electric current.

John D. Rockefeller, beginning his ninetieth year, said: "I never worry, and I am amazed at the kindness of people generally."

Eighty years ago, from his father's cottage doorway, in the Catskill foothills, he watched his uncle drive off, to trade horses—and saw him come back with better horses.

Now his ships go out to every harbor of the world, his scientists are fighting disease in every part of the earth. And looking at his right hand, now wrinkled, he knows it has made gifts to education and human progress totaling hundreds of millions.

A good deal in one life time.

Thomas W. Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan, and an able citizen, tells business men they can be a distinct factor in preventing future wars.

They can and will be, for they have discovered that war, in the past often promoted by business, DOES NOT PAY.

Another big war would mean not merely sixty per cent income tax, but confiscation of principal on a gigantic scale. Young men would not again consent to have their bodies sent to war, unless the rich man's dollars also went. Wise business men will oppose war and demand preparation for it.

LARGE PEACH CROP

Peaches for canning and preserves will be cheaper this year than last in the opinion of A. B. Leeper, director of fruit and vegetable marketing for the Illinois Agricultural association.

Leeper, who has made a survey of the peach crop, estimates there will be a larger crop this year than last but smaller than the bumper crop of 1926.

He estimates the crop at 2,000 to 2,500 carloads. The first shipments will be made about Aug. 1.

A young lady who was visiting a minister's family accompanied her host and his little daughter to church. After benediction she remarked that she was very much impressed with the service, and particularly liked the hymns.

When they reached home the little girl suddenly piped: "Mother, Mae likes the 'hims' in our church, but she didn't like the 'hers'!"—Musical America.

Beware of the man who looks like a near-genius.

WATER-TIGHT COMPARTMENTS

(By Dr. Frank Crane)

Every once in a while we hear a man say, "Business is business" or that he follows "art for art's sake", or that he as a scientist cares only for the truth, not for its practical results, and so on. But the fact is humanity is not put in water-tight compartments.

Everything you do affects all parts of your nature.

What you do in business reflects on your art, what you do in art colors your business, and what you think in religion has much to do with your scientific conclusions. Mankind is one, one organic whole, and its various departments of activity have merely been listed for convenient reference. They do not exist in reality.

If your religion is ugly and cruel your business will be immoral.

If your business is heartless and vindictive your whole life will show it.

The scientist must pay some attention to the practical bearings of his investigations, for it would be foolish for him to spend his whole life on investigating some perfectly useless matter.

Business must be beautiful. Art in some way must rest upon a business basis.

A man cannot have his whole head submerged in literature, he must have sense enough to market his wares.

The beautiful works of art of past generations had their influence upon believers in religion and religion is what it is owing to a thousand other causes within itself.

Much recent art shows contempt for any but aesthetic values. Such art is transient, and will give place to a greater art, in which beauty of thought and expression will confer enlarged values.

The total of all values is what counts.

This result can be achieved not by preaching in art nor by making science "practical", but by universal education in values so that artist, business man, or scientist will express himself in Synthesis of all values.

OUR NATION-WIDE STRAW VOTE

The presidential poll or test vote now being taken throughout the country by approximately 2,000 weekly newspaper publishers is sure to attract great public interest. The test vote will show the political thought now prevalent in communities scattered over the length and breadth of the land.

Politicians have come to realize that the voting power of the great mass of the population in small towns is an important factor in deciding elections.

They realize that the next president will be elected by persons in the homes and farms of the countryside where the great majority of the American people live, reflecting American thought, unmoved by unworthy motives, unaffected by the ballyhoo that attends political campaign. These voters make their choice after careful deliberation. They think before they vote. And the big politicians are cognizant of the fact that what they are thinking will have a tremendous bearing on the result of the November elections.

