GRADE SCHOOL BOARD PLANS TO SAVE $3,500

The board of education of the Sullivan grade schools is planning further retrenchments in school activities in order to live within its income.

These retrenchments will be effected by a slight cut in monthly salaries of superintendent and teachers; having an eight months term of school instead of nine months. Also there will be one less teacher. Mrs. Blanche Carroll has signified that she will not ask reappointment and her work will be combined with other classes. The janitors too will receive less pay.

All of these changes will effect a saving of approximately $3,500 for the school year 1932-1933.

The grade school board has been and is now levying the legal limit in taxation which is $1.35 per $100 of assessed valuation. Out of these taxes the board meets interest on outstanding bonds, issued when the Powers School building was erected some years ago. The bonds as they mature are also retired.

President McLaughlin feels that the community will approve a plan of rigid economy and living within the income, rather than running into debt.

Within recent years six teachers have been subtracted from the grade school teaching staff. In war times there was also a school nurse.

JUDGE WAMSLEY TO HEAR BANK PLEAS

There will be a session of circuit court here Saturday, presided over by Judge Wamsley. It is expected that at that time he will hear pleas and arguments relative to some of the bank suits that are on file.

ASSESSORS FIX UNIFORM VALUES ON PERSONAL

Hear Pleas From Sheep Growers for More Thorough Collection of Dog Tax. New Schedule Blank Requirements Are More Stringent.

Moultrie county assessors met Thursday of last week in the board of supervisors room in the court house, upon call sent by County Treasurer John Orman Newbould. The object of the meeting was to decide on a uniform valuation of personal property for purposes of assessment. The assessors start working April 1st.

Before the matter of valuation was undertaken Chester Horn and L. D. Seass spoke to the assessors and urged them to see that all dog tax is paid this year. These men spoke on behalf of the sheep owners.

A committee from the Farm Bureau also met with the assessors.

There can be no change in real estate valuations this year, except where property has decreased in value through burning of buildings, or where property has increased in value through erection of new buildings. The real estate assessment made last year stands for four years.

The assessors agreed upon the following assessment schedule: Horses $30; cattle, all ages $20; sheep, all ages $2.00; hogs, all ages 2c per lb.; poultry 10c each; corn 10c per bu.; oats 8c per bu.; wheat 15c per bu.; soybeans 15c per bu.

All other personal property with but few exceptions is to be assessed on 40% of its actual cash value.

The assessment this year will be made on a new personal property schedule. Among new items listed on this schedule, which heretofore were not assessed, or were listed otherwise, are aeroplanes, electric signs and bill boards; motion picture equipment; poultry.

In several other ways the schedule provides the assessor with means of securing and listing of all taxable property. The party assessed is required to be sworn by the assessor before signing the schedule. The assessors will have to exercise more care in their work and the oath that the assessed is required to take furnishes a basis for perjury prosecution in case taxable property is not properly listed.

PARTY FOR BASKETBALL CHAMPIONS AND GIRLS

A party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Shirey Wednesday evening for the basketball team of the S. T. H. S. and their lady friends. A six o'clock dinner was given and the evening was spent in dancing and playing cards.

Those present were Misses Merle Fisher, Ruth Ashbrook, Juanita Briscoe, Dorothy Wood, Dorothy Mitchell, Adeline Baggott.

The team and their subs: Dorman Shirey, Elmer Dunscomb, Earl Freeman, Paul McDavid, Hugh Grote and Fritz Poland.

YOUNGER ESTATE

In the county court Wednesday Mrs. Colista Mosby was named administratrix of the estate of the late Mrs. Mary A. Younger.

DOG TAX MUST BE PAID; PUPS ARE NOT EXEMPT

The sheep men are up in arms over the great slaughter of their flocks by dogs, and on account of the small amount of dog tax paid.

The State Statutes provide that each person being the owner or keeper of a dog or dogs or who keeps a dog or dogs upon his or her premises must list them with the assessor and pay tax on them. There is no exception for age or physical defect of any dog. The Statute further states that any one refusing or neglecting to so list their dogs are subject to a fine of not less than $5.00 or more than $10.00. They are also subject to indictment by the grand jury for perjury on the oath they sign on their schedule.

A pup is a dog. The Statutes define the word dog as "all animals of the canine species, both male and female."

On account of the great violation of these laws the Moultrie County Wool Growers Association passed very strong resolutions in a meeting in the Court house last Wednesday night, to the effect the association would obtain a list of all dogs taxed in each township this year and then take what action seems necessary to collect any dog tax the assessors failed to get.

The Moultrie County Wool Growers Association is having this published in all the newspapers of the county that all people may have fair warning.

They will organize a non-partisan veteran voters league. There will be no membership fees. Will plan work for friendly candidates for congress and U. S. Senator in both parties April 12th.

All Moultrie county veterans are urged to attend.

FUTURE FARMERS AND PARENTS HEAR DR. NOLAN

Banquet at High School Tuesday Night Was Well Attended. Mothers and Fathers Hear of Aims and Projects of Agriculture students.

About one hundred and twenty people sat down to the Future Farmers Ass'n banquet at the Sullivan Township High school Tuesday night.

This banquet is an annual affair, sponsored by the Future Farmers and attended by parents whose boys are entered in the high school agriculture classes. Heretofore the banquet has been on a "father & son" basis. This year the mothers and friends were also invited and many attended.

The banquet was served by the Household Economics class of the school, under the direction of the teacher, Miss Gladys Barrick. Loye Davis was toastmaster. Agriculture Instructor H. P. Erwin was general manager.

After all were seated Homer Hoskins sang. The toastmaster then introduced the visiting agriculture teachers from Lovington and Arthur and other visiting teachers and guests. Principal R. A. Scheer made a welcoming talk.

Woodrow Spangh was the first of the Future Farmers on the program which got under way after the banquet remains had been transferred to the kitchen. Woodrow gave a review of the F. F. A. activities for the past year. Billy Richardson then explained the workings of the F. F. A. Thrift club.

Loren Jenne spoke on "My Project" and Harmon Baggot told of "George Washington, Farmer."

Mr. Erwin introduced Dr. A. W. Nolan of the U. of I. who was the main speaker of the evening.

Dr. Nolan Speaks

Dr. Nolan made an interesting and inspiring talk to those assembled. He touched upon the various phases of farm life as a career on which a young man can embark with hope of being successful.

"In these changing times," Dr. Nolan pointed out, "about the only business in which there is any stability is that of agriculture. All other lines of endeavor are undergoing such great changes that a man who devotes his life to them may find that some invention or some new device brought into being by human ingenuity, has made his work unnecessary and in mid-life he may find himself without a trade and without a job."

The problem confronting agriculture is not so much that of more and more production, but rather that of maintaining soil fertility, and getting a fair market price for what is produced.

"We are still on the frontier" said Dr. Nolan. "There may be no Indians and bears to fight as in days gone by, but there are problems just as vital, just as interesting, challenging us for solution."

Farm prices at present are on a level where the farmer hardly realizes 1% on his investment and less than 10c an hour for his labor. This is wrong. The farmer must look forward to the time when he will get not less than 5% on his investment and certainly not less than 25c an hour for his time.

He called attention to the inequitable taxation of which farmers are the victims. He said that the opposition to the recently passed Illinois Income Tax law came from an entrenched "payrollers bureaucracy" and expressed the fervent hope that the Supreme Court would sustain the legality of the law in test cases now before it.

He urged the boys to look forward to the time when they could own land. He warned against land glut, however, and pointed out how it had ruined many farmers in recent years.

"Own your own farm. Produce what you need. Earn your living in that way and no one can drive you from your job or take it away from you" was Dr. Nolan's parting admonition.

MRS. WILLIAMSON FOLLOWED HUSBAND WHO DIED FEB. 27

Mrs. Fidelia Williamson on Friday, March 25th followed her husband the late James R. Williamson, to the Great Beyond. He died February 27th of this year.

