ED C. BRANDENBURGER, PUBLISHER

SULLIVAN, ILLINOIS, FRIDAY, APRIL 13, 1934

78TH YEAR NO. 15

WEATHER

Wednesday morning when the writer awoke from a few hours of sleep, shook his drowsy head and remembered that he had been beaten in the election Tuesday, he took a look at the weather and found that Spring had had a relapse.

Biting March winds had replaced the nice weather of election day. Overcoats were again in order and the fellows who had put out tomato plants were sadly worried.

The nesting birds looked ruffled and peevish. Neighbors wore overcoats and caps while scratching in their chilly looking gardens.

Ah Spring, where hast thou gone? Hurry back and quit your foolin'.

That same Wednesday morning we wrote an editorial telling about our friend Hugh M. Rigney and also about Francis E. Williamson. We thought they were both nominated. Williamson was not. Rigney was. The other successful nominee may be Ed Sturdyvin, although kind friends tell us there is still hope.

Mrs. Jim Smith Died Suddenly Thurs. Afternoon

Mrs. J. H. Smith died suddenly at about 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

She suffered a stroke of apoplexy or heart disease as she was calling Dr. Kilton. She had made the connection and started talking when the doctor heard her drop the receiver and she was breathing very heavily. Central said "Doctor, did you hear that? It came from Jim Smith's home." He rushed to the house. The door was locked. It took about ten minutes to gain entrance. She sat slumped on the telephone seat, dead.

Freesh Wins For Sheriff; Lowe, Treas.

In Legislative Race Brandenburg Loses by Narrow Margin and Rigney and Sturdyvin Appear to be Successful Candidates. Lansden Wins Sheriff Nomination.

In Tuesday's primary Clarke Lowe was nominated for treasurer and Russell Freesh for sheriff. Both had substantial majorities.

In the race for the Legislative nominations, late unofficial reports show that Brandenburg lost by the narrow margin of 67 votes and that the nominees are Hugh M. Rigney of Arthur and E. E. Sturdyvin of Champaign.

The vote by counties was as follows:

Moultrie—Rigney 3325; Brandenburg 3188; Garvin 262; Sturdyvin 265; Williamson 361. Champaign—Rigney 2915; Brandenburg 2546; Garvin 1666

CLARKE LOWE

Sturdyvin 6934; Williamson 5295. Piatt—Rigney 2232; Brandenburg 1757; Garvin 370; Sturdyvin 359; Williamson 497.

Totals—Rigney 8472; Brandenburg 7491; Garvin 2298; Sturdyvin 7558; Williamson 6153.

The returns show that in Moultrie county the voters heeded the request to split their votes and give each candidate 13, instead of plumping and giving one of the Moultrie candidates the advantage

Relief Activities In Moultrie County

NEW CWES PROJECT

Inasmuch as the CWES project providing a class in Civics did not meet with sufficient response in all parts of the County, a new project is being planned to take its place. This project will provide classes in art, handicraft and decoration in the five communities which already have successful evening classes in community singing—Bethany, Dalton City, Gays, Lovington and Sullivan.

It is thought that probably these classes can best be held in afternoon. There will be no fees for the classes, and the work will be planned to accord with the desires of the members of the class. Similar CWES classes have aroused much enthusiasm in Decatur and other communities.

Registration blanks for these classes may be secured from the relief office, or from Mrs. Grace Richardson. The blanks when filled out should be returned to the relief office by April 18.

PROGRESS OF GARDEN WORK

The Moultrie County Garden Committee met Tuesday afternoon April 10 for a report on the progress of the garden program for relief clients. Members present were Mrs. Dorothy Jensen, chairman, H. P. Erwin, secretary, John N. Johnson, garden director and E. E. Hamblin. J. L. Mayes of Dalton City was unable to attend.

A letter has recently been sent to all relief clients explaining that seeds and fertilizer will be furnished for community garden plots only in Lovington and Sullivan. This is because it has been found that subsistence gardens in community plots with closer supervision make much better yields than back yard gardens. The supply of garden seeds and fertilizer is limited, but it is expected there will be some of each left for at least part of the clients in townships where there are no community plots. These supplies will be distributed to clients who have a plot of land about 50x100 feet for families of one to five or 50x150 feet for families of six or more. Such plots will be measured and staked off by the garden director, who will assist these gardeners also by giving them the plan for planting and visiting the gardens from time to time.

Relief clients in communities where such a program has been carried out have been very enthusiastic about it, for it gives the man work to do which will help him to help himself and his family. It gives the family a wide variety of vegetables at practically no expense, so that other needed foods may be bought on the grocery order. Meetings will be held soon at Lovington and at Sullivan so that clients in those townships may learn more about the program and may sign up for their gardens. These meetings are planned for

The Editor's Chair

He hath turned aside my ways, and pulled me in pieces; he hath made me desolate.—Lamentations.

What is defeat? — Nothing but education; nothing but the first step to something better.—Wendell Phillips.

There are some men who naturally could not recognize a "gentlemen's agreement" if they came face to face with it. The reason is plain.

It is the contest that delights us, not the victory.—Pascal

The Builders

An old man going a lone highway,
Came at the evening cold and gray
To a chasm vast and deep and wide
The old man crossed in the twilight dim,
The sullen stream had no fear for him.
But he paused when safe on the other side
And built a bridge to stem the tide.

"Old Man," said a fellow pilgrim near,
"You are wasting your strength building here,
Your journey will end with the closing day,
You never again shall pass this way.
You've crossed the chasm deep and wide,
Why build you this bridge at ev'n tide?"

The builder lifted his old gray head,
"Good friend, in the path I've come," he said,
"There followeth after me today,
A youth whose feet must pass this way.
This chasm that's been as naught to me
To that fair-haired youth may a pitfall be;
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim.
Good friend, I'm building this bridge for him."

An Editor's Ambition -- Side-Tracked.

Thanks to you Moultrie friends. Also to you loyal Democrats of Piatt County.

You certainly stood by Rigney and Brandenburger most faithfully in Tuesday's Legislative primary fight.

As this is being written early Wednesday morning, indications are that the Legislative nominees are going to be F. E. Williamson of Champaign county and Hugh M. Rigney of Moultrie county. Later returns may change this, but we doubt it.

If these two men have received the nominations, the voters can get back of them wholeheartedly and elect them next fall. Both are good men, well qualified to represent the district at Springfield.

The old "Gentlemen's agreement" of many years standing will, of course, have gone into the discard. This agreement was a good working proposition in the years when the Democrats were in the minority and but one candidate nominated. With excellent prospects for electing two Democratic representatives next fall, it would have been folly to have nominated only one candidate this year.

Naturally I feel very grateful for the splendid support accorded me in Moultrie. I also feel gratified to know that my friends here in Sullivan and elsewhere in the county, heeded my request to split their votes 50-50 and give Mr. Rigney the same support they accorded me. This request was made in all sincerity and my friends seem to have accepted it in that spirit, as the returns will show.

It is also a matter of pride that efforts made by some of our prominent and illustrious Sullivan citizens in behalf of Mr. Sturdyvin came to so inglorious an ending. It may have influenced a few family groups but in the final result the total was very small.

The campaign was a pleasure. Being associated with Mr. Rigney in a co-operative vote getting proposition was a pleasure. Our newspaper friends, regardless of political affiliation treated us royally.

We sympathize with our friends who are disappointed. We just can not feel very much upset about the matter. We have a good job publishing The Progress and perhaps it was folly to branch out and be too ambitious.

To the winners we extend our congratulations and we assure them that we will give our very best effort through The Progress and as an individual voter and worker in the party ranks to insure their election next November.

This district deserves to have two Democratic representatives at Springfield. We have always contended and fought for this and we are ready to continue the battle.

And so, good folks again many thanks. Now we will have to get busy and gather in a few dollars to pay the bills.

Free Newspaper Space Burglars.