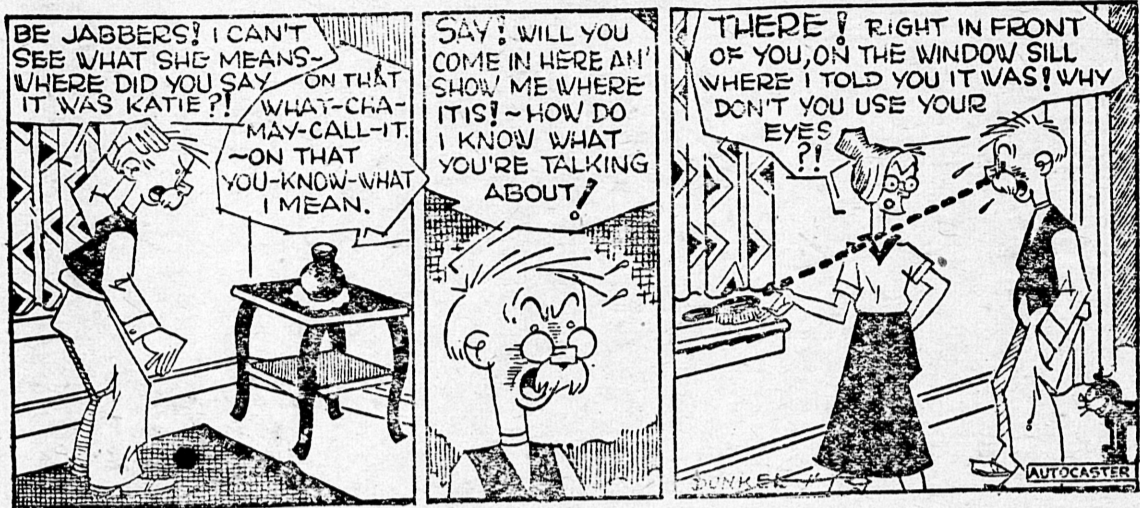

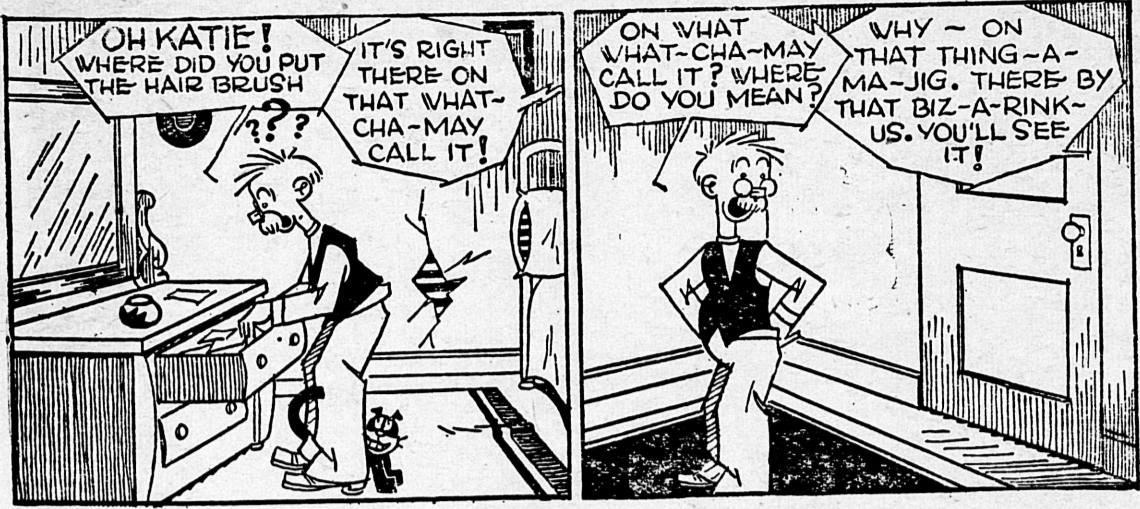

This test vote will be published in a great variety of papers, papers having editorial policies embracing all shades of political belief. Readers of these 2,000 papers will cast the ballots and the count will be read by Republicans and Democrats alike. Unless we are very much mistaken, the result will be significant in the extreme.

The poll of the millions living in the small towns will serve to indicate which way the political winds are blowing.

The Fumble Family

FUMBLING AROUND

by E. Courtney Dunkel

THIS NEIGHBORHOOD WORLD

By S. J. Duncan-Clark

The United States has nominated Charles Evans Hughes as successor to John Basset Moore on the bench of the permanent court of international justice.

An excellent nomination, as everybody must agree. Brazil anticipated us in making it, and one or two other countries since have seconded Brazil's proposal.