The Williamson family for many years were residents of the Bruce community. Early this year they were taken into the home of their daughter Mrs. Claude Lane. Both were ill and after Mr. Williamson's death his widow lingered on without much hope of recovery.

She was born in DeWitt county about 75 years ago. Her maiden name was Ganner. One October 23, 1874 she was united in marriage with James R. Williamson. In religious matters they were members of the M. E. church.

They are survived by two sons, Howard of near Bruce and Charles of near Shelbyville; two daughters Mrs. Claude Lane of near Bruce and Mrs. Fred Austin of Saxon Corners in Shelby county. There are 20 grandchildren and 8 great-grandchildren.

Rev. D. A. Shuck of Findlay was in charge of the funeral services held Sunday afternoon. Rev. C. F. Waggoner of Windsor assisted. Burial was in Whitfield cemetery.

ACCUSE BILL WOOD OF BUYING COWS WITH WORTHLESS CHECKS

Bill Wood of Lake City, who has been in the county jail for some time, because he bought horses and gave a worthless check for them, is now accused of having dealt in cattle in the same way.

A man near Ivesdale had a sale some weeks ago. A man bought a cow. The cow cost $30. In settling, the man gave a check on a Decatur bank for $31 and got $1.00 in change. He took the cow with him and it was later sold at another sale. The check given in the transaction was signed "J. H. Wood."

It came back from Decatur, marked "No Funds." Eventually it found its way to J. H. Wood of Sullivan.

J. H. Wood of Sullivan deals in livestock. He reported the case to the sheriff. After the Ivesdale farmer heard that a man named Wood was in jail here, he came down and gave Bill a lookover. He decided that he was the daylight cow thief who had gotten his cow in exchange for a worthless piece of paper. Bill says the man is all wrong. Several others who saw the cow purchaser at the sale are expected here to identify Bill.

Bill is also accused of having bought some hogs at a recent sale. He told the seller he would give a note with his father's name on it. He took the note with him and brought it back when he got the hogs. It had another name on it. It has since been learned that this other signature is that of a ten-year old schoolboy.

Bill is beginning to feel that if he stays in the clutches of the law much longer they may even accuse him of blowing up the Battleship Maine or stealing the Lindbergh baby, or perhaps they'll hang the starting of the World war on him. He does not like all the notoriety he is getting.

Godliness with contentment is great gain.

WHICH LOVED BEST?

"I love you, Mother," said little Ben; Then, forgetting his work, his cap went on, And he was off to the garden swing, And left her the water and wood to bring. "I love you, Mother," said rosy Nell—"I love you better than tongue can tell"; Then she teased and pouted full half the day, Till her mother rejoiced when she went to play. "I love you, Mother," said little Fan; "Today I'll help you all I can; How glad I am that school doesn't keep! So she rocked the babe till it fell asleep.

Then, stepping softly, she fetched the broom, And swept the floor and tidied the room; Busy and happy all day was she, Helpful and happy as child could be. "I love you, Mother," again they said, Three little children going to bed; How do you think that mother guessed Which of them really loved her best?

More Economy -- Less Taxation

The government is worried. It is worried at Washington; it is worried in state capitols; it is worried in counties, in townships, in cities — wherever government functions.

The worry is caused by lack of money with which to finance its operations.

The national deficit is running into billion dollar figures. The deficit in smaller political sub-divisions is smaller proportionately but the sum total of what government is going to run into debt this year is enormous.

That's why you hear so much about taxes: Every paper you pick up tells of new schemes and new plans for taxation. The national government is trying to find ways and means to balance its budget. It cannot afford to run behind. The credit of the nation must be upheld at any cost. This is a $300,000,000 nation and it can not go bankrupt.

Government expenditures have increased at a terrific pace. Though business and industry in general have undergone a severe deflation, government continues its wild orgy of spending and political racketeering.

Is government so much better today than it was years ago? It costs very much more. It employs on its payrolls many, many more men and women all of whom make their living off the taxes that people are asked to pay. Every branch of the Federal and state governments is over-populated and the payrollers are overpaid. Their salaries have not been deflated. The burden of supporting one person out of every eleven in this country at public expense is breaking the back of the taxpayers.

Levying of taxes is necessary. But it seems to us that the big necessity in this state and in this nation today is to reduce governmental expenditures. Cut all the dead parasitic leeches off the public payrolls. Get a dollar's worth of value in materials and labor for every dollar of tax money spent.

Let the government cease to be a Santa Claus for the political racketeers and grafters. Eliminate from public life the officials who feel their main duty is to place their political henchmen and vote manipulators on the public payroll. Put into office men who are big enough to be able to size up the good of the state or the nation and regard it as more important than their own political future.

Let us have a little more economy so we will not have to hunt so hard for new ways to tax the already over-taxed people.

Government has for a long time devoted too much of its time to making jobs; to catering to job-hungry politicians; to devising new taxes to raise more money for more payrollers.

We need a new deal in government. We need a new ideal of public service. And we will get it. If the present political leaders do not comply with the wishes of the people, they will be relegated to the junk pile of useless things, where many of them rightfully belong.

Deflate the government payrolls. That is the great need of this country today.

Big Business Wants Taylor

Have you noticed all of the advertising that Melvin Traylor of Chicago is getting in the newspapers and magazines?

Mr. Traylor is a banker. He is president of the First National Bank of Chicago. He is a native of Kentucky and found his way into the banking business via the school teaching — law practice route. He is a level-headed business man.

There has been some talk of nominating Mr. Traylor for president on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Traylor has apparently not encouraged this boom.

Big business wants to pick the next president. It is not so much concerned about his being Republican or Democratic, just so he is sympathetic to big business.

Some months ago these big business interests were booming Owen D. Young of New York. Mr. Young is a Democrat. He has intimate connections with big business and big banking. The country did not go wildly enthusiastic about Mr. Young, so the big business syndicate writers dropped him. They looked around for another likely prospect and Mr. Traylor has been the victim.

Much work is being done for Mr. Traylor along the free publicity route. Newspapers are getting pictures and reading matter sent to them telling about Mr. Traylor and what Mr. Traylor says. Lots of this stuff, in the guise of news, is finding its way to the reading public. The object back of it is to make the public Traylor-conscious, to sell them the idea that Mr. Traylor is the logical man to nominate for president.

If all of this is done without encouragement from Mr. Traylor, it is a fine compliment to the man. If it is done with his knowledge and approval, it smacks strongly of hypocrisy.

The presidency is a great office; a wonderful opportunity for a man to serve his fellowmen. The man fit for the office, however, must show more dignity and more integrity, than to mooch free publicity from the country press, in order to build up his cause.

We are quite sure Mr. Traylor does not approve of the campaign now being waged in his behalf. We know he is too big a man to engage in a raid on the news columns of the unsuspecting small town newspaper people.

In Little Old New York

By Carl H. Getz

Nearly 350,000 men and women in New York work underground. This includes men who work on the subway trains, platforms and ticket offices. Some buildings in New York have as many as six floors below the street level and on some of these floors are shops of various kinds.

The Cities Service Building in New York is the first building in this city to have double-deck—two story—elevators, which take on and discharge passengers on two floors at once. And they are absolutely safe.

The Empire State Building here when entirely rented will house 25,000 tenants. The building consists of 86 floors of offices, 14 floors in tower, two sub-basement floors—102 floors in all—is 1,250 feet high and was constructed at a cost of $55,000,000. Window washers never get through washing the 6,000 windows in the building. They work from the top down and when the first floor is reached they are ready to start over again.

The Waldorf-Astoria hotel has a radio in every room and is wired for television. Through the center of the building is a private driveway 90 feet wide by 200 feet long.

The largest hotel in the east is in Brooklyn. It is the St. George hotel and has 2,632 guest rooms.

The Equitable Building in New York, better known as 120 Broadway, houses 16,000 persons.