You folks who doubt the value of advertising in a mere weekly newspaper would be surprised if you could see the average editor's mail for just a week or two.

The clever and persistent assaults made by big manufacturers to try to get some mention into the papers without paying for it, are an assurance that weekly newspaper publicity is very much worth while.

The average editor has his suspicions when some feature, cut or article is offered to him for "your exclusive use in your city. This is offered free of charge with our compliments. Please send copy of paper in which you use it."

Sometimes it is like solving a puzzle to find out the motive back of such a gift. There always is one. Nobody gives the newspapers anything, as a gift.

Recently a "Bird Lovers Club" sent in an article telling how to fix bird houses and how to place them. A peculiarly shaped syrup-can was "nigger in the woodpile" and the object back of this "Lovers" raid was to advertise the syrup of the manufacturer who used that particular type of can.

Then along comes a cartoon showing why oil should be bought in containers. The Ford Motor Company which has not spent 50c in this town for about a year, sends its weekly news contributions telling about Henry Ford's labor ideas and his cars. The Pontiac people also keep bombarding the newspapers for free publicity, without putting one dollar in to the till. Practically all automobile manufacturers feel that their activities are news and try to pry them into the weekly newspapers.

Bankers Associations furnish free "boiler plate" advertising their views. Medical and Dental professions, which abhor paid advertising, have devised some ways of jimmying their way into a slice of free publicity. Canners and packers are liberal, indeed, with their contributions of free "boiler plate" (a trade name for articles already set in type and decorated with cuts) and many newspapers are inveigled into using this trash.

The flow of this sort of free publicity stuff never ceases. Uncle Sam, himself, through his various departments joins in the parade and the publishers generously give him a hand-out once in a while.

We have lately adopted a formula for treatment of the free publicity pirates. It costs us money for postage to do this, but we generally send the stuff back, first class, after writing on it something like this:

"Another raid for free publicity. Why mooch off the weekly papers? Stop these lousy tactics and pay for what you want. You will greatly please us by taking the name of The Progress off your sucker list."

A Candidate On Election Day.

How does a candidate feel on election day? I have often wondered about this. Here it is election day and I'm a candidate, so I will sort of back off and take a look at myself, my feelings, hopes, etc.

"How are yuh runnin'?" is a question asked by everybody. The answer obviously is "I don't know." There are so many angles to be taken into consideration. Good friends stop me on the street and say: "I gave you three votes, even if you said to split 'em" to which I can but reply, "You did not vote the way I asked you to."

"Whatcher payin' for votes now?" is asked in a good-natured way by some, who would feel insulted if anybody had the nerve to offer them any pay.

Analyzing my own feelings — all I can say is they are hopeful. Whether that hope is founded on a good basis of fact or on a mere delusion, you'll see by referring to the returns on page 1.

I've been putting in a good part of the day working here at my desk in my office. The paper must go on. Perhaps tomorrow, I will not feel so good. If it so happened that I did get beat, I can assure all of my very friendliest feelings — I will help elect my victorious opponents and I certainly thank those who voted for me.

Those friends whom I have helped in the past and who saw fit to work and vote against me this time — well, that too was their privilege. You must never look for gratitude in politics. If you do, you will get a fooling.

On this Tuesday, during the noon hour, while this is being written, I'm still a candidate. My temperature and blood pressure is normal, I'm not excited. I've just eaten a good meal. Friends have been in to encourage me.

Tonight I will help take in the returns. That is always the most interesting part of a campaign or an election. It is doubtful whether the Legislative returns tonight will be sufficient to show who is nominated and who is not.

I have no regrets at entering the race. I have made many nice contacts with people whom I met while rambling around. I do not know whether I have analyzed how a candidate feels on election day, but I honestly believe none of them ever are the harried, nervous, high-tension humans that most people pity and some few jeer at. And so, in patience and hopefulness I await the result.

"You'll be better off if you get licked" says a friend. Maybe so. Time will tell.

WHAT DOES A $40,000,000 INVESTMENT LOOK LIKE?

An investment of more than forty million dollars will be represented in the 1934 World's Fair at Chicago, according to the April issue of the Illinois Central Magazine. More than fifty of last year's structures have been torn down, and approximately $5,000,000 is being spent building new ones and remodeling old.

Last year's Midway will become an Avenue of Nations, with reproductions of foreign villages on both sides, and the new Midway will be along the boardwalk near the bathing beach. Spectacular water displays and colored light affects are being arranged.

The opening date of the 1934 fair has been advanced to May 26 for the convenience of visitors planning to spend the Memorial week-end in Chicago. The railroads again will participate extensively, both by having exhibits and by offering attractive fares.

Sunday School Lesson

by Rev. Charles E. Dunn

Jesus Teaches Forgiveness.
Lesson for April 15th: Matt. 18: 15-35.

Golden Text: Matthew 6:12.

Peter thought, no doubt, that he was extremely generous in suggesting that forgiveness be multiplied seven times. The common rule was "Forgive three times but not the fourth."

Jesus, however, with a handsome gesture of spiritual imagination, dispensed with petty, arithmetical calculation, and proclaimed the principle of unlimited reconciliation. "Not seven times over, I tell you, but seventy-seven times over!" And then, to reinforce this advice, He narrated the picturesque parable of the unmerciful servant, notable for its sharp contrast between unusual generosity and shabby illiberality. Here is a king whose servant owed him the impossible sum of ten million dollars. Of course he could not pay, so his master ordered him, his family and all his property to be sold for part payment. But the slave pleaded against this decree so imploringly that the monarch's heart was touched, and he cancelled the debt. Immediately, however, the servant met a fellow-slave who owed him a paltry $20. Seizing him by the throat, and almost choking him, he demanded instant reimbursement. Naturally the king, when the news reached him, was very angry and threw the impudent fellow into jail.

It may be objected that the parable is an over-statement, and therefore not a real transcript of actual life. It must be granted that the unmerciful servant is an exceptional case. Nevertheless he does exist. Here is a business man who pleads with his creditors for more lenient terms, but makes no concessions whatever to his debtors.

Obviously the central point of this famous tale is that it is sinful to cultivate an unforgiving spirit. Now it is quite customary for folk to cherish a grudge, or resent an insult. Many a person has not spoken to his next door neighbor for years because of some trivial altercation or imaginary affront. All such need to ponder upon the meaning of this searching parable.

Don't Get Excited

H. S. Butler

I know it does not pay us
To get riled up and stew,
And fret about some matter
'Till we don't know what we do.

Oftentimes within an hour
After we're perturbed,
We don't know what the trouble was
Why we were so disturbed.

Then think of all the fretting
Of the useless mental strain,
That we've gone thru in anguish
And not a thing, to gain.

When things occur that vex us
When we begin to boil,
If we'll only just be calm
The trouble we will foil.

If you'll just stop and think
From experiences you've had,
You know no human being
Is at himself, when mad.

Then wouldn't it be grand
If all of us could stay,
In a happy frame of mind
On each and every day?

Then most the biting stories
That so frequently, you hear,
Could never be repeated
For they'd never first appear.

REGISTER IF YOU SEEK TO BE COMMISSIONER

So numerous are the applications for the office of highway commissioner, to fill the unexpired term of Postmaster-designate Clarence Miller, when, and if, he resigns, that the town board has made a ruling that all who want to be considered for this office must file a written application with Town Clerk George A. Roney. Printed blanks for this purpose can be secured from Mr. Roney.

Do Not Harm Our Children

I have been asked to write something about the school propositions to be voted on next Saturday. I do not believe that argument is necessary. I have lived in Sullivan for fifty years and all that time I have been deeply interested in our schools. I remember several important elections when the welfare of the schools was involved and I cannot recall a single instance when a good school proposition was defeated.

We are all enlisted in what Walt Whitman called "The Grand Old Cause" which he defined as "The Freedom and Progress of the Race." But Freedom depends on enlightenment and security or safety; and these cannot be promoted without the proper care, development and training of children. But why discuss a proposition that no one is foolish enough to dispute? The people of Sullivan will now, as they have always done in the past, continue to give adequate support to our schools.