The probability is that Mr. Hughes will be elected next September unless the German claim for recognition on the world court bench should be considered as weightier.

In some senses it is. In one particular sense it quite outweighs any claim that we may have—that arising from the fact of Germany's membership in the court. Germany is a signatory to the court protocol, and bears her part of the expense of maintaining it.

It seems rather strange, under these circumstances, that we should nominate for the vacancy. That we may nominate is only proof of the liberal basis upon which the court is established.

With Germany, France and nomination. A quibble from Washington denies that this nomination is the action of our government. It credits it wholly to the individuals who represent this country in the Hague tribunal—especially to Elihu Root, John Basset Moore and Newton D. Baker.

As we have said the name of Charles Evans Hughes marks a choice beyond criticism. We sincerely hope he may be elected. It is, we think, of great importance that American jurisprudence should be represented in world court. Other nations—members of the court—probably agree with that view.

For, as our readers will recall, it is the League which elects the judges, the council and assembly voting separately. We are, therefore, in the quaint position of being able to nominate, but unable in any way to participate in the election of our nominee.

With Germany, France and

Italy officially declaring their acceptance of the Kellogg multilateral treaty for renunciation of war what little doubt existed as to its execution is at an end.

British and Japanese acceptances are expected within next few days and others will follow before the summer ends.

The signing of the treaty will no doubt, take place in Washington. It will mark a notable occasion in the history of the world, the beginning of a new chapter in the development of neighborly relations.

We should not overlook the fact, however, that while this great step forward is being taken by American and the other interested powers. Those nations which belong to the League are persisting in their efforts to strengthen it as an instrumentality for peace.

The arbitration and security committee of the League of Nations finished its third session early in the present month. A model treaty was drafted for submission to the league assembly at its September meeting, the purpose of which is to promote the effectiveness of the council in its efforts to prevent war.

The international zone of Tangier, North Africa, has been the occasion of many neighborhood disputes, and some of them seriously menacing to the general peace and welfare.

A new accord was signed the other day—said to be the fourth in twenty years. Great Britain, France, Spain and Italy are the parties to it.

Italy obtains certain extensions of her rights, including a larger representation in the zone's legislative body and a part in the administration of the courts.

The full consequences of the assassination of Gen. Obregon, president-elect of Mexico, will not be evident until the motive for the act has been discovered, and it is not known whether the slayer was the agent of others or killed merely to satisfy a personal grudge or with the impulse of fanaticism.

The country, however, seems to be meeting the situation with a greater steadiness than we have been accustomed to expect from our southern neighbor.

Jefferson Found His Letter Writing a Burden

Thomas Jefferson liked to write letters and to receive them, but the burden became almost unendurable. He wrote John Adams in 1817 that from dinner to dark he was "drudging at the writing table."

"All this," he continued, "to answer letters into which neither interest nor inclination on my part enters; and often from persons whose names I have never before heard. Yet, writing civilly, it is hard to refuse them civil answers. This is the burden of my life, a very grievous one indeed, and one which I must get rid of."

He consented to write a few lines of introduction to one of Delaplaine's books that he might make there a public appeal for relief from this burden, but it does not appear to have been successful, for he wrote Adams in 1822 that he had received 1,267 letters that previous year and had answered all, though many of them had required long replies and some extensive investigation.

"Is this life?" he asked. "At best it is but the life of a mill horse that sees no end to his circle but in death. To such a life that of a cabbage is paradise." Since he had earlier prescribed the life of a cabbage as "surely not worth a wish," he had evidently come close to the irreducible minimum in enjoyment of existence.

Even Fine Violins Must Have Exercise

A violin, like a growing boy, according to the experts, is much better when kept busy. And dance tunes are just as good for "exercising" even a priceless Stradivarius as are the highest class concert numbers.

Antonio Stradivari's Cremonensis, Fanciebat Anno 1713 (Cremona of Antonio Stradivari, made in the year 1713. The famous Cremona carver was at the height of his career as a violin maker in 1713, and all the evidence to be found in the family records leads the McDonaids to believe the instrument is an original of the noted maker.