Hardly a week passes in New York but what someone "buys" the Brooklyn Bridge or the New York Public Library for a few dollars. The other day an Italian "bought" the information stand in the Grand Central Station for a fruit stand. The "sale" was discovered when the poor man tried to back a push-cart full of bananas into the station.

More than 400,000 Italians live in New York. The city has a Negro population of nearly 300,000.

There are more than 8,000 push-cart peddlers in the city.

New York mails 70,000,000 letters every 24 hours.

There are 350,000 dogs in New York and despite the automobile nearly 23,000 horses.

New Yorkers love to ride in taxis. It is known that taxi fares in New York total a half million dollars a day.

Surely a curious city.

What have you in the way of Abraham Lincoln relics in your home?

Dr. Louis A. Warren, director of the Lincoln Historical Research Foundation, Fort Wayne, Indiana, asks the Progress to help in locating any really genuine Lincoln curios in this section. In the Foundation's museum and library and in many other historical institutions all over the country, he states, there are innumerable priceless mementos of the Great Emancipator, yet he feels that treasured away in many a home or office there must be manuscripts, newspaper and magazine articles, books and pamphlets, pictures, medals and other Lincoln items that are every bit as valuable. He seeks the aid of this newspaper and its readers in bringing these to light.

Sometime next summer at Fort Wayne, according to Dr. Warren, the Foundation will dedicate a massive bronze statue of the "Youthful Lincoln," done by the famous sculptor Paul Manish. In connection with this dedication there will be held a two-day "open house" in the Foundation's museum and library. For this "open house" Dr. Warren is planning a special exhibit of Lincoln relics collected from individual owners and not heretofore shown in public. Each of the displays will give full credit to the owner, and perhaps the more important ones will be purchased by the Foundation. Dr. Warren promises that all items submitted for the special exhibit will be returned.

Local people who feel that they have something of unusual interest should communicate immediately with Dr. Louis A. Warren, Lincoln Historical Research Foundation, Fort Wayne, Indiana, or Mr. R. C. Lowes, Sr., Peoria, giving full details concerning the articles in their possession. Dr. Warren will then decide whether an article is worthy of special exhibition and make arrangements for sending it to Fort Wayne.

In the four years since its establishment, the Lincoln Historical Research Foundation has become the center of Lincoln information in America. Under Dr. Warren's direction there has been assembled the largest private collection of literature ever gathered about one man, Biblical characters excepted.

DEPRESSING TALE

The fellow looked like a bum, but he also looked uncomfortable and embarrassed. The morning was rather warm but he wore a big overcoat. "Mister" said he, "I'm in bad shape. It's too hot to wear this coat much longer, but I've gotta do it. Tell you why. My overalls have about gone to pieces. The seat of 'em looks awful. In fact there is hardly any seat left. So Mister, I'm asking a few good guys to give me a dime apiece and then maybe I can get a pair cheap somewhere." We helped to buy this travelling man a new spring outfit and hope he gathered up a few more dimes so he could properly cover his seat and cease to be embarrassed. It's a bad enough to be financially embarrassed, but not having a seat in an only pair of overalls, must be more embarrassing still.

Doctor: "Did you follow my advice and drink hot water one hour before breakfast?"

Patient: "I did my best, but I couldn't keep it up more than 10 minutes, doctor."—Answers, London.

Leading Democratic Candidate For President

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

Not in many years has there been more interest shown in the question of who will be the Democratic candidate for President than is shown this year. The reason for this is that there is a general feeling that the Democrats will elect a President next Fall.

Far in the lead among present candidates is Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Governor of New York. He was born January 30, 1882 in a fine old home overlooking the Hudson River. His parents were of Dutch Colonial descent. He received an excellent education and spent much of early manhood in travel. At school he excelled in his studies and as an athlete.

In 1900 he entered Harvard and finished a four-year law course in three years. Soon after his graduation he married his distant cousin, Miss Anna Eleanor Roosevelt. Theodore Roosevelt gave the bride away.

Urged by his wife and friends he entered the political arena and was elected state senator from a strong Republican district. He went to Albany and at once became a recognized leader of a group of insurgent Democrats who challenged the old mossback rule of the Republican machine and Tammany.

Meanwhile in New Jersey another progressive Democrat was fighting for truly representative government. He was Woodrow Wilson. Roosevelt went to the 1912 convention a Wilson man.

After Wilson's election, he offered young Roosevelt the post of Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Six weeks after his 31st birthday he was sworn into office and served during the entire eight years of the troubled Wilson regime. After the close of the war Republican investigating committees pried thoroughly into Roosevelt's war work but found no dishonesty, no scandal.

The Democratic national convention in 1920 nominated James Cox for president and Frank D. Roosevelt for vice president. They were defeated. Mr. Roosevelt and wife with their family of five children moved to New York City where he engaged in the practice of law.

In the year 1921 news dispatches carried the item that Mr. Roosevelt had suffered an attack of Infantile Paralysis and was near death on a little island on the coast of Maine. A year later he had apparently won his battle and was back in his office on crutches.

In 1924 he took over the management of the campaign of Al Smith for the presidential nomination. On his crutches he appeared on the stage of that memorable convention and placed Mr. Smith's name in nomination. Four years later, walking with a cane and leaning on the arm of his son, again nominated Mr. Smith and received a tremendous ovation. At the earnest request of Mr. Smith he accepted the nomination for Governor of New York and was triumphantly elected, though Mr. Smith did not carry the state for president. Two years later Gov. Roosevelt was re-elected by a plurality of 725,000 votes. The people of New York had taken measure of the man and heartily approved of him.

Completely recovered from his physical ailment, Gov. Roosevelt has permitted the use of his name in the pre-convention campaign for delegates this year. Wherever the voters have this far had the opportunity, they have rallied to his support—in rock-ribbed New Hampshire in the northeast, in North Dakota in the Middle West, and in Georgia in the sunny southland, the Democrats have spoken emphatically in favor of Franklin D. Roosevelt for Democratic presidential nomination when the party meets in national convention in Chicago this year to select the standard bearer.

WAY OF LIFE

By Bruce Barton

A ROCK IN A WEARY LAND

When I was fifteen years old my father took me into his study and gave me a talk about life insurance. He was a preacher, with a large family and a small salary.

"Paying my premiums has kept me poor, and often in debt," he said, "but I am well rewarded. I can lie down and sleep soundly at night."

In order to bring the lesson home, he applied for $3,000 of life insurance on the twenty payment plan for me, saying that he would carry it until I had graduated from college and I could go on with it from there.

Twenty years seemed longer at that time than a hundred seems now. I wondered if I would ever live to the ripe old age of thirty-five, when the policies would be paid in full.

Well, I have lived that long, and these policies, and some others, are all paid up. Father himself lived long, and, having educated his children and seen them all started, he cashed in his insurance and was comfortable in his old age.

Remembering this lesson, I have signed my checks for premiums very cheerfully, but never with so much satisfaction as during the past two years.

In a period when almost everything one owns is tumbling it is great to know that one investment, at least, is just as good as it promised to be. Nothing has happened to any of the big insurance companies, and nothing will.

I was reminded of this the other day when I attended a convention of insurance salesmen. They were full of human interest stories.

Said one: "A business man walked into my office and asked for an application blank. He said that two years ago he was worth $200,000, and thought that he and his family were safe from financial worries forever. Now the $200,000 is less than $50,000. His only hope of independence is through systematic savings as represented by payments of life insurance premiums."

Another told of a man who asked: "I am thirty-five and have to start all over again. What kind of a policy can you offer me that will insure me a competence at sixty?"

We were all carried off our feet by the new theory of investment in 1929. Bonds and insurance were out of date. Common stocks were the one sure way to fortune.

Now the pendulum has swung back. The old-fashioned ideas are in style again. It is a time when insurance companies ought to double their advertising, and insurance salesmen their efforts.

When we were prosperous we sometimes regarded these salesmen as a nuisance. Today their wares are "as rivers of water in a dry place; as the shadow of a rock in a weary land."