We all know that our school enrollment has been increasing while the school revenue has diminished. This cannot go on without doing great harm—without robbing our children of their American birthright — a fair start in the race of life.

I am sure that we shall meet the issue by voting needed aid to the schools—by voting "Yes" on both propositions to be submitted.

I. J. Martin.

"Use that spade a little faster" said foreman Scott Myers to one of his CWA workers, "Just look at Joe, he's shoveled out a pile or dirt twice as big as yours."

'Tis said a young man of this city has a "Hope chest". It is not one of the kind girls have. He has a chronic chest weakness and he hopes to marry some girl who will help him take care of his chest.

"My daughter" said the proud man, "is fitted to command in the battle of life."

"How do you figure that?" "Why the dear girl has been in six engagements, two alienation fights, two breach of promise battles and three divorce scraps."

Every weekly newspaper man has one fond hope: That some day advertising and job printing will come to him in sufficient quantity, so that he can devote all of his time to editing the paper. When that hope is realized, there will be a 200% improvement in weekly newspapers.

One thing that is going to cause difficulty in Relief and Code work is that every one thinks that such government regulations are for the benefits of his own little group.

An artist came to town and looked around for likely subjects whose pictures he might paint. He approached Tenny Bolin, a mutual insurance magnate:

"Mr. Bolin" said he, "You are prominent in this city and I would like to paint you."

"Paint me?" said Tenny. "Yes, you. How about it. Can you give me some time to do the job?"

"Well, this may be some new-fangled stunt" said Tenny, "But how am I going to get the paint off me, when you're done?"

"I've driven that car 6 years and never had a wreck", the high school boy boasted to his sweetie to which she replied: "You are mistaken. You have driven a wreck 6 years and never had a car."

Illinois Blue Book Is Filled With Much Interesting Information

Through the courtesy of Edward J. Hughes, secretary of state, The Progress is in receipt of a 1933-34 copy of the Illinois Blue Book. This book is a present day story of the state of Illinois as it enters its 116th year of statehood. It is a very elaborate compendium of information of the state of Illinois, beginning with acquisition of title back in the days when the Indians were dispossessed. It contains the Constitution of 1870 and titles of amendments thereto.

Excellent pictures of President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner and the Illinois state officials and directors of departments appear, with biographical sketches of each. The Code departments of the government are listed, and the officials in charge of the respective departments.

The handsome visage of the senior senator, James Hamilton Lewis smiles at you from its pages and next there comes the dignified and rather austere looking Senator Dieterich, followed by the members of Congress including, of course, our Hon. D. C. Dobbins. The pictures of the members of the General Assembly and State Senate with short biographical sketches also appear.

The book lists the new laws of recent sessions of the Legislature and gives the names of their sponsors.

A rather elaborate part of the book is devoted to the Century of Progress and Illinois' participation in that festival which held forth in Chicago last year and will again open its doors to the world this coming May.

Under the Activities of State Departments appear articles prepared by heads of the respective departments or their assistants.

Walter W. McLaughlin tells of the state's Agricultural program in its many ramifications which include the annual State Fair.

The "State's Outlay for Schools, Wise Investment for the Future of Illinois" is presented by Francis G. Blair, the state superintendent. W. F. Fairchild, President of the Illinois State Normal University writes of "Illinois State Normal Reveals Steady Growth since 1857." The other Normal presidents also comment on this phase of Illinois Educational activities.

"Economic Problems of Illinois' Fields, Forests and Streams" are explained in a story by Theodore H. Frison, chief of the State Natural History Survey. Arthur M. Buswell comments on Illinois State Water Survey.

Cold hard figures on state finance are always interesting and when State Treasurer John C. Martin tells that the State of Illinois closed its 1933 books with a balance of $34,771,323.45, the people will know that that office has been well managed in recent years.

The book contains valuable information relative to road building, state parks, National Guard, Aviation, State Library, Public Welfare, the State Health Department, Stream Sanitation, the new Civil Practice Act in courts, etc.

In tabulated form it presents election figures of recent years. It also gives the census for 1930 and names of present county and city officials and Farm Advisers.

In a short review, such as this, it is impossible to tell of all of the interesting things in this new Blue Book, the most comprehensive and elaborate, ever produced by the state. It will be a valuable addition to The Progress Library in which now are most of the State Blue books of recent years.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

C. E. Barnett, Pastor

In a conversation with Superintendent Gerold Elder Sunday evening, he made a proposal that almost stumped us for a moment, but after due thought we said, "we're for it, it can be done." It was—no, we will wait and let him tell you all about it Sunday. It's his suggestion and you'll want to get the information first hand, so be on time at Sunday School next Sunday at 9:30 a. m.

Last Sunday's church services were well attended and we bespeak a continuation of interest and attendance. Sermons will be delivered by the pastor at the usual hours 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. If we knew what the subjects are to be we would state them, but frankly speaking, we do not know today (Monday). Come to church on the Lord's Day. The sermon is a minor part of worship.

Christian Endeavor will be led by Gerold Elder. The subject, (named a year in advance by the International committee of Endeavor) will be "The Place of Prayer in Christian Living." With several regulars absent last Sunday evening, there was an increase in attendance and there's still room for many more. The young people of the church are cordially invited to make this society fully their own. Come at 6:30 each Sunday evening.

The East Central District Convention will be held in Robinson May 10 and 11. Plan early and attend.

A call is issued for every one who can do so to attend the Foster-Arterburn-Owings-Armstrong revival at the Christian church in Mattoon Friday evening, April 13, 7:30 p. m. Let us repay their earlier visit to the Sullivan revival with a large delegation.

Your absence from church is a vote to close its doors. Go to church and vote for the open door.

THE GOSPEL MISSION

Over Post Office.

Time of services the same.

If you are not in Sunday School come, take part in ours which all present seem to enjoy.

Ps. 23:2 "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters."

The first thing I see in this text is, the assurance of perfect peace. When the sheep is at all frightened or troubled or hungry it does not lie down. Only when its hunger has been satisfied, and all elements of fear removed does the sheep lie down. Does our Great Shepherd have a like experience for us? He surely does.

The next thing I see in the verse is Harmony. "Beside the still waters." Water is sometimes used in the scripture as a symbol of the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of Peace. He is the still waters. Might we not also think of water as a type of the evil spirit, the disquieted, troubled, restless spirit. Does not the privilege of being led into the fellowship of the peaceful spirit appeal to you very much these days? There is so much lack of harmony in things today, so much strife and discord, but we are assured that our Shepherd will lead us beside the still waters where harmony prevails. Is it possible amid all the troubles and distress of life today? Yes, it is very possible.

—Mrs. Roland Hackett returned to her home in Chicago Friday after spending several weeks at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Elvira Stricklan.

—Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Finley spent Sunday evening at the home of their son George Finley and family.

—Mrs. Grace Pence visited at the home of her brother Dan Moore at Charleston, Sunday. Mr. Moore is seriously ill.

—Mrs. Tom Frantz and daughter Diamond visited at the home of Mrs. Logan Bathe Tuesday.

F. I. C. Health Audit April 14-28

The Friends in Council club under the direction of Mrs. Clyde Harris, chairman of the Health department, will sponsor a Health Audit between the dates of April 14th and April 28th.

Owing to the splendid co-operation of our local physicians, club members or their families may have a complete physical examination during the two weeks above mentioned for $1.50. This examination ordinarily costs from $15.00 to $25.00.

All the members need do is to go to their own family doctor and have a physical examination for themselves or members of their family and report to either the club president or Mrs. Harris.

This is a very outstanding Health program and while it is being stressed over the State, yet so far as we know Friends in Council is the first to start this movement.

All members are urged to avail themselves of this opportunity.

