"Change?" the doctor queried. "As if, up to some time, he was the real John Drane and from then on was the woman playin' she was him," explained Simon Judd.

"Why, since it is brought to my attention with this mystery in mind," Dr. Blessington said, "there was a time when I noticed a change in John Drane, a shocking change in John Drane, a shocking change as I thought it. The time is pretty well fixed in my mind, too. As a matter of fact there have been two very distinct changes in this John Drane. One was when he returned from California; I hardly knew him. The other—the most shocking one—was some five months later. As a physician, coming to the house frequently, I noticed it particularly. Just before he went to California this John Drane—man or woman—was decidedly run down in health; in bad shape, I thought, although I was not asked to advise him. Then he went to California and when he returned he was like, as we say, another man. He was brisker, more cheerful, and he had put on quite a little flesh for such a thin man. He walked better and stood better. At that time his hair was dark, but he probably used a dye. The man who went to California may not have been the woman who returned. On the other hand the change may have been wrought by rest and the warm climate."

"And the other time, five months later, said Brennan. "A more striking change," the physician said. From the time Drane returned from California looking so well he began to run down again. I did make so bold as to speak to him about it and he said he knew he must do something; he said he thought he would go south, to Hot Springs and take a long rest. A week later he went and he was gone 3 months. He came back with his hair absolutely gray, as it is now his face emaciated, his body nothing but bones. It was a shocking change. Except for one thing I might be willing to swear that in my opinion, the person who came back from Hot Springs was not the man who went there. That thing is a scar on this woman's dome—the scar of an appendicitis operation. My opinion now is that she probably went there for the operation—if that was indeed where she went—in order that her sex might not be discovered by any one who knew her."

"That's a possibility," Brennan admitted. She could have changed into a woman's clothes at some stop-over en route," the doctor said, "changing back into male garments on her return. If that is the answer she must have had a bad time of the operation to wear down so tremendously. But it is possible that the man who left here that time was not the woman-man who returned here, a little later." Brennan said nothing for a full minute. "I'm afraid I don't see much in that idea, doctor," he said finally. "There's too much of the impossible in it. The person who returned from Hot Springs—if that was where the person went—was certainly very much like the person who left here as John Drane, is it not so? Enough so that you were not particularly suspicious?"

Then how could a substitution have been made? Who was this woman who was so much like John Drane that she could come back here and take his place in the house and at his office and in Wall Street, going on with his speculations without creating comment? The thing is rather absurd. Such a woman must have planned taking John Drane's place for years; she must have learned all about his business to the minutest details, and all about his home affairs here. She must have planned to murder him or make away with him somehow. It is too improbable, doctor."

"You asked me, you know," said Dr. Blessington, a little offended. "And your answer is perfectly good," said Brennan. "Now let me ask you another; did you ever notice anything to make you think this woman was insane? I mean the victim of a mania. What do you think of her idea of having sick servants and no others? What about her friendship with this undertaker?"

Dr. Blessington turned these questions in his mind before he answered. "You understand that I am not an alienist," he said then, choosing his words with some care. "I am only what is called a general practitioner. As one of the hospital staff, I have sometimes recommended to Drane, at his request chronic patients still able to do easy work, and it never occurred to me that there was insanity in his desire to aid the unfortunates. To tell you the truth Brennan, I thought it was fine of him to give these people jobs in his house. Even when they fell ill he saw that they had the best attention and medical care. When they died—"

"A good many did die, did they?" asked Brennan, and Dr. Blessington colored. "You will remember that they were mostly people doomed to die," he said stiffly. "They had, many of them—most of them—incurable diseases." "But they did die," Brennan insisted. "What I mean is this, doctor: this woman known as John Drane had great wealth, if she wanted to help these incurables she could have sent them to sanitariums and she could never have missed the money. She seems to have liked to have the sickly, the dying, and the undertaker clustered about her. I'd call that morbid, wouldn't you?" "Yes, I might call it morbid," Dr. Blessington admitted. "I wouldn't say it meant she was crazy."

"Well, I don't know that it makes such a difference whether she was crazy or not; she has been murdered just the same, sane or insane," Brennan said. "I am just trying to get a clear picture of her in my mind. That's all now, doctor; I get in touch with you if anything else turns up."

The doctor opened the door leading into the hall but Simon Judd held him with a question.

"Say, doc," he said "how long have you known this John Drane, anyway?" Dr. Blessington pulled at his chin, trying to place an exact date. "He came here, I believe, in 1893" he said. "It may have been since then." "And along back there in '93 and '95 he was just about the same feller he looks as he lies up there on the bed?" Simon Judd asked. "Yes," said the doctor slowly. "Yes, increasing age and illness taken into consideration." "You don't mean to say?" Simon Judd exclaimed. "Well, black my cats! And I dare say it was along about when he called you in that he begun to gather these sickly hired helps around him, huh?" "Yes, I think that is so" Dr. Blessington said. That is so." "And when, doc," Simon Judd asked cheerfully, "was the time when he murdered the first of these sickly hired hands of his?" (Continued Next Week.)