Daily Loss of Weight

The loss of weight that we undergo every day has been the object of recent research, says Science. In the experiments, conducted by the Carnegie institution at Washington, 20 sensitive balances were used. Both were strong enough to weigh a man but delicate enough to register minute changes in weight.

Forgetful

The forgetful man got to the railroad station a few minutes before train time, but he felt he had forgotten something. He looked over his baggage. It was all there. He felt in his pocket. His wallet bulged pleasantly.

Streams That "Meander"

"Crooked as the River Jordan," is an old expression, but there are streams that make Jordan look straight. In the old days when packet steamers were popular as transportation up and down the Mississippi, passengers used to get out at many of the sharp bends and walk across a narrow neck of land to rest from the tedious trip.

Preference in Love

When we are told that we are loved for our body, but not for our mind, we not only are easily consoled, but frequently quite delighted. We feel that we are "loved" for ourselves," as we say. On the contrary, when we are told that we are loved for our mind only, we are generally insulted and hurt.

About Your Health

Things You Should Know

by John Joseph Gaines, M. D.

"Vagrant Pains"

Most every active human being is subject, at one time or another, to fleeting, shifting twinges, varying from slight discomfort, to severe, pronounced pain. Such may not be accompanied by any inflammatory signs—heat, redness, or swelling. Just transitory pain, often called erroneously, "muscular rheumatism."

Such annoyances almost invariably come from disturbed nerves. Organs adjacent to the locality complained of, should be studied. Constipation—an impacted bowel—may cause anything from head neuralgia to sciatic irritation, even pains in ankles or heels. Unload the bowel and relief comes. All pains in nerves should be investigated as to local injury. Grandma lifted a heavy rocker yesterday; today she has a sharp pain in the wrist. You "turned" your ankle last night on an uneven sidewalk.

Little disturbances due to injuries, may be treated by hot fomentations, rest, and medications rubbed on; good liniments are very useful, if persisted in. It is possible, that no cause for a localized pain can be found. In such case, the physician is a timely resort, if the pain does not disappear after rest and heat. I do not agree that heavy massage does any good to pains that are not understood—and it may do harm. A lazy liver may produce pain at point of shoulder-blade and elsewhere—to disappear of itself apparently, after eating plenty of fruit. Most of the fleeting pains in the lower extremities are caused by trouble in the organs within the body above—unless local injury happened. "Diffuse Neuritis" is a warning that demands the physician.

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell was Right

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 83

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the baby because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In the proper dose, given in the directions it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal.

All drug stores have the generous bottles. We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

SELF MAINTENANCE SEEN AS SOURCE OF FARM BUREAU STRENGTH

Less than ten years ago the Farm Bureau members of Illinois were maintained by the employment of hired solicitors. Today the job of maintenance is shouldered largely by unpaid volunteer members themselves. This factor alone indicates that the 95 county Farm Bureaus with their 60,000 members are in a stronger position now than at any time in history, says the Illinois Agricultural Association in a recent statement. Supporting this view, the Association points to the increasing efficiency of volunteer member solicitors in maintaining their respective county organizations as a minimum of organization expense. That a large group of loyal members in every county are willing to devote their own time and money to maintaining strong county units, is proof enough that progressive farmers see the need and wisdom of following the axiom that "in union there is strength." Recent figures show that the great bulk of members in nearly every county are signed by volunteer solicitors. This percentage has increased steadily until this year's records from such counties as Stephenson, Campaign, Crawford, Edgar and others show that volunteers actually increased the membership over that of the previous period without aid from paid solicitors. This means that organization expense is greatly reduced leaving a maximum percentage of dues to be spent in returning service to members.

LA PLACE BANK CLOSED LAST FRIDAY

The State Bank of LaPlace failed to open Friday, morning. Two bank examiners of State Auditor Oscar E. Nelson's office were in charge of the institution. One of them stated that the bank directors had requested the state auditor to act in the interests of the bank. The institution will be closed until further notice for "examination, inventory and adjustment," the examiner announced. He explained that a superficial examination thus far made had failed to disclose the precise reason for the closing. Frozen assets are ascribed as a possible cause. The State Bank of LaPlace has capital stock of $25,000 and surplus of $3,000. Deposits amount to about $60,000. Depositors, practically all of them farmers, number less than 1,000.