Softball Season Starts May 3
A joint meeting of committees from the high school and village board met in the town hall Thursday night to thrash out the softball situation. It was decided that the season would be opened on the night of May 3 and the following suggestions, subject to approval of respective boards were made. Soft ball games will begin at 8 p. m. two nights each week, namely on Monday and Thursday. Each player will register at the Echo office on or before Saturday, April 21, paying 50 cents for expenses. Two leagues, one for young men and one for older men, will be formed with four or more teams in each league. No admission fee at games. A free will offering will be taken when necessary. Bliss Schwartz to be chairman of players' committee to schedule games and receive registration. Draw names of 15 men for each team from registrants. Teams will name own captain.

Stolen Car Returned
An old model Chevrolet coupe which Thursday night was stolen from Elmer DeBruler's garage was found in Mattoon the following day. The thieves had deserted it early that morning after an unsuccessful attempt to rob a Mattoon store. An Oakland which the lawbreakers had abandoned in an alley near DeBruler's home was found to be a stolen auto.

Kelly Lineup an Uncertainty
The Kelly Construction Co., is now in full swing on its job of grading the south road preparatory to graveling and workers are being hired and fired with amazing rapidity. One fellow was on and off the payroll four times in a two-day span. All the laborers are either truck or mule drivers and if they prove inefficient they are dismissed in a very casual manner and a new recruit is yanked in from a gallery of aspirants along the sidelines.

The workers are selected from those registered at the employment office in Sullivan. It is generally understood hereabouts that Elmer DeBruler is the gentleman who says who shall and who shall not have jobs.

All school children of Bethany and surrounding localities were corralled in the Methodist church Tuesday for Schick diphtheria test. Two members of the grade school's cage team, Don Davison and Jean Schwartz, swooned as their arms were pricked. Don in fact, executed a full nose dive with resultant floor burns across his face.

When Senator Clifford failed to support Gov. Horner's school bill the Governor, in turn, booted Clifford's appointees off the payroll. Among those dismissed was Kent Williamson of Bethany, who was reinstated when he pointed out that his appointment came not through Clifford.

George Reuss Routed 91 to 33
Tuesday's primary election revealed that Geo. Reuss, for many years the power behind the Marrowbone Democratic organization, is all washed up as far as politics is concerned. Considered immovable as a precinct committeeman, he was blasted out by Dale Snyder, one of these tall, handsome fellows, by a vote of 91 to 33. For south precinct committeeman, Andrew Gough, a farmer who swears by his Progress, upset Don Goetz, 87 to 68.

But Reuss' greatest humiliation came when, after having thrown his "forces" against Editor Brandenburger, he read these final statistics: Rigney 295, Brandenburger 278, Garvin 123, Williamson 103 and Sturdyvin 3.

The Demos here were all in favor of Fresh for sheriff, giving him 165 votes, Ashbrook 17, Fleming 28, Garrett 5 and Pifer 24. Clarke Lowe drew 142 votes to Lane's 88.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

BY JIM SCOTT

The baseball bug, abuzz in the neighboring localities, has not yet alighted in Sullivan. The Indians is the only club now organized, and their pilot, George Elder, has waived on a chance to matriculate in the Illini league. So now with the better Decatur nines tied up on their own loop, Mr. Elder is not likely to schedule the loss of competition so desired by his clientele.

Many are the advantages of playing league ball. In the first place, the customers will know from Sunday to Sunday just whom their favorites are battling; too, they will rest assured that the opposition will not fail to show up for their date.

Shrewd managers could capitalize on the natural rivalry prevalent between such towns as Bethany and Sullivan and by the use of ballyhoo reap themselves a nice slice of cash for their undertaking. One reason, please, why enthusiasm and crowds cannot be brought to a meeting between the baseballers of such towns just the same as it is brought to prep cage skirmishes.

One method of stimulating interest in league ball is found when the home town paper carries from week to week the standings of the clubs. "Yeh," remarks Jones, "if Mattoon wins today they will hit the .500 mark for the first time." "And Dalton can go into first place," rejoins Smith, "if they win while Charleston is losing."

The regular attendants would soon familiarize themselves with the circuit's personnel. Sure, they would learn that Sandy Thompson is a sucker for a sharp breaking out, and that they may hoot such colorful personalities as enormous Amos (Shorty) Hale without laying themselves open to a nose punching in return.

Well, the Illini leaguers felt they could struggle along without Sullivan representation and went ahead to organize a likely looking six-club league and are now bidding their time until the opening date. The following are the entries: Mattoon, Dalton, Bethany, Charleston, Elwin and Macon.

It's downright pathetic that Sullivan, geographically located in the heart of the circuit, isn't entering a contender. I wonder if Master Kohlhauff of the Brown Shoe factory likes hardball? From his hundreds of subordinates he could pull out a competent manager and a group of players to carry Sullivan's colors into the aforementioned league.

E. G. Brands, one of the leading baseball authorities of the day has selected Pittsburg and Washington to win the pennants and the two Philadelphia teams to finish last in their respective leagues. He shoved the Giants down to third place and to that opinion most of us can say amen in view of the livelier ball which should offset the Terrymen's hurling advantage.

The Giants, it seems depend almost entirely on pitching, and will not benefit by the livelier ball, for Terry and Ott are their only long distance hitters.

But Mr. Brands, whatever made you think Detroit would wind up in second place?

Recently when 174 of the leading baseball writers of the country voted on the probable outcome of the flag races a few of the scribes thought that such outfits as the Phillies, Dodgers and White Sox would cop a pennant. But not one of them gave Cleveland a first place vote.

Don Heffner and Red Wolfe, the Yankees brand new keystone combination, are products of the International league, having played on the Baltimore and Newark teams respectively.

They say that Rolfe, a husky fellow, is chain lightning on his foot, a powerful slugger and a natural-born infielder with big hands and a marvelous throwing arm. Last year he was voted the most valuable player in the International loop.

The Sporting News describes Heffner as another Johnny Evers, being a smart leadoff man, a fast runner and a sharp, keen hitter.

Saltgaver has been occupying the Yankee's third base of late but it is the writer's opinion that he will give way to Lazerri once the season is underway. Saltgaver along with Crosetti will probably be carried as infield reserves while the totuted Lyn Lary should be drifting back to the minors.

Chapman, of course, has an outfield post cinched while Walker and Combs have not yet settled their centerfield dispute. Byrd and Hoag will vie for suty when the aging Bambino is unable to perform.

You have doubtlessly noticed that those two minor league fence-busters Joe Hauser and Buzz Arlett—did their deadly business with the Baltimore club and hence tied them up with a restricted playground. And such was the case, both having parked their drives over a short right field wall.

This spring the club altered the situation by building a wire fence, 30 feet high, from the center field bleachers across to the foul line.

Grounders—Scotty Reston, the Cincinnati Reds' publicity man, was a University of Illinois golf star two years ago. . . . Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is shooting a film on the life of John McGraw with Wallace Berry taking the role of the deceased Giant leader. . . . Claude Wheeler in his day could toss all and sundry when it came to wrestling. Today he has a parallel in Alec (Ajax) Mitchell of Bethany, who weighs only around 145. . . . If some local man promoter was on the search of a natural he would have only to pit young Mitchell against Johnny McDonald. . . .

Pittsburg's Arky Vaughan should prove one of the best clubbers in the senior circuit this summer. . . . Haarry Lavagetto, the second sacker whom the Pirate procured from Oakland of the Coast league, is but 20 years old. . . . Allan Strange the Browns' new shortstop, is playing under the man who was his boyhood hero—Rogers Hornsby. . . . Strange is a former Philly batboy. . . . Al Lopez, the pride of the so-called Flatbush fumbler, draws $12,000 per annum. . . .

Milt Boeck of the White Sox, whose home is in Cicero, performed last year on the Wisconsin university nine. . . . This column would like a letter from Pete McDavid. . . . There are 44 collegians wearing National league livery. . . . An inexperienced hurling corps has lengthened the odds against an Athletic comeback. . . .