AMERICANS EAT LOTS OF SWINE MEAT

Pork has made up an increasing proportion of the Nation's meat diet in the last 10 years, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Fifty-two per cent of all meat consumed in United States last year came from hogs. The per capita consumption of pork last year was 69.6 pounds, compared with 69.3 in 1930. A record was established in 1923 and 1924, with 74.7 pounds-per capita.

We note where a Monticello editor says he's a Republican but he is against Hoover and the high tariff. That's about like saying that you are a Christian but you don't believe in God and the Bible.

Demure maidens bathing suits this year will be more exposing than heretofore. They believe in sun baths. They wear so little that the sun can reach the exposed surface—and the sun can see it.

"Oh Mamma" gasped the youngster "Baby just fell on the tracks, right in front of a train."

"Oh my God!" shrieked the horrified mother.

"Now Ma, don't holler like that. There was no harm done. The train was backing up."

Guest Towels

What is home without a guest towel?

A guest towel is a small body of linen entirely surrounded by embroidery.

Fifteen minutes before the guests arrive, guest towels are hung in the bathroom, and fifteen minutes after the company departs the guest towels are put back in the drawer.

A guest towel should be washed at least twice a year. Otherwise it is likely to crack to pieces should someone thoughtlessly unfold it. It is said that some women sew them up so they cannot be unfolded.

Guest towels are so small they frequently get mixed up with a man's handkerchiefs, and it is quite embarrassing when one is pulled out of one's pocket in the presence of other men. Think of opening it, thereby displaying a small basket of flowers done in samsilk on one end and a spray of forgetmenots on the other.

Every guest understands that he is expected to use a towel of the Turkish variety, which he will usually find draped carelessly over the edge of the tub.

We have often wondered why women do not decorate guest towels with water colors.

Were a referendum submitted to the men, they would no doubt vote unanimously for roller guest towels.

Guest towels are believed to be the invention of Eddie Guest, the well known minnesinger.

Mother: "Why are you reading that book on the education of children?"

Son: "To see if you are bringing me up properly."—Utica Press.

At the THEATRE

It is on Thursday and Friday night of this week that you can see the Barrymore brothers, Lionel and John in an amazing and exciting romance "Arsene Lupin." If you don't see many pictures, here's one you don't want to miss.

Then on Saturday
In a Panama honky-tonk is Flo Bennett, a New York show girl. She's in love with Babe, an adventurous air-pilot who is in Panama on business. Babe goes on a trip to Panama's interior. Flo and her landlady get mixed up in a shady deal wherein a fellow named McTeague is robbed. Flo gets caught and to keep from being prosecuted, Flo agrees to accompany him to his jungle retreat. Then the lover returns and henceforth for some time there is plenty doing. You'll like Helen Twelvrees who plays the part of Flo. Robert Armstrong is Babe and Charles Bickford is the villainous McTeague. All of this is one the program for Saturday matinee and night. They call the sketch "Panama Flo."

The 11th Chapter of Vanishing Legion is up for your approval and then there will also be a comedy entitled "Mother's Holiday." Say you men—here's a tip—give Mother a holiday and bring her to see this show.

Sunday's Big Thing
We'll tell you about Sunday's special first—for it's big red-hot stuff. The world famous Bethany Concert Band of twenty trained musicians—20, count 'em—will appear at all performances Sunday with a program of late popular and classical selections, featuring Mrs. Opal Tohl, soprano, and Mr. Turner Nearing, late concert soloist with Roy Smith's Famous Highlanders of St. Petersburg, Florida. Don't miss this. Bethany is a great neighboring town and everything that comes from there is all O. K. except the Republican election returns and even they are improving (This political crack is to be charged to the writer, not to the theatre man).

Although the Bethany Band as a show feature dwarfs most anything else now on earth, nevertheless, let us tell you that Nancy Carroll, Richard Arlen and Pauline Frederick are going to appear in a dandy Paramount picture—"Wayward." Pensive, wistful and teary Zazu Pitts and Thelma Todd will appear in an uproarious comedy "Sealskins"; Mickey Mouse is going to do his stuff, there'll be Pathe News and some extras.

Remember the band appears on Sunday only but the rest of the program will be shown again on Monday night.

File No. 113
What is there in File No. 113? Well, for one thing, there is a thrilling Parisian mystery story. The main actor is Lew Cody, as chief of detectives; Mary Nolan is an actress; Clara Kimball Young a blackmailed mother. The press dope on this picture paint an evening of alluring, mysterious and thrilling entertainment. Old Slim Summerville puts on the sketch "Bless the Ladies" and then too there will be a screen novelty—which may mean most anything. All of this is slated for Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Robert Montgomery
Thursday and Friday nights of next week the feature bill is "Lovers Courageous" in which Robert Montgomery plays the title role and Madge Evans is the important bit of femininity. "This said to be a charming tale of young love, with plenty of humor and fine acting—if it's all that, what more can you ask? There will also be a couple of comedies—we hope they are—on the program and the ever-popular Pathe News.

Look 'em over boys. Then call your sweeties and date 'em up. Look 'em over girls. Remember this is Leap Year and perhaps it's up to you to make the first date. Some bachelors are awfully bashful—that's why they are bachelors. They may just be waiting for you to start something.

Springfield, Mar. 30—The dome and roof of the state capitol building, long in need of extensive repairs, will provide well upward of $125,000 worth of work this season, judging from the bids received for the reconstruction work. English of Champaign, was the low bidder, with a $140,000 proposal. After checking over all the details and specifications, the supervising architect will make recommendations to the secretary of state, who is authorized to place the contract.

CAMPBELL INVADES COOK COUNTY FOR RED-HOT FINISH

Bruce Campbell of East St. Louis, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, this week began his intensive campaign in Cook County and surrounding territory. He finished his downstate campaign last week, having visited ninety counties in the state. In these counties, Mr. Campbell reports, he found sentiment overwhelmingly for him, and he is confident of his nomination. For the next two weeks Mr. Campbell will campaign in Chicago, speaking daily over the radio and making public speeches.

In his speeches, Mr. Campbell is attacking bossism and machine politics, insisting that the race for the nomination is between him and Judge Henry Horner, Mayor Anton Cermak's candidate. Concerning this situation Mr. Campbell says:

"I evidently have worried Mr. Cermak. He has heard the news from downstate of my great strength and he is finding out how strong I am in Chicago and he is beginning to realize what I have known for some time, that I am going to win this nomination from his candidate unless he can take it away from me by misrepresentation and befogging the issues. I do not propose to allow him to do this.

"The main issue in this campaign is whether Cermak's machine methods are to be extended into the government of Illinois. I do not propose that this shall be done if I can help it. This race for Governor is between Judge Horner and me. If I do not defeat Judge Horner he will be nominated. Both Chicago and downstate voters opposed to Cermak's domination should not throw away their votes upon a candidate who cannot defeat Judge Horner, but should give their support to me as the only candidate who can and will be nominated over him. I do not believe that Mr. Cermak can fool the Democratic voters of Illinois nor do I believe that he can take them away from the real issues of the campaign."

With Mr. Campbell in his headquarters is Edward P. Allen of Quincy, secretary of the Democratic State Central Committee, his campaign manager. Mr. Allen reports that sentiment both downstate and in Chicago is growing stronger for Mr. Campbell because it is generally admitted that Mr. Campbell is the only Democratic candidate who can surely be elected in November.

"The Democrats of this state," Mr. Allen says in a statement, "have a fine chance to elect a Governor this fall, and to elect their state and county tickets. They cannot afford to throw away this chance by nominating a Chicago candidate who is mixed up in a bitter fight for political domination in Cook County. This might cause disaster to the party."

"There is only one thing to do. That is for every Democrat who wishes party success to get behind Bruce Campbell, who is free from all factionalism and on whom all Democrats can unite. He will be a quarter of a million votes stronger in November than any other Democrat we could nominate."

Mr. Campbell's in his Chicago speeches this week is attacking waste and extravagance in government, promising a fair and equitable assessment of all property, real and personal, thus taking from real estate part of the unfair burden it now bears. He also pledges himself to be fair to every section of the state, without prejudice or favor.