Winter Vacations

Vacations, once regarded as luxuries to be enjoyed only by the privileged few, are now the custom of most people. This change has led to another. Summer time once held a virtual monopoly upon vacations, but now more are taken in winter. The increasing popularity of winter vacations is supported by the soundest of health and economic considerations.

The long days of summer afford almost everyone opportunity for outdoor recreation, but health authorities agree upon the need of more sunshine and open-air living in the winter months. Winter vacations supply that need. They are a boon to the health of children and elderly persons, to whom shortened days and limited sunshine make winter a season of special hazards. For those between youth and age they also provide renewed vitality, added resistance to disease and increased efficiency for work.

Having more vacations come in the winter months also helps to relieve business of the problems of depleted personnel, dislocated routine and reduced output which result from the numerous vacation absences of summer. The trend of business is toward the avoidance of seasonal fluctuations, and winter vacations help to counteract the mistaken idea that there must be a summer slump in business activities merely because of the season.

To winter vacationists the Illinois Central System offers a passenger service of particular interest. Well-equipped trains are operated by courteous, efficient personnel to the finest winter playgrounds of America. The public is invited to avail itself of the counsel of Illinois Central travel experts in making plans for winter vacations.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

REPUBLICANS WON PROGRESS GOLF TROPHY IN CLOSE TOURNAMENT

The Republicans won the Progress trophy offered for the political championship of the local Country Club.

The play was by four foursomes Thursday afternoon of last week and the result was 4 up and a tie in one foursome after eighteen holes had been played. The playoff resulted in increasing the score by two points more for the winners.

The Democrats alibi has been that about four of the best players were unable to get off to play Thursday afternoon. They confidently predict that next year's battle will tell another story and that the cup will go to the historic party of Jefferson, Jackson, Wilson and Al Smith, who if the fates had so ordained could doubtless have played a wonderful foursome on the golf links, even as they have done and are doing politically.

MAY HAVE SHORT COURSE FOR FARMERS AT TOWNSHIP HIGH

Principal R. A. Scheer of the Sullivan Township High school and H. C. Neville the agriculture instructor have under consideration the matter of having a short course for farmers next February at the Township High school.

If the plan is put into effect instructors will be secured from the University of Illinois and part of the expense will be defrayed by the University.

These short courses have been tried in other parts of the state and have been a decided success as the farmers have manifested interest in them. The lectures are on any question that may interest the farmers and competent instructors will be on hand to answer perplexing farm problems that may come up for consideration.

This work would be in conjunction with the agricultural work now being taught in the school to a large class on which Mr. Neville is the instructor.

Several plans are under consideration for extension of the agricultural work and the power plant may be adapted for use as a workshop for the school.

LIBRARY NEWS

—Mrs. Emma Hancock of Tujunga California who has spent several months visiting relatives here will leave for home Saturday. She will be accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Alice Millizen.

ILLINOIS CHILDREN'S HOME AND AID SOCIETY DOING ACTIVE WORK HERE

Rev. M. W. Merrell, Field secretary of the Illinois Childrens Home and Aid Society made a plea for homes for homeless children in several Sullivan church groups Sunday. This is the organization the late Rev. C. L. Beyer represented for many years. Twenty-eight Moultrie county children have been legally adopted by this agency.

The society provides temporary homes for neglected children and undertakes to mend family ways so that they can be returned.

Secures homes for children permanently bereft of parents and supervises them afterward.

Provides boarding home care for children who are physically or mentally handicapped.

Helps to solve social problems of unmarried mothers and their children.

Maintains a vocation training school.

Provides children with intensive physical examinations and treatment for remediable defects.

Operates receiving homes that children may be studied before being placed in permanent foster homes.

Keeps 40 agents in the field looking after child welfare, investigating worthy cases, and seeing that children are properly placed.

The following women are the local committee: Mrs. Carl Hill, Mrs. Guy Conklin and Mrs. Julia Dwyer. They will represent the Illinois Children Home and Aid Society in this community.

Cecil B. DeMille's motion picture "The King of Kings"—a work of tremendous magnitude and rare beauty which ran for many months in New York, Chicago, Boston and other cities will be on view at the Grand Theatre on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, October 5, 6, and 7.

Begun with prayer the filming of the picture was most reverent. Incident to it were the building of vast architectural reconstructions, notably the Second Temple, the Hill of Calvary, the Hall of Pilate and the towers and turrets of Jerusalem.

The production begins with the quest by the proud Magdalene in her zebra-drawn chariot of an admirer who has forsaken her banquet board and followed an itinerant worker of miracles.

Then the story from the redemption of the Magdalene rises to the grand sweep of the cleansing of the Temple and attempt to crown Jesus as King of the Jewish people. The terrific counter motive, brings forth the betrayal of the Lord, the capture at Gethsemane and trial before Pontius Pilate. Thenceforward events move to the world catastrophe on Golgotha accompanied by eclipse, storm, and earthquake. An ending of wondrous sweetness is presented by the rising from the tomb of the Christ on Easter morn.