Mattoon has already sold well over $1,000 worth of football tickets for next fall. . . . This money will serve as part of a fund on a Federal project to build permanent bleachers. . . . All is not peaches and cream for the prep coach. . . . Last year Nick Carter of Tuscola received a yearly salary of $3,000; this year he will receive a check for less than half that amount. . . . Not that it makes any difference but Babe Ruth uses an entire bottle of catsup on his steak.

There are several cases of measles here.

Helen Ashcraft spent the week in Mattoon with her sister.

At this time there was an ocean of flame over the whole city. Great egg-shaped masses of fire, looking like escaped balloons, soared here and there spreading the contagion. Long billows of fire submerged whole squares of brick and stone buildings as waves run over little hills of sand; when they subsided

When Chicago Burned

(Condensed from "The Tale of Chicago" by Edgar Lee Masters.)

Chicago in 1871 presented a splendid appearance. But outside of a few of its 59,500 buildings, the town for the most part was flimsily built of combustible pine. The imposing marble fronts of some of the houses were only thin veneers. The towers of Gothic churches sometimes toppled over, being made of tin. Pine and putty were used to form Corinthian columns. With huge piles of lumber and coal stacked along both sides of the Onion River, with its acres of frame buildings and miles of wooden sidewalks, Chicago was defenseless before the threat of fire. Moreover, the rainfall of that summer was less than 30% of the average for Chicago, and for long months the hot southwest winds had swept over the city from the prairies. The water-works and fire department were woefully inadequate as the city grew toward 300,000 population. All was in readiness, then, for the Great Fire of October eighth and ninth; but it was preceded on the seventh by a fire which struck consternation in the hearts of Chicago, — a fire that destroyed nearly four city blocks.

A day later, at 9:25 on the night of October eighth, the first impish twinkle of flame in the hay of Patrick O'Leary's barn, just north of the river, was seen by a passing drayman. In five minutes, Taylor Street, one block north, began to blaze. At the start, the firemen saw that they could scarcely cope with the flames. For no sooner was an engine placed in a favorable place than the fire broke out furiously in another spot. Then the firemen had to shift their engines and follow the fire, while a tempest of heat roared around them. The frame buildings to the west, dry as tinder, soon leaped with flames, and with a sudden puff of wind, a curved wing of sullen red spread across the clouds and fell upon the South Side, where it began to send up sparks. The fire had thus crossed the river and was marching on to the great business blocks. Meanwhile a pyramid of flame piled itself with smoke high into the air; the showers of sparks rushed toward the northern sky, and settled everywhere like a swarm of fiery locusts. The roar of the conflagration deafened ears and the mounting glare blinded the eyes of the terrified beholders. The firemen might as well have contended with a tornado.

The flames now divided like attacking soldiers into columns. One column went down LaSalle Street, the other turned east and destroyed the Grand Pacific Hotel. Near by was the Federal Building which had $2,000,000 in coin and paper in the vaults. This was melted or whiffed away in ashes as the building crumbled to the ground. Large new hotels, never yet occupied, were consumed after being toppled over by the might of the hurricane. The Potter Palmer building, occupied by Marshall Field and for which he was paying the incredible rental of $52,000 a year, was transformed to gas and smoke and ashes. Hotels like the nine-story Palmer House and the seven-story Sherman House were filled with guests, and some of them on emerging into the panic-stricken streets lost their lives as they hurried along, dragging their baggage and possessions after them. Around them was the thunder of falling walls. And then the gas works exploded with the detonation of an awakened volcano. Besides these terrible sounds the noise of the crowds and of women screaming dwindled to a mere murmur.

Michigan Avenue was jammed with drays loaded with people trying to escape from the city. The sidewalks were crowded with men, women and children, all carrying articles of furniture or personal belongings. Horses neighed and ran loose. Dogs raced this way and that, howling their terror. Great rats left their holes under the sidewalks and scamped along the streets, kicked at and stepped upon by the hurrying crowds. And flocks of pigeons, that for so long had tenanted the cupola of the Court House, rose gracefully into the air and circled the doomed city amid the sparks, their wings turned to gold by the mounting glare.

The fire crossed easily to the North Side. It lapped up the warehouses along the river; it took McCormick's reaper works; it fluttered among the rigging of ships in the river and they sank in flames to the surface of the water. The North Side residents stampeded to the sands of the lake, to the prairie at the west, and to cemeteries where, amid the glowing headstones of the dead, they watched their city vanish.

At this time there was an ocean of flame over the whole city. Great egg-shaped masses of fire, looking like escaped balloons, soared here and there spreading the contagion. Long billows of fire submerged whole squares of brick and stone buildings as waves run over little hills of sand; when they subsided there was nothing left but ashes. Domes went into fragments like soap bubbles; marble walls curled up and fell like ignited sheets of cardboard. Finally, back on the square, the Court House capitulated. Its great bell, which had been ringing since the tragedy began fell with a reverberating last knell to the basement; and the fire played about the precious records of old Fort Dearborn and the first village.

People grew madder and madder. They crowded upon fences and high walks. The sidewalks were propped on rotten piles in places, and they fell beneath the weight of human beings covering upon them. People stumbled over furniture as they surged here and there in a panic of fear. The air was full of curses, shouts and prayers. Saloons were broken open and despoiled. Men in the spell of whiskey, haggard, collarless and blackened with smoke, glided through the masses, picking pockets. They broke the windows of stores unhindered and rifled the shelves and tills. Wagons piled with silks were driven off by thieves who had looted Field's store. Dead men were found with their pockets full of gold rings, buttons and jewels which they had stolen in vain. Prostitutes, with wide hollow eyes and faces made more evil by the shifting glow of the flames, moved about laughing, raving and shouting. On the South Side the fugitives from death huddled in the icy water of the lake with sparks and brands falling about them. Women shrieked as they were knocked down by robbers to take small bundles of clothing. Those who had means to escape by a hack were preyed upon without mercy, $10 being the smallest fee for the shortest journey.

The firemen, many of them exhausted from the day before, fought desperately, but the task was too much for human flesh.

Brands driven by the gale struck houses of brick, which ignited as if they were tinder. The streets were as light as noon, where thousands stood appalled at the grandeur of the scene, and stared transfixed at what was at once terrible and beautiful. In the Randolph Street neighborhood, a liquid hell swept along until an oil establishment took fire, when the flames shot up mountain-high and glared down upon the river. With this explosion the walls of the Nevada hotel fell in without a sound, as if they were the structure of a dream so great was the din by comparison. At the same time the Garden City House, one of the marvels of the city, spluttered like a box of matches, while its iron columns melted as if they were grease. Now there was a surging panic toward the Randolph Street bridge; and wagons, drays and carriages all crowded upon it, amid collisions and breakdowns, and unearthly shouts. . . .

In all this danger of flying brands, of frantic crowds which crushed upon the bridges, of houses which took suddenly afire, compelling their occupants to leave instantly, comparatively few persons lost their lives. The burned district covered an area of 1900 acres. Thirteen thousand buildings were destroyed. The total money loss was near $200,000,000 and nearly 100,000 people were rendered homeless.

The fire can scarcely be said to have been conquered; rather it grew tired and abandoned further devastation. When it was all over and only wreaths of smoke twisted here and there, and the smell of burnt cloth, wood and oil permeated the ruined streets, the city looked as if it had been exhumed from lava and ashes. Here a row of houses stood intact, even some shanties were left, and around them were whole blocks utterly devastated. This was the ruined city upon which the stillness of the setting sun rested on Tuesday evening, October tenth.

And now in the darkness a strange wickedness arose. Incendiaries crept in the alleys of the city. A boy was detected in the act of setting fire to a building, and he was instantly killed. A watchman shot and killed a man trying to fire a building on State Street. A woman, intercepted while applying a match to a barn was captured and about to be hanged, but she escaped. Another barn was found in flames, and a suspicious character on the premises was put to death at once. Tuesday morning an incendiary was discovered in the basement of a building on Fourth Avenue. He tried to escape, but was pursued by the crowd and stoned to death. A large drug store was set on fire, and tarred ropes and hay saturated with kerosene were found in some of the lumber yards by the river. Whether these atrocious acts proceeded from hate of Chicago, or out of insanity, no one can say.