An indication of Mr. Campbell's growing strength is seen in the fact that the Cook County Democratic organization, under control of Mayor Cermak, is now turning its guns on him, realizing apparently that he is the candidate who threatens Cermak's ambition to extend his party control to Springfield.

Neatly Outwitted His Father

By JACK WOODFORD

"THERE'S a very bright young man in the outer office that I'd like you to meet," Mr. Simpkins said to Durrow, who was frowning daggers at last month's balance sheet. Simpkins knew that Durrow must be tremendously pleased with the balance sheet; he always frowned like that when he was pleased. When he looked blank and mild—then it was time to look for one of those sarcastic interjections that meant somebody's job.

"Seen enough bright young men," Durrow growled. "Got one at home. A silly, good-for-nothing freak. And all he can think of is that I ought to blow him to a big income and let him play for five years before he settles down to business. . . . Try to tell him that it took me years to learn this business, and that his college education isn't worth a whoop without practical experience, and he tells me too many men don't get rich till they're too old to enjoy it. What a philosophy. Play when you're young and work when you're old. Who ever heard of such a thing!"

"Well," Simpkins mildly remarked, "this, sir, is not that kind of young man. He's the one, in fact, responsible for the fact that we're showing an increased balance sheet this month, despite the depression, while every other furniture establishment in the city is in the red."

"What do you mean?" roared Durrow.

"You see, sir . . . we've been instructed not to bother you with detail, but to get results; so I, as sales manager, went ahead and got results. But I must confess that were it not for this young man and his suggestion—I've offered him a permanent position in my department, but he has declined, and asks only to meet you. You see, he went to all the well situated vacant stores he could find in town, until such time as the stores were rented. He got the Chamber of Commerce to back him, on the theory that vacant stores were a very embarrassing reminder of business depression, and would look better if they had something in their display windows anyway; sort of gave the town a cheerful air. The young man rented the store windows for next to nothing, representing that a display would draw the attention of people; and once their attention had been drawn toward how nice the store looked with its window trimmed, it might be easier to find a tenant. He came to me with these options, and offered to rent this firm all of this window display space in vacant stores all over town. I thought it was a splendid as well as a cheap means of advertising. We sent single pieces or whole sets of furniture to each of the stores and got up tasty displays.

"You'd be surprised how effective it was. Of course we put placards in the store windows, to the effect that the goods displayed were our furniture; giving, naturally, our business address, prices, our arrangement for credit terms, etc. We traced thousands of dollars' worth of sales direct to those vacant store window displays. It would have cost us a ruinous sum in advertising, in any other way, to bring in the same sales. The young man cleaned up, we cleaned up, and now he wants to meet you."

"Mean to tell me an outsider got us out of our difficulties?" Durrow thundered. But Mr. Simpkins was not fooled. He knew that Durrow was tickled right down to the ground, and was dying to see the young man.

"I'll tell him you're too busy to see him," Simpkins said smoothly. "Tell him nothing of the kind!" Durrow snorted. "Send him in." When the young man was sent in, Durrow rose from his desk. Fell back into his chair. Rose again. Bellowed something. "This is Mr. Walter Smith," Simpkins said smoothly.

"Walter Smith?" roared Durrow. "You're crazy. It's Walter Durrow. What sort of frameup have you two been—"

Walter grinned at Simpkins. "He thinks it's a frameup," Walter told him, "cause just the other night he held me I couldn't make a thousand dollars by honest means in a year; and when I said I could, he told me if I did he'd give me ten for every dollar I made honestly my first six months out of school. He now owes me twenty-four thousand dollars."

"You fool!" Durrow roared at Simpkins, "you've cost me more than the profits on our balance sheet. Get out of my sight." Simpkins beat a hasty retreat.

Durrow stared at his offspring almost in apoplexy; but the offspring had understood that stare since childhood.

It took Durrow four hours to recover from writing a check for twenty-four thousand dollars; but when he had, he sought Simpkins. There was the frown of a Gorgon on his face. He shoved open the door to Simpkins' office with a thrust that all but took it off its hinges.

"Can you imagine," he asked Simpkins, handing him a cigar, "that boy's inheriting his father's business ability even in spite of his having a college education! Sent him off to romp awhile. Young fellow ought to enjoy himself while he's young; plenty of time for sober work later on."

"Precisely," agreed Mr. Simpkins, without the twitch of an eyelash.

AUTO ACCIDENT AT COOK BRIDGE FRIDAY

Two of John Mayes' boys who live near Moweaqua had a narrow escape Friday night when their Ford roadster ran through the guard railing at the west end of the Cook bridge and rolled into the river bottom. After it landed in the bottom it caught on fire and burned up.

When the car hit the railing the boys were thrown out, one on either side of the car. The car was balanced for a few seconds on the abutment of the bridge and then fell ten feet into the river bed.

One of the boys received a bruise on his leg and the other one escaped without a scratch. A wrecker was called early the next morning and removed the wreckage.—Bethany Echo.

A Guess That Has Cost $185,000,000

Some bad guessing in 1913 has since cost the people of the United States approximately $185,000,000. The guessing was embodied in the Railway Valuation Act of that year.

The principal guesses were: (1) the railroads could be valued in two years; (2) the total cost would be less than $3,000,000; (3) the railroads would be shown to be greatly over-capitalized; (4) the government would be enabled to regulate rates so as to yield the railroads a fair return; (5) the users of transportation would save around $1,000,000 a day.

Here are the corresponding facts: (1) the valuation, in progress eighteen years, is still incomplete; (2) the cost to the taxpayers has been more than $40,000,000 and to the railroads—and, through them, to their patrons—more than $145,000,000; (3) the value of the railroads has been proved to be substantially greater than their capitalization; (4) the railroads have not been allowed to earn a fair return; (5) no public saving has resulted.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

DEMOCRATIC-PIATT COUNTY FARMER

For Representative 24th District

CHAMPAIGN — MOULTRIE —
PIATT COUNTIES

In the past campaigns I have been given the hearty endorsement of my Home County-folks who have known me all their lives. I have served as Commissioner, Supervisor, Highway Engineer, Legislator and was for 16 years President of the Monticello Community High School Board.

While platforms are usually "Bunk" and intended to catch votes,—of course I favor strict economy in government.

I also favor the principle of an income tax to be applied on our school tax.

I am for a property tax only on that part clear of debt the balance to follow the mortgage which now escapes taxation.

I will advocate a bank guaranty law for depositors.

I am for justice for labor as our prosperity depends on well paid, well employed labor.

I will favor a reduction in salaries of officers including Legislators as most of us farmers and business men are working for less than nothing.

I respectfully ask your investigation of my record. I am sure if you do you will support me.

I think you want a Representative who stands on his own feet, remembers his obligations and the people who elect him.

Men and ladies (over 21) I shall be proud to receive your support and influence at the Primary, April 12.

I shall endeavor to make myself worthy of your Confidence and Trust. Experience and ability should count.

The Very Latest

By Mary Marshall

There is an effect of sheerness about most of the new dresses for spring. This does not apply merely to the dresses of chiffon and other transparent materials, although all sorts of sheer and semi-sheer materials will be used extensively. Dresses made of crepe or satin also have a sheer touch which is achieved in a variety of ways. Sometimes there is a lace or georgette yoke. Sleeves may be of the same sheer material from wrists to elbows. Sometimes there are panels or inserts of net, and sometimes the light touch is achieved by fagoting. This is always a favorite trimming device of French dress-makers, and it is especial smart at the present time.

The dress shown in the sketch shows a new way of using fagoting. The V-neckline has a line of fagoting an inch or more from the edge and the slightly flaring short sleeves are made of bands of the material fagotted together—six lines of fagoting on each sleeve. The dress shown here was of crepe de chine in the new bambino blue with fagoting to match, but the idea might be carried out in black, white or any one of the new colors.