WEEDS ONE OF TWO WORST FOES OF VEGETABLE CROPS

Urbana, Ill., July 26—Weeds, along with insects, probably cause most of the vegetable losses that are experienced annually, says L. H. Strubinger of the department of horticulture, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. When weeds are allowed to grow uncontrolled for a few days during the hot weather they either choke out the smaller growing vegetables or seriously impair their quality by retarding their progress, he added. "If constant cultivation is practiced in the garden there should be little difficulty in controlling weeds that might otherwise occur. However, if for any reason the garden is not cared for and weeds are allowed to gain headway, it may take considerable time and patience to rid the premises of them. If the weeds are small they may be cut off just beneath the surface of the soil in cultivation and will probably die. If they are larger they may need to be pulled and carried away. This pulling can best be done when the soil is quite moist, and if it is too dry the roots may be cut just below the surface with a sharp knife. Afterwards it is always wise to cultivate the area to kill any weeds that are just starting to grow.

LATE MARKETS SHRINKS PROFIT FROM SPRING PIGS

Urbana, Ill., July 26—Feeding spring pigs light rations during the summer and fattening them on new corn in the fall, a practice which will be more tempting than ever to the farmer this year because of the present high price of corn, has not paid during the past seven years according to a report from the division of swine husbandry, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. Even though this practice gives a slight saving in corn during the summer, the drop in the price of pigs from September to December is greater than the saving made in corn. It was found over a period of seven years that the average price of corn during June and July was about seven cents a bushel higher than it was in September, October and November, while the price of hogs in September was $1.80 a hundred higher than it was in December. Shoats that weigh 125 pounds by the time new corn is available will require about eight bushels of corn, properly supplemented, to bring them to a weight of 225 pounds. On the strength of average figures for the past seven years, these eight bushels of corn would cost 56 cents more on the basis of old corn prices during the summer than they would under the scale of prices for new corn. On the other hand, the 225-pound hog would be worth $4.05 more on the September market than he would on the December market. The net difference in favor of full feeding spring pigs for an early market is $3.49 a hog.

SUMMER SEEDING OF ILL. ALFALFA WARD OFF THREATENED SHORTAGE

During the next five weeks Moultrie County farmers will see the end of the summer seeding of alfalfa, the most valuable protein producing plant that can be grown on Illinois farms, according to the Blue Valley Creamery. Planting this high yielding hay now will help local farmers overcome any national protein-feed shortage predicted for next year. Ordinarily about 40 percent of Illinois alfalfa seeding is summer sown, but this year's summer planting can well be doubled or tripled, the Institute believes, and advises all dairymen and stockmen to communicate immediately with their county agent or state agricultural college to secure cultural directions and advice on the best and latest methods of sowing alfalfa under local conditions. Only a few weeks are left for planting this year in order to insure a good stand for cutting next year. An acre per cow is a good rule to follow in estimating needs. Alfalfa is the most profitable forage crop grown in the state, the heaviest yielder, the best soil enricher, weed destroyer and drought resister. Pounded for pound, it has a feeding value equal to bran. When corn and alfalfa are grown on the same farm it is an easy matter to reduce feed costs because alfalfa provides the protein which corn lacks to make milk, pork, beef and mutton most economically and at greatest profit. Recently the Wisconsin experiment station found that one acre of alfalfa would produce as much protein as three acres of clover or nine acres of timothy.

750,000 CHEVROLETS DELIVERED TO PUBLIC SINCE JANUARY 1, 1928

One of the most remarkable achievements ever recorded in the automobile industry comes to light in the announcement of R. H. Grant, vice-president of the Chevrolet Motor Company in charge of sales, that 750,000 "Bigger and Better" Chevrolets have been placed in the hands of owners since the introduction of the new car January first.

With deliveries to customers averaging 30,000 cars a week, Chevrolet in first seven months of the year, established a record for public acceptance of a new car unrivaled in the history of modern motor cars. Each week, each month, each quarter shattered all marks for the corresponding period of any previous year.

Much of the credit for making possible this remarkable showing is given the efficient manufacturing organization and the tremendous production facilities employed by Chevrolet. Fourteen great factories in various sections of the country shared in the effort that enabled the sales division to make prompt deliveries immediately on the announcement of the car last January. From Oakland, Cal., to Tarrytown, N. Y., factory wheels have been spinning at a record clip since the first of the year, building the various models as fast as the exacting requirements of precision operation would permit.