Nor could investigators determine how the Great Fire itself had started. A stand lamp was found in the O'Leary barn whereof the glass globe which had contained the oil was broken. It was a sort of parlor lamp such as humble people use on their little stands where the family album is placed; and that was a strange lamp to take to the barn by which to milk the cow. At any rate, the story started and it has become the accepted myth that Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lamp while that woman was milking her, and that Chicago in consequence went up in smoke and flames.

The play "Here Comes Charlie" given by the High school Seniors Thursday night was well presented and drew a capacity house.

William McKown student of University of Illinois who came home to attend the funeral of his grandfather Wm. Kinsel returned to Champaign Monday.

Thousands have Ended their Bowel Worries

by taking this advice!

Can constipation be safely relieved? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say the many thousands who have followed their advice and know.

You are not likely to cure your constipation with salts, pills, tablets, or any of the habit-forming cathartics. But you can correct this condition by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

THE LIQUID TEST:

First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord.

Simple, isn't it? And it works! The right liquid laxative brings thorough bowel action without using force. An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as in the case of mineral drugs.

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. The dose can be measured, and the action controlled. Pills and tablets containing drugs of violent action are hard on the bowels.

If there are children in your household, don't give them any form of laxative, but use a healthful, helpful preparation like Syrup Pepsin. Its very taste will tell you it is wholesome, and agreeable to the stomach. Delightful taste, and delightful action; there is no discomfort at the time, or after. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, all ready to take.

THERE'S HOPE

The canvassing boards in Piatt and Champaign counties were busy Thursday. When the counting started Sturdyvin of Champaign had only 67 unofficial majority over Brandenburg, according to best available figures.

Reports had already been received from several precincts in Piatt county that mistakes had been made in counting the Legislative vote. Only two votes had been counted instead of 3. As the Piatt county vote was favorable to Rigney and Brandenburg, such mistakes may be sufficient to change the results. Several of Brandenburg's friends went to Piatt county Thursday morning to investigate. Should the final results hinge on the votes in these districts a recount may be asked to correct the errors made.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grider took the latter's mother, Mrs. Chas. Crowdon to Olney Saturday to consult some doctor. Mrs. Crowdon has been in poor health for some time.

At the THEATRE

This ought to be good—Edward Everett Horton and Edna May Oliver. The play is "Poor Rich" the time is Friday night and place The Grand theatre. With the two stars already mentioned appear Thelma Todd, Lelia Hyams, Andy Devine and others.

The play deals with depression hit millionaires who try to keep their chins up and entertain on nothing a year. It's a big bluff and it is loaded to the limit with laughs. What Manager Hays calls his "Hit No. 2" for the same night is "I believed in You", the stars of which are Rosemary Ames, Victor Jory and John Boles. Mr. Boles and Mr. Jory are well known to the picture-going world. Miss Ames is a new star. She is a Chicago girl who drifted to London in her stage work. It was so high class that Fox Films found her, offered her a contract, and brought her back to Hollywood.

Besides these two splendid pictures, there will appear a Travel-talk.

Saturday

We have described so many of these Westerns, that words fail us. We just simply can't rehash the same, hair-trigger thrill stuff from week to week, so we'll lay this time. Enough to say that Bob Steele does the heroics and the name is "Breed of the Border"; also Mickey McGuire, Cartoon and Serial.

Here Comes Harry Green

One of the five stars in Sunday and Monday's picture is Harry Green (Jack McLaughlin and lady friend are invited). Mr. Green is our favorite Jiddish comedian, barring only Eddie Cantor. Of course Mr. Green is not the shining star in "Coming Out Party" but he helps Frances Dee, Gene Raymond, Allison Skipworth, Negel Bruce and others put across a very nice show. There will also be comedy sketches, News and Cartoon. This is one of those unusually fine Sunday-Monday programs.

She died in "Little Women"

But that was only stage play, of course, so here comes "Beth", Jean Parker in another good production "Two Alone." With her are Tom Brown, Zasu Pitts and Arthur Byron. On Tuesday night when this show appears, Mr. Hays will also have an Ernest Truex comedy and a Scenic Novelty. Nearly everybody goes to The Grand on Tuesday nights, do you? (Harmon Baggett and lady friend are invited to see a show at The Grand).

A Bit O' Circus

Wednesday and Thursday night of next week will be out-standing even in Grand theatre attractions. There will be a special stage attraction, Dressen's Circus Revue. It will tickle those old friends of the circus and the young ones as well.

Here is the Big One

As a last spasm in this column we announce that "Ann Vickers" will be the feature picture Wednesday and Thursday night. This is based on best-seller story written by Red (Sinclair) Lewis of Sauk Center. Mr. Lewis has a way of telling interesting things about ordinary people. He does it so well, that he is perhaps the world's best known novelist at this time.

Ann Vickers is a very interesting story—not as raw perhaps as "Elmer Gantry" but it does very neatly portray a cross section of American life. Besides this excellent picture, in which Irene Dunne and Walter Huston star, there will be Hollywood on Parade and News events.

—Mrs. Maud Fultz of Villa Grove and Miss Edith Reed of Windsor visited Saturday with Mrs. Rose Bolin.

—Homer Butler of Hillsboro was a caller in Sullivan Saturday.

Wabash Continues Carrying The Mail

Once in a while the railroads get a "break."

Recently the Postal department took steps to institute a truck "Star" route between Effingham and Sullivan instead of having the mails carried by the Wabash railway.

Now while the Wabash Railway from Effingham to Bement is a rather modest affair insofar as its business is concerned, it is nevertheless a very important taxpayer in those counties that it traverses. The thought of losing Wabash taxes caused considerable worry and county boards, and commercial clubs got busy with a very strenuous protest. They contended and doubtless with good reason, that if the Wabash lost its mail contract, it could no longer operate and would ask leave to abandon the Effingham-Bement line and show cause for its request.

Latest reports say that the Postal Department has relented, called off its notice for star route bids, and will continue to ship mail via Wabash as heretofore.

Farm Bureau News

MARKETING CODES FAIL TO IMPROVE ALL DAIRY PRICES

Milk Marketing agreements alone will not solve the problem of raising the prices which farmers of Moultrie County and other counties of Illinois may obtain for their dairy products, says Farm Adviser J. H. Hughes, when commenting on the recently proposed AAA dairy production adjustment program.

It is true that marketing agreements will aid in stabilizing milk prices around the larger centers of population, and already 12 towns and cities are operating under codes in line with the new milk marketing policy adopted by the government's adjustment administration. However, it is generally admitted that milk marketing agreements, in themselves, are not enough.

"In the first place, only 30 per cent of the country's dairy farmers produce fluid milk," points out the extension service of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. Thus, less than a third of the dairy farmers can take advantage of milk marketing agreements, while more than two-thirds cannot. This same ratio of fluid milk producers to all dairymen also applies in Illinois.

"Moreover, in the past few years more and more of the 30 per cent producing fluid milk have been selling their product direct to consumers without passing it through the hands of distributors. In some places, these producer-distributors are not allowed to sell their milk at prices below a certain minimum. But more often, the small producer-distributors are not subject to the terms of marketing agreements therefore, a plan supplementing the marketing agreements is needed to regulate their production and marketing.

"Then, too, the milk marketing codes cover only one product of the dairy industry, namely, fluid milk. They do not affect the production and marketing of milk for butter, cheese and other dairy products which play so important a part in the income of Illinois farmers.

"Without production control to support them, milk agreements and licenses do not offer much hope of substantial price benefits even to fluid milk farmers, and none to those who sell their dairy products in the form of butterfat and farm butter.