The detail shows how to work some of the fagoting stitches. The first at the left is the simplest. Baste the edges of the material to be fagotted on a stiff paper at the proper distance from each other. Bring the needle out of one edge, carry it diagonally across and forward to the other edge, put it in, bring it back an eighth of an inch or less on the same side, pull it out, wrap the free thread once around the thread already in place, carry the needle diagonally across and forward to the first edge, and repeat.

The second stitch is laddering. Two threads are placed, parallel to each other, across the opening, and then coarsely button-holed across.

The third stitch is simple and effective. Two parallel stitches are taken along the entire seam, less than an eighth of an inch apart, with perhaps an interval of an inch. The needle is then carried out to the middle of the top between each pair of a quarter of thread and is worked toward the sewer, who takes a buttonhole stitch to hold the lower stitch or a pair to the upper stitch of the pair below.

Hints for the Home

by Nancy Hart

Cranberry Mousse

Cranberry mousse may be served with the meat course in any dinner menu. It is served either in little paper cups, in which it is frozen, or in small glass sherbert cups.

2 1/2 cups raw cranberries measured after sorting;
1 1/2 cups cold water;
1 1/2 cups of sugar;
1 cup evaporated milk;
2 tsp. lemon juice;
1 cup orange juice.

Wash cranberries, add cold water and cook slowly until soft, about 15 minutes. Press through a potato ricer. There should be 1 1/2 cups pulp. Add sugar and cook 10 minutes. There should be 1 1/2 cups jelly. Chill. Scald milk over boiling water. Chill thoroughly, then whip until stiff. Add lemon and orange juice and continue whipping until very stiff. Cut and fold in the cold cranberry pulp lightly but thoroughly. Pour into cold freezing pan of an automatic refrigerator and freeze. Or pour into a mold and pack in salt and ice.

Yellow Tomato Juice

Did you ever drink tomato juice cocktail that was yellow? It's pure tomato juice, just the same, and comes from red tomatoes, but it's been put through a fine sieve. If you pour tomato juice through cheesecloth, it comes out yellow, for the cheesecloth filters out the pulp and the pulp contains the red coloring matter. Incidentally, the Federal Food and Drug Administration of Washington defines canned tomato juice as just that—canned tomato juice, neither concentrated nor diluted. It may contain salt. But if it contains sugar, this must be mentioned in the label.

Whole Wheat Pudding

Beat one egg and add one cup molasses, one-half cup milk, one and a half cups of whole wheat flour, one cup seeded raisins, one teaspoon cinnamon, half a teaspoon each of cloves and soda, a quarter of a teaspoon of salt, and two tablespoons of butter, melted. Pour into a buttered mould and steam for four hours. Serve with hard sauce made with brown sugar or with lemon sauce.

Scotch Tea Cakes—Two cups oatmeal, one cup sugar, two-thirds teaspoon salt, two eggs, one teaspoon melted butter, few drops vanilla.

Beat eggs until very light, and add sugar, gradually. Add other ingredients and beat. Drop from spoon on well-greased pan; spread in flat cakes. Bake in very moderate oven twelve minutes. Let cool in pan before removing.

Tannin's Vitality

Tests show that chestnut trees killed by the devastating chestnut blight retain their tannin for a long time after being killed.

Farm Bureau

The meeting held at the Farm Bureau last Saturday was quite well attended, although three townships were not represented. The purpose of the meeting was to see about locating a Bulk Station in Sullivan for the distribution of Farm Bureau Petroleum products. The interest shown was not up to expectation although it was decided by the committee and representatives from some of the townships to make a survey and report again at a meeting to be held at the office Saturday night.

The Grain Marketing Committee meeting was held at the Farm Bureau Monday night at which time the new Grain Marketing program was very thoroughly discussed among members representing the townships throughout the county. F. D. Barton made the principal address of the evening.

Hugh Righter, the new Insurance representative of the Farm Bureau in company with Merle Powell attended a meeting at Shelbyville Monday night.

The young men's Forum in Shelby county is proving very successful. Some of our Moultrie county people are becoming greatly interested in it.

Farmers are quite busy now sowing oats. Some are having to re-sow some which was sown previous to the cold spell. No doubt clover seed that is sown now will be much more reliable to come through in better shape than that which was seeded several weeks ago.

There seems to be a tendency among farmers to sow more oats and to reserve less acreage for corn than common. This is due, no doubt to the extremely low marketing price of corn and the reasonable amount of labor and expense that is attached to the production of a crop of oats. Then too, many farmers are doing the wise thing in the attempt to reduce their production of grain and substitute a legume crop in its place in the effort to replenish the fertility of the soil.

Some are also seeding down pasture which will, in time, have its greatly desired affect of reducing production and getting rid of the surplus now on hand. Now while grain prices are low is a very admirable time to build up the fertility of the soil and prepare for the time of the future when farm products will undoubtedly be high.

A young fellow inquired of a circus man if he had any work for him to do in order that he might see the show.

Yes, go in and wash the elephant said the circus man.

No, by thunder, I'm a democrat, retorted the one seeking employment.—Shelbyville Leader.

An Important Message to Owners of Automobiles

About thirteen years ago a business opened in a room on the northeast corner of the square. It specialized in tire repair work, battery repair work, and the sale of new tires and batteries. The beginning was a slow task. For a time Herbert Moore was associated in the business, later H. V. Siron but from the very beginning Les Atchison was one of the owners. Since 1924 he has been sole owner. He has had approximately 20 years of experience in automobile servicing.

The room which the Tire & Battery Station occupied became inadequate to properly take care of the growing business. Besides the original lines, ignition work was done, automobile repairing took up part of the work of the station and a full line of accessories were sold.

Radios were sold and serviced. Other electrical lines were added from time to time. All efforts made to make of the room in which the business was located, a presentable salesroom were more or less futile.

So Les Atchison started planning and dreaming of a home for his business that would be up-to-date and built with the idea of giving 100 per cent service in all of the lines in which it was branching out. No such building was available here in Sullivan. Remodeling a building to conform to such ideas would be an expensive job and perhaps far from satisfactory.

In the meantime Mr. Atchison's brother-in-law W. H. (Buck) Fisher took local agency for Skelly Gasoline and its allied products. His headquarters were at the Tire & Battery Station. He too needed a bigger and better place to develop his business. He joined Les Atchison in looking for a suitable location. It was found at the corner of Harrison and Van Buren Streets, across west from The Progress office. The dwelling house located there was moved off the lot.

A fine brick building was erected, designed to meet the plans of the builders. It is now complete. Perhaps there is none like it in any city of Sullivan's size. Necessary equipment has been built into it. It aims toward prompt, efficient service to motorists. That service is given in a large, well-lighted work room. Its super oil station can give motorists whatever they may need in that line. Its salesroom and show windows will be devoted to display of radios, tires, batteries and accessories.

Mr. Atchison and Mr. Fisher feel now that they can give that 100 per cent service, which they have long planned. They are ready in their new place of business to service the public, which through past patronage, has made this new building and development possible.

The formal opening will be announced later. In the meantime, however, you are invited to transfer your much-appreciated patronage from the old stand on the northeast corner of the Square to the new "Station". Drive up; fill up. Tell your car troubles and have them remedied.

EDITOR SEEKS SEAT AS ILLINOIS CONGRESSMAN

One of the thirteen Republicans who are seeking the two nominations of that party for congressman-at-large is Will C. Carson, editor of the Greenville Advocate.

If loyalty to the Republican party and working for it tirelessly for years and years, merits any reward, then Mr. Carson is entitled to the nomination he seeks.

Mr. Carson knows the problems of the Illinois downstate. He has been in close contact with the farmers and laboring men.

While The Progress does not presume to advise Republicans in the April 12th primary, we can not refrain from calling attention to Mr. Carson's candidacy. He's a fellow newspaper man and about the only thing that can be said against him is that he's a Republican. But even that failing deserves to be rewarded by those who have the same political faith that he has. Politically, it is nice to have opponents whom you can honor and respect—Mr. Carson is that kind of a Republican. His party will recognize ability and long and faithful service by nominating Mr. Carson for congressman-at-large in the primary on April 12th.