The usual public favor shown Chevrolet in the first seven months through the demand for 750,000 cars, indicates beyond doubt that Chevrolet will build and sell many more than one million units in 1928, breaking by a wide margin all existing records for the manufacture and sale of a new model and further guaranteeing Chevrolet's position as the world's largest automobile producer.

THE TIGER TRAIL

by Edison Marshall Illustrations by PAUL FREHM

There was an effect of silence, too, possibly induced by the accentuation of the faint sounds that were present. It seemed to me that I could hear distinctly the rustle and whisper of portieres dragged on the floor by the wind. A window shade wavered with the faintest stir of sound. Then there were the hushed, manifold sounds of the night that came hushed and strange through the noises—noises so obscure that the ears had to strain to perceive them.

Vilas's face was lighted by the nearest candle. I could really see it more plainly than any other detail in the room. The fact fascinated me at first. All other things were dim and blurred and unreal; but it was sharp and clear and even this early in the drama it had a quality that was disturbing to the spirit. He had endured much these last three days.

"Good God! Where is every one?" he exploded at last. "Ahmad! Ahmad Das!"

The servant arose and came near him, half obscured in the shadows. He stood straight and tall.

"Yes, sahib—"
"Where is everybody? Southley and his son ought to be back by now. What direction have they gone?"

"I do not know, sahib. They told me they were going toward the cottages of the laborers. But they did not turn that way after they had gone out the door."

"And Miss Southley? She was to join me here."

"She has gone, too. I don't know where. The detectives are spending the day across the marsh—on the height."

"But it's time they were back by now. Good Lord, what did they go there for, when the trouble is here? Here, I tell you and you know it, too, Ahmad. You know it too devilish well."

"I do not know what the sahib means."

"Damn your black face!"
Then Vilas tried to regain his self-control. We saw him struggling. The fight was inscribed on his face. And it was a hard fight, too—a losing fight. For a long moment he was quiet, and Ahmad Das resumed his furniture dusting. He bent lower and lower, and once more he was on his knees.

And now I didn't look at Vilas. My eyes were frozen upon Ahmad Das. His position, as far as externals were concerned, was one that every housekeeper gets in many times a day. But there was something different about this. There was a luxury, a passion, in the way he spread his long body on the floor. I can't describe it except to say it was as if he felt a rapture in it. Nor was he calm any more. There was a strange nervousness upon him, like an intense eagerness, and his lips were drawn, ever so slightly. He crawled about so slowly, his body so close to the floor.

Then Vilas spoke again in the silence—the words sharp and ed open the drawer in the table. For an instant his frenzied hands thrust at its interior; then he whirled toward Ahmad.

"Where is my pistol?" he cried. "It was in the drawer."

"Perhaps one of the detectives borrowed it for the hunt today—"

Again Vilas flung into his chair. Again Ahmad went back to his dusting. His motions seemed to grow more sinuous, more silent. And now I looked in vain for the cloth. He seemed to have dropped it.

"Does the sahib wish to go look for Sahib Southley?" he asked. "If he does I will be glad to go with him—"

To me the words seemed charged with some terrible kind of passion. The effect that they had on Vilas was not pleasant to see.

him across the water. You only remain, and you are very dear to them, Sahib Strumburg."

Vilas leaned forward. "Strumburg? How dare you call me that? My name's Hayward—"

"Once Strumburg—then Roderrick—then Hayward—what does it matter, sahib? Names die when their bearers die."

"But I'm not Strumburg. I tell you I'm not—"

"I will remember, sahib, that you told me that. But consider again, and see if you don't want to make me another answer."

"I'll never admit it."

"I will go from you for a minute, sahib—and then I will return. I will want your answer then. And there might be other things for you to tell me, too, when I come into your presence a moment from now. You really had no proofs that Sahib Southley is wanted in prison."

"But I have! You can't scare me out of it."

"Both things you can answer when I return to the sahib's presence. It will be just a little moment—"

Vilas half rose in his seat, ordering the servant to relight the candle. But Ahmad didn't obey. Rather he faded. The shadows hid him, and darkness closed round him.