"They are of use in maintaining prices at economic levels and can be of genuine help in giving the fluid milk producers an honest and undiscriminatory marketing system. But, without production control to back them up, these marketing agreements and licenses can do nothing to bring higher prices to small groups of fluid milk farmers, while butterfat prices scrape the bottom due to excessive supplies in the dairy industry and to economic conditions affecting the whole country."

J. H. Hughes, Farm Adviser

CORN-HOG SIGN UP NOT AFFECTED BY CORN LOAN

Extension of the closing date for granting federal corn loans by the Commodity Credit Corporation to May 1 did not change the final date on which corn-hog contract applications could be signed in Moultrie county, Farm Adviser J. H. Hughes told the Sullivan Progress today.

It was formerly announced that Saturday, March 31, would be the last day on which applications could be made in Illinois for either corn warehouse loans or contracts in the AAA corn-hog program. However, before the closing date, the Farm Credit Administration announced that the final date for corn loans had been extended to May 1. No change was made in the expiration date for the corn-hog sign up. The last contract application were received the evening of March 31 and officials of the Moultrie County Corn-Hog Association are now preparing for the final phases of the adjustment campaign.

In regard to the change in the closing date for corn loans, the extension service of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, explains that after March 31 loans can be made only to farmers who have actually signed corn-hog contract applications. A certificate showing execution of a corn-hog contract, signed by the local corn-hog committee, must be furnished when an application is made for a corn loan. All borrowers are obligated to abide by the terms of the 1934 corn-hog contract, but heretofore farmers were eligible for loans without first having signed the contract.

Community corn-hog committees are now busy appraising the contracted acres to be rented to the government under the terms of the adjustment program. After this has been finished the adjustments will be made by the county allotment committee and the official contracts prepared for the final signatures of the producers.

J. H. Hughes, Farm Adviser

PLAN FOR DAIRY PROGRAM AWAITING FARMERS ACTION

The question of whether or not there will be a dairy adjustment program and, if there is one, just when it will start in Moultrie county will not be settled until at least the latter part of April, Farm Adviser J. H. Hughes said Friday in response to many inquiries which have been coming in from farmers and herd owners.

"The program that has been proposed is now being considered and discussed in a series of 15 regional meetings which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the state agricultural college are holding in different parts of the country. These meetings will last until April 15, and until they are finished the administration will not be able to determine what farmers and dairymen wish to do about the proposed plan. Even if the sentiment of farmers and dairy leaders is found to be favorable after the 15 meetings have been held, it will be some time after April 15 before plans can be completed for getting the program underway."

Illinois dairymen had a chance to express their views at three of the 15 regional meetings. The delegation of official state representatives attended the Indianapolis meeting April 2 and 3. Those in the group were H. W. Mumford, dean of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois; H. A. Ruehe, head of the dairy department; C. S. Rhode, dairy extension specialist; J. C. Spitzer, state leader of Farm Advisers, and F. J. Keilholz, extension editor.

Dairymen in extreme northern Illinois had an opportunity to attend a meeting April 4 and 5 at Madison, Wis., while those in the western part of the state were within reach of the meeting held April 4 and 5 at Des Moines, Ia.

Early Morning Booze Yeggs Given Scare

Booze thieves, burglars, suspicious characters in general are hereby warned that if they want to keep their health, it is best to stay away from Sullivan.

Night Policeman Sona and his assistants say they will henceforth "shoot to kill" and they are not kidding about this.

Early Friday morning officers Sona and Witts saw a car come into town from the west. It circled the square a few times and then started circling the Terrace block. On the third trip around, it stopped at the Little White church on the corner, turned and came back. Two got out in front of "Squires Place" a liquor emporium operated by Win Gladville. The officers, who had spotted the visitors were in the alley by the Whitman barber shop.

They saw two young fellows get out of the car and walk up toward the drink parlor door. Thinking that he could prevent them breaking the door in, Officer Sona rushed out. Witts trained his gun on the two men but Sona cautioned him to shoot over their heads. The men failed to stop at the order "halt" and ran toward their car in which was a third man. The engine had been purring steadily. Witts took a shot at the fleeing men's legs but they got into the car and away and the officers had no car to give chase.

It was learned later that the men had a car which had been stolen in Bethany and that they were doubtless the same gang that burglarized places in Windsor and Mattoon that night.

In the future the officers will not be so lenient in their aim. The midnight prowler who fails to halt will find himself a fair target for a couple of determined officers who will "shoot to kill."

 "Nancy," again he took a step toward her, "what is it? What has happened? You got my letter? You

She waved him back and, unable to speak, sank weakly into his swivel chair and burst into wild and passionate tears.

The storm of Nancy's passionate grief spent itself slowly. She lay helplessly in the old chair, her face hidden in her hands, and her whole slight frame shaken by her sobs.

"Nancy, what is it? Tell me—," he pleaded. "I know you've been away, your mother told me so. You're in trouble—what can it be? Let me help you!"

She lifted her head slowly at that and looked at him. "You can't help me—ever again!" she said in a choked voice.

He caught at her cold hands and held them.

"You love me, Nancy?"

Her white lips moved without words. She disengaged her left hand from his and held it out. On the third finger the new gold of her wedding-ring caught the light. He started at it, uncomprehending, then something changed sharply in his look.

"Nancy, what do you mean?"

"It's my wedding ring."

He rose slowly to his feet, staring at her, his young face turning from red to white. He had never looked more boyish, more as she had always known him. Nancy's lips twitched and she set her white teeth hard on them, winking back fresh tears.

"Are you crazy, Nancy?" he gasped.

She began to move her hands restlessly, pleating the fold of her skirt and pressing it down.

"Do you remember where you went Saturday morning, Page?"

He frowned. "What on earth has that to do with it?"

"You went to see Richard Morgan—about half-past eight in the morning, didn't you?"

He tried to collect his thoughts, still dumfounded.

"I suppose I did. Yes, I did!"

"I was there, Page. I heard your voice—it was after that—"

"Good Lord, have you married Morgan?"

She nodded, without looking toward him.

There was a terrible pause. She did not lift her eyes to Roemer's face, but she was aware of it. She could feel his eyes on her.

Then he walked across the room, drew forward a chair and sat down. He sat there for a while before he spoke. His voice was hoarse and changed.

"There's no one on earth to force you to do anything, Nancy," he said slowly, "there's no reason on earth, that I can see either, unless you wanted to do it. Morgan's a rich successful man—I congratulate you."

She had not expected this. The irony in his tone cut her to the heart. Here, too, she was to meet, not sympathy, but condemnation; here, too, she would get—not bread but a stone!

He had hit the nail on the head, too, hit it most horribly. Money, money—how they flung it at her!

He caught her look of misery, of appeal, and sprang to his feet. "Nancy, you don't love him—you never did!"

She did not answer that. She was standing weakly, not looking toward him.

"You love me!" Page cried, and caught her violently in his arms.

She swayed, her first impulse to resist overwhelmed, beaten down by her weakness, her head dropped back on his shoulder and her eyes closed. She felt his kisses on her face and she had no strength to resist them.

"You love me," he repeated hoarsely, "and you've married him. Why—why? I can't understand—Nancy, tell me—you must tell me the truth!"

"I can't tell you," she whispered brokenly, "don't ask me, Page, I—can't!"

His face flushed darkly. "You can't tell me why you married Morgan? What can you mean?"

She stirred trying to disengage herself. "Let me go, Page, it's—oh, I can't tell you!"

But his arms tightened around her. He saw her misery, he was determined to wring a confession from her.

"Page, I've—I've got to go home!" she gasped.

"You're not going home to that man's house!" he answered hoarsely. "You've come to me for help and I'm going to help you, Nancy."

She shook her head weakly, trying to take a step toward the door, but he still held her. He was holding her when they heard a step in the hall and the door—half ajar—was thrown wide open. Page's arm fell from Nancy's waist, and he straightened himself and looked around.