24 REPLIES COVER MOST QUERIES ON RAISING OF CHICKS

Urbana, Ill., March 30—Twenty-four questions and answers—no more, no less—cover most of the stumbling blocks which Illinois farmers will have to clear in the successful brooding and feeding of chicks this spring, says H. H. Alp, poultry extension specialist of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

Samples of the questions and answers, which he has placed in the hands of all county farm advisers, are:

Q. What are the essential requirements for successful rearing of chicks?

A. Healthy, vigorous chicks in a clean ventilated house on a clean range, not overcrowded, good feed, plenty of feeder space and the liberal use of good common sense.

Q. How much floor space should a chick have?

A. There should be at least one square foot of floor space for every three chicks.

Q. What should the room temperature of the brooder house be?

A. Generally the room temperature of the brooder house will vary somewhat with the age of chicks. For the brooder stove method of brooding there should be little reason for the room temperature to be higher than 75 to 80 degrees. Too many brooder houses are kept too hot. Hover temperature recommendations do not mean room temperatures.

Q. When should chicks receive their first feeding?

A. As soon as they are put in the brooder house. Long delayed feeding is likely to be followed by bad results.

Q. What are the most common mistakes made by the flock owner in rearing chicks?

A. Not providing enough hopper space, keeping the brooder house too hot and losing interest after the chicks are six weeks old.

Man Made the Town

By Ruby M. Ayers

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

There was a little sound out in the road. A big car had drawn noiselessly up to the gate, and a man was getting out.

A big man with a very unprofessional appearance—Rathbone.

Diana made another effort to rise. He would be so angry with her. She heard his step on the path then his voice talking to the maid. "Oh, well, I'll go up—" then his step on the stairs.

The Creature was not there, of course—and now he would be angry to find her out of bed. Not that she cared if he was angry; he was well paid to look after her. He ought to have sent word that he would be coming. Diana was trembling from head to foot as she clung to the window sill, her face turned to the door.

Rathbone came in . . . he gave one glance at the bed before he saw her, and she broke out tearfully, "I was so tired of bed—I wanted to see what was outside—and I can't get back."

He crossed the room in a stride and picked her up as if she had been a child, depositing her in bed and pulling the clothes over her. "How long have you been there?" "Only just before you came."

"I told you to stay in bed, I told Miss Starling—" "She's gone out . . . she must go out sometimes," she added resentfully, for once defending the Creature.

"Well, if you do it again you'll have to have two nurses. What would you have done if I hadn't come?"

"Stayed there, I suppose," Diana whispered.

He stood looking down at her unsmilingly.

"Don't you want to get well?" he asked brusquely.

Her lips moved, but no words came; her big eyes stared up at him mournfully.

"If you don't want to get well, say so, and I won't come any more, he said ruthlessly. "But it seems a pity—a child like you. All your life before you—everything to look forward to."

She spoke then, in trembling bitterness. "I hate my life—there isn't anything to look forward to. I don't care if I die—I suppose you have never wanted to die?"

"I've never been very ill," he answered humorously. "And it's only when you feel ill and weak that you think it would be an easy way out if you died."

"I suppose you think I'm very silly," she submitted.

"I think you're going to be a very wise little girl and get well very quickly."

"I'm so tired of lying here."

He looked at her consideringly.

"Very well, I'll make another bargain with you. If you'll do as you're told—no getting out of bed or refusing to eat—when I come again I'll take you for a little ride in my car."

"When will you come again?" she asked distrustfully.

He laughed. "Today is Wednesday—shall we say, Saturday?"

"Will you promise?"

"On my sacred word of honor."

He stood up. "No more tears, mind."

"No."

He held out his hand. "Good-bye"

for a little while."

"You will come on Saturday?" "Yes."

Diana gave a sigh. "Thank you very much." It was the first time she had really been polite to him.

The Creature was a little skeptical about that promised Saturday drive; at least, she looked it, although she was too hatefully tactful (so Diana thought) to say anything.

"You will have to see how much you can improve during the next three days," was her only comment.

Diana knew quite well what she was thinking, and it made her all the more determined to be well enough to go with Rathbone.

She made no more trouble about taking her food or medicine, and did everything she was told almost before she was told.

On Thursday she received a letter from Dennis, telling her he had found out through Anna where she was and asking if she could see him. She forgot all about their last quarrel and told him to call some afternoon, when Miss Starling would be out.

On Saturday Rathbone came at three o'clock. Diana heard his car come up to the gate, and her eyes grew bright with excitement.

She was well enough now to feel that she was about to be taken out of prison; well enough to find the quietness of the little room rather trying; she listened eagerly for his step on the stair.

She could hear him downstairs talking to Miss Starling. It seemed an eternity till he came up to her.

"Well?" he said cheerily. "And how are we today?"

She searched his face with eager eyes.

"Are you going to take me out?" he laughed. "Didn't I promise? But let me look at you first."

"I'm much, much better," she assured him earnestly.

After she had been dressed, Rathbone lifted her gently in his arms—she was little more than a featherweight—and carefully carried her down the narrow staircase of the tiny house.

The Creature was standing by the car—a different car to the one Diana had seen drive down the lane when Rathbone last came.

"I'm going to drive you myself," he said as he carefully set her down on the seat of the car where pillows and rugs had already been methodically arranged by Miss Starling.

"That means you're going to sit in front," Diana said disappointedly.

"That's where the driver generally sits," he answered calmly.

In less than half an hour they were back at the cottage, and Jenne greeted them at the door, her face all smiles, her eyes very knowing as she looked at Diana.

"Have you enjoyed it, Miss?" she asked, and Diana answered: "It was such a little way—it was hardly worth going for."

Rathbone laughed as he carried her upstairs again and set her down in an armchair.

"That's base ingratitude," he said cheerfully. "And I've sacrificed my Saturday afternoon to you."

She met the kindness of his eyes and relented a little.

"Thank you for taking me," she said.

She clung to his hand for a moment.

"I'll come again soon," he promised.

CHAPTER VI

Monday was a glorious day. Diana woke with the throbbing sensation that something good was going to happen. Then she remembered Dennis was coming.

She asked the Creature an anxious question.

"How long have I been here?" "Nearly three weeks."

It was a lifetime. Three weeks without once seeing Dennis!

She hoped the Creature would not take it into her silly head to stay at home this afternoon.

But the Creature went out. "I shall be back by six," she told Diana, "and Jenny will give you your tea. Ring if you want anything."

"I shan't want anything, thank you," Diana said, but as soon as she was sure Miss Starling was well away she rang the bell.

Jenny appeared readily. "Did you ring, Miss?" Jenny always asked questions that were already answered.

"Yes, Jenny, if a gentleman calls"—Jenny's smile widened—"show him up to me at once, please."

Four o'clock—she said half-part in her letter—it seemed an eternity as she watched the slow hands of the little clock on the mantelshelf.

Presently she dozed a little, awakening with a start to find Jenny, flushed and agitated, standing beside the bed.

"Oh, miss—he's come—and I didn't know if I ought to wake you."

"Bring him up. Why didn't you wake me before? . . . Do I look all right?"

"You look a picture, miss," Jenny lied gallantly.

Then Dennis came. For a moment Diana could hardly see him. She was blind with emotion, and her heart beat so fast it seemed to be thudding up in her throat, choking her.

Then the mists cleared, and she saw him standing in the doorway, looking at her with eyes that seemed half ashamed, half pitying, half glad! Yes, the gladness was there, and with a little smothered cry Diana held out her arms to him.

"Dennis . . ."

He came over to her and took her in his arms.

"Poor little girl . . . my poor little girl . . ."

She clung to him, half laughing, half weeping.

He kissed her gently as he might have kissed a child, but she seemed contented and lay still, looking at him with big eyes.