Yet it wasn't as if he had completely gone. I knew that he was waiting somewhere in the darkness just beyond—perhaps behind the curtains, possibly in the hall. I didn't hear or see him. I simply knew he was there, and in a moment more would come back into the light for the answer to his questions. A long moment passed away. The house was tense and still. And once more I looked at Vilas Hayward.

He had his head turned over his shoulder, and he was watching with fascinated horror something that approached him in the darkness. I couldn't see what it was at first. It was farther away from me. But yet I was aware of the sense of something moving—something half crawling, half sliding toward the man in the chair. And then I saw an irregular gray patch of shadow that was not quite so dark as the shadows around it—a patch which seemed to be moving. And all at once it halted.

The Tiger of Southley Downs had come again. The candlelight was ineffective and dim, yet it showed the outline plain. Even then I tried to tell myself it was some mental fallacy, a mirage or delusion that could not possibly be true. I tried to say it was the effect of light and shadow; but the lie died before it came to my thought. It wasn't any use to try to deny the reality of the thing. There was the tawny hide darkened, of course, by the shadow, the low-hung head, the great black stripes. The details were obscured; but my eyes didn't need them to recognize the creature. It seemed to be lying close to the floor, in the position a tiger takes just before it springs.

And I couldn't say it wasn't true. It would not have been so convincing if Vilas had not seen it, too. And I knew by the suppressed gasp of the great detective beside me that his eyes were also resting on the thing. I think that he started to whisper some clear. My eyes flashed to him. He was leaning forward in his chair, every muscle set, every tendon rigid.

"Ahmad Das!" he commanded. "Go and get some candles."

"I cannot, sahib," the Hindu answered from the floor. "They are all gone but these two. Every one. I can't bring more."

"Then I'm going out to look for Southley."

"He will be hard to find sahib. There are shadows and water and jungle between." Then Ahmad's voice seemed to grow indescribably eager. "You will need a guide."

"A guide—what do you mean?"

"If the sahib goes, I will take him there. The sahib must not start out in the dark alone! And if the sahib has despaired of Miss Southley meeting him here, and wishes to go to his room, I will go thence with him, too."

Vilas Hayward suddenly snatched

TAMING THE WILD

"Hello, old man, where have you been?"

"Just got back from a camping trip."

"Roughing it, eh?"

"You bet. Why one day our portable dynamo went on the bum and we had no hot water, heat, electric lights, ice or radio for almost two hours."—Life.

A fine illustration of "hope mingled with fear" is a lazy man looking for a job.

The manhood seemed simply to go out of him. His lips were loose, his eyes protruded, shaking hands reached for the chair-arms.

"No you devil!" he cried, his voice rising. "You won't get me out there, where you got my father."

"Sahib!"

"And I order you to get off the floor. You're not working now. Get up, or I'll kill you where you lie!"

Ahmad Das got up. He rose very softly to his full height. He tiptoed across the room and blew out the light on the little stand.

The shadows deepened. There was only one candle now, the one that burned of the table. And I heard a soft, whispered sigh from Alexander.

"The man's a devil," he breathed in my ear. "Vilas called him by the right words."

"Then get up and save him," I answered. "Do you want to see Vilas murdered before our eyes?"

"Hush—and watch."

We watched. A long time there was silence. Ahmad Das stood still beside the extinguished candle.

"What are you going to do?"

"Do, sahib?" The answer came at last, trembling with some unearthly kind of passion. "It is not will to be imprudent with candles. The detectives might need a brighter light when they return to see what remains here."

Vilas tried to meet the snaky eyes.

"What do you mean?" he whispered.

"They will come back soon, and want to talk to their guest. One of their guests is gone—you know where. Yesterday they bore messages of wonder. But I didn't hear him. All I heard was Vilas's scream.

He backed up against the wall, his fingers at his throat. There was no record left in my brain of the sounds he made and the words he said. Ahmad Das had returned, just as he had promised, to get the answer to his questions. The transformation was complete—the tiger soul at last in its own body. And Vilas was ready to answer.

KNOW ILLINOIS

Illinois ranks second of the states in investment in the hotel business, and third in the number of hotel rooms.