Richard Morgan stood on the threshold.

The two men faced each other, then Richard's glance swept from Page to Nancy. It seemed to ignore Page as unworthy of any consideration and fixed itself upon her. Richard came quietly into the room.

"Nancy," he said, "I've come to take you home."

Page turned on Richard. "What does this mean? What have you done to her? She says you've married her—look at her! she is wretched!"

Morgan was startled; she had told Roemer of her marriage then; what else had she told him?

"I've come for my wife," he said sharply, "and what I've done—or what she does—is no concern of yours."

Page Roemer's face blazed with anger. "It's this much my concern—she came to me for help!"

Richard's thin lips tightened, he turned his eyes on Nancy, met hers and held them.

"Is that so?" he asked her in a low voice, "did you come to his man for help?"

Nancy, still leaning on the table swayed a little.

"I don't know why I came," she replied at last, faintly.

Richard ignored him and went to her.

"Nancy, I've come for you," he repeated in his low deep voice, his eyes searching her face.

She met them and her face quivered like a child's. She lifted her hands from the table slowly, gropingly, and tried to walk toward the door, but her steps faltered and she swayed. Richard put an arm around her, guiding her.

"Nancy," cried Page, "I won't let you go like this! It's got to be explained; you're too wretched. Look at her, Morgan, does she look like a bride? What have you done? If you're a man you'll let her go."

Richard stopped, turned slowly and measured him.

"This is no affair of yours, Roemer," Richard said shortly, "neither you nor any other man will interfere between me and my wife. Come, Nancy."

Without another word Nancy turned weakly and went out with her husband.

It had turned cold; a February wind touched her face like an icy hand. She stood waiting on the curb while Richard whistled up a taxi and helped her into it. She leaned back in the corner and shut her eyes. She felt weak and ill and, when her eyes closed, she seemed to behold visions.

She saw Roddy's blank face and open mouth when she gave him the money, and her father! Then she felt Page Roemer's kisses on her face and the hot blushes burning her own cheeks. A newly wedded wife in another man's arms! Nancy groaned suddenly and hid her face in her hands.

The taxi stopped and Nancy stirred and looked up.

"Be careful of the step," said Richard calmly holding out his hands.

He held her firmly, keeping his hand on her arm, while he paid and dismissed the man. Then they went up the path together. Not a word was said, but Nancy found it difficult to walk alone. He opened the door and she walked unsteadily into the house. She had no other place to go.

"I'll telephone to your mother at once," said Richard, "they're anxious. Sit down here, Nancy, until I come."

He pushed a chair forward and she sank into it. She was lying back in the chair with her eyes closed when she heard Richard's quick step in the hall.

"You will be my guest, Nancy until you can decide what you wish to do." "It's the best way to avoid scandal. I"—he hesitated—"I can send a marriage notice to the newspapers. Afterwards it will be as you wish. I"—he stopped again.

She was leaning back on the pillows, her face averted.

She drew a long breath. "Thank you," she said simply.

Then she arose, passed him, and went to the door. She put out a steady hand now and opened it, looking into the front hall. It was empty. She was going without a word, but Richard reached her. He caught her in his arms, pressed her close to his heart.

"Nancy," he said hoarsely, passionately, "my wife—stay with me—don't go—stay, I'll make you love me, I'll win you. Nancy, give me my chance! Stay with me, dear," he urged her almost violently; his love had broken down his pride. She broke away shaking all over, anger and shame and fear held her.

"You promised to let me go—you said you didn't want a wife who didn't love you—I don't, you know I don't! Father will pay it back—let me go!"

"Good-bye, Richard—forgive me, goodbye!"

He was silent and she ran out of his house into the night.

Angie Fuller kept house for her uncle. Major Lomax had never married. There had been an early and a tragic love affair. Diana Aylett had accidentally shot herself on the eve of their marriage. It was hard to associate romance with the old major. Yet there had been a love affair that seared.

When the smoke of that tragedy cleared away, Lomax found it had killed the power to love another woman. And once, in the Gordon's garden, he had caught Nancy Virginia reaching high for a sprig of lilac. She looked for just one minute as Diana had looked the day she died. Nancy did not know why the old man stared at her. She tossed her sprig of lilac.

The old man put it in his button-hole, patted her hand and went on. Nancy had no idea that she had won a champion for all time.

The morning after Nancy's return, Angie had to get the breakfast. She came into the dining room, her face rosy from the fire.

She sat the plate of rusk down in front of her uncle and retired behind the old silver coffee pot. She was thinking of Rod Gordon.

It was the first time he had ever been in town without coming to see her. They were old neighbors; they had been boy and girl sweethearts. He had walked straight by the house and never looked at it, and Nancy had said nothing about his visit home! What did it mean?

Major Lomax ate a piece of rusk with an audible crunch and turned over his newspaper.

"Hello!" he exclaimed, stopping to read an advertisement more carefully, "The Gordon house for sale whole outfit—furniture and all!"

Angie was astonished. A shaft of terror shot through her. Had something happened to Roddy? "Why uncle, it just can't be true—they love the old house so!"

He shoved the paper across the table. "Read that!" he said crossly.

He was cross because, like Angie a shaft of alarm had shot through him. He had heard something from a cousin of his in New York, old Beaver, accountant in the Greenough Trust Company.

Old Beaver said Roddy was running after a fast woman and was in debt. Lomax knew that William Gordon's resources were narrow. Trouble somewhere? The major's old mouth hardened.

"Gordon called me up late last night—wanted to know about selling some securities," he ruminated aloud, more to himself than to Angie. "He had about five thousand in Liberty bonds."

These have been the "theme songs" of most of the students since Wednesday morning when they took the "schick" test for diphtheria. Streams of STHS students passed back and forth from the high school to the "South Side." For some unknown reason it takes 45 minutes to make the journey.

It was feared Monday morning, that Dean Brackney was catching sleeping sickness. Investigation proved that he had been delayed in Windsor three hours Sunday night. The cause of the delay so he says was a flat tire.

It's getting to be a habit. Dear Margy: Is Guy C. really writing me those lovely notes or is it that pest who sits three seats back of me? Handwriting is always a good way to solve questions like that.

Use Best Adapted Corn Varieties In Chinch Bug Areas

Urbana, Ill., April 11. Illinois farmers casting about for a variety of seed corn that will be most resistant to chinch bug attack in 1934, will do well to select the variety that is the best adapted, most vigorous growing and highest yielding in their respective areas, rather than import a variety said to be resistant in another part of the state or in another state.

This is the opinion of G. H. Dungan, assistant chief of crop production at the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, after reviewing experimental evidence and the experience of farmers relative to chinch bug resistant varieties of corn.

"There is evidence that some strains of corn are less favored by chinch bugs than others," explains Dungan "but the particular quality which makes them less appetizing to the bugs is not known. It is believed, however, that the most important factor is the superior vigor which enables the plant to produce a good crop of corn in addition to supporting a goodly number of bugs. No plant during its vegetative growth can withstand an unlimited number of chinch bugs, but the ability of a variety to remain green and continue growing until the normal maturity date, in spite of the insects, is a mark of resistance.

"In southern Illinois, where varieties have been tested at the college's Alhambra experiment field, Champion White Pearl, Black Hawk, Mohawk and Golden Beauty have proved to be the best adapted to the upland soils, and at the same time the most resistant to chinch bugs. Wadell Utility White Dent supplies a good type of grain for feeding and seems to be resistant to the bugs, although it does not stand up as well under a severe infestation as does Champion White Pearl.

"Experimental evidence is not available covering the most chinch-bug-resistant varieties of corn in central and northern Illinois, and positive recommendations can not be made. However, farmers in the north-central section of the state last year reported that the corn known as Krug is markedly resistant. In the absence of thorough experimental tests on the resistance of varieties grown in northern and central portions of the state, it is suggested that the best adapted, most vigorous growing and highest-yielding varieties be grown in these sections during years of chinch bug outbreaks."