"Look at me, Dennis—you don't look at me at all," she said.

He raised his eyes with an effort.

"I've been worrying about you, Diana."

She smiled. It was sweet to hear him say that.

"You need not," she told him. "I shall soon be back in London to plague you and quarrel with you again."

He turned his head quickly away, and she said with sharper intonation, "Is anything the matter? You seem—strange, somehow. Is anything the matter, Dennis?"

"No, at least—" He broke off.

"Something is the matter," she insisted. She tried to raise herself, but the effort was too much, and she lay back, trembling and breathing quickly. "You frighten me," she whispered. "You frighten me."

He held her hand to his face—such a frail, white little hand.

"There's nothing to be frightened about, my dear." He smiled to reassure her. "It's only—I've got to go away for a little while—that is why I came. I had to see you before I went."

"Go—away? . . . Where?" "A long way, I'm afraid; at least perhaps you will think it a long way, though it's nothing nowadays—America."

"America—why?" "America is not so far away," he said, trying to speak cheerfully. "It's only five days now—no time at all."

"How long will you be gone?" He shook his head.

"If you loved me you wouldn't go."

"Do you think I want to go?" "Yes, I do," she said passionately.

"My God, Diana, you're impossible!"

He walked away from her to the window. He was wishing with all his heart that he had not come, and yet perhaps he had never loved her so well as he did now when she was ill and weak. Her brave attempt to look pretty for his sake cried aloud to his heart for pity.

He turned round. "I must go, Diana."

She said nothing, she just lay there looking at him with tragic eyes, and moved to sudden emotion he lifted her up in his arms and kissed her passionately. "Don't forget me, Diana."

"Don't forget me, Diana."

There was no answering pressure in her lips, those poor little reddened lips, and he said, stung to unjustified anger.

"You think only of yourself. If you had any thought for me you wouldn't be so hard."

"I'm not hard," she whispered. His face grew sullen.

"Good-bye, then." He walked out of the room without another word or glance, and Diana lay there, her face as white as the pillow, straining to hear the last sound of him . . . the very last sound of him.

Then suddenly she came to life. She gave a little strangled cry and tried to get out of bed.

"Dennis . . . come back! . . . Dennis! . . . Dennis! . . . Dennis!"

HALF MILLION DOLLAR SPRING ROAD WORK ALREADY CONTRACTED

Springfield, March 30—Road contracts awarded, mostly from the March 9 letting, call for more than half a million dollars worth of work in down state counties, according to an announcement made by Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer. In all, 13 jobs were placed with contractors. They embrace 19.15 miles of paving and about two miles of widening, which will cost $384,765; 19.64 miles of grading, for $66,676.56 and $110,959 worth of bridge construction. Many more proposals are under consideration, and contracts for additional contracts that will employ many men now idle are to be placed by the opening of road building weather, according to highway officials.

To the Democratic Voters of the 24th Senatorial District: ---

You have a right to know what to expect of those who represent you in the Legislature for the next two years. Some of the major problems, as I see them are as follows:

First: Putting the State Government on a business basis.

Second: An honest adjustment and assessment of all taxable property.

Third: An income tax that shall be applied so as to reduce the tax on real estate.

Fourth: Abolish selling short any commodities.

Fifth: No sales tax that will place the burden on the rank and file of the people.

Sixth: Curb big business combinations that are now threatening the home owned business.

Seventh: Loans and interest rates to home builders and owners that will make it possible for all people who are threatened with foreclosures to redeem their homes and others to buy or build homes. To establish a true democracy it must be possible for all people to own homes.

Eighth: Adjustment of the laboring conditions to abolish unemployment.

Ninth: In order to return to prosperity the state as well as the nation must put forth every effort to acquire a just return to the farmer for his products and to labor for their services.

Tenth: In order to restore confidence we must back up our government, our business, our banks and our neighbors. And in return these must place confidence in the people.

I am your neighbor, have been in business in Monticello for thirty years. I welcome an investigation. I am a Democratic candidate for Representative.

I will appreciate your support at the April 12th Primary.

Your Telephone Is Always a Valuable, Dependable Friend

In troubled times, we all get a new sense of values. Such homely things as life insurance, telephone service, good food and good water—all seem closer to us than ever before.

Your telephone, for example, is always a true servant. It helps you work. It helps you play. It helps you earn money. It helps you to make and keep friends. In fact, nearly every part of your daily life is influenced and assisted by your telephone. In good times or bad times, its worth never changes. Nothing can take its place.

It is very, very difficult, indeed, to place a value on so true a friend as your telephone.

The year's at the Spring
And day's at the morn;
Morning's at seven;
The hillside's dew pearled;
The lark's on the wing;
The snail's on the thorn;
God's in his heaven, —
All's right with the world!

Browning.
We have not got all of the things
Robert Browning lists in his little weather poem here in Illinois, but Spring's here, nevertheless.

Farmers are in the fields sowing oats. Housewives are gardening.
Vacant lots are being plowed.
Folks say: "Will you need any seed potatoes this year?" Garden seeds are displayed wherever you look in the stores.

April is here, Spring weather is seasonable now and may stay with us.

Several days this week were very windy. It seemed as if all of the campaign arguments were wafted in one direction and what a wind it made!

It really seems that the more legislation that they pass down at Washington, the lower prices of farm products go. Speaker Garner is trying to find some money to pay the debts that the Republican Hoover administration has incurred.
Before he gets done with his job the G. O. P. will blame all of the debts on him.

Sullivan shoe makers were paid
$6,505.30 this week. We were in a city of about 30,000 recently. A merchant there told us: "$6,500 is bigger than the weekly payroll of any factory operating here." Do we Sullivan folks really, fully appreciate what the factory has meant to us during this day of depression and calamity howling?

And in connection herewith, let us repeat: Sullivan merchants, owners of home-owned stores,
made the donations to the factory fund that made it possible for the factory to be built here. Without the aid of the Sullivan merchants there would be no factory, no payroll, no jobs. Chain stores contributed nothing, whatever. Is there such a thing as gratitude and fairness among the factory workers? Let us hope so.

dates for delegates in this district asking them who their second choice is for president; if they are elected. There are five candidates.
Three have replied. We'll publish their replies next week. People are entitled to this information so they can vote intelligently.

Our old friend Jim Reeves of Champaign paid us a pleasant visit a few minutes ago. He keeps in touch with what's going on in Moultrie county by reading The Progress each week. Mr. Reeves used to be in the Legislature. He was instrumental in getting Moultrie county many of its hard roads.
Then he got ambitious and wanted to go to the Senate. Old Uncle Henry Dunlap beat him for the nomination. Then he tried to go back to the legislature, two years later, but failed of nomination by a very small margin. This year he is again a candidate. Jim's a Republican, but since we are going to send two Republicans anyway (thanks to the lay-down of our Democratic senatorial committee) this man Reeves deserves consideration. He's not a grandstander but a go-getter.

This weather column is not intended for the purpose of giving political boosts, but Mr. Reeves came in too late for us to find any other place for his stuff. This weather report is about the final thing that's written for the paper.

The sun is bright; the air is crisp and cool. Don't forget to go to the polls Tuesday to vote for highway commissioner.

James 1:6 "For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed."

Our text is dealing with the doubter, with that one who is uncertain through lack of wisdom.
God never intended that we should be uncertain, he invites us, if we lack wisdom, to come to him and ask, assuring us that he giveth to all men liberally. In our uncertainty we are driven and tossed just like the waves of the sea. What becomes of the waves of the sea? They eventually they arrive at some rock-bound shore where they are annihilated, their identity lost.
There is no come back. Another tragedy of the waves is, they cause many a wreck to those who sail the seas, as wavering Christians on the sea of time, if we could see as God sees would we find the sea covered with wreckage of human souls that had been swept off their true course and wrecked because of our wavering? If we waver, how long ere we too are driven onto some rock-bound coast and annihilated against the rocks of doubt and unbelief?