The first women's club in the United States was organized in Jacksonville, Illinois in 1833. It was called "The Ladies Society for Educating Females."

An average of twenty sets of triplets, 1,500 twins and 135,000 single births are recorded in Illinois each year, statistics of the state health department show.

In recent years soybeans have outstripped all other Illinois field crops in spread of acreage and popularity.

About 190,000 Indians inhabited the area that is now Illinois, before the coming of the white people.

NEW DOLLAR BILL OUT ABOUT OCT. 1

The long awaited new dollar bill, reduced in size, will be placed in circulation this fall, according to notices from the government received by the Sullivan banks.

Printing of the new bills has been started and it is expected that they will become available about Oct. 1.

The new bill will be slightly shorter than the bills now in use and three fourth of an inch narrower. Its composition will be seventy-five per cent linen and twenty-five per cent cotton.

The reduction in size will bring about a considerable saving to the government in cost of production.

Investigation has disclosed that once out of every seven times a dollar bill changes hands, it is spent at a gasoline filling station, where it is handled by an attendant, usually with hands soiled with oil and grease.

That comparatively new hazard to the life expectancy of currency was a factor in the treasury department's decision to reduce the size of bills.

I. A. A. EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ADOPTS POLITICAL POLICY

Answering numerous inquiries from members and others as to the future course of the Association in political matters, the I. A. A. Executive committee in its recent July meeting held in Chicago authorized the following statement to be issued:

"The primary interest and purpose of the Illinois Agricultural Association is to serve the true and permanent interests of the farmers of Illinois. The policy of the Association in all political matters has always been and will continue to be strictly non-partisan.

"We recognize that agricultural issues are economic rather than political. This was conclusively shown by the majority vote of both parties in each house of the 69th and 70th Congresses, by which the McNary-Haugen bill was passed. It has also been repeatedly revealed by the non-partisan vote supporting and passing such constructive agricultural legislation in our state.

"National, state and district issues should be carefully considered on their relative merits and in no way become confused.

"We seek to furnish full, fair and impartial information on agricultural issues to our members and friends, also the records and commitments on these issues of political parties, men in office and those seeking positions of trust and responsibility. With this information in hand, farmers and all true friends of agriculture are in a position to support candidates for office who will best serve the economic interests of agriculture. We urge our members at all times to support those candidates, regardless of party, who by their records or definite commitments have proven their worthiness of this support.

The policy as above set forth will be continued."

OUR FIRST EDITION

This job of editing a newspaper is a new one for us and we didn't realize just how much work was entailed until our Boss left us with that full responsibility on our hands. Mr. Brandenburger and family are vacationing in the East and we hope he doesn't spend any sleepless nights wondering what will become of his newspaper, for with the aid of the scissors and the Exchanges which reach this office we have been able, with some deep thinking and with an occasional reference to Webster, to get out this issue. We have meant to give credit to all exchange clippings, etc., which we have mentioned in this paper, but in case something has been overlooked please accept our apology.

We have made an effort to run down all the news and everyone has been most kind in aiding us and it has been duly appreciated.

WOLVES SHOT IN SANGAMON COUNTY

Springfield, July 24—Three "wolves" killed near here several days ago by A. E. Loving, farmer, were expensive police dogs.

Loving killed the animals on his farm while they were chasing a rabbit. He brought the bodies to Springfield and received bounty of $20 for them.

Loving will refund the county for the bounty money and try to make amends to the owner of the dogs.

Several large wolves have been preying on cattle and sheep in Loving's vicinity and the hunt for them was resumed Friday.

BLIND PENSION RATE INCREASED BY NEW LAW

Residents drawing blind pensions from the county will be paid at the rate of a dollar a day starting with July 1 of this year; first warrants at the increased rate to be received for the quarter ending Sept. 30. The rate in the past has been $250 a year.

Under the new rate, one-half of the pension will be supplied from state funds, which will allow a saving to the county. The state levied a special tax for this purpose. It is an opinion of Attorney Gen. Oscar Carlstrom that the state should forward its share to the counties in advance of the payment, rather than wait until the end of the year. Unless this plan is followed, the county will be required to take care of the payments for a year before being reimbursed by the state.
